Those groups entering the competition this year are the Air Force ROTC, Delta Sigma Pi, Delta Upsilon, Sigma Chi, Sigma Nu, Alpha Gamma Delta, Chi Omega, Delta Delta Delta, Kappa Kappa Gamma, Alpha Delta Pi and Kappa Delta.

Dormitories entering are Ruffin, Mangum, Manly and Smith.

Fleecemen Conduct Ceremonies Tomorrow

By AL RESCH

The Order of the Golden Fleece, highest men's honorary organization on the UNC campus, will hold its annual public tapping ceremony tomorrow at 7 p.m. in Memorial Hall.

The Golden Fleece selects men from the junior class or above for their "highest qualifications in character, ability, achievement and leadership." The names of those students to be tapped will remain a secret until they are chosen tomorrow night.

The second oldest collegiate honorary organization for men in the United States, the Fleece celebrates its 55th anniversary with the tapping ceremony. The Skull and Bones at Yale is the oldest men's honor group on a college campus.

The service includes a reading on Jason's search for the Golden Fleece and the revealing of officers who have led the Order during the past year.

Robed figures searching by spotlights through the darkness of the auditorium for new initiates will begin soon after the doors are closed. Though the actual service will begin at 7:15 p.m., the doors will be locked at 7 o'clock and no one will be admitted until after the ceremony.

Thirty persons were tapped in last year's program, the largest number to be so honored in the organization's history. This brings the total to 613 men who have been singled out from their classmates for tapping.

The 1957 ceremony included the tapping of Basketball Coach Frank McGuire and his national championship basketball squad. Pulitizer Prize winner Paul Green and Jonathan Daniels, editor of the Raleigh News and Observer, were also received into the honorary group.

Musicale Features Pianist In Series

William Leland, pianist from Jacksonville, Fla., will be the featured artist in the Les Petites Musicales series tonight at 8 in the Graham Memorial Lounge.

Leland, a native of Pennsylvania, is now the organist and choir director of St. John's Cathedral in Jacksonvile. He has presented recitals in New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Florida.

There are only two other programs scheduled in the current series. Gene Strassler, tenor, will give a recital April 20. The final program will be a concert May 4 by Francis Hopper, organist.

ANTIGONE IN TROUBLE
Amanda Meiggs and William Dixon in Petite Dramatique production

Last Showing Of 'Antigone' Set Tonight

The final performance of "Antigone" by Jean Anouilh will be presented tonight at 8 in Gerrard Hall.

"Antigone," the third Petites Dramatiques performance this year, will feature Amanda Meiggs playing the part of Antigone. Amanda has been active in the Carolina Playmakers and was featured as St. Joan in "The Lark."

Also included in the cast are Kenneth Callender, Taylor Williams, Harold Williamson, Lucy Dunlap, John Whitty, John Steed, William Pfefferkorn, Bobbi Dixon, and Michael Okun.

Coeds Get Late Grant For Valkyrie Sing

Lucy Posgate, acting secretary of the Women's Residence Council, has issued the following statement:

"It is a joint decision of Women's Residence Council and the office of the dean of women to extend closing hours on Monday, April 14, till midnight for those attending Valkyrie Sing. Girls wishing to attend Valkyrie Sing must sign out in their dorms for late permission and sign in again as soon as it is over.'

BSU Installs New Officers This Evening

New officers of the Carolina Baptist Student Union will assume their duties after the installation service tonight.

Melvin Hipps of Tryon heads the list of new officers elected by the BSU last Sunday. Hipps succeeds Janet Harper as president. He has served as BSU Supper Forum chairman, as a delegate to the N. C. Baptist State Board and is the choir director at the Chapel Hill Baptist Church.

Other officers to be installed are Denton Lotz, vice president; "Toy" Johnson, secretary; Barbara Bush, devotional chairman; Bob Chastain, publicity directir; Mary Frances Collins, study groups chairman; Gary Harris, Listen chairman; Jim Scott, center host; Elaine Curtis, arrangements chairman; Dan Brown; social chairman;

Wilbur Boykin, treasurer; Jerry McDaniel, Supper Forum chairman; Erwin Fuller, worship chairman; Hal Collier, applied Christianity chairman; Bob Fugate and Martha Lassiter, enlistment co-chairmen; Shirley Hamrick and Willis Whitehead, food co-chairmen; Ned Gilliam, Sunday School director and John Killian, Weekly Bulletin chairman.

Orientation Committee Preparing For 2200

The Orientation Committee under the direction of Herman Godwin and Katie Stewart is currently working towards making arrangements for the 1800 new undergraduates and 400 graduate students who will be coming to Chapel Hill for the first time in the fall.

At the present time, the big job for the Orientation Committee is the selection of the 150 counselors needed to successfully complete the men's program. Monday is the final date for applications to be turned in. The women's counselors have already been selected and are now planning for their phase of the orientation program.

On Tuesday night, a test will be given to all applicants in Room 268 Venable. Study manuals for this exam are now available in Graham Memorial and the Library. Final selection of counselors will be determined by the test scores and the performance in an interview before the Orientation Committee.

One of the big projects of the committee has been sending out letters to all of the new students in which is explained some of the "Carolina way of life" and something of the orientation program presented in the fall.

As in past years, Sam Magill is serving as the Orientation coordinator. Godwin stated that "so far the program has been successful. Our committee, which has been increased in size due to the larger scope of the program, is functioning well."

Godwin is a junior and a member of Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity. He has been active in many campus activities here at Carolina including being a class officer, secretary of the Carolina Symposium and a member of the Order of the Grail.

Miss Stewart is from Norfolk, Va. She is a junior and a member of Delta Delta Delta sorority. She is on the Women's Residence Council, a member of the Angel Flight and the Foreign Exchange Committee.

Drew Dean's Address Ends Wesley Event

The first annual Wesley Weekend, featuring discussions on "Why Is Our Generation the 'Silent' One?," the effect of Freud on modern psychology and the problem of depicting love in literature will continue today, highlighted by an address by Dr. Stanley R. Hopper, dean of the graduate school at Drew University, Madison, N. J.

The events scheduled for today include a discussion of "The Condition of Man in the Modern Novel," lead by Dr. George Harper at 9:30 a.m. At 11 a.m. Dr. Hopper will talk about the relationship of Christian faith to contemporary literature, stressing Thomas Wolfe.

At 12:30 p.m. Dr. Hopper will answer questions on his sermon topic following a luncheon in Lenoir Hall.

Dr. Hopper will conclude the schedule of events at the Wesley Supper Forum in the church basement at 5:45 p.m. He will lead a discussion on theological concerns in modern literature.

Military Pay Hike Possible

A bill now before Congress to make military careers more attractive by hiking the pay will be, if passed, right in line with the Reserve Officers Training program in colleges.

While ROTC students will not receive any direct benefits from the pay raise, they will be, upon graduation, higher paid. This may eventually increase enrollment in ROTC units, which are looking more and more for career men. At least this seems to be the main objective now for ROTC units at UNC.

At UNC the Air Force unit was established in 1947 ,about the time the Air Force became a separate branch of the armed forces. "The prime objective then, "says Air Science Professor Lt. Col. F. W. Swann, "was to train reserve officers and to provide a source of commissioned personnel if we had a war."

Back To The Cradle

Friday, the Dean of Women's office released a set of rules for freshman women, which would take effect in the fall. Yesterday, it was learned that these rules had not been finalized, which means perhaps there is a chance of preventing their taking effect.

The Women's Residence Council will probably consider these changes in their meeting Tuesday evening. They might reconsider and negate these rulings.

When they consider these rules, which they formulated, they might start by asking the question of why are rules made.

They might find that the answer to this is either to correct something that is wrong at present or prevent something wrong in the future.

To the first possibility, one must ask the question what is wrong at present. Are the current freshman women not living up to their academic responsibilities? Are they conducting themselves socially in a manner that would put the school in a bid light in the state and nation? Do they have at the present time more problems than other coeds? Do many of them leave school because of the lack of restrictions or lack of adequate guidance? Are many unable to accept the responsibility for self government that is placed upon them?

The answer to all these questions is "NO". Freshman during the past three years have had as good grades as their sophomore and junior counterparts. Some of them had better grades as freshmen than they had as juniors. The net upshot is that freshman girls seem to be able to carry out their academic responsibilities despite the supposed evil invitations accompanied by freedom.

Socially freshman girls have not demonstrated that they are unable to handle their freedom. Not all have been perfect models of ladies since the time that freshmen women have been admitted to the University, but perhaps as great a percentage of transfers have neglected the responsibility of their new found freedom because they have not been schooled in the ways of freedom. The freshman girls as juniors have almost to the person conducted themselves commendably at all times.

The present coed has really no more problems than other coeds, and it has happened in at least one case that this editor knows that counselling by a person who is not capable has led to trouble for a freshman woman.

The idea of counselors is good, if the Dean of Women can get the type that can do a responsible job. With an inadequate budget, this may be difficult. Bad counseling is by far worse than no counseling.

It has been pointed out before by none other than the Dean of Women that the drop out rate fro freshman coeds is negligible, hence coeds leave school for neither inadequate guidance nor inadequate restrictions and supervision.

Generally, freshmen women have accepted the responsibility of self government to such an extent that it is probable that they could do with considerably fewer rules rather than more.

This is perhaps a tribute to the administration of admissions for freshman women. Dean of Women Katherine Carmichael has said that these same high standards will be retained even if the quota goes up. It is commendable that these standards will be kept up, and this keeping of standards will obviate the necessity of increasingly strict social rules.

But outside of the admission standards, one can tell that these rules are unnecessary.

How does a scientist test an hypothesis? He experiments under controlled conditions with a limited number of subjects.

Over the past several years, the freshmen women have been or should have been subjects for the experiment of freedom for entering coeds. These coeds were few in number and their reaction to having freedom could be carefully measured. As can be seen by what has been said here in the first few paragraphs, the experiment worked and the subjects profited.

As a scientist would react, the Dean of Women's office should have reacted and should in turn have advised the Women's Residence Council that the test was a success, and that freshman women can cope with freedom.

Instead both groups, seemingly blind to the facts, started out on a course which could wreck the progress toward student responsibility that has already been made.

No argument such as that of the neighboring schools bearing the same type of rules for a long period of time will hold weight. Since Carolina has in itself an equally long tradition of freedom and equality, good if there is some greater and more far good if there is some greater an dmore far reaching purpose to be served, but the administration of rules which would return student responsibility to spoon feeding and excessive paternalism are no such purpose. As it stands now, the freshman women stand to benefit greatly from the companionship that they may have with other girls. It gives them the opportunity that not many girls in the area have to mature easily and natural without burdensome restriction being placed on their backs.

Carolina coeds should be proud of the freedom which they possess. They should not want to destroy it because of fears that the students in the future will not be able to handle it. They should realize that if year after year of freshmen have been able to handle their responsibility the next year's can do the same. If they don't then there is always the opportunity to change the rules.

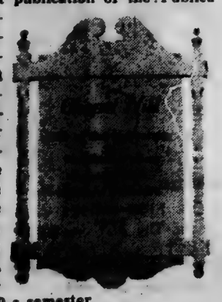
There is some merit in one of the Dean of Women's proposals. This was in the striving to equalize freshman nurses rules with other coed rules. The drive just was made in the wrong direction, for freshman nurses on the example of other freshman coeds might be able to handle the same type of freedom just as easily.

College should be a place where students can prepare for life as well as for a job. The greater amount of responsibility one can give to the student, the better the institution is preparing him or her to meet the responsibilities he will have as a free individual.

The greater amount of responsibilities one can give to a freshman coed, the more able she will be to meet the responsibilities of the more difficult work in the upper classes.

The coeds have demonstrated their capabilities by having a grade average that is equal to their work on the junior and senior years. This cannot be even matched by the men.

There is an overriding reason also. The university should have sway over academic life of the student, but to have control over the social life of a student is to impress a set of social mores on the student that he might be unwilling to bear.



Social standards are relative. Social standards should not be legislated, but if the university wanted to decrease the social life of the student, be it freshman coed or other, it could with a good deal more imagination than the Women's Residence Council or the Dean of Women has shown. This could simply be done by raising academic standards and requiring more of the student.

Thomas Jefferson once said, "That government which governs least, governs best."

The Dean of Women's office and the Women's Residence Council might bear that in mind Tuesday night.

The Daily Tar Heel

The official student publication of the Publication Board of the University of North Carolina, where it is published daily except Monday and examination and vacation periods and summer terms. Entered as second class matter in the post office in Chapel Hill, N. C., under the Act of March 8, 1870. Subscription rates: mailed, $4 per year, $2.50 a semester; delivered, $6 a year, $3.50 a semester.

Coed Rules

is that lights out hours at 11:30 p.m. apply to both first semester freshman coeds and second semester Freshman coeds, who have not attained a C average.

Miss Carmichael also added that there will be a certain amount of senior girls in the new wing of Spencer Dormitory with the freshman. She added that putting all freshman girls into one dormitory made the problem of administrating the new rules easier, as well as providing a means for effective counseling of the new students.

She explained that she had asked for $2200 for counseling services, but only received $1250. She said that she had, however, high hopes that a workable counseling system could be arranged under this budget.

She pointed out that although the admissions standards would remain for women at the same high level they are now, the greater influx of freshmen women necessitated the change in rules.

Lillian Shannonhouse, were necessary to provide the means of adjustment for first year students. She said that the program would be both healthful and scholastically beneficial to students, and perhaps would start them on the road to good study habits while in college.

Science Women In Opposition

Editor:

We the undersigned coeds, majoring in chemistry, bacteriology and zoology; enrolled in graduate school in one of the sciences; enrolled in medical technology, wish to give our reactions to the news item—"New Freshman Girls to Get Stiffer Rules" which appeared in today's Daily Tar Heel.

We feel that the "stiffer" rules for new freshman women are unjust and totally uncalled for. That the rules are totally uncalled for is implied in the news item itself: "Dean of Women Katherine K. Carmichael, when questioned about the present rate of dropping out or transferring to other courses among women students already enrolled at the University, said the rate is presently negligible, but that no forecast can be made for the future." We say that there is no reason to assume that an increase in numbers of freshman women on this campus next year will carry with it a lessening of personal and social responsibility within this group.

Some of us came to the University as freshman; others of us transferred to the University from other institutions, but in the past we have all been justly proud of the degree of freedom and responsibility which the University of North Carolina has granted students of both sexes. We have appreciated the fact that the University has in the past attributed all of its students with having a degree of sensibility and maturity which enables them to deal with such personal situations as forming effective study habits, using their leisure effectively, deciding where they should live on campus and at what hour they should go to bed each night.

We who have transferred to this campus from other institutions fully realize that as Dean Carmichael has stated: "these rules are nearly standard for freshman women in this area." However, we know that there are areas in which these rules are not by any means standard; for example, they are not standard in many outstanding colleges for women in the North, and they are not standard in non-college affiliated and in many cases college affiliated medical training centers throughout the country. We feel that the University of North Carolina is taking a backward step in adopting the out-moded rules of nearby institutions. Many of us attended Woman's College, which was cited in the news item, and have for sometime felt the rules of that institution to be badly in need of revision.

We wish to point out, however, that the situation at Woman's College is not comparable to the situation here. Even under the new entrance examination system students entering Womans College as freshman are a much less select group than women students entering the University. The students entring here must not only pass examinations but are also subject to careful interviews during which they are examined on such important points as motivation, interests, plans for the future.

For very practical reasons the rules proposed by our representatives on Women's Residence Council are unjust to many of the women students who will be here as freshman next year. For example, we, wonder whether or not members of the Women's Residence Council have ever tried to walk from Wilson Hall or the Medical School over to Spencer for lunch on either rainy or a sunny day and then dash back over to Wilson or the Medical School for a lab the next hour. We who eat lunch in Lenoir Hall can barely perform this feat in an hour. We realize that the plan will be reasonablely convenient for pharmacy students and that the students in medical technology, dental hygiene, and physical therapy will not have as many courses in science during their first year here as they will have other years; however, they will undoubtedly be pursuing courses in general chemistry and introductory zoology, and this will require their presence in Venable and Wilson several times a week for lecture and lab. Moreover, those in dental hygiene will have courses at the Dental School. We contend that it would be much more convenient and time saving for these students to live in Carr, Whitehead ,or even Smith; and we see no reason for their isolation as a group. The news item did not clearly state that the students would be confined exclusively to the dormitory during their evening study period; but if this is the case, we should like to inquire as to when they will be permitted to use the libraries since they will have labs in the afternoons? Even at Woman's College one is granted the privilege of studying in the library. We also feel that by forcing these students to live in Spencer and hence pay for meals in Spencer dining hall the Women's Residence Council has in effect taken away the right of these students to eat with their friends of both sexes whenever and wherever they choose and hence has taken away a right which aids in their making better social adjustments on campus.

In closing we wish to ask how these rules for a very small and select group of women students can be proposed and cheerfully endorsed by several official sources as being in effect "Quite Helpful" when in appears that no one has considered the need for a similar set of rules to restrict and govern the activities of freshman men. For, as is the case with the girls at Woman's College, these boys do not undergo such careful selection procedures as a personal interview and special testing, designed to measure motivation as well as ability, before being admitted. Moreover, statistics presented in the Daily Tar Heel earlier in the year show that the present rate of drop out is exceedingly high for these students especially as compared with the "presently negligible rate" for women entering as freshman concerning which "no forecast can be made for the future."

Former Freshmen Knock Coed Rules

Of some fifteen women, who either are or were freshmen at the university, all responded negatively to the proposed rules changes for freshmen women.

Only two of the fifteen polled reported having any lower grades as freshmen than they currently carry as sophomoes juniors, and seniors.

The comments ranged from some that were clearly unprintable to logical accounts of what these students felt was wrong with these new regulations.

Frances Reynolds, former president of the Women's Athletic Association commented: "I don't like it. By having the samerules as upperclassmen, a girl can become more mature. Some girls who have to abide under stricter rules have been affected the wrong way. High schools have had rules, and haven't developed any larger sense of responsibiliy. Some junior transfers have more of a tendency to abuse privileges than those who have been under fewer restrictions at the beginning. I learned more being in a dorm with upperclassmen than I feel I could have learned otherwise."

Marcia McCord said about these rules that she had never been in closed study hours but that she didn't "think they would work." "Any discipline should be self discipline. Women should learn how to study and be able to study their own hours. It is hard to be in dorms and have to stay in when others can go out. There are advantages in being together with other classmen in gaining maturity. Another point a gainst the new regulations is that sororities demand the attendance of women at certain functions. If the new rules took effect women would be unable to attend these functions."

Becky Manos commented: I think the new rules are terrible. The girl who enters as a freshman are hand-picked and interested in studying. College freshmen should be mature enough to handle their responsibilities, segregation is not a good idea, in that it makes freshmen seem different from upperclassmen. I entered as a pharmacy student and although I know it's good to know girls in other fields. This helps to increase friendships and interests."

Joey Payne had this to say about the proposed rule change: "The whole thing is ridiculous. Freshman girls don't need aid in studying. They are old enough to form their own study habits, and I feel sure they would do better without study hours and lights out. I am inclined to think they would study less under the new system. These rules would set them apart and will make it hard for them to become a part of Carolina."

PETITES DRAMATIQUES

The second and final performance of "Antigone" will be given tonight in Gerrard Hall at 8 p.m. Admission is free, and open to all.

AFTERNOON TELEVISION

1:30-Channel 5-"Romeo and Juliet"

This is the 1954 English film version, starring Lawrence Harvey and Susan Shentall. Shakespeare seems to translate badly into the film medium; but the attempt is usually interesting, and the poetry regains the effect which it loses to silent reading and classroom pedantry.

3:00-Channel 2-See It Now

Edward R. Murrow narrates a 90-minute examination of the threat posed to human survival by radioactive fallout produced in tests of nuclear weapons.

It becomes increasingly obvious with each new development in the arms race and in the devising of new and more powerful weapons, that the most important legal, moral, and scientific question of our time is bound up in the complex business of nuclear weapons. This program may well give the American people the information which will lead to the intelligent decision possible under the circumstances.

4:30-Channel 2-Twentieth Century

"F. D. R.: Third Term to Pearl Harbor" covers the year and a half in American history from June, 1940 to December, 1941.

EVENING TELEVISION

7:30-Channel 4-Heritage

Tonight's program is devoted to "The Significance of the Dead Sea Scrolls." These ancient Hebrew writings, predating the Bible, constitute one of the great archaeological finds of all time.

8:00-Channel 2-Ed Sullivan

The usual three-ring circus again, with Nat King Cole and British Comedienne Joyce Grenfell as the main attractions.

8:00-Channel 5-Steve Allen

Jayne and Audrey Meadows, jazz singer Carmen McRae, and professional idiot Dody Goodman join the regular crew,

9:00-Channel 5-Dinah Shore

The Mary Kaye Trio is the most notable attraction in a show which also features comedian Eddie Bracken and Eve Arden. Miss Shore will probably continue to impersonate a precocious sixteen-year-old until she dies of old age.

9:00-Channel 11-Sid Caesar

Mr. Caesar's considerable genius runs hot and cold, but even when he is not brilliant, he manages to be more amusing than any other comedian on television.

hearted support and cooperation. The job of next year's president of the student body is an awesome one, and only through the consolidated efforts of all the elements of the campus can we expect to adequately confront our problems."

Concluding his final statement, the Student Party candidate thanked the "many friends who have helped" in his campaign. He expressed his gratitude to "all of the other students to whom I have talked, for the courtesy and kindness that they have shown me. Whatever the outcome on Tuesday, I sincerely value their friendship."

once.

"I have taken great pride in the great liberal tradition of our University and do not feel we should ever imitate small women's colleges and preparatory schools in imposing such strict rules.

Syd Shuford in concurring with the opinion of the other student leaders pointed out that the women's academic average was higher than the highest men's group. He added that he felt that the University should encourage freedom and scholastic excellence rather than punish the group that maintains the high academic standards.

dent union, better understanding among campus groups and improving the position of social fraternities.

"To tackle the problems on campus which deserve immediate attention and much hard work, we need a president who wants to work and an administration behind him which is unified and competent from the top posts down to committee members. We must recognize that solution to pressing problems like procuring a new student union and the elimination of the self-liquidating payment plan for the new men's dorms, will require unified and exhaustive work on the part of the president and his aides. Even with hard work satisfactory results cannot be guaranteed, but it is certain that little will ever be done unless student leaders work vigorously.

GRADUATE THEN FLY

The Air Force pilot or navigator is a man of many talents. He is, first of all, a master of the air—and no finer exists. In addition, he has a firm background in engineering, electronics, astro-navigation and allied fields. Then, too, he must show outstanding qualities of initiative, leadership and self-reliance. He is, in short, a man eminently prepared for an important career in the new Age of Space.

As a college graduate, you will be given priority consideration for the Air Force Aviation Cadet Program. While openings are limited, you will be tested and advised immediately of qualification status. Find out if you measure up. Paste the attached coupon on a post card and mail it now.

Tar Heels Defeat Canisius With Two Big Innings, 10-5

By RUSTY HAMMOND

Carolina exploded for nine runs in two big innings yesterday to trounce Canisius College 10-5, giving them their eighth win of the year against five losses.

The opening frame saw every Tar Heel in the line-up go to the plate, and four runs poured across before and flood and halted. Gerald Griffin reached first on a fielder's choice and stole second, then came in on Al Pons' ringing triple. Pons romped in on John Burgwyn's single. Vaughn Bryson then added another single, moving Pons to third. Captain Rog Honeycutt then cleared the sacks with another single.

The Tar Heels added five more in the third on four hits and an error. Carson Oldham, Bryson, Tommy Saintsing, Bruce Crump, and starting hurler Ben Hammett crossed the plate for Carolina.

Hammett was very effective over the first four frames, allowing only one hit. But the fifth brought woe to Big Ben as five Canisius runs score on only one base hit. An error and five walks provided most of the fireworks. Dave Floyd, who was the winning moundsman, came on in the fifth with the bases full and nobody out. Floyd struck out two and got a third on a grounder in a good clutch performance.

One For Good Measure

Carolina added one for good measure in the eighth on a one-man show by Gerald Griffin. Griffin singled, stole second, went to third a tremendous slide, and tagged up and scored on a short fly to center.

Floyd allowed only three hits over his five inning stint, and two of them came in the ninth. The Tar Heel infield pitched in with two double plays to add to the occasion.

Big Games Coming

Carolina has two big games coming up next week. The Tar Heels travel to Duke Tuesday, and meet tough State here next Thursday. The Heels haven't forgotten who beat them in the finals of the Dixie Classic.

Baldwin Leads After 36

GREENSBORO (AP) — Al Baldwin, professional of Markham, Ontario, birdied five of the last nine holes yesterday for his second 68 and the early 36-hole lead in the $15,000 Greensboro Open golf tournament.

Baldwin's 136 total at the halfway mark led Sam Snead of White Sulpher Springs, W. Va., by three shots. Snead had a two under par 69 today, finishing with an eagle three on the 18th for a 139 total.

Track Team Overpowers Gamecocks

COLUMBIA — (AP) — Billy Latham, South Carolina's outstanding distance runner, smashed two school records Saturday but North Carolina came out on the big end of an Atlantic Coast Conference track meet, 72-59.

Latham won the one-mile in a sizzling 4:19.0, and the two-mile at 9:46.0. The times eclipsed the school 1954 records of 4:24.4 and 9:54.3 set by Garn McBride.

On both occasions Latham trailed Tar Heel ace Wayne Bishop going into the stretch but staged tremendous sprints to win by comfortable margins.

Teh Gamecocks won seven of the nine running events but fell back in the field events. North Carolina swept three places in the discus, javelin and half-mile run to establish superiority.

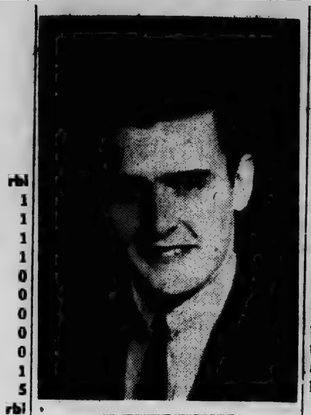
Another reunion similar to those previously held in football and basketball, is planned for old time Carolina athletic stars.



On this occasion it will be the trackmen of some of the earliest distinguished teams who will come back to their alma mater, renew old acquaintances and see the modern version of their sport.

Carolina track coach Dale Ranson announced today that the reunion will be for the Tar Heel track teams of 1910-1914, coached by Nat Cartmell and which won a string of state championships.

The two-day reunion will be on April 23-24, and on the second day the old timers, most of them highly prominent citizens in this and other areas, will witness the Virginia-Carolina track meet on Fetzer Field.

Golf, Tennis Monday

Monday afternoon the varsity tennis and golf teams return to action by meeting State and Davidson respectively. Both of the matches are away; the netters travel to Raleigh while the golfers journey to Charlotte.

Vladimir Cernik's tennis team will be gunning for its fifth win of the season and Atlantic Coast Conference victory number two. In their last outing the netters whipped Wake Forest 9-0.

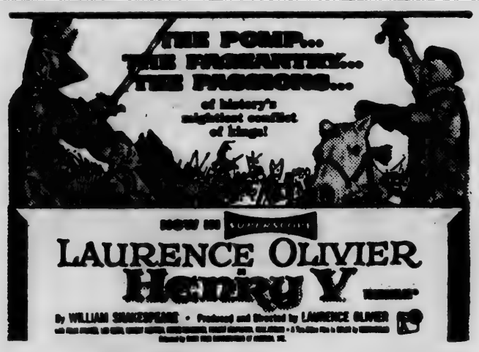
Basketball Team Feted At Banquet

Tribute was paid to the 1957-58 Carolina basketball squad last night at the team's annual banquet sponsored by the Athletic Association and the Chapel Hill Athletic Club.

Both varsity and freshman squads were honored at the elaborate fete in Lenoir Hall, but the big moment came when Tommy Kearns was named the recipient of the coveted Fay Roverson Medal for contributing the most for the morale of the team. Selected for the honor by his team mates, Kearns was given the award by University Chancellor William Aycock. Kearns was also presented a certificate for being named on the district three all-star team.

In addition Brennan was presented two special awards, the Flucie Stewart award of the Atlantic Coast Sports Writers Association for being selected as the ACC "basketball player of the year" and an inscribed gold watch from Look Magazine for being picked on the All-American team by the United States basketball writers association. Jake Wade, University sports public director, made the presentations.

School and athletic officials, CAC members and guests, approximately 200 in all, attended the elaborate fete. Athletic Director Chuck Erickson presented monograms to eleven members of the squad; Brennan, John Crotty, Bob Cunningham, Tommy Kearns, Dick Kepley, Danny Lotz, Grey Poole, Harvey Salz, Roy Searcey, Lee Shaffer, Ray Stanley, and Manager Jim McDavid.



The senior members were presented Chapel Hill Athletic Club plaques by club president Victor Huggins, who was chairman for the banquet.

Tommy Kearns was presented a certificate for being named on the NCAA district three all-star team.

Coach Frank McGuire praised the team for its fine play and determination during the season and said it did an excellent job in compiling a 19-7 record and winning the Dixie Classic. Freshman Coach Ken Rosemond paid tribute to his freshman team.

Roy Armstrong, University dean of admissions, was toastmaster, and spoke seriously and in a humorous vein.

Movie highlights of the 1957's national championship win over Kansas were shown and a combo played for dancing after the banquet.

IN THE TWENTIES, up-to-date college gals wore raccoon coats, danced the Charleston and smoked Luckies. What's the rage on campus today? Raccoon coats. The Charleston. And Luckies! The conclusions are obvious. 1. Luckies were tops for taste in the Twenties and still are. 2. Smart smokers knew it and still do. So any gal who takes Luckies to a Roaring 20's party is a Dapper Flapper! And by George, the boy friend who sports 'em, too, is a Couth Youth! Prediction: In the 1980's, raccoon coats, the Charleston and light, good-tasting tobacco will still be in style!

Presidential Run-Off Race Closes With Election Today

Carolina students will go to the polls today to decide the presidency of the student body between the two remaining candidates, Al Goldsmith and Don Furtado. Bob Carter, an Independent candidate, was eliminated from the race in the regular spring elections held April 1.

Goldsmith, the University Party candidate, is a junior from Lincolnton and has been active in student affairs and student government during his three years here. He has been vice chairman of the University Party and a member of the student legislature for three years, during which he has been for one session each speaker pro tem and UP floor leader. Goldsmith was treasurer and member of the program committee of the Symposium. He has also been an orientation counselor, treasurer of the orientation committee, member of Phi Eta Sigma, member of Order of the Grail, and a member of various other groups and committees on campus.

Don Furtado, a junior from Garner, is the Student Party nominee. He has been at various times member of the student legislature, speaker of the student legislature, vice president of the student body, and a member of the Board of Directors of Graham Memorial. Furtado has also been president of the sophomore class and a member of the Consolidated University student legislature. He is a member of the Order of the Grail.

The polling places will be open today from 9 a.m. until 6 p.m. Everyone must show their identification card and have it stamped to be allowed to vote.

Town Men's I, Carolina Inn; Town Men's II, Scuttlebutt; Town Men's III, including Glen Lennox, Graham Memorial; Town Men's IV, the office at Victory Village: Town Women, Gerrard Hall.

All dormitory women may vote in their dorms except those in Kenan. Kenan residents may vote in McIver. Residents of Connor may vote in Winston, and Emerson in Ruffin. Other men's dorms will have ballot boxes in them.

Ballot boxes will be placed in the nurses dorms, and all other people living in University owned buildings, such as Memorial Hall, will vote in Old East.

Phi Will Meet Half-Hour Late This Evening

The Phi will meet a half-hour later than usual—at 8:30 p. m.—tonight to debate a bill calling for the unification of the United States and Canada.

After the debate, which is expected to be limited to 30 minutes, the society will meet in executive session to discuss the recipient of the annual Phi-Di Award, and to plan for the Phi-Di Debate.

The annual formal debate between three members of each society will be held next week in Di Hall on a bill calling for American aid to the Cuban revoutionaries.

Tonight's bill declares that since the U. S. and Canada have a common boundary, a common English heritage and democratic forms of government they should become one nation. The bill adds that economies of both countries function in the "dollar bloc", both have signed a mutual defense pact, and the USSR is a threat to both.

As a final argument the bill states that a union of the two can better defend itself against military action than the two can separately.

During the executive session the society will select members to receive the outstanding freshman and senior awards.

The Phi-Di Award, given annually to an alumnus of one of the societies in recognition of that individual's distinguished service to the state, the nation and its citizens. Last year Chancellor R. B. House received the award.

SEC Concert Planned For Thursday Night

The program, which will begin at 8 p.m., will be free to students upon presentation of ID cards. A charge of one dollar will be made for student wives and two dollars for others.

Templeton has appeared as soloist with nearly every major American symphony orchestra, and has given concerts throughout the United States, Canada, the British Isles and Australia. He is known to millions through his radio and television programs, including "Alec Templeton Time," in which he combines fine performance of standard words for piano, and his own highly original impersonations and improvisations.

GM SLATE

The following activities have been scheduled for today at Graham Memorial:

Orientation Council, 4:30-6 p. m., Grail Room; University Club, 7-8:30 p. m., Grail Room; Inter-Dormitory Council 7-11 p. m., Roland Parker Lounge I; Senior Class Social Committee, 4:30-6 p. m., Woodhouse Conference Room; Women's Honor Council, 7-8:30 p. m., Council Room; A.P.O., 7-9 p. m., Roland Parker Lounge II; Women's Residence Council, 6:30-9 p .m., Woodhouse Conference Room.

Counselor Deadline Extended To Tonight

The deadline for Orientation Counselor application blanks has been extended until 7 o'clock tonight, according to chairman Herman Godwin. A test to all applicants will be given tonight in room 268 Venable at seven and late applicants may turn in their blanks at the test.

Blanks will be placed at all voting locations today from 9 a.m. until 5:30 p.m. They may be filled in and returned at these locations also.

Godwin urged everyone interested who has not applied to do so today. "We are expecting the usual last minute rush of applications," he said. "We are still not completely satisfied with the turnout thus far and I hope that interested men will not forget to apply."

Godwin stressed the importance of having "a qualified group of counselors" to carry out the program. "We will select approximately 150 counselors on the basis of the test Tuesday night and the individual interviews which will start Wednesday," he said. "Those chosen will be performing an invaluable service to the University as well as themselves and with the cooperation of interested students, we will have the best program ever."

Applicants will be notified by campus mail as to the time and date of their interviews. The interviews will last April 16-23.

Tri Delt Scholarship Deadline Is Thursday

Thursday, marks the close of competition for the 1958 Tri Delta Scholarship.

All women students enrolled at Carolina are eligible to apply for this scholarship. Application blanks may be obtained from the Dean of Women's office.

Foreign Study Grants Open For Summer

Summer trips abroad are now open through the Lisle Fellowships, it was announced yesterday, by Sirkka Talikka, carppus representative.

Miss Talikka, a native of Finland, is currently on campus representing the Lisle Fellowship Foundation which each summer sponsors trips abroad in intercultral relations.

The program includes trips to countries in Europe and Asia, Students participating in these trips will live, in many cases, in the homes of natives of the country being visited. This will offer rich opportunities for intimate contacts with people of other nations at home, at work, and in every phase of their everyday community life.

The Lisle program was founded in 1936 in New York State as a non-profit organization. Lisle is essentially a leadership training program. As a non-profit organization its tour expenses are kept to a minimum.

Generally, those participating in the Lisle program are in the age bracket from 18-35. Lisle requirements are a completed application and an orientation compative with Lisle educational objectives.

In addition to tours in European and Asian countries, the Lisle program offers travel to United States units in California and Colorado.

Miss Talikka will be on campus until Thursday. Her office is located in the Y cabinet room with hours of 9-11 a. m., and 2:30-4:30 p .m. for interviews with all interested students.

Majority Of Coeds Oppose New Rules

59.5% of the coeds on this campus disapprove of the new freshman women's rules, according to a Daily Tar Heel poll taken yesterday.

The poll was conducted among all the students in four University women's dormitories and four sorority houses. 447 questionaries were issued and 250 were returned for a return of 56%.

This return was considerably better than some of the recent polls made by the Graham Memorial Activities Board's Polls Committee.

149 women expressed oppisition to the new rules, while 61 others criticized or wanted to eliminate at least one of the rules.

Lights out rules, closed study were among those most criticized rules, and weekend permission rules by the women.

In all the dormitory and sorority districts but two, the rules were scored. In the two that favored the rules the poll showed that the count was 5-3 and 9-7 with exceptions in a majority of cases.

The poll also showed that the coeds actually favored the earlier closing hour regulations, and certain deprivation of privileges for freshman coeds who do not obtain a C average.

Playmakers To Perform Student-Written Plays

Three new one-act plays by student authors will be presented by the Carolina Playmakers, Friday and Saturday, at 7:30 p.m. in the Playmakers Theatre. The presentation is a student project of the Department of Dramatic Art, with student direction, designing, and managing.

The plays include "Mossell and the Laurel Bush," by George Hill; "The Dangers of Great Literature," by Gabrielle Roepke and "The Freudian Years," by Kenneth, Callendar.

Both Hill and Miss Roepke have been represented earlier this year with "Fairy Beauty" and "The White Butterfly." "The White Butterfly" was taken by the Department to the State Drama Festival in Raleigh, where it received the only superior rating of the evening.

The public is invited to attend these performances and to react to the scripts presented. Admission is free.

Cheerleader Tryouts Are Today At 4

Tryouts for cheerleaders will be today at 4 p .m. in Kenan Stadium. In the event of rain, tryouts will be held in the Tin Can.

Six girls and 3 boys will be selected to serve as cheerleaders next year.

A C average is required of all candidates. This group will meet every afternoon this week at four o'clock; practice will last about one and one half hours.

Carter Jones, head cheerleader, requests that girl candidates wear bermuda shorts and tennis shoes. He added that he would like for last year's cheerlaeders to come down and hely out.

IDC Banquet Tomorrow

Tomorrow the Men's IDC will hold its annual awards presentation banquet at Brady's Restaurant.

At this banquet awards will be presented to: the three most outstanding dormitories on campus; the most improved dorm, the most outstanding committee chairman, the most prominent dorm president, most outstanding member at large, and to the dorm with the best intramural program.

Sputnik II Falls

The world's most famous dog has fallen from the skies, still locked in the steel casket where she died, a bizarre and bewildered first citizen of space.

Russia's Sputnik II became a flaming hearse as it twisted and burrowed through the upper reaches of the earth's atmosphere. Both the satellite and its passenger were cremated in the heat of friction.

11 Students Tapped Into Golden Fleece

11 students and two honoraries were inititiated into the Order of the Golden Fleece in tapping ceremonies held last night in Memorial Hall prior to the Valkyrie Sing.

Initiated were: Charles Hall Ashford, Jr., New Bern, N. C.; Wayne Staton Bishop, Greenville, N. C.; Jean Pierre Boissavit, Bordeaux, France; John Charles Brooks, Greenville, N. C.; Herman Allen Godwin, Dunn, N. C.;

Robin Ledbetter Hinson, Rockingham, N. C.; Jesse Weimar Jones, Franklin, N. C.; Roland William Payne, Jr., Norfolk, Va.; Harvey Feck, Durham, N. C.;

Clifton Hunter Tillman, Roxboro, N .C.; John Clarke Whittaker, Jr., Winston-Salem, N. C.; John Christopher Whitty, Jr., New Bern, N. C.; and Jan Philip Schinhan, Chapel Hill, N. C.

Oficers for the past year were announced tonight and included Thomas Willis Lambeth, Jason; William Ray Long, Hypachos; John A. Sneden, Jr., Grammateus, and Peter Joseph Brennan, Chrystopher.

BULLETIN

In the special group sing division, the winner was Delta Sigma Chi. In the Men's Group sing division the winner was Sigma Nu. In the musical skit division the winner was Mangum Dorm. In the women's division sing group, the winner was Tri Delt. And in the women's musical skit division, there was a tie between Smith Dorm and ADPi.

Background Of Rules Explained By WRC

By CHARLIE SLOAN

The Women's Residence Council yesterday endorsed a statement declaring that it is clearly empowered by the Student Consitution to pass dormitory and social rules and consider problems affecting women students.

According to Council Chairman Lillian Shannonhouse the WRC began an investigation of the status of rules for freshman women at Carolina last fall.

Two reasons were offered by the Council for the investigation. There will be approximately 50 freshman women living on the main campus next fall instead of the previous number of less than 15. The WRC felt that their needs, with respect to rules, should be studied.

The second reason stems from a request during the 1956-57 session of the Student Legislature calling for uniform rules for all freshman women enrolled at the University. According to the Council's statement this was the culmination of a "long felt" discrepancy betwen rules for freshman women on the main campus and those in the School of Nursing.

As a result of the investigation and "the responsibility vested in the Council by the Student Government Constitution" a set of rules have been drawn up which "the Council feels workable and necessary."

"In the formulation of the rules this group worked closely with the School of Nursing, the Office of the Dean of Women, and with rules of outstanding college and universities in this area in which freshman women are enrolled," the statement said.

The WRC granted that many schools place no stringent restrictions on the social or academic lives of their freshman women. However, it is the consensus of the WRC that a majority of outstanding women's colleges in the Southeast do place these restrictions on their freshmen women, and with notable success," the Council's release continued.

It was pointed out that the members of the WRC are a representative group of transfer students from colleges such as these, and the members wish to give to the freshman women coming to this cam-

UNC Chorus Will Present Free Concert

The University Chorus under the direction of Wilton Mason will present a concert in Hill Music Hall tonight. The program sponsored by the Music Department is open to the public at no charge.

The concert will open with one of the works of the Renaissance period in music, Palestrian's "Missa Brevis." This Mass, first published in 1570, will be sung unaccompanied and in its entirety.

Another religious work will complete the first half of the program With Donna Kelly, soprano soloist, the chorus will sing the "Inflammatus et accensus" from Rossini's "Starbat Mater." This work, written in 1832, has achieved great success since its first performance in 1842. Pianist Robert Steelman and organist John Shannon will accompany the Rossini number.

The second half of the program will consist of secular compositions of the late 19th and early 20th centuries. The Trois chansons of Ravel written in 1915 is the composer's only choral work aside from some unpublished cantatas. The three songs to be heard are "Nicolette," "Trois beaux oiseaux du Paradis" and "Ronde."

The second number will feature the sollowing soloists: Quillian White, soprano; Gene Strassler, tenor; Marilyn Zschau, contralto; and Harvey Miller, baritone.

Two Appalachian folk songs, "Over Yonder" and "When Young Men Go a-Courtin'," will be heard in arrangements by the Chorus director, Wilton Mason.

Concluding the concert will be three choruses from Moussorgsky's opera, Boris Godounov: "Coronation Scene," "In the Tower of Kazan" and "Death of Boris." David Small will be the bass soloist and Robert Steelman and Dana Dixon, piano accompanists.

Interviews Being Held For Y Posts

Applicants are now being interviewed at the YMCA for cabinet positions for the 1958-59 school year.

The "Y" plans a full and varied program for the coming year and positions are open for persons to work in all areas of the program.

Positions to be filled include: Community Affairs, Conferences, Finance Drive, Public Affairs, Publicity, Vespers and Worship, Y Nite, International Relations, and United Nations Council.

YMCA officials have urged any men students who would like to apply for these positions to come by the "Y" office and leave their name. The interviews will be held from 2-6 o'clock each afternoon Wednesday through Friday.

WRC Chairman Gives Opinion On New Rules

Lillian Shannonhouse, chairman of the Women's Residence Council, yesterday issued the following statement in regard to the expressed opposition to the new rules governing Freshmen women at Carolina:

"The Women's Residence Council is empowered by the Constitution of the Student Government of the University of North Carolina to draw up and enforce rules for all women students on this campus. This is agroup elected by the dormitories and sororities to represent them in governing women's affairs.

"The current issue concerning Freshman rules is a matter of tremendous importance to the women on the campus, so much so that the Women's Residence Council and the Dean of Women's office has spent a semester discussing and formulatig the rules. Approval has been received form Dean Brecht of the School of Pharmacy, Miss Beat of the Dental Hygiene Dean of the General College, for School, Miss Dalrymple of the Nursing School and Dr. Johnson, the enforcement of closed study. Yet after all these considerations, the freshmen rules have become a campus issue with the near exclusion of the current presidential campaign.

"In answer to Sonny Evans comment that 'rules should not be made unless there is a situation existing which realistically demands restriction,' I feel that it is always easier to work from the wisdom of hindsight; yet forseeing a problem requires greater insight.

"Women's Residence Council trusts it has sufficient insight to anticipate problems that will arise and can forestall such problems through formulating a set of rules.

"However in the view of the recent opinions expressed, the Council plans to take these opinions into consideration, and reevaluate our reason and decisions."

New Program To Begin At Planetarium

A new program titled "Things That Fall from the Sky" will begin at the Morehead Planetarium on the campus of the University of North Carolina here tonight at 8:30. It will run through May 12.

Explaining the nature of the demonstration, Manager A. F. Jenzano said comets, meteors and cosmic radiations create widespread interest and attention periodically. "To know in advance the contributing and inherent characteristics of these phenomena enables one to accept their frequent appearance with intelligent understanding and positive identification," Jenzano said.

The school version, which will be presented Wednesdays through Fridays at 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. is recommended for children in grades 4 through 12.

IN THE INFIRMARY

Students in the infirmary yesterday included:

Misses Thelma Baughan, Carolyn Teal, Nancy Davis, and June Sinclair and Michael Givens, John Cole Scott, Robert Kirk, Johnny Reece, David Thurman, Jerome Stokes, Stewart Larimer, Jerri Lasitter, William Lewis Douglas McCall, Claude Hardison, Charles Sheets, John Dalton and Herbert Beatley.

Who Wants New Rules?

After yesterday's Daily Tar Heel poll it seems indicative, that those who want the new freshman women's rules are limited by and large to the majority of the Women's Residence Council, the School of Nursing, and the Dean of Women.

The Women's Residence Council is supposed to represent its constituents, and yet its constituents do not favor the new rules.

The School of Nursing never has had a chance to live under rules less stringent than the proposed coed rules, and so they welcome the change.

The Dean of Women seems, at the present time, to forget the great tradition that the University has as a progressive, liberal, and responsible institution.

A brief summary of the facts would show that the coeds who have come through the academic mill of their freshman year at Carolina, have had as good records as freshmen, as they had as sophomores or juniors. They all do not want the new rules.

All indications show that a majority of coed who suffered under more strict rules want no part of the new rules.

Moreover, there has not been a good reason expressed for putting into effect the new rules. As mentioned in an earlier editorial, changes must be justified by a cause, and since there will be no lowering of entrance and character requirements, there seems to be absolutely no cause to institute these rules.

Colleges from all over the nation enforce rules less strict than those proposed now, but the Women's Residence Council cannot seem to take the lafger view.

What is more some of these rules may be extended to sophomores, or so the Dean of Women said. She pointed out that if the rules are successful, they might be extended to sophomores, although there would not be any decision at the present time. She added that she personally prefers that freshmen and sophomores be distinguished from upper classmen.

As one student put it, "soon they'll be telling the girls what kind of dress to wear."

The responsibility of this change rests squarely with the Women's Residence Council. It makes very little difference that the Dean of Women suggested the need for some sort of a change due to the influx of freshmen, for from that start, the council could have pursued a course that would have liberalized the rules and put Carolina as a leader in the progress towards freeing the individual from the bondage of control and making individual responsibility the byword of Carolina.

The Women's Residence Council can still rectify their error. They can still establish themselves as the leaders who will keep the liberal tradition of the University intact. They can be courageous in the face of warnings by those who would think a larger influx of women could bring a blight to the good name of the University. They can take the initiative in forging a new era of freedom at Carolina by liberalizing the existing rules.

It is up to them.

A few months ago, I came across a little series of cartoons in one of the current magazines. This series ran a full page and was concerned with a young lady and her gentleman friend who were sitting at a table probably in a restaurant. The first five or six drawings showed the young woman going through sort of a private hell. First she leaned on one elbow, then she buried her head in her hands, then she gazed unbelievingly at the gentleman friend. Finally she said: "This is too awful. I don't believe it. Tell me once more." The last drawing shows a very embarassed young man looking soulfully and sorrowfully into his beer. "All right, I'll tell you again," he says, "I've never been to Europe."

Our poor ignorant ancestors (unless we are of Indian descent) borrowed, starved and longed for the wonderful land of milk and honey on the other side ofthe Atlantic. They couldn't wait to get to this country of uncut trees and unlicensed breathing.

It has taken the enlightened generation to realize that the only way to be "broadened" is to turn around and head straight back across the ocean. And by some miracle, if we save our pennies and hitchhike a ride on a tugboat or a freighter, if we can just put our foot on the landing at Le Havre, we are a much more interesting person.

Or even if we can just get to Merrie old England for a look around, then we have the right to come back with an authentic English accent. And you'll have to admit, it certainly does impress the bourgeoisie back home.

I have asekd a few people on campus how they feel about the "Europe, or bust" movement. I got some interesting answers. They went from one end of the scale to the other. One continental lad expressed disgu: with the "crude habits and speech of the average American." "Give me Paris any day," he said. "People really know how to live over there." He had been on a student tour the summer before. Another genteel soul confessed that his broad "A's" came as a result of listening to Winston Churchill records "just til' I can get enough money to go to England and really cultivate the language."

One senior felt that the venerated statement ". . . when I was in Europe last fall . . ." was analogous to driving a beautiful flashy car or having Sartre and Camus books displayed on your bookshelves. "It seems to me that people so often want to do things to create a symbol of superiority in the eyes of others," he said. "True, the person might have gone in debt and traveled by bicycle to get his trip abroad, and the flashy car may not be paid for in the next twenty years, and the books on the shelves have never been opened by their owner, but it still creates that important impression."

What worries me is that, what with all this jet travel and space ship talk, soon just anybody will be able to go to Europe in a matter of minutes.

Then where are we crude Americans who drink beer and orange juice instead of tea and wine, who go to cowboy movies and have southern, western, or yankee accents, going to do to be broadened?

Can't you just see the first wealthy young space travelers coming back from the moon? They will have acquired the sputtering accents of the moon men and they will bring back rare treasures of tall weeds and green cheese.

Then everyone will jump on the bandwagon and "just die" until they get broadened by a trip through outer space.

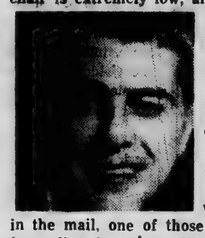
PREDICTIONS

Every year around this time baseball season starts, and usually editors of newspapers leave the prediction making to their man in the sports department.

This editor is a baseball fan, so he feels that he can hang himself on his own limb.

So here goes: In the National League it will be 1. St. Louis, 2. Milwaukee, 3. Los Angeles, 4. Philadelphia, 5. Cincinnati, 6. San Francisco, 7. Pittsburgh, 8. Chicago.

In the American League, it looks like: 1. New York, 2. Chicago, 3. Detroit, 4. Boston, 5. Cleveland, 6. Baltimore, 7. Kansas City, 8. Washington.



On Letters To Columnists: There Really Are A Few

Whit Whitfield

Today's column will be in the form of an open letter to the many thousands of people who write letters to the DTH columnists. The post office department is up in arms about the extra work they are having to do, and the columnists can't see their typewriters for the stacks of mail, so please comply with this request.

We are having particular trouble because our chair is extremely low, and when our three letters from last semester are placed on the desk wtih business-like reckless abandon we can hardly see the last row of keys, which accounts in part for our poor spelling, especially in words like zxcvb or nm,.-.

To give you an idea of what is sometimes found in the mail, one of those three letters was from a journalism instructor whom we had previously considered illiterate. We know he wrote it — he has no secretary.

A second (or rather THE second) was from a woman's college in Massachusetts, requesting that we do an article on "The Southerner's view of Orval Faubus." We wrote back and asked which northern state he represented in Congress, but we didn't get an answer.

The third letter was signed "a Victory Village wife and mother." It seems that she had misinterpreted the column about the sheriff's ban on lewd magazines to mean that we were avid readers of them, and was opposed to their censorship, so she launched into a tirade of degrading adjectives two pages long about our lewd and lascivious mind. All in all, it was a refreshingly different emotional display and we enjoyed it. We'd like to hear from her again.

One thing that does bother us, however, is the fact that many people tell us how lousy our column really is, but the same people will not take time to write us about it and therby make the comment more tangible and cutting. This is a sign of the times.

Want to find a way to solve all of your personal problems for 20 cents? There's one man who can do it for you, a George W. Crane, M.D., Ph.D., who is the author of a syndicated column entitled THE WORRY CLINIC. Thousands of people just like you write him and pour their problems in his lap, and he solves them in a few paragraphs. In additions to this he offers each day a booklet on the particular problem discussed at a cost of 20 cents (to cover handling of course) for anyone who is exactly ed. This is a non profit sideline. This is exactly what we need in this country—more humanitarians like Dr. Crane. (Frontal lobotomies are not performed through the US mail.)

Nurses Like New Rules

To The Editor:

The issue that has arisen concerning new rules for the freshmen coeds at Carolina must also be presented to the student body from the viewpoint of the girls who have lived under these very rules themselves. The majority of freshmen students here —nursing students—have come to Carolina under these regulations and have found them to be adequate and necessary.

To say that there is no realistic need for these rules to be changed is a fallacy on the part of those who have not had contact with this situation previously or who have not been able to foresee, as has Women's Residence Council, this need for new rules arising with an increasing number of freshmen women.

In comparison with the four years that these girls will spend here at Carolina, the four months that they would spend in closed study is a short time in which to build a strong foundation of good study habits and firm self-discipline for a college career. However, if a strong foundation can be built by even as many as one girl, who otherwise might not find a way to make her college stay successful, how can we deprive her of this opportunity?? Granted there are girls who can—and will—make a good adjustment to college studies without restrictions, but these girls would find no difficulty in following these new rules.

At no other school will a girl find such unlimited opportunities for time consuming activities on the campus. Also there is an ever-present opportunity for socializing here. Even though these factors are of great importance to any girl, they are secondary to her real purpose for coming to this University. The ability to decide from all the things she would like to do, what she has time for, would be strengthened by a limited amount of time that she could spend in these activities.

It has been said that "by having the same rules as upper classmen, a girl can become more mature." Is a girl expected to jump from the teen-age level of high school to the maturity of a college upperclassman overnight without any guidance? The actual striving to attain such maturity is one of the major principles in adjusting to the beginning phases of college life. During this period, too, a girl can gain respect and appreciation for upper classmen privileges.

Under these rules, freshmen coeds would not feel as if they were being ruled with an iron hand. The rules are theirs to adapt to their own individual needs, and they are a source of help and reinforcement rather than complete restriction.

With these specific ideas in mind the Women's Residence Council planned these rules accordingly, for the good of the future freshmen women rather than with the idea of keeping them "in the cradle."

More Hit Coed Rules

Geraldine Cook, who went to a school with similarly strict rules and transferred to Caolina as a freshman also opposed the new regulations. She said, "Most of the freshman girls have labs in the afternoon. Library work has to be done at night. If one has to sign out, there will have to be an elaborate checking system. Nurses however, have their library in their dorm building. On days when a freshman girl has more than one test, what would happen if she doesn't get finished studying and then has to have her lights out. The rules will only lead girls to seek a way of circumventing them. Moreover if you have little work to do one week, and there are two or more events that a girl wants to go to, not necessarily a social event, she must give one of them up. Moreover segregation will be extremely bad. The influence of upper classmen is very helpful for the freshman girl, besides the added advantage of being able to form friendships with other coeds outside of one's class."

Carolyn Hofler said that she doesn't like the new change. "Carolina is a good place for a girl to come and have a mind of her own, in order to decide what is best for her. The freshman year can be more beneficial if no one tells you what to do. I made my best grades as a freshman. This move would be the beginning of the destruction of freedom on the campus."

Postscript

Jonathan Yardley

Four years ago the University of North Carolina was in the heart of the Pegged Pants Belt; today it is in the Ivy League. What in the world has happened to make this University, once a proud maintainer of individuality, turn to the most repulsive stylistic mode since the "Mr. B" collar was in vogue?

Essentially the "Ivy League" move in men's clothing styles is a terrific one; at last the younger generation has seen the light and come to the realization that a man's form is best displayed without pleats and padding, and that a shirt which has a button-down collar is not only better looking than one which does not but is also more economical and sensible, since the collar cannot bend or wilt or sneak under the necktie.

This is wonderful, but why does the tag "Ivy League" have to go along with this? Are the students of our fair University ashamed that they are not at Princeton or or Yale or Penn? Do they think that a Van Heusen shirt with the phrase "Genuine Ivy League" sewn inside the collar will make them acceptable in Northern social circles or more welcome on Madison Avenue? Do they wish to become Organization Men in appearance, eventually in fact?

It could be that we are overly pessimistic; maybe they just want to look better. The certainly do—no two ways about that. But the sad thing is that they have been duped. The clothes they are spending fantastic amounts on are not what the boys at Princeton and Harvard and Yale wear — some boys up there undoubtedly do, but the ones who wear the bona fide "Ivy League" clothes do not.

A large percentage of the better-dressed Ivy Leaguers buy their clothes from two stores - Brooks Brothers and J. Press. These two establishments are the focal point of the current rage. Yet they do not use the same materials, cuts, or over-all concept of clothing that the quasi-Ivy Leaguers believe to be the real McCoy. A whirlwind examination of the style should prove the point.

The shoes are essentially the same at Brooks and Town and Campus. The well-dressed Ivy Leaguer, however, wears long socks, argyle or plain wool, which require garters for support. The pants are completely different. Mr. Brooks would never peg down his pants, and the quasi-Ivy Leaguers do. The only difference between these pants and the real pegs is that the latter have pleats. And Ivan Ivy League would never stick a buckle on the rear of his pants. What in God's name is the button for? To hold excess fat in? To keep the wearer from folding up like a jack-knife? No, it's just the fetish of some designers who decided that if he put buckles on the back of his pants he could make mints by selling new pants when buckles go out of style.

The proper Ivy Leaguer's shirt does not have a pocket. This really is sort of pointless, because a pocket is a great place for cigarettes. But if you want to be genuine . . .

Brooks and J. Press do not sell tweed jackets with heavily accented vertical stripes. These stripes only tend to falsely portray the slimness of the already overweight wearer. Ivan Ivy League wears a brownish tweed usually in herringbone or cross check. The ties, are, praise be, the same.

It's great that we ignorant Southerners are making at least a token effort at improving our taste, and it is really a very good effort. But there is a rather discouraging aspect to the situation. Why should we concentrate on copying the styles of another college group, a group which itself has many faults and may not be, in the final estimate, quite what we are?

In many ways the Ivy League is a narrow-minded, provincial group of colleges. This lies not as much in the colleges themselves as in the students. Knowing a good many Ivy Leaguers, we are not at all sure that they are the perfect models.

Let's keep on dressing the way we are, and let's not be ashamed of the occasional poorness of our imitation. But most important, let's not be imitators.. Let's try to stand on our own two feet not only as a student body of intelligent, independent people, but in the clothes we wear. Don't forget that, despite what the manufacturers would have us believe, the clothes don't make the man; the man makes the clothes.

PETITES DRAMATIQUES

There seems to be a movement in the modern theatre, toward the revivication of ancient plots, with the resetting of existing dramatic material in modern surroundings, and their expression on the modern idiom. The attempt is an interesting and fruitful one, born of the desire of the modern writer to express great themes in an age deprived of greatness by modern ideologies. This "regression" is evident in poetry, as well as in the theatre: MacLeish's "The Ramble of A. Macleish," many of T. S. Eliot's poems and plays, including "The Waste Land," and Ezra Pound's "Cantos" all demonstrate this direct descent from and dependence on the art of the past.

In the theatre, this influence of the past is almost equally pronounced; old and familiar themes and plots are not only given a modern setting, but also a modern point of view. Archibald MacLeish's new verse-drama, "J. B.", acclaimed by the critics, is the Book of Job in modern terms. In "The Lark," produced here last semester, certain liberties were taken with the myth of Saint Joan to make it into a commentary on modern life. Likewise, "Judith," this year's first Petites Dramatiques production, was adapted from the Apocryphal Book of Judith.

Jean Anouilth's "Antigone," presented last weekend by the Petites Dramatiques, is another illustration of the modern use of dramatic material which is centuries old, with the basic structure retained almost completely but the setting and the emphasis changed to fit the modern situation.

In Anouilh's version, the plot of the Sophoclean original is retained almost completely, but the emphasis has shifted to include Creon's situation and the character of Ismene has been less prominently featured. This is Creon's play, and it is no longer the tragedy of a young girl whose strength of purpose and devotion to a religious cause leads to her death; to be sure, this element has been retained, but it has become altered. Antigone's religious obligation to give her brother proper burial — the main theme in the Sophoclean play — has become more of a self-justification for her insistence on absolute standards, for her rejection of the compromise which is essential to human society. Her determination to make the ultimate commitment to what she feels is right is the foil to Creon's equally strong dedication to the human compromise; and Creon's ideology is the touchstone which demonstrates the beauty and purity of Antigone's conviction.

Last weekend's Petites Dramatiques production of the Anouilh play was in most respects a good one. Most of the faults were due to the direction or the casting; the acting, on the whole, was the best the Petites Dramatiques have produced this year.

The play is talky full of debates and without any action at all to speak of. It presents the director with some problems which are less obtrusive in plays with more action, and it takes imagination and stagecraft to overcome them. Working with the inadequate facilities of Gerrard Hall, Director Peter O'Sullivan did surprisingly well, but not entirely well enough. There wasn't enough action, and what there was often seemed unmotivated.

Much of the resulting flatness of the production could have been corrected by directing the actors to overplay slightly, in order to catch the audience with pure force of rhetoric. As it was, Amanda Meiggs, Taylor Williams and Kenneth Callendar were the only actors with any force in their speech at all.

William Dixon was a very striking, even an imposing Creon in appearance-bearing, but his underplaying robbed the character of force. As a result the play, which hangs on the conflict between Creon and Antigone, approached bathos in the contrast between the two. Dixon's interpretation was excellent, but he should have been encouraged to occasionally lose his tight control and become more passionate. Amanda Meiggs perhaps went a little to far toward the opposite extreme in her portrayal of Antigone: she overplayed too much, particularly in her climactic scene with Creon. Director O'Sullivan should have worked for more balance.

Nevertheless, Miss Meiggs gave a virtuoso performance, as is her custom. She is so talented that it is no insult to Director O'Sullivan to note that she was better then her direction; and with better direction than Carolina can offer, she will become a professional.

Kenneth Callendar turned the difficult trick of getting more out of his role than was written into it. His portrayal of Seargeant Jonas provided comic relief and sensitively demonstrated the embarrassment which occurs when a man who is wholly committed to the sullied uses of this world is forced to look on beauty bare.

The role of the Chorous was convincingly done by Taylor Williams. Whether the chorous is a necessary accessory to the action or not is debateable, but Mr. Williams made the most of it.

The miscasting occurred in the roles of the nurse and Haemon, Antigone's fiance. Lucy Ann Dunlap did as good a job as could have been expected, considering the fact that she was playing a character three times her own age; this is too much to ask of any actress. The result was that her character slipped into charicature, to the serious detriment of the first scene.

Harold Williamson was neither vocally nor physically strong enough to make the role of Haemon come to life. He was appealing enough, but not a plausible lover for Antigone.

Ismene, Antigone's sister, was played rather weekly by Caroline Marsh; in extenuation of this criticism, it must be noted that Miss Marsh joined the cast at the last moment, and did not have sufficient opportunity to master her role. Unfortunately, it mastered her.

The rest of the minor roles were well done, a rare occurance thus far in the brief history of the Petites Dramatiques. All in all this was a good production, deserving more attention from the public than it received. The play is as provacative as any seen at Carolina recently, and in its best moments the production did near-justice to a script of considerable difficulty.

Jerah Johnson Gets Grant To Coin Seminar

Jerah Johnson, a part-time instructor in social science, has been awarded one of ten grants given in the United States to attend the International Numismatic Seminar for ten weeks during the summer, mid-June to mid-August, to be held at the American Numismatic Society's institute in New York City.

This seminar will be concerned with studies in coinage and monetary policy. Leading authorities from England, Europe and America will be in attendance at the Seminar.

Johnson, who has been teaching at UNC since 1954, held a Fulbright Fellowship to the University of Paris 1957-58. He is working on a Ph.D. in European history and comparative literature.

Parents' Day Celebration To Be May 4

The international-known U. S. Air Force Drill Team will appear as a highlight of the eighth annual Parents' Day celebration at Carolina Sunday, May 4, according to an announcement Wednesday by Larry Hayer, chairman of the event.

Other activities planned for the affair, which is sponsored by Alpha Phi Omega service fraternity, are to include special demonstrations and exhibits in various departments of the University. Also, visiting parents will be guided to points of interest on the campus.

A faculty reception during the afternoon will be entertained by songs from the UNC Glee Club. Following this Chancellor Emeritus Robert B. House will address the visitors.

The day will conclude with a concert by the University band.

All dormitories will be open from noon until 2 p. m. in order that parents may visit students' rooms.

Hayer, in announcing the proposed program, urged all students to encourage their parents to visit UNC for Parent's Day.

Lights Out

A special wired United States National Students Association survey of fifteen of the larger state universities in the United States failed to find a "lights out" regulation in any of the women's rules.

The telegram reported that earlier closing hours on weekdays obtained on weekdays, but that later than 1 a. m. closing hours were the rule on weekends in the thirteen colleges whose information was on had at USNSA headquarters in Philadelphia.

Two colleges had later closing hours on both weekdays and weekends.

Other Schools Do Not Have Lights Out Rule

pus the advantages of the interested supervision from which they benefited during their first two years.

"We feel that the opportunity to develop sound academic habits will be theirs within these rules."

The new rules, said the WRC, are in accordance with the previously established housing policy that all freshman women enrolled in similar programs at the University are housed together.

Therefore the Council voted unanimously to house freshman women in Spencer Dormitory.

Spencer's new wing, the WRC pointed out, is the newest "and currently the most comfortable dormitory on the campus." "In addition," the group added, "to the newest in conveniences, these women will associate with 90 juniors and seniors who will also live in this dormitory.

"In short, they are not housed 'separately.' "

The group observed that Spencer has a dining room where new freshman women may have their meals, and that the dorm is a few minutes walk from distant parts of the campus, "much nearer than many sorority houses."

Uniform rules are necessary, the WRC has agreed. "In formulation these rules a much greater degree of freedom has been accorded the 60 freshman nurses.

"1. Where previously freshman women were allowed to visit in fraternity houses Sunday dinner and until 8 on Germans evening, the rule now states: Freshman students may have dinner and remain until 8 Monday thru Thursday; and on weekends until freshman closing hours.

"It has been, and will continue to be, the responsibility of the WRC, when informed of the wished and desires of those whom it represents, to consider these wishes seriously and to legislate accordingly," the council's statement concluded.

Photo Course To Include Pretty Girls

Beauty queens from North Carolina will vie with attractive models from Florida at the Southern Short Course in Press Photography at Carolina Inn April 17-19.

Hugh Morton of Wilmington, director of the course, stated that Dick Pope who is developer of Florida's famous Cypress Gardens will bring his lecture on "Thinking and Placing Publicity Pictures." Pope is two models with him in illustrating "unsurpassed as a publicity picture idea man," said Morton. "With assistance from two beautiful models, America's master picture publicist will unveil the tricks of the trade for still pictures and TV."

Two North Carolina press photographers will try to match Pope's choices by selecting beauties from this state. Roland Giduz of Chapel Hill and Charles Cooper of Durham are in charge of that phase of the program.

The Southern Short Course is sponsored by the Carolinas Press Photographers Association in cooperation with the National Press Photographers Association, and the Extension Division of the University of North Carolina. Attendance is open to anyone interested.

No Song For Elvis

WASHINGTON, April 14 (AP)—The Army has rejected a request that Pvt. Elvis Presley be allowed to sing at an armed forces day celebration in DeLeon springs, Fla.

Rep. Herlong (D-Fla) tried to get Presley assigned to the celebration sponsored by the De Land Fla., chamber of commerce at nearby DeLeon springs, but the army said Presley wasn't available.

The army advised Helong:

"Pvt. Presley is cufrently undergoing his initial cycle of training, which is vital in preparing him for farther army service. He is one of a group of recruits comprising a packet operating on a rigid and accelerated training schedule which all must complete together. It is contrary to department of the army policy to interrupt this important phase of his training except for compensionate or emergency reasons."

Now Herlong and F. R. Breckenridge, DeLand chamber of commerce manager, are trying to find another celebrity to appear at the DeLeon exercises May 17.

As The RAM Sees

By DAVE WIBLE, Sports Editor

Taking advantage of the first warm day of spring the Carolina mascot Rameses came out of winter hibernation yesterday. Rambling around Kenan woods, he spotted the tender green grass of Fetzer Field and decided to move over and see what the menu had to offer.

Nibbling his way towards the vaulting pit, old Rameses sensed some excitement. "Dave Scurlock" seemed to be the words on everyones tongue. "Well," the ram thought, "this might be worth listing to."

Scurlock Back In Competition

With his nose to the ground, the ram faked a graze and listened. It seems that Dave Scurlock, after missing workouts for over three weeks because of a sprained ankle, ran one of his finest races last Saturday against South Carolina.

Dave had worked out only twice before the meet, and so of course he was not in condition to run his usual 440, 880, and mile-relay schedule. Coach Dale Ranson decided to test him on the 220 to see how he looked. Rave ran and finished third, a fair finish for a middle distance man.

"He looked ok," the ram heard Ranson say," so we decided to let him anchor the mile relay team. When the relay came up, it looked as though the winner of it would take the meet. Howard Kalm, Everett Whatley and Cowles Pilpfert carried the first three-quarters: When Scurlock took over, we were about ten yards behind, with Buddy Mayfield, (last year's runner up in the conference 440) carrying for South Carolina.

Mile Relay Won By Narrow Margin

"Scurlock took the baton and caught up with the Mayfield halfway around. Dave moved in front, but Mayfield came back hard and caught him in the last fifty yards. Running neck, and neck the big Tar Heel lunged for the tape and won by about this much." (two feet)

"He looked great" said Ranson." It was a fine show of guts. We didn't time him, but it must have been a 49.440. (conference record is 48.0). He proved his ankle is all right so we can let him work out full scale now.

Stanley Makes Outstanding Broad Jump

"Well that's nice," mumbled Rameses with a mouth full of grass mixed with sawdust, "wonder what else happened." Across the field someone hollered, "That was a nice jump Ray."

A quick investigation found that Ray Stanley, Tar Heel basketball star, had made a 22' 8¼" broad jump Saturday, probably the best jump in the conference this year. Stanley has also taken up the javlin and discus and is improving rapidly.

"He is all around," commented field coach Joe Hilton," does well in anything he tries. Clete Oakley has been looking real good in the javlin, and Frazer Smith in the discus. Things aer looking better in the field events. We're improving slowly but surely, which is a good sign.

Back over at the vaulting pit, the rambling ram discovered that Ward Sims cleared 13' 1" Saturday, the highest vault in his career. Sims placed third in the broad jump to boot. Clearing the 13 foot mark puts him among the top vaulters in the conference. Only eight can get that high.

Pace Too Slow For Bishop

Rameses discovered that the Wayne Bishop-Billy Latham duel was settled Saturday in Latham's favor. "I'm afraid the pace was too slow," said Bishop, "Usually I try to move out so the (Latham) will not have a kick at the finish." In both the mile and the two-mile, Latham passed Bishop with a final kick. "I do think that Billy is the most improved runner in the conference," Bishop added, "but I will be ready for him next time."

"Looks like the Maryland meet here next Saturday will be a good one," Rameses thought, "I think I come if they don't tread down the grass too much.

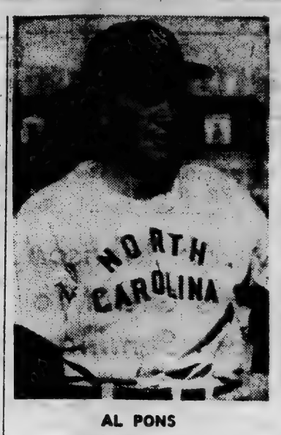
Raleigh — The Tar Heel varsity tennis team captured their fifth straight win of the season yesterday afternoon when they shut out the State Wolfpack 9-0.

It was the second match in a row that the Tar Heels have shut out their opponents. In their last match they swept the Wake Forest Deacons off the courts.

Carolina lost only one set in the entire match. Number one man Bob Bortner dropped the first set of the afternoon to State's Mike Solomon before coming back to win 6-0, 6-1. No State player could get more than three games in one set.

Geoff Black and Steve Bank kept their undefeated records clean with comparative ease. Black defeated an Moss 6-1, 6-0 and Bank defeated Bill Campbell 6-0, 6-1.



In the number two doubles, Malcom Clark and Ben Keys were unmerciful in defeating Ervin Holmes and Cecil Caison 6-0, 6-0.

The Tar Heels will take a break until Friday when they travel to Columbia South Carolina to play the South Carolina Gamecocks.

THE SUMMARY

Singles: Bortner (C) defeated Solomon 3-6, 6-0, 6-1. Bank (C) defeated Campbell 6-0, 6-1, Black (C) defeated Moss 6-1, 6-0. Clark (C) defeated Holmes 6-3, 6-2. Keys (C) defeated Caison 6-1, 6-2. Makepeace (C) defeated Mozingo 6-1, 6-0.

Doubles: Bortner-Bank (C) defeated Solomon-Mozingo 6-, 6-0. Clark-Keys (C) defeated Holmes-Caison 6-0, 6-0. Black-Makepeace (C) defeated Debruhl-Campbell 6-1, 6-2.

Ohio State Booked For Grid Game

Carolina has booked a football game with Ohio State University at Columbus, Ohio, on September 26, 1962, Athletic Director C. P. (Chuck) Erickson announced today.

It will be the first time the Tar Heels have ever met a Western Conference team on the gridiron, although they have been on the schedule of Notre Dame of that area and open a new series with the Irish this year.

Rose Bowl Champs

Ohio State, a perennial football power, was Rose Bowl champion last season. In three other Rose Bowl appearances, the first back in 1921, the Buckeyes have won two and lost one. They have won three Western Conference titles in the past four years.

Athletic director Erickson indicated that North Carolina's long range planning included a general policy of scheduling top intersectional games in addition to Atlantic Coast Conference opponents. This fall the Tar Heels play a Pacific Coast team for the first time, Southern California at Los Angeles on the night of Oct. 3. This date was originally announced as Oct. 4, but has been changed to the Friday night date.

Under Present Rules, Quigg Eligible For One Semester

GREENSBORO, (AP)-Unless the bylaws are changed, Joe Quigg, Carolina's basketball ace who missed all of last season with a broken leg, will be eligible for less than half of next season.

Atlantic Coast Conference bylaws limit to five calendar years an athlete's eligibility, Quigg, began his North Carolina eligibility with the second semester of the 1954-55 season.

When he broke his leg in a November practice last year the rangy Brooklyn, N. Y., hero of the Tar Heels' triple overtime victory over Kansas in the NCAA tournament finals, was forced out of action for the entire season.

As the rules now read, Quigg has only until next January left to play.

The conference meets here May 1-2 and any bylaws changes will be made then. However, ACC rules stipulate that such changes must have a two-thirds votes of the delegates present, "provided that the proposed amendment shall have been submitted, in writing, to the commissioner of the conference three weeks before the meeting."

In addition, the commissioner must send complete copies of the proposed amendments to all members 15 days before the meeting.

Commissioner Jim Weaver said Monday no amendment covering the Quigg case had been submitted and the deadline passed last week.

"As it stands now, I don't see how anything can be done about the matter," said Weaver. "Of course delegates may wish to discuss it if it is brought up, possibly as a hardship case, but just what can be done, if anything, at the May meeting I can't say. It could be brought up at the December meeting," he concluded.

A year ago another Carolina athlete, football back Don Coker of Reidsville, figured in an eligibility case. Weaver declared Coker eligible for two years of varsity football after previously ruling Coker ineligible when it was charged he had received illegal aid from a friend of the college.

After faculty chairmen asked Weaver to investigate further, he ruled Coker could play for two years. Last fall as a sophomore he played. Now with two years left in school, he has only one increase in his elegibility to a remaining.

Tar Heels Meet League Leading Duke Today Away

By RUSTY HAMMOND

The standings of the 1958 ACC pennant race now show three teams tied for the top with identical 3-0 records: State, Duke, and Clemson, and this week Carolina takes on two of the loop leaders—the Blue Devils and the Wolfpack.

Today the Tar Heels journey to Durham to battle with the Devils, coleaders in the race. Carolina is back a notch in fourth place with its 1-1 record to date.

Heels Better Overall

Although State is undefeated against both conference and outside teams and the Tigers sport a 7-2 overall slate, Duke has had much more success against its conference brothers than outside teams. Duke has only a 4-6 overall record, which is not as good as that of Carolina, 8-5.

The Tar Heels have not yet met Duke this season, and the only comparison of scores available is that of Connecticutt, an entry in the Dixie Classic. The Heels whipped Connecticutt in the second round, and the U Conns beat Duke in the first round, sinking the Devils to a 6th place finish in the tourney, while Carolina wound up 2nd.

Beat Canisius Saturday

In their last game, the Heels outslugged Canisius here last Saturday 10-5. Dave Floyd got the win in relief, giving up only three hits in five innings of work. Carolina used two big innings to amass nine runs, then coasted home, adding one counter in the ninth for insurance.

Something's gotta give this week in the tight race, and the Tar Heels have an excellent chance to make a bid for the top spot.

Freshman Baseball Squad Set For Series With Duke

Carolina's frosh baseballers, fresh from an 8-1 win over Chowan Saturday, take on the Duke freshman nine here today at 3:30 p.m. in a two-game series that will see them travel over to Duke tomorrow for a return match.

Rain has seriously hampered the frosh this season with two of their three past games being called due to the Chapel Hill drizzle.

Starting for Carolina today against Duke will be: Ferg Norton, 2b; Tommy Camp, 3b; Bud Ellerbe, ss; Carroll Bolick, catcher; Dee Frady, lf; Dickie Hord, cf; Joe Grimsley, rf; John Stott, 1b; with either Henny Supplee or Wayne Allen on the mound.

Coach Pat Earey termed Saturday's win over Chowan a "good game as far as we're concerned." The freshmen netted 8 runs and 11 hits while holding Chowan to 1 and 3. Camp collected 4 hits. Bolick 3, Norton 3, and Frady 1.

John Stott, Wayne Allen, and Henny Supplee pitched for the frosh nine with Supplee receiving credit for the win.

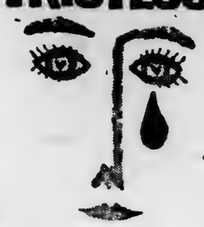
Coach Earey further stated: "We're pleased with the pitching; we're having no hitting trouble, but we need to get the pitchers ready. This week will tell just what kind of ball club we have."

The frosh travel away from home after today's game, with games at Duke tomorrow, State the 17, and Oak Ridge the 18.

Golf Team Defeats Davidson

CHARLOTTE, (AP—Billy Thornton of Carolina fired a three-under-par 69 over Myers Park Country Club course Monday as the Tar Heels took a golf match from Davidson 16½-10½. Gene Lookabill of Carolina and Verner Stanley of Davidson had 70s.

The Semmaries:



Stanley (D) tied Lookabill 1½-1½.
Sloan (D) defeated Callicott 2½-½.

COED RULES

Women Leaders Comment On Rules

Five coed leaders expressed varying views on the Women's Residence Council rules for freshmen Monday.

Miss Connie Bernstein, past student legislature member; Miss Susanne Monsteller, editor of the Coed Handbook; Miss Dot Pressly, secretary of the student body; Miss Martha Wilkinson, UP candidate for student body secretary, and Miss Libby McCord, Women's Residence Council Representative, were among the group commenting on the new rules.

Miss Pressly saw need for rules like these but thought they were out of place at Carolina. "I think the rules that have been suggested should be modified so that they are in keeping with the over-all philosophy at Carolina," she stated.

"If I were under such rules as have been passed by the council I'm sure that it would build up a certain resentment in me toward upper classmen," stated Miss Bernstein.

She added that it the freshmen entering the University are supposed to be of a higher caliber, based on higher standards for entering, then they are mature enough to go by the same rules as others.

Nurses Like Rules

Forty out of fifty-five freshman nurses expressed their desire to see the rules put into effect. The results came after an informal poll was taken Tuesday afternoon.

In commenting on putting freshmen into one dorm Miss Bernstein said "This is discrimination against them."

Miss Mosteller pointed out that there was a need for some freshmen rules in order to adjust to college life. "Being turned loose could be confusing and also hurt the entering freshmen individually," she said.

Her main objection to the new rules closed study in particular, was that it would limit freshmen women's activities in campus activities.

Award Winner To Be Chosen By Committee

The annual Jane Craige Gray Memorial Award presentation will be held Sunday, April 20 at 4:30 p.m. in the Main Lounge of Graham Memorial.

This award is presented annually by Beta Chi chapter of Kappa Delta Sorority in memory of Jane Craige Gray, who was initiated as an alumni in 1950. The award recognizes that member of the Junior Class who has proven herself most outstanding in character, leadership and scholarship.

Each year this junior woman's name engraved on the award plague to be kept in the Kappa Delta house and the official announcement will be in the commencement program.

There will be a selection committee composed of Dr. Katherine Carmichael, Dean of Women and Chairman of the Selections Committee; Assistant to the Dean of Students, Ray Jefferies; retiring president of the student body, Sonny Evans; retiring chairman of the Women's Honor Council, Kit Whitehurst; retiring chairman of Women's Orientation, Mary Jane Fischer substituting for Susan Mayhue; Dean of Awards, Dr. Ernest Mackie; Personnel Advisor to Women, Miss Luanne Thornton.

The former Miss Jane Boyden Craige of Winston-Salem, Mr. Gray attended the National Cathedral Academy in Washington and graduated from Vassar with honors. In Chapel Hill, she was active in the organization of the school Art Guild, Newcomers Club, Colonial Dames and was organizing president of the North Carolina Memorial Hospital Auxiliary.

The chapter will hold a reception in honor of the award winner immediately after her selection. At this time she will be presented with a silver card tray with her name engraved on it.

40th Birthday Celebration Set By Playmakers

The Carolina Playmakers have issued an open invitation to all persons who have worked with the group to attend their fortieth anniversary reunion dinner, to be held at the Chapel Hill Country Club on May 3, at 6:00 p.m.

Interest in the dinner has been high among the former members of the organization and more than 75 persons are expected to attend. Among the Playmakers to return to the campus for the event are Joanthan Daniels and Bernice Kelly Harris, noted novelist; Richard Adler, famous for "Pajama Game"; and Kermit Hunter, whose outdoor dramas are seen each summer in Carolina and Tennessee.

Reservations for the dinner may be made by calling the Department of Dramatic Art, 8-7431. Reservations are $4.00.

Templeton's Ability Overcomes Darkness

By RUSSELL RICE

Take a beginning piano student, blindfold him, put him before a piano keyboard, and tell him to learn the instrument well enough to perform with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra. When the piano student accomplished this feat, he can say that he has equaled Alec Templeton.

Templeton was blind at birth and has never seen a piano key or any other object. Today he is one of the foremost concert pianists, having played with the principal symphonies of the world.

He plays the piano with an ease and skill which equals the greatest artists in the profession. As one listens to him perform, it is difficult to comprehend that this man has never seen a single sheet of music.

Templeton's supreme musicianship is a triumph of genius over incredible handicaps. Alec Templeton is not only a classical pianist, but also one of the most tasteful improvisors in the American jazz field. He is one of the very few who are associated with both the classics and jazz.

His inspired "jamming" in informal all-night sessions have really been out of this world. Born in England, he is one of the first of his nation to get into American jazz.

Millions of people have listened to Alec Templeton by way of radio and television. These two entertainment mediums have brought out his wonderful charm and wit. If Templeton should give up the piano, he could surely become a success as a comedian.

The Student Entertainment Committee will present Alec Templeton tomorrow night at 8 in Memorial Hall. Admission is free on presentation of ID Cards. Student wives will be charged one dollar and others two dollars.

Furtado Student Body Prexy; SP Candidate Wins 1268-1174

By BILL KINCAID

Don Furtado, Student Party candidate, won the student body presidency by a narrow margin of 94 votes in Tuesday's runoff election.

Voting by districts was:

Dorm Men's I: Furtado—132, Goldsmith—98; Dorm Men's II: Furtado — 218, Goldsmith — 138; Dorm Men's III: Furtado—133, Goldsmith—82; Dorm Men's IV: Furtado — 234, Goldsmith — 144; Dorm Men's V: Furtado — 133, Goldsmith—98; Dorm Women—Furtado — 245, Goldsmith — 161; Town Women: Furtado—29, Goldsmith—70; Town Men I: Furtado—10, Goldsmith—94; Town Men II: Furtado — 66, Goldsmith — 210; Town Men III: Furtado—58, Goldsmith 68; Town Men IV: Furtado—7, Goldsmith— 11; Infirmary: Furtado—12, Goldsmith—7.

Furtado, in a post election statement to The Daily Tar Heel, said: "Nothing that I can say could ever express my appreciation to the students of Carolina. I can only promise that in the coming year I will attempt to prove myself worthy of their confidence.

"My sincere thanks go to all of those people who have so unselfishly devoted long hours of their time to helping me.

"This has been a long and hard-fought campaign. The great respect that the campus has for Al Goldsmith is evidenced by the support which he gained. This next year is going to be a difficult one for student government, and I know that I can depend on his able assistance."

Goldsmith, in a final statement said: "The students of Carolina have today chosen an outstanding person to lead them for the coming year. I have always thought most highly of Don, and although we differ on many political views I count him as one of my closest friends.

"I think the campus is now aware of the many problems which must be faced. I sincerely hope that Don will adapt some of the plans and ideas I pushed in my campaign as I feel they have much merit.

"I thank all the students who voted for me both on the first of April and today. I hope they will all rally around our new president and help him as he faces this most difficult job."

Men Term Coed Rules 'Unjust' DTH Poll Shows

Nearly 90% of the undergraduate male population seems to feel that the new coed rules are unjust. This was revealed by a Daily Tar Heel poll taken yesterday in seven dormitories and four fraternities.

94% of the male population felt that the rules needed changing, 4% did not know whether the rules were just or unjust.

482 people returned polls out of 683 that were sent out for a 71% average return.

Most criticized were rules concerning closed study halls, lights out regulations, and earlier closing hours; however there was a good deal of opposition to weekend rules and segregation of dormitories.

Among the men, there seemed to be little sentiment for the new rules and some expressed the desire that the present rules be abolished.

Commentaries ranged from the profane to a statement like the following: "Such rules are typical of those instituted in Victorian days. If a person cannot live with his or her elders, how can one ever hope to become a more rounded person. Forcing one to study has never worked out, that I know of."

"I went to a strict prep school. A person of college age should be allowed to use his or her own discretoin as to how to study at night."

Another commented: "Why must there be changes when freshman girls have behaved as well as any others? Also the rules tend to inhibit "reality testing" and social development. They tend to imply that the girls have to be looked after, constantly watched and that they are inherently evil."

A more full breakdown of the poll will be released this weekend, after which the poll will be turned over to the Women's Residence Council for consideration.

Local AED Chapter Hosting Convention

The local chapter of Alpha Epsilon Delta, national pre-medical and pre-dental honorary society, is sponsoring a state-wide pre-med and pre-dental convention in conjunction with the annual state Alpha Epsilon Delta convention this Saturday.

The sessions have been planned so as to be most beneficial to all pre-professional students in the state.

The program will consist of a morning session in the auditorium of Hill Hall, and an afternoon session in the clinical auditorium of the North Carolina Memorial Hospital.

Featured in a Saturday morning panel discussion on "Pre-professional Education as Training for Life" will be four educators: Dr. Robert Cordell, department of surgery at the Bowman School of Medicine; Dr. Nathan Womack, professor of surgery at the UNC Medical School; Dr. William Demeritt, assistant dean of the UNC Dental School, and Dr. Kenneth Penrod, assistant dean of the Duke Medical School.

The afternoon session will be held in the Clinical Auditorium of the hospital, and will feature short talks by a medical and a dental student describing life in medical and dental schools.

Frank W. Farrell Jr., president of the local chapter, stresses that this convention is open to all interested students on this campus as well as any others who might wish to attend.

One Act Plays By Students Open Friday

Three new one act plays by students in the Department of Dramatic Art will be seen Friday and Saturday at 7:30 p.m. in The Playmakers Theatre.

"The Dangers of Great Literature," by Gabrielle Roepke, heads the bill. The play, directed by Page Williams, is a comedy on the Paris-Helen-Meneleus theme. Featured in the cast are John Sneden as Melvin, Lore Schuller as Helen, and Chuck Tomlinson as Perry. Special music for the show will be played by Taylor Williams. The setting is designed by Millard McDonald.

The second play is a folk fantasy entitled "Mossell and the Laurel Bush," by George H. Hill, directed by Lew Goldstein. In the cast are Barbara Dixon as Mossell, Dorothy Walters as Lenore, John Whitty as Mr. Sileno and Ronald Belk as Curly. Settings are by Chuck Tomlinson.

The final play is "The Freudian Years," by Ken Callendar, the story of an ultra-modern family, directed by Lucy Ann Dunlap. The players are Harvey Knox as Waldo, Pat Simmons as Sophia, Betty Rhodes as Margaret, David Petersen as Henry, Kay Rogers as Hannah, and Jim Potter as Gus. The set is designed by David Small.

Admission to the plays is free and the public is cordially invited.

Bridge Results

Jap Memory teamed with Dr. George Doak of Chapel Hill to win second place in Monday night's bridge game at Graham Memorial. The only other students to place in east-west competition were Al Alexander and Bill Greene, who placed third. Mrs. C. P. Richmond and Roy L. Smith took first place.

The April master point game is scheduled for next week.

The director announced that renewals of memberships were due and urged student bridge players to renew their expired memberships. He invited those who are not members to join.

GM SLATE

The following activities are scheduled for today at Graham Memorial:

GMAB, 4-6 p.m., Grail Room; Women's Orientation Council, 4-6 p. m., Roland Parker Lounge I; Kappa, 7-9 p.m., Roland Parker Lounge II; Orientation Council Interviews, 7-10 p. m., Woodhouse Conference Room; Polls Committee, 4:30-5:30 p. m., Roland Parker Lounge II; Carolina Forum, 4-5 p. m., Woodhouse Conference Room; Pan Hellenic Council, 5-6 p. m., Woodhouse Conference Room.

SPOTLIGHTS AND FOOTLIGHTS

Fleece, Valkyries Have Big Night

By DAVIS YOUNG

Cymbals clang, the crowd stirs and two hooded figures start down the aisles of Memorial Hall to the tune of Wagner's Siegfried from the opera "The Ring" on their way to tapping thirteen new members into the Order of the Golden Fleece.

Located in Monday night's audience were the tappees—all totally unaware of their extreme fortune. They were scattered through the audience and many were hard for the two hooded Fleecemen to reach.

However, true to Fleece tradition, the new initiates were all grabbed and pulled from their seats at precisely the moment the cymbals clanged and escorted from Memorial to the sound of tremendous ovations.

As they were pulled from their seats, their names and hometowns were read. It was then explained to the audience just what field each one had excelled in, which made him eligible for membership.

Tension Mounts

The packed house seemed to love the "cloak and dagger" involved with the initiation and signaled their approval without hesitation as each new Fleece member was selected. And then they would settle back and watch the tension mount as the hooded figures wound their way through the audience looking for some one else who filled the qualifications for the Golden Fleece.

Those tapped for membership on Monday night included Charles Ashford, Wayne Bishop, Jean Pierre Boissavit, John Brooks and Herman Godwin.

Also: Robin Hinson, Jesse Weimar Jones, Roland (Buddy) Payne, Harvey Peck, Clifton Hunter Tillman, John Whitaker, John Whitty and Jan Philip Schinhan.

Following the annual public appearance of the Golden Fleece was the annual Valkyrie Sing. It featured musical acts from dormitories, sororities and fraternities. Acting as Mistress of Ceremonies was Dot Pressley a member of the Valkyries, the highest honorary for women.

Biggest Laughs

The Sigma Nu fraternity gave the crowd many of its biggest laughs of the evening with a rock 'n' roll skit. Mangum Dorm did a takeoff on Lee's surrendering to Grant. They ended their act by having the crowd join them in a rousing chorus of 'Dixie."

The Tri Delts, all dressed in black with white gloves, gave two beautiful renditions of old Negro spirituals which enabled them to

Who Wants New Rules?

The men have added their voice to that of the women in opposing the new women's rules, which would bring severe limitations to individual rights to this campus, something that has not been any part of the tradition of Carolina.

The only people left for the rules are some members of the Women's Residence Council, the nurses, and the Dean of Women.

However, the Women's Residence Council is not unanimously in favor of the rules, and the Nursing School only stands to benefit by the rules, in that they are a liberalization of the present nurses rules. If the nurses took the initiative now, they might be able to get rules similar to those of the other coeds.

If the Women's Residence Council took the initiative they would preserve freedom on the UNC campus by ridding the rules that they have gotten handed to them by the previous Women's Residence Council.

Several members have already expressed disagreement with the closed study rules, the lights out regulations, and the weekend permission statutes. This would be a start in the right direction to throw these out and take a deep and careful consideration of the others before destroying a measure of freedom on the UNC campus, because someone has fears that the people who have proved themselves able to handle their own affairs, can't in the future.

The Women's Residence Council can provide the right kind of leadership. It is hoped it will.

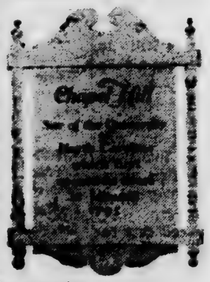
A Tribute

An election has placed some new faces in office, but now is the time to pay tribute to the people who have served during the past year.

It is hard to single one out in particular, but Dot Pressly should be singled out as being the most industrious, most courageous, and perhaps the most loyal secretary the student body of the University of North Carolina has ever had.

There are times when words are very small, and feelings very large, and words cannot express those feelings. Very simply, the student body should feel proud that last spring it elected Dot Pressly to the office of Secretary of the Student Body. She has served well.

Suggestion, Salute



The Election Board recovered from a fairly poor job in the regular spring elections to do a very good job on the run-off.

The things that were forgotten last time were remembered this time, and in the light of this one can forget about the small oversight of temporarily forgetting one dormitory's ballot box.

A suggestion for the next election is in order. Next time it might be nice to count the ballots by dormitories. It would be advantageous to the student leaders in finding out the fruits of their efforts and probably would take less time in that the sorting problem would be less involved.

The Daily Tar Heel

The official student publication of the Publication Board of the University of North Carolina, where it is published daily except Monday and examination and vacation periods and summer terms. Entered as second class matter in the post office in Chapel Hill, N. C., under the Act of March 8, 1870. Subscription rates: mailed, $4 per year, $2.50 a semester; delivered, $6 a year, $3.50 a semester.

Prelude

James C. Miller

One may well wonder, as he glances through the newspapers and news magazines of the world today, about the amount of space allotted to national and international affairs in local periodicals preceding World War I. Historically, America, prior to this time was relatively isolationist in attitude toward the affairs of most of the other nations. This attitude was reflected on the national scene as well. Local interests tended to take precedence over issues concerning the nation as a whole. On the international level, nationalism was still the dominant passion motivating the aspirations of many peoples. Thus, we might conjecture that news of national and international occurence assumed importance in direct proportion as it affected the self-interests and welfare of the peoples concerned. Of course, the variables of communication a la technology and the importance of foreign correspondents would contribute toward the effectiveness and magnitude of issues and events reported, other than those local. Perhaps there were many another variable in operation. At any rate, from the points listed above, we might reasonably assume that we are confronted with a good bit more of what goes on in the world than our predecessors of days past, although our attitudes may have changed only in degree.

The thought may then occur that we are quite well informed of curcent events througout the world. Perhaps, relatively speaking, we are; provided, of course, we have stopped to scrutinize the news and editorial pages before going on to Dennis The Menace (which, incidentally, is a rather worthy creation). Granted that at times it may be hard to separate news from editorial, the fact that we traditionally have had this dichotomy in journalism is highly suggestive to our problem.

News as events, occurence and or issues are data. By themselves they are relatively meaningless. They exist, but their existence is similar to the existence of the ray of light on the retina prior to its transmission as an impulse along the optic nerve to its appropriate cortical area of the brain. They occur in relationship. The editorial, thus, endeavors to ascertain the relationship, and as such, has a function similar to that of the cortex. Once the relationship is established, an attitude is assumed.

The process here described is a part of our biological inheritance. But the psychological product can pass for truth, certitude, dogmatism, egotism - unless we look for inadequacies and inefficacies in the process:

Did we receive the correct data?
Which Data received the emphasis?
Would our interpretation of the data differ
If we had more or different data?
How does past experience affect the relationship we "see" in the data?
Do the environments in which the interpreters reside have substantial sway on what is "seen" in the data?

Thus, the big question concerns the purity of our perception. This purity is indeed determined in many ways by quality of influences impinging upon the relationship of facts and their interpretation.

The data we get or don't get from our papers or other communication media and the relationship we establish or have established for us with regards to the data are basic to our attitudes on nation and international issues.

This knowledge should make us a little wary of drawing hasty and ill-concieved conclusions. Perhaps we need to assume an attitude of humility commensurate with our finite nature.

LETTERS

Editor:

A few days ago, I had the pleasure of spending an evening in the UNC infirmary.

Upon retiring for the evening, I made a natural request for the use of a Bible. To my amazement, this seemed as if it were not a natural request, for there was no Bible to be had. It seems that our nation and all its moral codes are built upon this book, and yet there was not one in the infirmary.

Now I ask these questions: Why was there no Bible and why was my request so strange? Have the students at this University strayed so far from its principles to think that they no longer need to search its scriptures? Our whole value system seems to be lost. I refer to the student who griped about no funnies on the editorial page. Sure, funnies are good, but there are more important issues and problems that face us. The Bible is the best selling book and the least read. Our values of what to read seem to be all mixed up.

I feel that my country is built upon this book, but I wonder if my university is built upon it. Where is our faith? Yes, I include myself, for we all lack the needed faith. Our freedoms cannot live untended; our freedoms can and must be kept alive. It can be done by faithful, earnest, and regular reading of the Bible.

America will remember the Bible to her glory. America will forget it to her doom.

Name withheld by request.

The Editorial Page, Rain, This, That And The Other

To put the quietus on some of the remarks around campus as of late—Adlai Stevenson is deffiitely not going to be on the Tar Heel staff this year . . . . And the Tar Heel will not fold if The Nation and The Reporter do so.

Now that the monsoon season has set in for good, many people as usual are griping about it, but to no avail; all the gripes in the world do not equal less rain, so we may as well become adjusted to that fact, and look to the brighter side.

Fact I: April showers bring May flowers (although this fact has not been properly verified by the Department of Agriculture).

Fact II: Farmers do need the rain. The rice crops have sunk to an all time low.

Fact III: Manufacturers of rainwear need the money from increased sales desperately.

Fact IV: Now that we are accustomed to the rain, it would be exceedingly difficult to adjust to fair weather and the hot sun.

Politics Department:

From the pages of the Washington Post comes a lovely bit about Ike. (By society columnist Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer): "The President, in fine fettle, at his press conference last week, looked more Kewpieish than ever . . . his complexion pinky-white as dogwood blooms, his spike of almost invisible hair waving unconfined from his bald dome, the left upquirk of his mouth and his almost-lisp lending a whimsical lift to less serious sayings."

We assume that Miss Thayer will print a translation of the column in a forthcoming issue.

Former President Harry S. Truman, speaking at a Yale Seminar on Political Behavior, was questioned about what mistakes were made in legislation during his term of office.

In his usual candid form, he replied, "I don't know of any mistakes . . . At least the GOP hasn't repealed any I passed."

Maybe this is the man we need in 1960. He could certainly be a contender, along with Snead and Hogan, if he could perfect his game.

Laughter From Olympus

ANYTHING GOES

American Society Chastised Lack Of Depth Criticized

Many years ago in Copenhagen an eccentric emperor took great delight in prowling through the streets without any clothes on. Naturally, the citizens refused to believe that this was possible, so they vied with each other in elaborate descriptions of what the emperor was wearing. All went well until one day a remarkably hip child commented audibly: "Maw, I don't want to bug you, but really, that emperor cat lacks finery." End of emperor, or perhaps under these slightly unique circumstances, emperor's end.

The parallel to this story for our own time occurred recently when a California child cut through the maze of filth and organized insanity with a clean, ten inch blade. You may protest that this was rather vigorus action, as indeed it was; but it must be remembered that Cheryl Crane's problem was much vaster and more complex than the problem which faced the citizens of Copenhagen so long ago.

If the average GI (so we are told) went out to fight and die for Mom, the Brooklyn Dodgers, and Apple Pie, what was poor Cheryl supposed to do when she realized that Mom was a tramp, the Dodgers were in Los Angeles, and the Apple Pie had been devoured by the hood who came to dinner? With the instinctive child genius for direct action, Cheryl reached for the blade and plunged it straight and true. ("For heaven's sake, Cheryl, you're liable to hurt somebody with that — ugh! — knife.")

Now, in order that Cheryl's magnificent act may not have been in vain, we raise the following questions concerning the act and the general milieu in which it took place. For some of these questions we even have answers.

Question: What kind of a society is it that creates the gigolo, a male prostitute who gets paid off with the proverbial Jaguar and sports jacket?

Question: What kind of a society is it that makes a national institution, in fact a shrine, out of the well-developed mammary glands that lie (or point) beneath the movie star's sweater?

Question: What kind of a society is it that seems to have an unlimited supply of voyeurs to pant over the epic horizontal collision between the aforementioned gigolo and the aforementioned movie star?

Question: What kind of a society is it that, when the gigolo lies so cold, so dead, rushes in with high-powered lawyers and slick press agents so that a Mickey Cohen has to defend the elemental decencies by remarking, "You'd think the broad hardly knew him"? (This is what goaded Cohen into releasing Lana's pathetic letters; the next "daddy love" will be lucky to get a picture post card of that classic phallic symbol, the Eiffel Tower.)

There is a very simple, one-word answer to these four questions. This answer is agreed upon by virtually all intellectuals, regardless of their politics. The word is "SICK." S-I-C-K. Sick. And the first step on the road back to some kind of relative normalcy is the brutally frank recogaition that this is a very SICK society.

The other night on television, a third-rate comic who somehow managed to sneak in between the westerns and the give-aways, said: "I'd like to do this next number for all the teen-age weird-os, the middle-age flips, and the real old sickies." In her moment of agonized decision, Cheryl Crane Turner, she of the four foster fathers and the innumerable "uncles" just for a night, could very well have said the same thing. Poor Johnnie Stompanato got his hip card punched for the last time, but those of us who have survived may be just at the beginning.

Omniworld

Sam Frazier

It seems today as if every other word is meant to be a suggestion or a demand that we solve the problems of our world, that this divided world will ultimately destroy itself if immediate steps are not taken to alleviate and obscure all the dividing lines of tension. However, there are two viewpoints as to what the dividing lines of tension are. One group, so far the most predominant, claims that Communism versus Democracy are the contending parties who are manufacturing the destructive tension. This idea, invoked when world tension became apparent, has been the vogue since that time. However, there is another group which is rapidly rising and which may soon be the vogue. This group claims that world tensions have not been produced by political contentions but by economic contentions and that the vast gulf between the "wealthy" and many times more numerous "poor" countries is the real womb of world tensions.

Actually, both of these theories are valid, but neither theory really touches on the problem. The fact of the matter is that the majority of people in the world do not want peace. (A world of hypocrites—those who dote on Biblical prophecies find a paradise in this statement). That is, this majority of the world's people does not want peace if there is even the slightest mention of disturbing his own prviate national theology. In his nation lives his truest heart; sacrilege would be committed if this place is defiled. Not to discredit the division of the world into separate countries. Pride in one's country is honorable and good, and any person who does not give his allegiance and devotion to his country is a person to be pitied. But the question is this: Does our country exist to serve us and humanity, or do we exist to serve our country?

Ironically, here in America, supposedly the stronghold of democracy and freedom, we have become slaves to our nationalism, to "Americanism." The prevailing idea is that anything un-American must be quickly and thoroughly stamped out. What foolish people we are to think that America is the only country in the world. Those foolish people who allow themselves to feel very self-righteous when we allow people from the primitive" world around us to come here to live and to study are only reproductions from a universally copied archetypal pattern. The desired goal is that our country be utilized for our good and for the good of all mankind. It is imperative for Americans (and all countries) to realize that we may not always stand on the universal truth; our nationalism will have to be disturbed. In all Russian-American relations, we are never willing to go half-way; for the proposal to be acceptable for us the man on the other side of the world has to come over here to us.

There can be no one-way concession to peace; we must sacrifice, and so must Russia. Part of our ideals must be cut away, and Russia must cut away part of hers; in the wounds thus made it is possible for the two to be grafted together, with the remainder of the world following suit. It is either this or war. This must be the choice.

There, there, children. Don't cry. Tell daddy all about it. Did the big nasty man take your comic strips away? Did he leave them out of the paper for two whole days? Did he hide them on page three, just to make it hard for you to find them? well, dry your tears and come sit on daddy's knee, and he'll tell you a story about the nasty, nasty man.

You see, children, you really shouldn't be mad at him—you should feel sorry for him, because he's very mixed up and confused. He doesn't know that your comic strips are the most important thing in the world to you. He just doesn't have the mature understanding to realize that your day is incomplete and your life empty and futile if you can't read the comics while you're watching the Mickey Mouse Club and Captain Kangaroo. He just can't see that these things are terribly vital to you. As I said, children, he's really very confused, and doesn't mean to harm you at all.

Now don't cry any more, because daddy is going to fix everything for you. Daddy is going to have a talk with the nasty, nasty man, and daddy is going to convince him that what you want is four pages just chock-full of comic strips. Won't that be nice? And if you're real good, and eat all your spinach, maybe daddy can even get him to put in some pictures for you to color with your crayons, and one of those connect-the-dots drawings every single day! And if you're very, very good, all week long, and don't spill any pablum on your bib and drink all your prune juice, why, on Sunday, maybe the nasty, nasty man will give you six pages of comics—in color! Wouldn't that be just too peachy-keen?

Oh, there are just all sorts of nice things that daddy is going to do for you! Not only is he going to fix it up with the nasty, nasty man who took away your comics for two days, but daddy is going to talk to all the bad, bad people who have been making life miserable for you.

Daddy is going to start with all the mean ol' professors that make you go to their mean ol' classes. He's going to explain to them just how much their silly old talking interferes with your play-time, and how you would like them ever-so-much if they wouldn't make you read all those stupid books which are just wasting away the best years of your lives. And when daddy has finished straightening out that silly Administration and all their silly little rules that get in the way of your enjoyment.

Daddy is going to tell that silly Administration that it just can't go around thwarting and frustrating and inhibiting your goals in life. Daddy is going to tell them that they've got to stop this nonsense of expecting you to go to classes and pass quizzes. Your tender little minds just aren't ready for that sort of cruel disciplining, yet. If you mind daddy, and do just what he says, maybe he can even convince that silly Administration to do away with the whole messy business and give you your diplomas right now, so you can go home and take your afternoon naps.

And after you graduate! Then you'll really see how much help daddy can be. Because he's not going to stop taking care of you just because you graduate. No, sir! When you go out into the world, he's going to tell your bosses to be nice to you, and he's going to hold your hand when you cross the street, and he going to wipe your noses, and he's going to let you watch Cap'n Five every day, and he's going to tuck you in bed every night, and kiss you good-night.

But for the time being, don't you worry one little bit about having to read anything but comics. Daddy is going to take care of everything, and fix it so that you won't have to do any thinking at all.

6 p.m. — Channel 4 — The Subject Is Jazz

Tonight's half-hour is devoted to "Early Jazz." The featured artist is Wulbur de Paris, famous trombonist and leader of the band at Jimmy Ryans.

9 p.m. — Channel 5 — Kraft Theatre

This long-standing dramatic show tonight begins a new policy, in an attempt to reverse its recent trend toward mediocre quality and small audiences. Under its new producers, the Kraft Theatre will present plays by noted playwrights and adaptations of well-known literary works.

Of the three plays to be presented this evening, one, "This Property is Condemned," was seen here last in a production by the Petites Dramatiques.

Ben Gazzara and Lee Grant, two of the most promising young talents of television and the stage are starred in another of the three, "Moony's Kid Don't Cry." The other play is "The Last of My Solid Gold Watches."

The playwright, Tennessee Williams, will appear as a special guest. The production is being directed by Sidney Lumet, a young director who is justly praised for his direction of "Twelve Angry Men."

9:30 p.m. — Channel 4 — Living Books

Those interested in American literature may profit from tonight's discussion of three works by Nathaniel Hawthorne: "Rappaccini's Daughter," "The Minister's Black Veil," and "Young Goodman Brown."

Young Demos Will Hold Rally

North Carolina's Young Democrats are to hold a rally and workshop April 18 and 19 in Raleigh according to an announcement by Bob Futrelle, president of the North Carolina YDC. Representatives of YDC organizations from colleges and universities throughout North Carolina will attend.

The workshop will begin at 2 p.m. Friday with registration of the visiting delegations at the State College Union. The schedule of events for Friday includes a reception at the Governor's Mansion with Mrs. Luther H. Hodges; a banquet, with an address by Terry Sanford; and a dance at the College Union.

Study groups will get under way at 9 o'clock Saturday morning. Bob Futrelle will lead the workshop for members of existing YDC groups; Harold Wilson, of Wake Forest Law School, will work with those wishing to start a Young Democrat Club; and Everett Beam, Clerk of Superior Court of Stanly County, will conduct a study of practical politics.

The purpose of the event will be to further emphasize thinking on a political and governmental level in order to make the student a better citizen in his community.

Sing

win the Women's Group Sing division.

Smith Dorm and Alpha Delta Pi sorority fought it out on even grounds tieing for the trophy in the musical skit division. The Smithians did a hilarious bit entitled "Dear Mr. Editor." Time and again they brought the house down by referring to campus problems in a humorous manner. Equally funny were the ADPi's with their skit entitled "Carolina Corral." All of the girls were dressed in what must be termed female cowboy suits, but which looked more like the elaborate costumes seen in a New York chorus line.

The crowd appeared to thoroughly enjoy all phases of the evening's entertainment from the first Golden Fleece tapping until the end of the Valkyrie Sing and "Hark the Sound."

Rules

In favoring the new rules, Miss Wilkinson pointed out that she didn't think people could get along without some 'supervision; therefore she favored supervised study.

"Rules should be elastic enough to take in special events happening on campus, but when a girl comes to college she needs such rules in order to adjust to campus life," she added.

Miss McCord said that she went to school under a situation where rules for freshmen were the same as upper classmen. Her main point was that the situation should demand a change if any were to be made. "The girls to be affected by the rules should make them," said Miss McCord.

Hunter Top ACC Hitter

Hunter, who has led the Wolfpack to a 7-0 early-season record overall and a 3-0 mark within the conference, has collected 13 hits in 26 times at bat and has also scored 11 times. His closest challenger is outfielder Rex McMillan of Wake Forest, who has 12 hits in 27 at bats for a mark of .444.

Buster Ledford, a junior outfielder for Wake Forest, has the most stolen bases, five. Don Oldham, Carolina second baseman, has collected the most hits, 17, and also has scored the most runs, 15.

ACC Service Bureau figures, including games of last Saturday, show that there is only one other .400 or better hitter in the conference at this early date.

Job interviewer, staring at coed applicants sack outfit with middy blouse, asked: "Are you sure you'll be able to work for us permanently?"

Increase Is Expected In Summer Attendance

Plans for the 1958 Summer Session at the University of North Carolina have been completed and announced by the director, Guy B. Phillips. Keen interest has been indicated by a large number of requests for information from college students, public school teachers and other professional personnel.

A number of special activities are being provided which will mean that an increased number of people will be in Chapel Hill during the summer.

The Institute for Teachers of Mathematics and Science will be conducted here for the second year. The candidates have been selected from a long list of applications from many sections of the United States. These persons have been granted liberal fellowships.

A program will be offered to an estimated 50 persons in television teaching in cooperation with the Ford Foundation which has sponsored programs in 19 school systems during the current year.

Dr. Robert Hughes who is on the School of Education staff will begin a program of work for teachers of special education and will be assisted by Dr. Plumlee from the University of Illinois in a speech correction course. Some of the basic course requirements can be met during the summer.

Supervisors of student teaching will have a six weeks' workshop program in this important area of professional service.

"Summer session attendance on the part of public school teachers can mean a numbers of things to the individual in addition to personnel improvement. It will contribute to the raising of the certificate and result in some salary increase," Phillips commented. "Under a new ruling teachers may now deduct expenditures in the Summer Session from the Federal Income Tax payment. This should help teachers who are doing work for the improvement in the quality of instruction for children."

A broad program of academic courses will be offered for undergraduate and graduate students in different areas. A number of visiting instructors will supplement the work of regular staff member who will remain in Chapel Hill for the summer.

The Dozier Loan Fund for teachers will be available in addition to the special scholarships of $75 available from the State Department of Public Instruction from funds allocated at the last session of the Assembly.

Mrs. Charles E. Milner

Mrs. Charles E. Milner, 46, wife of the acting director of the University, died at her home in Chapel Hill yesterday after a long illess.

Services will be conducted this afternoon at 3 at the University Methodist Church.

Has anyone ever noticed how nothing improves one's driving like having a police car following?

Spring CU Day And Carnival To Be At State

The spring CU Day and Carnival Night of the Consolidated University will be held Saturday at the College Union building on the campus of N. C. State College.

According to Kelly Maness, president of Consolidated University Student Council, 15 bus loads of Women's College girls will arrive in Raleigh for the day's activities.

"All students of the three schools are invited to attend the event," said Maness.

The day will consist of carnival games, an informal dance and crowning of the CU Day queen.

The major purpose of this combined project is to promote a friendly competetive spirit among campus organizations at the three schools and will give the schools a chance to participate in one large event.

Booths will be constructed by many organizations on the three campuses and will be assembled on the second floor of the student union. Some of the games are penny tossing, candle bowling, BB shooting, and fortune telling.

Booths will be open from 1-11 p. m. One UNC organization has entered a booth.

Contestants for the queen will be introduced at the dance and crowned at 10 p.m. Only organizations having booths may sponsor a contestant for queen.

Some Short Shorts About Spring Sports

Will Pete Brennan sign a professional basketball contract? Will North Carolina's baseballers ever repel a trey of losses to Georgia, of all people? Will Tar Heel track star Dave Scurlock break any records this year? Is Harvey Salz really Bob Cousy in disguise?

The day North Carolina students become enthusiastic over the Spring sports schedule will be the same day that the Bell Tower rings out a shrill version of "Lollipop." . . . That is to say the "Twelfth of Never."

What's wrong with baseball, golf, tennis, and track? Maybe it's just the spring of the year and a young man's fancy is turning to thoughts of "gettin' the hell out of school." Anyway, the following at a Carolina baseball game is about as dismal as the crowd that graces Griffith Stadium in September to watch the Nationals play Kansas City.

Nothing short of major league baseball, the Jack Kramer tennis tour, the Masters tournament and our Olympic track squad could revive the ferver of the Carolina sportsmen to football and basketball heights, once the sun sinks low on the Chapel Hill horizon.

In fact, sometimes the situation is so bad that the players forget they have a game to play in the afternoon. Some guy in a convertible suggests a beach trip and not even an Atomic blast at South Building can divert the beach bound neurotics. To the extreme. Duke could steal back the victory bell and it would probably take a series of well-executed pep rallies to revive the Tar Heel sports spirit.

"Who gives a damn?" most folks would say. "Football pays all the bills anyway." That's what the great Carlisle Indian school All-American Jim Thorpe used to say too, until one day he reached in his pocket to pay for a hamburger and the football money was gone. Jim was also a good track and baseball star, but that cupboard was always bare.

In the Spring, it seems that everybody wants to take an active part in the sports picture at Carolina, but nobody wants to see the stars perform. I'm sure the stars share that compulsion. Mirror, Mirror, on the wall, who's going to suffer the most of all? Why, baseball, track, golf and tennis, of course.

Whist anyone?

Yanks Beat Boston

BOSTON (AP)—Yogi Berra hit a two-run homer as the New York Yankees collected all their runs in the seventh inning to defeat Boston 3-0 yesterday in opening defense of their American League championship.

The stocky New York catcher spoiled what had been a fine pitching job by the Sox' Willard Nixon and decided the contest when he pulled the ball into the screen near the top of the right field foul pole on a two-strike pitch.

Nixon, who had yielded only one hit—a Berra single—and had allowed a mere three balls to be hit out of the infield over the first six innings, had just walked Mickey Mantle.

Orioles Take Senators

BALTIMORE (AP)—The Baltimore Orioles winged a 6-1 victory over the Washington Senators Tuesday behind the batting of third base hope Brooks Robinson and veteran catcher Gus Triandos.

The game was Baltimore's first season opener at home since its return to the major leagues.

The 20-year-old Robinson from Little Rock, Ark., and Triandos, in his fourth season with the Orioles, each slashed three hits.

Tigers Edge Chicago

CHICAGO (AP)—New shortstop Billy Martin, after three consecutive strikeouts, singled across the winning run in Detroit's 4-3 opening day victory over the Chicago White Sox before 28,319 Tuesday.

Tiger pitching star Jim Bunning scattered seven hits and smacked two doubles to score twice, while Detroit's Ray Boone and Harvey Kuenn smashed none-on homers.

Chicago's Sherm Lollar hit a two-run homer in the third when the White Sox scored their three runs, all unearned.

BUCK FREEMAN

Buck Freeman Vacates Post At Carolina

James A. (Buck) Freeman has resigned his post as Carolina assistant basketball coach to enter business.

Top prospect to succeed Freeman is Dean Smith, 27-year-old assistant basketball coach and head baseball coach at the Air Force Academy in Denver, the Associated Press learned.

Head coach Frank McGuire was not available for comment.

The veteran Freeman, who coached McGuire when he played for St. John's University in Brooklyn, N. Y., came here as McGuire's assistant and chief scout at the start of the 1952-53 season.

Their efforts resulted in a national championship for the Tar Heels last year.

McGuire saw Smith as an opponent on the University of Kansas team that defeated St. John's for the NCAA championship in 1952. McGuire's last year at the New York school.

Smith was an assistant coach at Kansas for a year after graduation, then entered the Air Force in the fall of 1954.

He is married and has two children. Announcement of his appointment to succeed Freeman is expected after completion of the academy baseball season.

At Denver, Smith said he is interested in the Carolina job. Smith visited McGuire last weekend. But he said that he has indefinite status with the Air Force and is not sure his release would be approved to take the Carolina position.

Haney Helps Out

MILWAUKEE (AP)—Manager Fred Haney of the Milwaukee Braves, who hasn't been thrown out of a league game since 1956, but who was chased twice by Umpire Augie Donatelli during the spring tour, said Tuesday he'd been fined $50.

National League President Warren Giles imposed the penalty for the second ruckus with Donatelli. During an exhibition at Austin, Tex., a week ago, Coach John Fitzpatrick made some helpful observation from the bench, Haney said—"something like, 'if there's anybody in your way, ask for help.'

"Donatelli ordered him out of there, so I went out and really unloaded on him."

Tar Heels Play Duke Today, Rained Out Yesterday

By RUSTY HAMMOND

Carolina and Duke will have to wait another day before playing their first baseball game against each other, as rain and wet grounds forced cancellation of yesterday's scheduled contest between the front-running Blue Devils and the fourth-place Tar Heels. The game has been rescheduled today at 3:30 in Durham.

Duke, who now has an excellent 4-0 conference record, good enough for league leadership, won its last outing in a 9-4 victory against the slumping Deacs from Baptist Hollow.

Games Monday eliminated one of the teams tied for first place from the limelight temporarily-State—as the Pack had no game that day and have a 3-0 record. Clemson won its game Monday over the Maryland Terps to keep the pressure on the Devils.

The Blue Devils have thus far played their best games against conference competition, as they stand 4-0 in the conference, but only 5-6 overall. Carolina is 1-1 in the ACC and 8-5 overall.

The Heels were runners-up in the Dixie Classic, while Duke finished 6th. But the Devils are defending conference champs, and their loop record indicates their ability.

Recent figures show that Tar Heel second-baseman Carson Oldham is the 7th best hitter in the ACC. While state gridder Dick Hunter sits at the top with a .500 mark, Oldham is smacking the ball at a .362 clip. Duke has two hitters in the top 15; Pete Maynard is 10th with .333 and Bill Taylor is 15th with .304.

Carolina's lone conference win came over South Carolina, 8-3, last week, and the single loss was against co-leader Clemson 2-1.

The game is to begin at 3:30 sharp at Duke and will be broadcast by WCHL radio.

Ed Furgol Has Arm Operation

DURHAM (AP) — Ed Furgol, lame-armed 1954 U. S. Open golf champion, underwent surgery a Duke Hospital yesterday on the good arm that has carried him to golfing fame and fortune.

Dr. Lenox Baker termed it a minor operation and added. "In two or three weeks he should be able to resume playing golf."

The operation was directed at correcting a bursitis condition in Furgol's right elbow and removing bone chips.

In the second round he shot a 66, five under par, on nines of 36-30. He'd qualified for the last 36 holes in only 10 previous tournaments this season as his scoring average rose to 74.7 per round against 71.76 last year, 11th best on the circuit.

In his Saturday round he took only 24 putts, the lowest he'd ever had for 18 holes, He said. He had 12 one-putt greens.

Tar Babies Clash With Duke Frosh Here Today

Carolina's Tar Babies had their two-game series with the Duke Blue Imps cut to a single game yesterday when rain cancelled the game here. Today the frosh meet Duke at home because the varsities of the two teams will be playing a postponed game at Duke.

The Tar Babies whipped Chowan College 8-1 last Saturday in their last outing. Coach Pat Earey said that the game was a very satisfactory one from the home standpoint. Tommy Camp got four hits, Ferg Norton 3, Carroll Bolick 3, and Dee Frady 1.

The starting line-up for today's game for Carolina: Norton, 2 b; Camp, 3b; Bud Ellerbe, ss; Bolick, c.; Frady, lf; Dickie Hord, cf; Joe Grimsley, rf; and John Stott, 1b. On the hill for the frosh will be Wayne Allen, who had a share in the win over Chowan.

Women's Tennis

Six colleges and universities have entered teams in the Annual Women's Tennis Day which will be held here Saturday.

Those schools entering are Atlantic Christian, Duke, Elon, Meredith, Peace and UNC. Teams of four girls from each school will compete.

A singles elimination tournament and a doubles tournament will be the feature events as the girls take over the varsity tennis courts.

Play will begin after the official pairing of the contestants at 10:30 a.m. A lunch break will be taken with the girls returning to play at 2 p.m.

The public has been invited to attend the match play.

Yanks Lose Shortstop

NEW YORK (AP)—The New York Yankees apparently have lost Tony Kubek, their brilliant young shortstop, to the Army for the season and no one is more surprised at this sudden turn of events than the American League champions.

According to an announcement from Milwaukee, Kubek's home town, the 21-year-old infielder has passed his physical and will be sworn in Thursday for six months active duty with the Army reserve.

Our Thanks To George L. Coxhead And His Alma Mater, Too!

Carolina's George Coxhead was one of New York Life's leading agents last year, qualifying for membership in the industry-wide 1958 Million Dollar Round Table . . . A tribute not only to him, but to this school's overwhelming acceptance of New York Life's modern protection.
The honor of being one of New York Life's leading agents for 1957 is one George Coxhead worked hard to earn and richly deserves. We extend not only heartiest congratulations to him, but sincere thanks to the many, many Carolina students whose acceptance of New York Life insurance protection made his record possible.
Since joining New York Life in 1955, George Coxhead has achieved an enviable reputation as one of his Company's foremost representatives. He is carrying on the tradition as a leader set while an undergraduate at Carolina. As a student he was a member of Golden Fleece, Order of the Grail, Phi Beta Kappa, and Co-Captain of the Swimming Team.
We believe that George Coxhead's outstanding record of service to the students at Carolina is typical of the quality of service rendered by New York Life agents everywhere. That is why, throughout the U. S. and Canada, we so confidently say, "The New York Life Agent on Your Campus is a Good Man to Know."

Sen. W. Kerr Scott Dies In Burlington

BURLINGTON, N. C. (AP)—U. S. Sen. W. Kerr Scott, former governor, champion of the farmer and a colorful political figure in North Carolina for the past decade, died here yesterday, from a heart attack. He would have been 62 tomorrow.

Death came at about 4:55 p.m. in Alamance General Hospital, where the tobacco-chewing Junior Senator has been a patient since last Wednesday when he suffered a heart attack.

Scott, noted for his wisecracking ability, apparently had been making good progress in his recovery Dr. G. W. Blair, his physician, said the attack came without warning.

Scott, in good spirits yesterday, had looked forward to a birthday celebration tomorrow in his hospital room.

The only persons in the room when death occurred were Scott's private duty nurse, Mrs. Ethel J. Shoe, and the hospital supervisor of nurses, Mrs. Esther R. Painter.

They said the senator was lying quietly in bed and the only indication that death had occurred was they noticed he had stopped breathing.

Dr. George Smedburg, the physician on duty in the hospital at the time, was summoned. Dr. J. B. Lee, Dr. Blair's associate, said oxygen, artificial respiration and stimulants were administered in an effort to revive him.

Expressions of sympathy began to pour in from throughout the state and nation. In Raleigh, Gov. Hodges said "North Carolina has lost a great and distinguished citizen and public servant."

Hodges said Scott's "vital leadership has been a part of the life of North Carolina for many years. He was a man of strong convictions, a staunch friend of the people of North Carolina and served them well."

Mrs. Scott was in another part of the hospital visiting a sick grandchild at the time of death.

Dr. Lee said Scott's death was "unexpected because of the good progress he had been making." He added the Senator had no pain, no shortness of breath or other indication of a heart seizure.

On Wednesday last week, Scott left his Haw River dairy farm to go to Burlington to get his driver's license renewed. He was accompanied by Mrs. Scott and their son, Osborne.

During the license examination, Mrs. Scott noticed that her husband was perspiring profusely and breathing with difficulty. She suggested that they stop by a doctor's office, where the heart attack was diagnosed and the Senator sent to the hospital.

The backwoods branch-heads and the country crossroads of North Carolina were a political fortress for William Kerr Scott.

Surprise, controversy and accomplishment were his trademarks in the public offices he won with the help of loyal farm voters.

He repaid the debt as a free-spoken champion of rural people over a 20-year span as state agriculture commissioner, governor and U. S. Senator.

The big, black-haired dairyman from Alamance County gave the state a network of rural paved roads, a new awareness of its farm population, and some memorable political campaigns.

Scott, was one of the commanding figures of recent Tar Heel public life. He attracted a legion of steadfast followers, and a host of die-hard critics.

His character was marked by the strong grain of his Scotch Presbyterian ancestors.

Some called it stubbornness; others said it was loyalty.

His speech was native and salty, as apt to sting as to delight. His

Daily Papers Subject Of Press Speech

The small daily newspaper was the theme of Howard White, managing editor of the Burlington Daily Times-News, when he spoke to the Press Club Monday night.

White, graduate of Catawba College and veteran newspaperman, pointed out that a small daily must please the people as well as print the news.

"A newspaper must have a personality like a neighbor or close friend, or it won't be welcomed into the homes of friends," he stated.

He added that the small city paper must be interested enough to cover the smallest story as well as the sensational one if it is to be successful.

In commenting on duties of reporters on small papers, he said that the biggest job was knowing the city, its people and working constantly at keeping confidence in the newspaper.

"Newspapers are printed records. Their chief business is other people's business, and successful coverage depends upon faithful coverage of everything that interests man," concluded White.

Business of the Press Club included plans for a Junior-Senior softball game, reports on formulation of a Journalism professional fraternity and voting on new officers.

The meeting, held at Dean Luxon's home, was the final meeting before annual Press Club banquet which will be held next month. At that time results in the election of new officers will be announced.

Last Chance For Orientation Makeup Test

A makeup test for men applying for Orientation counselorship will be given tonight at 7 o'clock in room 268 Venable. This test will mark the deadline for counselor applications.

Over 150 applicants took the test Tuesday night but Chairman Herman Godwin says there are still a large number of men who have not taken it. "Due to the fact that we have already begun individual interviews, tonight will have to be the last time that we can give the test," said Godwin. I want to urge everyone who has not taken it to be present tonight." The test lasts approximately 35 minutes.

Interviews began last night and will last until April 23rd. Applicants will be notified by campus mail as to the time and date of their interview. Every applicant must take the test before he can be scheduled for an interview.

Templeton To Perform In Memorial Tonight

Alec Templeton, pianist, composer and improviser will appear at Memorial Hall tonight.

Templeton's appearance here is sponsored by the Student Entertainment Committee. Admission is free on presentation of ID cards. Student wives will be charged one dollar and others two dollars.

Included in Templeton's program will be music by Bach, Mozart, Schubert, Debussy and other well known composers, and several improvisations and pieces of music by Templeton.

The first part of his program is usually devoted to serious performance of the classics; the later portion of improvisations, impersonations and a veriety of original musical compositions.

As a composer, Templeton is known for both serious and lighter works. He has written two astring quartets, songs, and other works for various instrumnts. He is also well known for humorous modernizations of the masters as "Bach Goes to Town," and "Mozart Matriculates."

Templeton is not only a classical pianist, but also one of the most tasteful improvisors in the American jazz field. He is one of the few who are associated with both the classics and jazz.

He was blind at birth and has never seen a piano key or any other object, yet today he is one of the foremost concert pianists, having played with the principal symphonies of the world.

Jury Interviews Today

Jury interviews will be held today in the Council Room on the second floor of Graham Memorial from 4:15-5:30 p. m. and in the evening from 7:15-9. All interested students should fill out a jury application blank in the Student Government Office and sign the appointment list. Both male and female applicants will be interviewed at these times.

University Club Plans Carnival For Freshmen

Committee appointments and an address by Orientation Committee member, Ruth Hoffman headed the agenda of Tuesday's meeting of the University Club.

Miss Hoffman presented the club with the Orientation Committee's plans for a carnival during freshman orientation. She presented a diagram of the floor of the Tin Can as it will look during the Carnival. She explained the system of prizes and told how this could be integrated with the club's program of acquainting the new students with its work. The club was invited to take part.

A committee composed of Walter Keck and Paul Woodard was appointed to work with Miss Hoffman and the Orientation Committee to formulate plans.

Further committee appointments made by President Dave Jones were: Sportsmanship Committee Chairman, Bob Adams; Publicity Committee chairman, Frank Elkins; Beat Dook Co-ordinating Committee co-chairman, Frank Martin and Carter Jones; and 1958 Handbook editor Al Smithson.

Items brought under discussion in addition to the above include, the possibility of having a Caravan weekend, the care of the Victory Bell at the football games next year, and working out a schedule of pep rallies and dances.

IDC Court Rulings

The IDC Court, at a meeting Tuesday night, found eight defendants guilty. The following decisions were rendered: two students were given official reprimands; four were placed on indefinite probation for at least one semester; one was placed on probation for one year; and one was restricted from residing in a particular dorm for one semester.

Chess Tournament

The first round of the five-round chess tournament sponsored by GMAB will start at 7 o'clock tonight in Roland Parker II in Graham Memorial.

One round wil be held each Thursday night and prizes will be awarded to the first and second place winners.

Yack Staff Meeting

All students interested in working on the Yackety-Yack for 1959 have been asked to meet in the Rendezvous Room of Graham Memorial at 2 p.m. today.

This meeting is for organizational purposes and wil not last long according to authorities.

It is important that those interested be present if possible.

Rules Discussion Continues; Council Has 'Re-evaluation'

Poll Reveals Coed Majority Against Rules

The first Daily Tar Heel poll revealed that over 56 per cent of women who did not go to Carolina during their freshman and sophomore years do not approve of the new coed rules.

As revealed Tuesday 84 per cent of those women tapped in the poll felt that the new rules needed revision.

The prime points of contention were the rules which dealt with study halls and lights out regulations, although a majority were opposed to limiting weekend permissions.

Some of the comments that the coeds had about these rules included:

"I think that these rules under-

Furtado Announces Appointments Open

President elect Don Furtado released Wednesday, a list of offices open for appointment. These include summer school and regular student government positions.

The list includes: the Attorney General, and two assistants plus a staff of eight; three members of the Consolidated University Student Council; a seventeen member elections board; Campus Chest co-chairmen; a six member NSA committee, a seven member library committee; a three member campus stores committee; a committee to pick the editor of the campus humor magazine and a traffic advisory commission and committee.

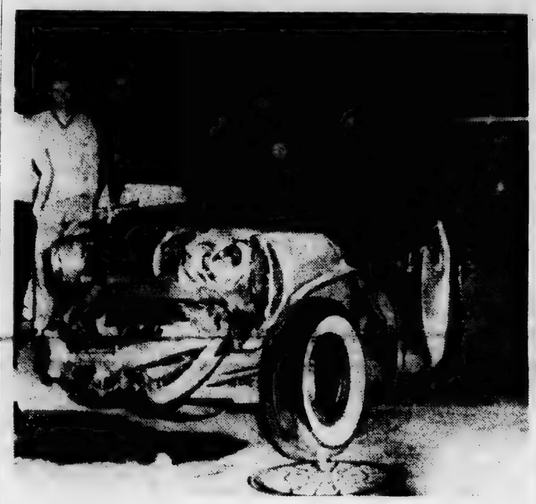
Other appointments to be made by Furtado include ten abinet members; the membership of the dance committee; the audit board; three seats, one year, two year and three year, on the Graham Memorial board of directors; a student council member; a campus traffic board;; a Victory Village Veterans Affairs Commission; and the Honor System Commission.

The Carolina Forum, the high school honor system, the summer school student government, the NSA delegation to the national convention in August and the clerks of the Men's and Women's council, are also on the list of appointments to be made.

Furtado announced that he will conduct interviews beginning Monday April 21. Interested students may sign up in the student government office for an appointment. The new President's hours wil be: Monday 3:30 to 6:00, Tuesday 2:00 to 6:00, Wednesday 3:30 to 6:00, Thursday 2:00 to 6:00, and Friday 2:00 to 6:00.

"These positions offer a wide variety of positions for students who wish to contribute to the student community. Experience, though desired, is not an absolute necesity. I urge all those students interested to apply" said Furtado.

Blanks are available in the GM Information Office and the Student Government Office.



Council Will Not Hear Opposing Side

In its meeting Tuesday night the Women's Residence Council reconsidered at length its previous action on rules changes for freshmen women entering the University. It was specifically the controversy aroused by the proposed changes that led the Council to hold another meeting on them.

The major part of the meeting was spent in "re-evaluation" of the changes, but no concrete action was taken. The Council plans to continue sampling campus opinion among the residents of the women's dorms in an attempt to find out how the women feel about the measures.

The reason given for this approach was that the rules were originally formulated by the outgoing members of the Council, and that therefore the new members, who just took office, are not well acquainted with the background of the changes.

At one time during the meeting there was a motion on the floor to allow a group of opposition women to speak before the WRC on their objections to the changes. The motion was defeated by the members of the Council, and the opposition women were not allowed to speak. It is expected that some final action will be taken on the rules changes at the WRC meeting next week.

FENDER BENDING—Joseph Parker was driving north on Raleigh Street about 6:30 last night about the same time James Langstaff, a resident of Everett Dorm, was pulling out of the driveway behind Lewis. No one was injured and Parolman Herman Stone said no charges were made.

Live Muskrat

By AL RESCH

It has been reported that a live muskrat is trapped in the outdoor swimming pool at Woollen Gym.

In view of the fact that we do not like the idea of this little creature being trapped, The Daily Tar Heel is offering a $1 reward to the brave student who will bring the muskrat to this office.

The muskrat may be wet but must be alive when he reaches the Tar Heel office.

The Tar Heel plans to turn this wet animal over to Swimming Coach Pat Earey, and enter him as the newest addition to the swimming team.

Frances Gray Patton To Teach Writing Course

Mrs. Frances Gray Patton, well known novelist and short story writer, will be in charge of the Creative Writing class for the English Department for the fall semester while Miss Jessie Rehder is away.

Miss Rehder has requested that students who wish to register for Creative Writing bring sample mansuscripts of not more than 2,000 words to her at 109 Bingham.

Students may submit poetry, a class paper on a short story. Mrs. Patton will choose members of the fall semester from among those students who submit manuscripts.

Miss Rehder has urged that all manuscripts be in her office before May 1.

Hugh Patterson Elected Head Of Honor Board

Hugh L. Patterson, rising junior at UNC, was unanimously elected to the chairmanship of the Men's Honor Council for the 1958-1959 school year Tuesday night.

In making the announcement, George Ragsdale, former chairman, stated that Patterson was the first man in many years to be elected chairman as a rising junior.

"Patterson has been a member of the Council for two years, having been elected a few week after he entered Carolina as a freshman," he added.

In praising Patterson he went on to say that he felt confident that the Honor Council and Honor System would profit greatly under Patterson's leadership.

"I would like to thank the members of the Men's Council for their dedication to the tasks which have faced us all this year," Ragsdale concluded.

Mangum Med Competition Opens April 30

The annual Willie P. Mangum Medal, the University's oldest award, will be open to competition April 30 at 8 p. m., according to John Brooks, Forensic Council president.

The Mangum Medal is an oratorical award given under the auspices of the Dialectic Senate and Philanthropic Literary Society.

All graduating seniors, including seniors graduating at the end of summer school, are eligible to compete.

Brooks said that oration subjects are to be chosen by the participants and submitted to Dean Mackie's office by 4:30 p. m., April 29. Each oration should be about ten minutes long.

The Mangum Medal was established in 1878 by Misses Martin Person and Mary Mangum of Orange County in memory of their father, Willie P. Mangum. He was a member of the University class of 1815.

New Officers To Be Installed At Legislature

The first session of the 25th assembly of the Student Legislature will meet tonight at 7:30 in Phi Hall, fourth floor New East.

New Student Body officers and newly elected and reelected legislators will be sworn in. The student body officers are: Don Furtado, President; Ralph Cummings, Vice President; Paddy Wall, Secretary; and Charlie Gray, treasurer. The oath will be administered by Jim Long, chairman of the Student Council.

Following the seating of the new legislators, the new student body President, Don Furtado, will deliver his inaugural adress on plans for the coming year.

The legislature will get down to business for the coming year immediately following Furtado's address by choosing its new officers.

The speaker, under the provisions of the Student Government Constitution will be Vice President Ralph Cummings. Other legislature officers, all of which will be chosen tonight, include Parliamentarian, Speaker Pro tempore and clerk.

The meeting is open to the public.

At Least Three Carolina Lovelies Trying For Miss Chapel Hill Title

Carolina ladies are renewing the struggle against the rumor passed around by Carolina gentlemen that there is more than a little wanting in coed pulchritude.

And the coeds are entering the battle with weapons that stand a good chance of making liars out of the men students. So far three women students are seeking the title of Miss Chapel Hill in the local eliminations for the Miss America Pageant.

According to Roland Giduz of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, there wil probably be meor in the race before the contest closes.

The ninth annual Jaycee-sponsored Miss Chapel Hill Pageant will be held here a week from Thursday—on April 24—at 8 p.m. in the Chapel Hill High School auditorium.

Pageant Co-Chairmen Lyman Wilkins and Ted Barnes said about a dozen entrants are expected. The first four are Ann Riggsbee, local secretary, and UNC coeds Louise Crumbley, Ruth Hoffman, and Diana Johnson.

Radio announcer Ty Boyd will be master of ceremonies for the pageant and judges will be State Jaycees President Jack Sharpe of Kannapolis, Miss North Carolina—Durham's Elaine Herndon, Mrs. J. B. Brame of Durham, and two other judges to be named later.

Mr. Wilkins said the entrants will be judged on four appearances—one at an informal private dinner with the judges before the pageant, and on evening gown, talent, and bathing suit appearances during the pageant.

Winner will receive a $200 college scholarship check, a wardrobe from J. B. Robbins, and will represent the community at the Miss North Carolina Pageant in Charlotte next July. A cup will also be given "Miss Congeniality," to be selected on the basis of friendliness by her fellow entrants. The reigning Mis Chapel Hill is Joanne Aldridge, a UNC English instructor.

The former Miss - Asheboro, Diana Johnson, is also an entrant in the local pageant. She is the reigning Yackety-Yack beauty queen on the campus, and a third-year coed. Sponsored by Sigma Chi fraternity, she is a brown-eyed dimpled burnette.

Miss Crumbley is a third-year coed from Charlotte, whose entry is sponsored by Kappa Delta sorority. She was last month named the football Blue-White Queen, and is a radio-TV major at UNC.

The Council's Action

The Women's Residence Council voted last night to exclude people presenting opposition opinion from the council. What this did was to effectively squeeze out any chance of an open hearing on the new coed regulations.

The reason given is that the people who would come before the council would only be representing themselves. The excuse is absurd.

A community is made up of individuals. there is no convention system in a community, but rather individuals who have individual issues.

The fact that they are able to have individual reactions to individual issues is one of the wonderful things about a democracy. It is one of the freedoms that responsible groups and individuals should try to protect rather than stifle.

Yet, the council has decided to limit free discussion of the issues, in fact it has decided to take the rules around to their constituents and explain why the council wants to put these rules into effect. Then, they want to take the student's reactions back to the Council.

There is something basically wrong in this. They are going to present to the women rules, give them only one side of the argument, and then present the reactions as an unbiased poll of female opinion.

This smacks of stuffing the ballot box, and also smacks of trying exert pressure on women students who have already given their opinion once on a poll in which there was no pressure exerted.

When responsible officials try to exert their influence on people, without presenting all the facts, they are not living up to their responsibility.

Let it be said again: The Women's Residence Council can exert a force for the good, by carefully weighing all evidence that it has been receiving.

And from this evidence, the Council should find that the proposed rules are out of line with facts.

It is for the Council to decide whether they wil try to preserve the tradition of student responsibility and individual initiative.

It is for the Council to decide whether it wants to be courageous and try to help the freshman nurses without hurting the incoming freshmen.

It is for the Council to decide whether they want a return to archaic rules which, the facts prove, serve no purpose.

The council must act. They should repeal most of the new rules.

They ought to do it soon.

In order to intelligently discuss an idea the first step is a consideration of the meanings of the key terms involved. Consequently, in discussing nationalism probably the best procedure will be to define the term nationalism as far as we are concerned .Basically nationalism is the emotional and rational identity of the individual, as manifested in the group, to the figure or image of the group. Another word might be used here—patriatism.

Nationalism has its positive and negative aspects as does anything else. Positively speaking, nationalism is necessary to a degree. Today, with the swiftness of change and evolution, some tradition, some tie which binds the individual and keeps him from "floating away" is vital. The organization of nations provides this, and nationalism is the stimulus to encourage support of this organization. The emotional aspect of nationalism with its flag, anthem, etc., provides for the attachment of the emotional aspect of the individual personality to this national organization.

The rational aspect of the individual personality finds its bond in rational nationalism, i.e., recognition of the necessity for supporting a government which is physically close to the governed so that the needs of the governed will be accurately reported.

On the other side of the scales, the negative aspect of nationalism is formidable. In the first place, utilizing the previous basic definition of nationalism, if stressed too far, nationalism becomes egoism. Thus nationalism is safe only as long as those who indulge in it are temperate.

The United States is suffering from a very extreme form of nationalism. Here, nationalism has gone so far toward a warping of the individual's energy toward himself that the result has a new label—materialism. But it is still the same old wolf in disguise, nationalism. All of our international relations are influenced by this cancerous spirit, with its primary concern being itself.

The picture before us is this: there are several blotches of land on a round globe which has a diameter of 25,000 miles. On each blotch of land there are a good many different groups of people who have drawn invisible lines around themselves, claiming the area thus circumscribed as their own. But the lines are invisible, the groups with their invisible lines around themselves touch each other. From the vantage point of the moon all that can be seen is one world on one round globe.

There is no future in conflict on this globe, and it must not be permitted. All Americans (and peoples of the other nations) have to realize that what is good for humanity, for the good of the world, may not always be good for the United States (or some other particular country) and that good of humanity has to always come first.

The New Coed Regulations And Daily Tar Heel Poll

Who would have guessed last week that a subject like Coed regulations would monopolize the pages of the Tar Heel?

Well, for what it might be wosth, we have conducted a spurious poll ourselves, in order that the truth might be known about some of the nebulous issues at hand.

Of the 500 questionnaires that were mailed out, 621 were returned for a percentage of slightly over 124, which is a good indication of the importance placed on this poll by the persons involved. While we don't wish to boast, this was considerably better than the percentages of returns in the GM Poll and the Tar Heel Poll.

These were the findings:

89% were opposed to early closing hours; 10% were in favor of early closing hours; and 1% replied, "HOURS?"

16% of those questioned were in favor of "self determination." 2% were opposed; and 82% wanted to know what the question meant.

4% favored "closed study;" 4% favored "open" study; and 92% preferred no study.

25% were in favor of lights on while studying; 43% preferred lights on in the evening hours, especially at dinner; and 32% preferred no lights at any time.

87% were in favor of dates; 4% were averse to dating; and 9% were indecisive at the present.

29% read the Daily Tar Heel; 2% read the Dook Chronicle; and 69% don't read at all.

9% prefer to be alone by themselves; 81% prefer alone with someone else! and 10% are afraid to be left alone.

With these facts at hand we hope that the situation has cleared somewhat.

We always thought that the pharmacy students didn't have much to look forward to in life until we picked up a local paper recently, and to our surprise, found that after 50 years of service to their profession they receive pins from the North Carolina Pharmaceutical Association. This is extremely nice. Most of this years recipients were too old to open the safety catches on the pins however, so they were helped back to their seats with the pins in their hands.

We would like to express a bit of sympathy to Private Elvis Presley, U. S. Army. Recently, Rep. Herlong (D-Fla.) requested that Elvis sing at a DeLeon, Fla. armed forces day celebration. The request was denied, once more pointing out the fact the government is not making the most of the individual capabilities of its personnel. The very idea!

Louis M. Hacker

(The following is an article by Dr. Hacker which appeared in last week's issue of THE Nation. Dr. Hacker is deon of the School of General Studies at Columbia University)

The profession of learning and knowledge—within the corporation of the university and its ancillary bodies of learned societies and journals—seeks to extend knowledge, to conserve it and diffuse it, constantly bringing the processes of nature. social organization and human conduct under better control. Such are the roles and obligations of scholarship and scientific research.

It is equally necessary to train youth, and those adults who were by-passed by formal learning when they were young, for more useful lives, giving them—at the same time that they are being trained for greater productivity—the tools of analysis by which they can differentiate between right and wrong, the honest and the spurious. beauty and corruption. Citizenship requires virtue, usefulness and boldness; to free the mind of both Prejudice and fear are the demands we impose upon educators, at the same time that they exercise their functions of scholars and scientists. To this extent educators are teachers of morals dedicated to the perpetuation of a moral universe.

Educators are prepared for their dual functions by universities; standards of competence and performance are sareguarded by these universities, the faculties within them, and the professional associations or learned societies to which educators belong. In consequence, universities, faculties and academic societies must be permitted to choose and police their own company. Choice should be based on technical qqualifications for the efficient performance of assumed or assigned tasks, prior professional experience when necessary, and qualities of character that permit men to live and work together; policing means the maintenance of first-class standards of performance and of abridged integrity in devotion to scholarly and scientific truth.

The president of one of our large American universities has said:

A university almost inevitably is out of step with the wider community. Since one of its essential functions is to be a critic o conventional beliefs and values, with a view to extending the frontiers of knowledge and intensifying the appreciation of values, it must come into conflict with uncritically adopted mores and opinions.

This is equally so of testing orthodox belief. In a discerning passage, John Stuart Mill points out that even if opinions are true there is a constant necessity for demonstrating their validity. Otherwise we are guided by superstition and not intelligence.

The educator—as teacher or moralist—has learned other truths. Youth is a period of challenge and experimentation. Youth is suspicious of indoctrination. Youth wants to start out by assuming that there are alternative roads to freedom. Young men and women seek to explore, debate, question every verity, every assumption, every custom and institution—not test their validity with a powerful new resource they have discovered, their minds.

It is the function of educators, as teachers or moralists, to let such minds range freely. For this reason, no body of doctrine or belief, or, indeed, error can be kept shut to them like a kind of Bluebeard's chamber. They must be permitted to read and ponder over, see and hear and be exposed to the writings of Marx, Freud and Keynes, the pictures, sculpture and music of Picasso, Moore and Stravinsky, at the same that they are reading, seeing and hearing the great conservators of our tradition and taste.

By the same token, the open university means that youth has the same rights we seek for ourselves as citizens to form its own clubs, maintain its own discussion groups and platforms, run its own newspapers—without let or interference on the part of university administrators or faculties. To protect them in their later lives from investigation—for more often than not these adventures are only youthful peccadillos—university administrators have no right to ask for membership lists or demand faculty surveillance.

Revolt is not taught in the classroom. The youthful Alexander Hamilton was not made a rebel by his teachers at King's College or the young Shelley by his tutors at University College. Youth becomes rebellious when injustice and inequalities are abroad in the land, leaders are corrupt and society has no confidence in itself. It is, in consequence, the status of learning in our contemporary world that is alarming. Educators, as scholars and teachers, have been and contine nuder a cloud of suspicion. Because of undue concern with security, particularly in the sciences, learning is being regarded as a sensitive area. What Professor Edward Shils so aptly calls "publicity"—free access to scientific knowledge, the rights of publication, open discussion in conferences, and travel by scholars and scientists to other lands and from other lands to outs—is being restricted. Dubious witnesses are being given credence; youthful associations are being exposed to demonstrate unreliability; legislators and self-appointed groups continue to voice their want of confidence in teachers.

A few random theughts on matters of little or no consequence are on the agenda for today. Writing a column is an interesting adventure, because at times you don't have the foggiest idea what to write about. If a columnist takes the stand of wishing to inform and educate the public he usually finds himself knee deep in some airy matter which he doesn't understand. If he wants to both inform them and entertain them he has to hire gag writers. I can't afford gag writers so I'm punching out a potpourri of my own thoughts on a number of matters.

Today — I'm writing on Tuesday—we're all supposed to get out and vote for the candidate of our choice. The trouble with this is that in the aftermath of the April 1 election everybody forgot about the run-off and not much publicity was given it. I have an idea that the winning candidate will get no more than eight hundred votes.

It's too bad that so few people will get out to vote, but maybe the student government leaders will awaken to the fact that they're got to spend a little more time getting the student body interested in its own government and a little less time pushing themselves for the Fleece and all the other honors reserved for the wheels.

I had a lot of fun at the Valkyrie Sing last night. Almost every act was entertaining, and the Les Sutorius—Nick Kearns group was sensational. Les seems to have abandoned Dixieland for progressive and is doing a great job at it. I hope anyone who has a chance will get out to the Patio Sunday afternoons and hear his band. I also hope you'll give a listen to Kearns' recent recording of "Down In Mexico" on the newly-formed Tobe label. It's a lot of fun, even if it is rock and roll.

The boys from Grimes had a great idea in their skit on the death of Julius Caesar. A little more work on the singing and stage mannerisms and it would have been a winner. There were some stellar gags. The real plaudits for the show, however, should go to Smith Dorm. Their "Dear Editor" skit was one of the cleverest things I've seen in a long time. And the Tri-Delts were terribly impressive. That white gloves finale was beautiful.

This business about new rules for freshman girls is idiotic. I never thought that the administration would show such immature lack of foresight. I'm very familiar with a well known girls' preparatory school, and the rules there - which the girls think are senseless - aren't much worse than these.

There incoming freshman girls will be from seventeen to nineten years of age - there might even be a twenty year old ringer in the lot - and I think they know what's coming off. Girls, Miss Carmichael, are supposed to be quite mature by that age, and we males can handle ourselves all-right so how about giving the chicks a chance?

The most encouraging fact of life in Chapel Hill at the moment is that spring seems to be making a concerted effort to at last pry its tired head from under the shroud of winter and give us that warmth which is supposed to be so much a part of life at Chapel Hill but which has been noticeably lacking during the past few days.

The nicest thing about spring is the sun. I spent all Sunday basking under a sun which was so hot it actually had me sweating. I like to sweat. Winter is a lousy season and the only place I can go to sweat is the gym, where it stinks. But in spring I can go out and lie in the sun and sweat. I'm getting pretty red right now, but I like it because eventually I'm going to turn sort of brown and I'll feel decent in shorts and a tee shirt. Just think - only two months till summer.

In East Los Angeles, Calif., Dogcatcher Donald Baird was bitten good and hard by a lady who seemed upset because Baird was trying to impound her pet. "It's a dog's life," moaned Baird.

As a professional landscaper, Harry Westcott, of Mt. Upton, N. Y., knows better, you bet, than to saw off a limb on which he is sitting. But he did saw off one to which his safety rope was attached. Always something new to learn!

A Little Privelege

Pringle Pipkin

When the old cut system was abolished, the students were not given unlimited cuts as many wistfully hoped the new ruling would provide. In many cases this ruling merely legalized what was already in effect.

Those professors who had been giving their students unlimited cuts before the ruling continued to do so. Other professors and departments relaxed their cut restrictions.

,However, in other classes the professors made the cut rules more restrictive than they had been with the earlier system.

The established privileges of the Dean's list died in many instances. In some classes the professor set up a strict three cut rule for everyone; some few gave even less.

While I do not disagree with the principle that the professor should have some power over the class attendance rules of his class, there should be certain minimum standards in order to protect the rights of the students.

There is another problem. The new ruling has created a great deal of confusion. The student not only has to keep in mind the number of cuts he has taken, but also what the professor of that class allows.

Every college student should be guaranteed at least the rights under the old system; that is for each meeting during one week a student should be given onec ut. If a class met three times during a week, then a student would get three cuts in that course per semester.

There is no reason why men and women of college age cannot handle these three cuts without "going wild." At times it is necessary to cut one course in order to get some concentrated study done before an hour quiz in another.

The privileges of the Dean's List should be restored also. These privileges are an incentive to those people who are not able to Phi Beta Kappa but who are able to make grades which warrant their placement on the Dean's List.

Ideally everyone should have unlimited cuts, but such thinking is not very practical.

If the students can be given certain minimum privileges, the situation will be greatly improved. If a professor is willing to give the students more than these minimums, so much the better.

"J. B." by Archibald MacLeish; Houghton Mifflin Co., $3.50

The Book of Job is traditionally placed near the middle of the Old Testament; and with poetic expression it in effect gives the lie to much of the preceding thematic strain. Job repudiates the wishful but empirically false notion that human goodness invariably earns the Grace of God.

In an age which lacked the comfort of reward in Heaven for earthly virtue, the poet of the Book of Job meditated on just this problem: the relationship of Man to God in view of the arbitrary dispensation of grace by an unjust diety.

Mankind has come full circle, after a comfortable respite from ignorance and ambiguity provided by a literal belief in salvation and Heavenly reward. The after life has become in this age of science and "rationality' a remote improbability at best, and modern man is faced unavoidably once more with the same problem which confronted the poet of the Book of Job in the Sixth Century B.C. This ancient poet was the direct predecessor of Jack Kerouac (lest there be any doubt, let it be stated here that the blood is thin and pale in its contemporary container), and Job is a charter member of the "beat generation." to which Mr. Kerouac, Hamlet, and Captain Ahab belong.

In his new verse play, "J. B.," Archibald MacLeish takes a modern view of Job, the archtypical human in the inescapable human situation. Job is a figure of tragic stature, and MacLeish has been unable to find his modern equal. His Job is J.B., a successful American businessman who has been blessed not only with good fortune, but with a fine family and good health as well.

Job's decline into the character of J.B. has of necessity been accompanied by a coresponding decline in the grandeur of the hero's speech. This, of course, is the unhappy reality which any modern playwrite must accept; MacLeish has put it to good use. The lines which he has judiciously lifted from the Bible are the best lines in the play, but they gain effect from the juxtaposition with the veranacular poetry of the modern characters.

MacLeish has been concerned with "public speech" as much as any contemporary poet, and he has been more successful than most of the others in making poetry out of it.

In drama, however, modern poetry suffers a cruel change, and the subtle distinction between prose and poetry often becomes obscured in speech.

Christopher Fry, who concerns himself with MacLeish's theme in The Lady's Not For Burning, gave his play a medieval setting and expressed himself in non-anachronistic, ebulient iambic pentameter. MacLeish, however, has remained in the present century; in the context of the broken line of modern speech he has placed such palpably poetic lines as ". . .My happiness impending like a danger" with a minimum of inconcruity. There is fine poetry in "J.B.", and some of it will show through in the spoken line; it suffers, though, by comparison to the grandeur of the ancient verses. It serves as a touchstone to demonstrate the majesty of the Johan poet and a foil to emphasise the magnificence of the all-powerful.

It is possible with only the mind's eye to see the effectiveness of MacLeish's conception and execution translated from the printed page onto the stage. This is a play which will act beautifully.

Both the Petites Dramatiques and the Carolina Playmakers have their eyes on "J.B." for production next year. Whether or not we will see it here in the near future depends on the outcome of current negotiations for a Broadway run.

actions were direct and unpredictable, and his manners were natural and unpolished. More than one person said he lacked the dignity for the offices he held.

From the political forays and the tours of duty in Raleigh and Washington, Scott always returned to the pleasant Haw River farmhouse his family called home.

The family included "Miss Mary," the former Mary Elizabeth White; son Robert, manager of the dairy farm; son Osborne, who worked in Washington; and a daughter, Mrs. Mary Kerr Loudermilk of Akron, Ohio.

In the same neighborhood are the homes of Ralph H. Scott, a brother who has served in the state senate; and Dr. Floyd Scott, another brother who lives in nearby Burlington.

Claude Teague Selected For Di-Phi Award

Claude Teague, retired business manager of the University and an alumnus of the Phi, was selected Tuesday night to receive the 1958 Di-Phi award for outstanding service to the state, nation and university.

The award will be presented next week to Teague at the Phi-Di debate. Teague, who is currently special assistant to University President William Friday, was chosen jointly by the two debating societies.

The Phi-Di debates will be held in Di Hall in New East on the topic: Resolved: That the U. S. should aid the revolutionary effort of Fidel Castro in Cuba. The Di's team of four debaters will take the affirmative viewpoint, and the Phi's group will debate the negative.

The winner of the debate will receive the trophy which the Di currently holds.

At the Phi meeting Tuesday a substitute bill introduced by Rep. Judy Huntress concerning regulations for incoming freshman cords was tabled and will be debated again in two weeks. The bill is expected to provoke spirited discussion when it is debated Feb. 29.

Tar Heels Beat Duke By 6-5; Young Fans 15 To Take Win

It was the first Atlantic Coast Conference loss of the season for Duke after four victories. Carolina now has a 2-1 league record.

Young, scoring his second victory in three decisions, fanned at least one Duke batter in every inning, and allowed two hits in only one inning—the eighth—when the Blue Devils tallied their only earned run.

The Tar Heels collected 16 hits, routing starter Dick Burton in five innings. Al Pons led the Tar Heel attack with a double and a single, driving in two runs.

Today the Tar Heels meet State here in Chapel Hill on Emerson, with the action slated to get under way at 3:30. The teams have met once before, in the finals of the Dixie Classic in Winston-Salem, when the Pack came out on top 4-0 as Joe Jones pitched nine innings of shut-out ball and became the Tourney's leading hurler.

The Wolfpack had an excellent 3-0 conference record up to yesterday when Clemson beat them 6-5, and have a record of 7-1 in all games. Outfielder Dick Hunter currently tops the list of ACC hitters with an even .500. Russ Casteen, one of a brother combination, is 6th with .370, and his other half Danny is 12th with .321. Danny is a pitcher.

Facing Carolina today will probably be either Jones or Casteen, with Jones more likely judging from his last performance against the Tar Heels.

Mural Department Set For Annual Sports Day

The annual Big-Four Sports Day is coming soon May 7 to be exact- and the Carolina intramural department is making final preparations to field a team that can recapture the rotating trophy that was lost last year to state.

The affair started way back in 1947 when the Big-Four Schools decided to settle their differences on an intramural level. Only softball was played that year with Duke carrying off top honors. The following year seven more sports were added handball, horseshoes, tennis, badminton, table tennis, volleyball, and golf to make the present eight sport slate.

Carolina teams had a five year winning streak broken last year by State. This year the event will be held at Wake Forest.

In order to get ready for the big day, the intramural department has appointed supervisors in the eight sports to organize their respective teams. Next Tuesday will be set aside for the teams to practice, with no other intramural games on tap Everyone is invited by the department to play any of the sports. Those interested are asked to repart to the intramural department at 4 o'clock Tuesday.

Braves Scalp Yanks

BOSTON (AP) — Boston turned back the New York Yankees 3-1 yesterday with a combination of Jackie Jensen's two-run homer. Frank Malzone's sharp fielding and the clutch pitching of Dave Sisler.

Jensen powered a Tom Sturdivant offering into the left center field screen 40 feet above the 379-foot mark in the first inning.

Leftie Wayne Allen struck out sixteen Duke batters here yesterday, and his teammates pounded out nine hits to give Carolina's Tar Babies an 8-2 victory over the arch-rival Blue Imps.

Allen started on the hill and went all the way in a brilliant pitching gem. He allowed only four hits and two runs. Allen culminated this fine performance by fanning the entire side in the top of the ninth.

Joe Grimsley slammed a long triple in the fourth inning with the bases loaded to give the Tar Babies four counters, as Grimsley eventually scored from third after clearing the sacks with his blow.

Carolina hit for two more in both the seventh and eighth innings.

The win brings the Tar Baby record to 5-1, the single loss coming at the hands of Presbyterian Junior College over Easter vacation. Allen's fine pitching performance shows a promise of things to come from the young southpaw.

No Successor Named Y

No successor to Frank A. (Buck) Freeman, who has resigned as University of North Carolina assistant basketball coach, has been named.

The Athletic Association coaches committee met today to consider the matter but Athletic Director Chuck Erickson and faculty chairman O. K. Cornwell said no action was taken.

Frosh Netters Clean House At State, 8-0

The Tar Baby tennis team took its first victory of the season yesterday afternoon when it defeated the State Wolflets 8-0 in Raleigh.

The win brings the yearling's record to 1-1. They lost their first match to the old pros of the Chapel Hill Tennis Club last Sunday afternoon.

Only eight matches were played. The number one doubles match was cancelled when a State player Phil Jacobs was injured. His partner, Jim Spence, moved down and played in the third doubles.

The Tar Babies lost only one set in the match. Carolina's Dee Heather won his first set, but dropped the second. He came back hard, and won the last set in straight games.

State has had its fill of Carolina tennis teams. Monday, the Carolina varsity scored a 9-0 victory on the same courts.

The Summary

Singles: Sylvia (C) defeated Spence 6-0, 6-1. Gray (C) defeated Jacobs 6-3, 4-6, 6-0. Heather (C) defeated Faelten 6-1, 6-2. Cowart (C) defeated Bethune 6-0, 6-2. Ricks (C) defeated Maharam 6-2, 6-2. Dickman (C) defeated Booie 6-3, 6-2.

Doubles: Sylvia-Gray (C) vs. Spence-Jacobs cancelled. Cowart-Ricks (C) defeated Fealton-Bethune 6-2, 6-3. Heather-Dickman (C) defeated Spence and Booie 6-4, 6-4.

Clemson Beat State 6-5

RALEIGH, April 16. (AP)—Clemson refused to fold after watching a five-run lead vanish and held on for a 6-5 victory over North Carolina State to snap the Wolfpack's seven-game winning streak Wednesday in an Atlantic Coast Conference baseball game.

Clemson, in extending its league-leading ACC record to 6-0, scored five runs in the first inning and didn't get another until the ninth. But that final run broke a 5-5 tie and nullified a sparking bit of relief pitching by state left-hander Owen Wright.

Lewis Wins Top Awards At Annual IDC Banquet

Lewis dorm walked off with most of the IDC awards presented Wednesday night at the annual IDC banquet at Brady's. Besides the award for best dorm on campus, Lewis won an award for the most improved dorm. Paul Woodard, president of Lewis ,was chosen best dorm president, and Buddy Cockrell, also of Lewis, was picked best IDC representative. Lewis managed its near sweep by netting 210 points.

Everett Dorm received a trophy for second place in the best dorm contest. Winston was declared the third place winner after the executive committee broke a tie between Winston and Grimes.

Pat Leonard of Ruffin was selected as best member-at-large. Outstanding committee chairmen were Doug Bayliff of Mangum and Frank Berry of Winston. Winston Dorm received a trophy as best dorm in intramurals.

Among other events taking place after the baked ham dinner, which was served to both old and new IDC members and guests, was the installation of the newly elected dorm presidents nad IDC representatives by Bob Carter.

Tom Walters, outgoing president of the IDC, spoke for a short time in review of the past year's problems and achievements. Administration guests Miss Luann Thornton and Ray Jefferies and numerous student guests were also on hand for the banquet.

Lunch Program Receives Check From AFROTC

The 590th Detachment of the U. S. Air Force has presented the Northside Elementary School with a check for forty-two dollars and eighty five cents .

The check was for the purpose of buying lunches for the underprivileged children who attend school and can not buy their own lunches.

Cadet Colonel Tom Farrell, Cadet Commander, and Cadet Captain Jim Ray, the cadet comptroller presented the check to Principal Peace of Northside School.

The principal said that this contribution along with similar ones from other sources would certainly make a lot of children happy.

New Program Underway At Planetarium

A new program titled "Things That Fall from the Sky" is being given in Morehead Planetarium on the campus of the University of North Carolina every night at 8:30. It will run through May 12.

Explaining the nature of the demonstration, Manager A. F. Jenzano said comets, meteors and cosmic radition create widespread interest and attention periodically "To know in advance the contributing and inherent characteristics of these phenomena enables one to accept their frequent appearance with intelligent understanding and positive identification," Jenzano said.

The school version, which will be presented Wednesdays through Friday at 11 a. m. and 1 p. m. is recommended for children in grades 4 through 12.

Three One-Act Plays Open Tonight At 7:30

The Carolina Playmakers will present three new one-act plays tonight and tomorrow night at 7:30 in the Playmakers Theatre. The plays are products of the playwriting class' of Thomas Patterson, of the Department of Dramatic Art.

All work on the production is handled by students, the directors being selected from graduate student in the department. The plays are "The Dangers of Great Literature," by Gabrielle Roepke, directed by Page Williams; "Mossell and the Laurel Bush," by George H. Hill, directed by Lew Goldstein; and "The Freudian Years," by Ken Challendar, directed by Lucy Ann Dunlap.

The production of original plays is an annual feature of the Playmakers season. The list of student authors represented since the organization was first founded in 1918 includes such figures as Thomas Wolfe, Paul Green, Betty Smith, Howard Richardson, Frances Gray Patton, Bernice Kelly Harris, Josephina Niggli and Kate Porter Lewis.

The public is invited to attend these performances free of charge. Audience reaction to the scripts will be sought following each performance, with the authors in attendance.

Foreign Student Advisor Posts Open For Fall

Advisors are needed for foreign student orientation. The program will be September 13-15. Some 60 advisors will be needed.

The purpose of this program is to help foreign students to adjust to their new enviroment, to learn the mechanics of the University, to get some acquaintance with the American way of life and to form a personal relationship with the student community.

There will be two phases in the foreign student orientation program: meetings and social affairs, and informal orientation including correspondence between the arriving foreign student and a designated foreign student advisor on campus. The meeting of the foreign students with advisors will be another part of the informal orientation.

Interested students have been asked to apply at the campus orientation office in Graham Memorial or to contact Sipra Bose, foreign student orientation chairman.

GM SLATE

The following activities have been scheduled today at Graham Memorial: University Club, 4-5 p.m., Grail Room; Political Science Seminar, 9-10 a.m., Woodhouse Conference Room; Women's Residence Council, 1:30-2 p.m., Woodhouse Conference Room; Orientation Council Interviews, 2-6 p.m., Woodhouse Conference Room.

Orientation Counselors

The Orientation Committee strongly urges anyone who is unable to be present at his assigned interview time to please notify either Herman Godwin or Ken Hall at the PiKA House or call the Orientation office, 9460.

Applications Are Available For GMAB Jobs

Benny Thomas, president of GMAB, announced yesterday that positions on the board for next year will soon be filled.

Interested persons may get application blanks at the Information Desk in Graham Memorial. The blanks must be turned in there next week.

Those positions to be filled are president, secretary, and vice-president. Interviews will be held Monday and Tuesday for these executive positions.

Other openings are committee chairmán for the thirteen committees which comprise GMAB and around 299 committee members.

GMAB is the programming arm of the Student Union. It is run entirely by students and operates on an annual budget of approximately $11,000.

"Many interested, energetic students are needed to make next year's program a success," stated Thomas.

Upholstered Seats Planned For Memorial Hall In Summer

The interior of Memorial Hall Hill will take on a new look this summer with the tearing out of the old wooden benches and the installation of upholstered seats.

This was the announcement Thursday by Chancellor William B. Aycock and Buiness Manager J. Arthur Branch.

The old heart of pine benches which have served generations of Carolina students since 1885 will be sold to the highest bidder. According to Branch, "The wood from the benches will be valuable to building contractors, especially for those desiring heart of pine, well aged for more than 73 years, for wall panelling and the like."

The new spring-action seats, with upholstery in the backs and in the bottoms, possess sound asorption qualities which will improve the acoustics of Memorial Hall. With the old wooden seats in use, the reverberation of sound in Memorial Hall made hearing difficult at times, with "deaf spots" in the auditorium. The fabric in the new seats will end that difficulty, he said.

Irwin Seating Company of Grand Rapids, Mich., was low bidder for the new seats which will be in use by next September. Between 1,700 and 1,800 seats will be installed at a cost of $18.90 per seat. The present arrangement seats about 1,750 people.

Seats will be numbered, with aisle room, theater style, and there will be refurnishing of the auditorium with floor covering and painting, and improvements in the stage. An improved public address system has already been installed.

Besides technical assistance from seating experts, the University also received the service of Kenan Professor Glen Haydon, chairman of the Music Department, who advised on the acoustical aspects of the installation, and Professor Sam Selden, chairman of the Dramatic Art Department, who also consulted with UNC officials on the change.

New Officers Begin Duties With PanHel

The new officers of the Panhellenic Council took over their posts in the Council's meeting Wednesday afternoon.

Diana Johnson, an Alpha Delta Pi, took offfice as president. Other officers are Suzanne Ross, vice president, Delta Delta Delta; Martha Williams, corresponding secretary, Pi Beta Phi; Ann Smith, recording secretary, Alpha Gamma Delta; Toy Johnson, treasurer, Kappa Delta; and Mary Ann Keith, project chairman, Chi Omega.

In the business of the evening it was voted to close sorority houses during exam week, as is customary. The rush problems of sorority girls transferring onto the UNC campus were discussed, and some plan will be presented next week by Katy Stewart on this problem.

The Council decided to send two or three representatives to a Panhellenic fashion show and meeting in Raleigh. Girls from Duke, Carolina, and other colleges in the area will attend.

Activity booths for the Orientation Week Carnival next year and the organization of rush were also discussed.

Furtado Sets Appointment Interviews

Student Body President Furtado urged today that all persons interested in student government appointment sign up for interviews in the Student Government Office in Graham Memorial. Office hours are: Monday—3:30-6:00; Tues. 2:00-6:00; Wed. 3:30-6:00; Thur. 2:00-6:00; Fri. 2:00-6:00. Furtado's residence phone is 89033.

Girls Selected To Work With Honor Council

The Women's Residence Council has elected five girls to serve with the six members of the Honor Council.

They will act in trials of cases concerning violations of Campus Code, major social rules and appeals from House Councils.

The nine member council is provided for in the bill concerning the addition of a jury.

Legislators Vote Against Special Freshman Coed Rules

By DAVE JONES

A resolution putting the Student Legislature on record as being opposed to any rules which apply only to freshman women and not to all Carolina Coeds was passed last night by a vote of 28 to 9.

This resolution, introduced by Gary Greer, voices the legislature's opinion on the new freshman coed regulations, but is not binding on the Women's Residence Council.

Don Furtado, Ralph Cummings, Paddy Sue Wall, and Charlie Gray were sworn in as student body president, vice president, secretary, and treasurer respectively. The ceremony was performed by Jim Long, chairman of the Student Council. Ralph Cummings assumed the chair as Speaker of the Legislature and recognized the new president.

Furtado delivered the traditional inaugural address. In it he dedicated himself to the solution of several pressing campus problems and the maintenance of "our tradition in truth, student freedom, and responsibility."

The specific areas touched upon by the new president were, the Honor System, a new Student Union, dormitory social rules, self liquidating dorm construction, fraternities and sororities, student parking, parking fees, class cuts, professorial salaries and leaves and freshmen women's rules.

Reorganization of the body brought about the appointment of John Brooks to succeed himself as parliamentarian, and the election of Charles Pittman as speaker pro tempore; Doug Kellum, clerk; David Grigg, Sergeant at arms; Craven Brewer, Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, Bob Turner, Chairman of the Finance Committee; and Neil Bowden, chairman of the Rules Committee.

Bills introduced included a resolution to approve the constitution of the UNC Amateur Radio Club. It was given special orders and discussed. The discussion revealed that it needed committee work and upon resolution of John Brooks it was sent to the Rules Committee; A resolution regarding the Freshman Coed rules was introduced by Gary Greer. It passed by special orders 28 to 9.

A resolution to build a paved walk from the corner of Raleigh St. and Raleigh Rd. to Lenoir Hall was introduced by Dennis Rinzler, to be considered next week; and a bill by John Brooks to have two appointees by the speaker serve as delegates to the State Student Legislature selections board. It too will be considered next week.

The legislature will meet at 7:00 next Thursday night.

Yack Staff

Anyone interested in working on the Yack but who failed to attend the organization meeting yesterday has been asked to fill out an information blank which can be gotten at the Information Desk of Graham Memorial.

"It is very important that these blanks are filled out so that general staff can be selected," stated Cameron Cooke, editor of the Yack.

CU Day And Carnival Is Tomorrow At State

The spring CU Day and Carnival Night of the Consolidated University will be held tomorrow at the College Union building on the campus of N. C. State College.

The day will consist of carnival games, an informal dance and the crowning of the CU Day Queen.

The major purpose of this combined project is to promote a friendly competitive spirit among campus organizations at the three schools and give the schools a chance to participate in one large event.

Booths will be constructed by organizations of the three campuses and will be assembled on the second floor of the student union. They will be open from 1-11 p.m.

Kelly Maness, president of Consolidated University Student Council urged all students of the three schools to attend the event.

Contestants for the CU Day queen will be introduced at the dance and crowned at 10 p.m. Only organizations having booths are eligible to sponsor a contestant for queen.

Other officers chosen were Ash Exum, vice president; Ed Jennings, treasurer; Bob Edwards, recorder; Fick Arthur, houset manager; Hartwell Bass, chaplain; and Dick Hayes, reporter and historian.

Next Musicale To Feature Paul Strassler

Paul Gene Strassler, tenor will be featured in a Petite Musicale recital Sunday at 8 p.m. in Hill Hall. The program which is open to the public at no charge is sponsored by Graham Memorial.

Strassler, a graduate music student at UNC from Appolo, Pa., will be accompanied by Walter Golde, Chapel Hill voice teacher and composer with whom Strassler is currently studying.

The program will include four songs by Gabriel Faure and a group of German songs by Hugo Wolfe, Brahms, Richard Strauss and Edward Grieg. A piece by Wagner, a group of English songs by Vaughan-Williams, Peter Warlock and E. J. Moeran and works by Yrjo Kilpiner will also be included.

Strassler, who is a graduate of Juilliard School of Music, is known for his solo work with the University Chorous. He has been featured as tenor soloist in the Chorus performances under the direction of Wilton Mason of Schuts' "Christmas Story," in Honegger's "King David" and as Hoffman in the "Tales of Hoffman."

As director of the Community Church Choir, Strassler has led performances of Faure's Requiem Mass, Charpentier's Midnight Mass and the recent presentation of Luigi Cherubini's Requiem Mass.

India And Pakistan

Dr. Frank P. Graham's report to the United Nation's Security Council on Kashmir in relation to the conflict between the governments of India and Pakistan revealed some shocking things.

From the report it is clear that India is not the righteous nation that it claims to be.

Dr. Graham experienced great reluctance on the part of the Indian nation to comply in any manner with proposals offered by him on the part of the United Nations Commission on India and Pakistan.

Pakistan, on the other hand, was more than happy to expedite some of the recommendations for easing the conflict between the two countries.

They were ready to withdraw their troops frim the Kashmir area at the same moment that India would withdraw and means for withdrawal were available.

The Pakistan government at the same time was willing to have United Nation's troops stationed within their borders, something that no nation has been willing to do in the past.

India refused to comply with any recommendation by the UN, on the grounds that it felt Pakistan was the aggressor.

The states of the world at this time had better take cognizance of the Indian government's refusal to ease the tension in Asia, before it looks again to them as a "neutral, peaceloving" nation.

The states of the world should at this time join together in urging the Indian government to comply with the recommendations of the UN commission, in order to ease one of the troubled areas away from the list of troubled areas.

With the already expressed desire for cooperation on the part of Pakistan, this job can be accomplished.

Something Wrong

There is something wrong with the set-up of the Women's Residence Council. The basic wrong is that there is a non-voting but participating member of the Dean of Women's office in that organization.

There should have been some awareness before this of the fact that this is in contradiction with the idea of student government at the University of North Carolina.

The Women's Residence Council should be free to act independently of the Dean of Women's office. It is not able to do this now, since at the present time there is always a member of the Dean of Women's office at their meetings.

The Council should be able to invite the representative when it wants her advice, but to exclude her when it wants to act independently.

It is the idea that the Council can act independently that the Council should be aware of when reconsidering the new coed regulations.

To revise and throw out the rules that have been handed to them by a previous council and by the Dean of Women's office, is an undertaking requiring great courage.

But it is obvious, that the facts warrant such a change. It will take a great deal of courage to resist the pressure of the office of the Dean of Women. It will take as much courage to resist the pressure of the School of Nursing.

It is a step that has not been taken in years. To act under the student's own initiative would be a wonderful step forward.

Perhaps the Women's Residence Council is up to the job.

From all reports it appears that Batista is giving Castro a rough time of it For a good while now the two have played a game of tag with one ahead for a while and then the other taking over. Continuously each is taking great care to assure the world that he is ahead, that he is inflicting the most damage, that it is only a matter of time until he is victor. Looking at the conflict from a distance with curious but uninformed eyes, the spectacle appears sometimes humerous and sometimes serious. To the Cuban, however, the spectacle is exceedingly grave and offers nothing but pain and death.

Aside from the visual perspective of the struggle itself, there is another perspective almost completely ignored in any consideration of the matter. This perspective goes beyond the limitations of the Cuban struggle and embrace the entire world. This perspective alluded to is the ineffectiveness of the superimposed democratic ideal to completely eliminate conflict. In the past years a slow adjustment to the democratic ideal with the accompanying conflict could be tolerated. Today, the world is too compact for this flame to exist without the imminent possibility of rampage.

Applied as a law which because of its nature will have exceptions, this perspective can be focused on the great majority of other small nations which within the last 75 years have had the democratic ideal imposed upon them, and in most cases there is evidence of a harsh conflict within the country. On the other hand, the large countries, such as India, have been able to resolve their conflicts largely by debate and compromise.

Of course there are many factors to be considered in both cases, and any penterating consideration of the idea would reveal a vast substructure.

The apparent conclusion for the realist would be to eliminate the small countries ,or hold a club over their heads and demand that they "be quiet" or else. Perhaps even the realist would not want to go so far, yet there is a desperate need that such conflicts be settled as soon as possible. But the very nature of the problem is such that in present form neither the governments of the smaller countries plagued with this conflict nor the governments of the larger countries can cope with the problem. The problem remains as the looming trigger to infreno.

Oddly enough this problem looming over the world like a black angel of death has a solution in plain sight for all to see. The United States is structured with democracy, but all conflicts are resolved with relatively little physical violence. Why is this so? Democracy in a large country works with relatively little conflict because opinion and even force can be use to bound revolution within a path of evolution. The small country does not have the strength nor resources to do this. The solution is for the small countries to be bound in a union with a central government, a large and powerful democracy, and allow the small countries to administer the internal. Even this is not enough. The conflict between Russia and the United States would spread to these larger "countries". The final solution which offers the only real avenue of escape is for there to be a world union, a glorified United Nations.

Military Reorganization: Navy

James C. Miller

If we are judging the climate of sentiment correctly, Washington was tornadoed last week after it became known that President had every intention of fighting for his Defense Department reorganization plan.

It appears that the turmoil can be traced to the Navy and her allies. The President's plan is to make changes in assignment of power in the form of the Defense Department, the Defense Secretary, and the Joint Chiefs of Staff for greater military unity and simplification of military complexities apparently developed as a result of separate administration of the services on the dawn of a new age.

DILEMMA

Since the basic dilemma is the present military organization and the question of its efficiency in meeting the problems arising in the new missile and outer space age, the Navy promises to be hurt most in whatever reshuffle will take place . . . and take place it will. Therefore, the Navy doesn't want her fleets commanded by the Joint Chiefs. She wants naval autonomy preserved. After all, there is a possibility of such unity that the Navy will lose her identity. The similarity of uniforms for all the services, along with ranks and ratings would mark the beginning of her end. This is not to say that ships are doomed in a short while thereafter to extinction. This is not so predictable, but historical identity as a separate service is.

INVOLVEMENT

Emotional involvement where identity is strong, especially among the older commanders is not a thing passed. However, the dramatic course of events may have forced to a crisis the inadequacy of the functional setup of our military machine; understanding the Navy's problem is in order. The New has an obligation to the Old, as the Old has one to the New. The New Order will come because development is such that it is forced.

The Old should try to see this despite its sense of belonging somewhere else. And it often happens that the Old die old and bitter when they might have died young and happier (if this isn't too absurd). But if the Old is to eventually die, then the New Order can make its last days a bit happier by preparing a place for them in the New, inviting them, with all regard to their humanity, to belong and participate.

These days are not ones for denunciation. We need mutual understanding and cooperation. Perhaps soon these will not be too ideal to live by in the face of difference.

Education: Freedom's Dilemma

Louis M. Hacker

The profession of learning and knowledge—within the corporation of the university and its ancillary bodies of learned societies and journals—seeks to extend knowledge, to conserve it and diffuse it, constantly bringing the processes of nature, social organization and human conduct under better conrtol. Such are the roles and obilgation of scholarship and scientific research.

It is equally necessary to train youth, and those adults who were by-passed by formal learning when they were young, for more useful lives, giving them-at the same time that they are being trained for greater productivity—the tools of analysis by which they can differentiate between right and wrong, the honest and the spurious, beauty and corruption. Citizenship requores virtue, usefulness and boldnes; to free the mind of both prejudice and fear are the demands we impose upon educators, at the same time that they exercise their functions of scholars and scientists. To this extent educators are teachers of morals dedicated to the perpituation of a moral universe.

Educators are prepared for their dual functions by universities; standards of competence and performance are safeguards by these universities, the faculties within them, and the professional associations or learned societies to which educators belong. In consequence, universities, faculties and academic societies must be permitted to choose and police their own company. Choice should be based on technical qualifications for the efficient performance of assumed or assigned tasks, prior profesional experience when necessary, and qualities of character that permit men to live and work together; policing means the maintenance of first-class standards of performance and of abridged integrity in devotion to scholarly and scientific truth.

The president of one of our large American universities has said:

This is equally so of testing orthodox belief. In a discerning passage, John Stuart Mill points out that even if opinions are true, there is a constant necessity for demonstrating their validity. Otherwise w ar guided by superstition and not intelligence.

The educator—as teacher or moralist—has learned other truths. Youth is a period of challenge and experimentation. Youth is suspicious of indoctrination. Youth wants to start out by assuming that there are alternative roads to freedom. Young men and women seek to explore, debate, question every verity, every assumption, every custom and institution —not to reject them, necessarily, but to test their validity with a powerful new resource they have discovered, their minds.

It is the function of educators, as teachers or moralists, to let such minds range freely. For this reason, no body of doctrine or belief, or, indeed, error can be kept shut to them like a kind of Bluebeard's chamber. They must be permitted to read and ponder over, see and hear and be exposed to the writings of Marx, Freud and Keynes, the pictures, sculpture and muisc of Picasso, Moore and Stravinsky, at the same time that they are reading, seeing and hearing the great conservators of our tradition and taste.

By the same token, the open university means that youth has the same rights we seek for ourselves as citizens to form its own clubs, maintain its own discussion groups and platforms, run its own newspapers—without let or interference on the part of university administrators or faculties. To protect them in their later lives from investigation—for more often than not these adventure are only youthful peccadillos—university administrators have no right to ask for membership lists or demand faculty surveillance.

An Epistle To Daddy

To Daddy:

I doubt that the "big nasty man" you spoke of as being very mixed up and confused is nearly as mixed up and confused as you are. I feel very sorry for you if you have, in coming to college and preparing for your future, lost some of the former pleasures of life—eating ice cream, going fishing, reading comic strips and the like. These and countless other things are things we used to enjoy and I cannot think of a single person who, no matter how mature and dignified he may be, no matter how important a post he may hold, has not continued to employ and enjoy some of these former joys of life and is a richer person for it. While you may call him childish when he is a child, when he grows up and becomes an adult, these amusements adopt this same adult quality. Just because a man relaxes and gets relief from the seriousness and complexity of adulthood doesn't make him less intelligent or less dignified.

Actually I do not feel that this column was worth commenting on because you carried it to such an extreme that it is obviously meant to be ridiculous, but I do want to make a point. The students pay you for this paper, it is written for them. They have the right to ask for what they want. They have asked for more comic strips, not fewer.

You mocked us and criticized our values because we want comic strips in the paper. I would like to ask you a question—do you feel your article was worth the space it took up? Was it anything more than a reflection of your own immaturity?

JOHN MCKEE

Postscript

Jonathan Yardley

At about one fifteen Wednesday morning I had just begun to fall asleep when suddenly a voice from nowhere shook me ino consciousness: "John! Get up! The puppies are coming!" After two months of anxious wait it was finally happening; Nicky, our little mongrel, was going to have her puppies. We had cajoled her, fondled her, sworn at her, petted her, but seemingly to no avail for days before, but she seemed to have no desire to get rid of the load which was daily making her bigger and bigger, lazier and lazier. At last she was coming through.

I tore out of bed and rushed to the room where she had been spending her time during those weeks of worry. There she was, lying in her box with a little brown puppy just on the way out. Three fascinated males were squatting around the box, carefully noting every motion of her body.

"God — what in the world is that?" was the first thing I heard. What it was was a little sac with a puppy inside. As soon as she had contracted enough so that the sac was out of her body, Nicky quickly bit the umbilical cord which ran from the puppy into her womb, bit a hole in the sac, and in twenty seconds had digested the entire thing, leaving a little puppy squirming on the blanket in the box.

The puppy was bloody, gelatinous, and quite unattractive. Nicky, perhaps wishing to improve upon his aesthetic appeal, took great pains to clean him off. After about five minutes licking he looked reasonably presentable.

This was only the first of many. From one thirty until four Nicky had puppies with astonishing regularity. She had them in twos; two of them would come out in about a minute, then she would take about half an hour to get them in shape, and suddenly we would see two more. After the first one she had no trouble having them. As a matter of fact, she was so efficient I expected to see her stand up in the middle of the room, wagging her tail, and suddenly raise the tail to discharge a puppy much as one might fire a cannon - right across the room.

We got to bed at about four that morning, extremely tired. When we awoke Nicky was lying patiently in her box, giving suck to eight little puppies. Three of them are brown, three are black, and three are spotted. She only has seven teats, and the little runt has been having a great deal of trouble feeding. We've taken to force feeding it from a little bottle, which seems to be adequate.

The puppies are fine now, and will be looking for homes pretty soon, as we cannot keep any of them. About four have been taken care of all ready, but if anyone would like one and could assure me that he/she would take care of it, I'd be glad to give one away. Just get in touch with me.

The birth of those puppies was one of the most moving experiences I have ever witnessed. What an amazing act of creation it is! One little black and white dog ,all by herself, giving birth to, feeding, and caring for, eight little puppies.

Nicky has been such wonderful mother. She lies patiently in her box while puppies crawl over her, pull at her teats, get lost, get taken out of the box by overenthusiastic foster parents, fight, and bark with their high pitched little voices.

As I watched Nicky give birth to her litter, and as I watch her taking such wonderful, loving care of them, I can only wonder why womankind needs so much help. Here this little dog, with no comparable rate of intelligence, does all the work herself while our mates must be oxydized, hydrogenated sterilzied, chloroformed, anesthetized, ammoniated, and pampered.

Women are wonderful, sweet, and entirely lovable. But perhaps we are too nice to them. We ought to try, for one week, making our feminine population eat its afterbirth. What a sight that would be!

World Need: Faith & Hope

DR. FRANK GRAHAM

However wide the differences and deep the distrust, and however bad the situation in the opposite views of each other's position, no situation is completely and forever beyond the redemptive power of the development of reciprocal faith and the creative interchange of views and proposals for a peaceful settlement as alternatives to the deepening differences in an age of unprecedented peril and hope. Better than talking at long distances across the sub-continent is, on occasion, to talk directly to each other in a conference at the highest possible level. The holding of well prepared direct talks with the desire for a settlement is more than talk: it is itself an act of potentially creative faith which might lead to steps for a fair and peaceful settlement.

These unsettled and unsettling differences between two great peoples have long corroded their relations, continuously drain off their resources, and cut deeply into their hopeful programs for education, health, production, and welfare. Instead of continuing endlessly the corrosive polemics of all blame on one side and the other, the conference might, with sound preparation and resolute will, work out present steps toward a settlement; set in motion a higher release of the productive capacities of the people; and give an effective impetus to the world's flood tide of the yearning of the people for freedom and peace amid the hazards and hopes of this age.

In this age, any situation engaged by UN-sponsored resolutions cannot be isolated from the dynamic currents of the world's concern even by the highest mountains, whose pinnacles rise in incomparable grandeur from the topmost "roof of the world." Though bright rays of light shine through the over-hanging clouds of our time, thermonuclear power casts its lengthening shadows across the earth, darkening the homes and hopes of men. Alternative to the sudden extinction of the human race and the destruction of the precious treasures of the heritage from all peoples in all ages, there rises above the authentic fears, despair, and tumult of the times, the unconquerable aspiration of the human spirit for the sublimation of thermonuclear power in the cause of peace and the equal freedom, dignity and opportunity of all people, East and West.

The light of faith and the fires of the inner spirit, which, in dark times in ages past, were lighted among Asian, African and Mediterranean people for people in all lands, have shone most nobly in our times in the heroic struggles, liberation, and universal aspirations of the people of the historic sub-continent for a freer and fairer life for all. With their two-fold heritage of faith in the Moral Sovereignty, which undergirds the nature of man and the universe, and with a reverence for life challenging the violent trends of the atomic era, those peoples, in the succession of their prophetic leadership and great example, may again give a fresh lift to the humane spirit of people everywhere. The peoples of the world might in high response begin again in these shadowed years to transform with high faith and goodwill the potential forces of bitterness, hate, and destruction, step by step through the United Nations, toward the way of creative cooperation, economic, social, and cultural development, responsible disarmament, self-determination, equal justice under law, and peace for all peoples on the earth as the God-given home of the family of man. (From a UN Security Council Report)

Anthony Wolff

In all the dispute about the testing of nuclear weapons, one very important fact has been completely neglected: there is no good reason for developing any further these terrible agents of destruction.

The United States and Russia possess sufficient stockpiles of these weapons to effect mutual destruction of the other. What more can any nation want?

To be sure, there may be some point to the development of anti-missile missiles, and also more effective carriers of nuclear warheads; but there is certainly no reason for further experimentation with the warhead itself.

There is also much talk these days about a "clean" nuclear weapon — one which will be relatively free from nuclear fallout. Such a "clean" weapon would be a nice thing to have once a war was in progress. On the other hand, the development of a "clean" bomb would also make war a much more attractive proposition.

The current policy of the United States toward the development of nuclear weapons is that our possession of such tools of war—"dirty" at present —is the major deterrent to Soviet aggression.

Whether this premise is merely self-justification or not, it seems painfully obvious that this deterrent will be removed by the development of a "clean" bomb. If such a bomb is developed, then any nation contemplating nuclear war will be free from the guilt of violating the germ of an entire population; any nation who wants to continue testing weapons in anticipation of such a war can do so with perfect peace of mind. And the anticipation of nuclear war, the frenzied preparation for it, serves only to make it imminent.

Sig Ep Ball

Forty members and dates of N. C. Delta of Sigma Phi Epsilon Fraternity will join representatives from seven other Sig Ep chapters in the two Carolinas for the 29th annual Sig Ep Ball in Charlotte this weekend.

Russell E. Brown of Hickory will be the banquet speaker at the event, which is being held at the Hotel Charlotte.

Brown, a professor of economics at Lenoir Rhyne College in Hickory and chapter counselor of the Sig Ep fraternity there will be introduced by Bedford W. Black of Kannapolis, grand guard of the national organization and attorney in his home town.

The event which an estimated 500 persons will attend will include a formal dance in the hotel ballroom after the banquet.

Sponsors and dates representing the UNC chapter are Miss Brenda Wishon with Bill Akin, both of Raleigh; Miss Sadye Anne Boyd with Bill Robbins, both of Raleigh; and Miss Madie Pollard of Raleigh with Jim Doar of Charlotte.

Undergraduate chapters which will send delegates, beauty queens and sponsors to the ball in addition to UNC are: Duke, Davidson, N. C S.tate, Wake Forest, Lenoir Rhyne, High Point and South Carolina. Alumni in the area will also attend.

Judging the singing competition at the dance intermission and picking the Ball beauty queen will be Mr. and Mrs. William H. Richardson of Charlotte, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Hayes of Hickory and Mr. and Mrs. Wylie Yarborough of Winston-Salem.

Also attending the function will be delegates from Sigma Rho Phi Fraternity at Atlantic Christian College in Wilson. This fraternity will be installed as the 147th chapter of Sigma Phi Epsilon April 26 and will raise the total number of chapters in the Carolinas to nine.

Sigma Phi Epsilon is the second largest national social fraternity, and it has over 2,500 members in the Carolinas.

Eddie Seteler of Lenoir Rhyne will act as master of ceremonies for the function and will be assisted by Elwood Clinard Jr. of Winston-Salem, who is district governor.

Phi Kappa Party

Last weekend the Phi Kappa Alphas entertained their dates at a series of parties throughout the entire weekend.

Beginning on Friday afternoon, the Phi Kaps and their dates traveled to Hillsboro where they took advantage of the Spring weather at an informal cabin party. Later in the evening, the group ate supper together and enjoyed dancing to the music of Jack Victor's combo from Durham.

Saturday afternoon featured an informal get-together at the house. Saturday night the Phi Kaps and their dates donned formal attire to attend the annual Rose Ball held at the Chapel Hill Country Club. Music for the formal festivity was provided by Jack Victor's orchestra from Durham. During the evening the officers, with their dates carrying bouquets of red roses, were presented in a figure and Catherine Ann Green, a Duke coed, was crowned queen of the Rose Ball. She was escorted by Clarence Carter of Winston-Salem.

Sunday morning at 10 o'clock the group wound up the weekend's festivities with a brunch at the house.

Lambda Chi Festivity

Last Saturday night the Lambda Chi partied with the Duke chapter at the American Legion Hut. Approximately 150 brothers and their dates enjoyed dancing to the latest "rock and roll" hits as presented by the Downbeats, a Burlington combo.

The bermuda party was the first get-together held by the two groups since the Duke chapter beat the local Lambda Chis in the annual Lambda Chi Bowl Game held in December.

UNC-State Kappa Sigs Party

Last Saturday the Kappa Sigs and their dates were entertained by the State College chapter at the Sate Kappa Sig house.

Approximaely 20 Kappa Sigs and their dates attended the event from the local chapter.

An afternoon and evening of informal dancing and socializing was enjoyed by all, with Nick Kearns combo, from Chapel Hill, on hand to liven up the affair with appropriate music.

Betas Entertain Chi O's

Last night the Betas entertained the Chi Os at an Italian dinner at the house. During the dinner, accordian music was provided by Jerry Goodman and a local combo added a number of popular tunes to the program.

Sunday afternoon the Chi O's will hold their annual faculty tea at the house. Mrs. Charles Murphy, house mother, will be the official hostess for the affair.

Magazine Runs Story On School Of Medicine

A feature-length article on the UNC School of Medicine appears in the current issue of "The New Physician," a monthly magazine published by the American Medicial Asssociation.

The article traces the growth of the school from the time it was opened in 1879 up to the present time. From its early beginning nearly 80 years ago, the UNC School of Medicine and its associated teaching hospital have grown into one of the leading and most modern medical centers in the South today.

The article was written by Robert H. Bartholomew, public information officer of the UNC Division of Health Affairs.

Dr. T. W. Harris headed the first School of Medicine at the University. The article then covers such well known men in the field of medicine in North Carolina as Drs. Richard H. Whitehead, Issac Hall Manning, Charles Staples Mangum and William de Bernier MacNider, all deans of the school. Dr. W. Reece Berryhill is present dean of the school.

To the lay readers, a little known chapter in the history of the School of Medicine is brought forward. This was when the first two years of the four year course were given in Chapel Hill and the final two years were given in Raleigh. D. Hubert A. Royster was dean of the Raleigh unit.

This system was maintained from 1902 until 1910.

Grad Advisors Needed For Fall

Those people interested in being advisors for new graduate students entering Carolina next year have been asked to get application blanks at the Y.M.C.A Information Office before April 26.

Graduate orientation programs will run from September 13-17.

"Some 20 advisors are needed for this program if it is to be successful," said Nola Hatten, one of the co-chairmen.

The main duty of the counselors will be to acquaint the students with the campus and solve as many of their problems as possible.

Ike Tells Nations

WASHINGTON — (AP) — President Eisenhower told the nation yesterday congressional critics are besieging his military reorganization plan with nonsense, untruth and misrepresentation.

The whole purpose of the plan, he said, is "safety with solvency" and "the country is entitled to both."

Launching the battle he has promised for his plan, Eisenhower addressed a luncheon of the American Society of Newspaper Editors and the International Press Institute. The speech was broadcast nationally by television and radio.

Aycock Visiting Alums In New York

UNC's new chancellor, Dr. William B. Aycock, who was installed last October as chancellor of the University, will meet with UNC alumni of New York today at the Advertising Club, 23 Park Avenue.

Dr. Aycocks' visit here, his first since he was installed as chancellor, is of interest to more than 3,000 "Tar Heels" of the metropolitan area who will have their first opportunity to hear him describe his long-range plans for the academic standards and physical development of the university.

The name of Aycock is not new to higher education. Charles B. Aycock, a former governor of North Carolina (1901-1905), was one of the state's earliest crusadors for free public education. As North Carolina's "educational governor," Aycock campaigned vigorously for the right of women to higher education.

Undefeated Tennis Squad Tackles South Carolina Today At Columbia

By ELLIOTT COOPER

Carolina's varsity tennis team travels south this weekend to meet Atlantic Coast Conference foes South Carolina and Clemson. The Tar Heels will meet the Gamecocks this afternoon and then journey to Clemson on tomorrow to take on the Tigers.

Coach Vladimir Cernik's varsity crew currently hold a 2-0 conference record and have a 5-0 season slate so far. In conference competition the Tar Heels have not lost a match in their two outings against Wake Forest and State.

Last season coach Walter Hambrick's Gamecock netters compiled a 7-10 season record including a 8-1 loss to Carolina. Hambrick has three lettermen returning to head his current squad. These three, Harry Blackwell, Dey Haynes, and Bob Luft will have to come through if the South Carolinians want to score an upset victory.

Saturday the Tar Heels will run into stiffer competition when they meet Clemson. Although they lost to Carolina 8-1 last year the Tigers had a 10-3 overall season mark. In competition this year Bill Seigler's club lost their opening match to Maryland by a 6-3 count. Clemson's star performer this year has been Mohammed Nacim; he was undefeated until he ran into Maryland's Jackson Yang and lost 6-3, 6-3.

Cernik will send the same line-up against South Carolina and Clemson that he has used all season. Captain Bob Bortner will play number one for the Tar Heels followed by Steve Bank in the second position. Undefeated junior Geoff Black will be the third man. Following Black in the singles line-up are Malcolm Clark, Ben Keys, and Dick Makepeace.

Track Meet With Terps Tomorrow

The Carolina cindermen get a chance for vengence tomorrow when they clash with the powerful Maryland Terps here on Ftezer Field.

Although the Terps will be the favorite, local fans will have an opportunity to see some of the best outdoor track in the South when these two teams meet. Maryland is the defending conference indoor and outdoor chmapion, and from the looks of things they will be hard to beat this year.

Names like Burr Grim, Ed Cooke, Steve Scheck, Larry Salmon, Tom Tait, and Don Whittaker are enough to make any opposing team shudder. Grim is one of the nation's top collegiate distance men. Cooke is as well considered in the shot put. Salmon, Scheck and Whittaker are among the fastest dash men in the conference. Tait is the defending ACC high jump champion.

The Tar Heels don't do so bad themselves as far as big names go. Dave Scurlock, Everett Whatley, Wayne Bishop and Ward Sims have given the Terps plenty of trouble in the past and are ready for the present. In the field events, where the Tar Heels have been lacking in the past, Ray Stanley, Clete Oakley and Frazier Smith ar getting better evrey day.

Add to those lists the boys on down the line and you have power in every department. With two such powers on the same field spectators can expect to witness some thrilling excitement.

Freshman Track Here With State

The Tar Baby track team will have its second track meet here this afternoon when it entertains the yearlings of State College starting at 3:30 on Fetzer Field.

In their only other meet, the Tar Babies defeated Chowan Junior College and Cranbrook Prep School in a three way affair.

Top men for the freshmen thus far this season have been in the distance running department. Harry Miller and Worth Sweet are top varsity mile and 2-mile prospects. In the opening meet, Miller won the 2-mile and Sweet the mile. Ben Seagle has been the outstanding middle distance man.

Moving over to the field events, the frosh have an outstanding broad jumper in Bob Eubanks who made a 21'5" jump to win in the triangular meet. Don White has been looking good in the shot this year.

The next freshman meet will be next Wednesday against Duke here.

Harding Pockets 4th Win

Big Eighth Inning Shoves Carolina Past State 5-3

By RUSTY HAMMOND

Carolina exploded for three big runs in the bottom of the eighth inning here yesterday to give the Tar Heels a 5-3 win over State, and pull their conference record to 3-1.

Ron Harding started and went all the way for Carolina, gaining his fourth win against no losses. Harding struck out 6 and allowed seven hits.

Carolina drew first blood, in the initial inning, when Gerald Griffin singled and came in on John Burgwyn's long triple to right center field.

The Tar Heels got another in the third as Griffin tripled this time and was singled home by Al Pons.

State got back into the game in the fourth with an unearned run crossing the plate as a result of an error. Pack catcher Bob Kennel clouted a home run with nobody on in the sixth to make a brand new game of it.

In the top half of the eighth, State went ahead as Dick Hunter, of football fame, singled and scored on Bob Kennel's triple, which went to almost the same spot as his homer.

Going into the bottom half of the eighth, things didn't look well for the home nine, as Joe Jones had retired 12 men in a row up til that frame. But Carson Oldham walked, and went to second on what was intended as a sacrifice bunt by Gerald Griffin. Griffin's great speed made a single of it and when pitcher Jones fumbled Al Pons' bunt, the pond was full of ducks and nobody was out. Then as Jones went into his windup, Oldham took off like a streak from third and Vaughn Bryson laid down a perfect squeeze bunt, scoring Oldham and reaching first; still no one out. Captain Roger Honeycutt then slashed a single between first and second enabling two more counters to cross the dish. Harding set the Wolfpack down 1-2-3 in the top of the ninth and the Heels had wrapped up their second win in two days, both against ACC competition.

Carolina wanted that one bad, remembering that State was the team who defeated them 4-0 for the Dixie Classic championship. In that contest, the same Mr. Jones twirled a masterful one-hit shutout for State. After allowing the runs in the first and third, Jones slammed the gate shut and it looked like H— would have to freeze before the Tar Heels could get to the flashy pitcher. But the home half of the eighth told the story and Jones was chased to the showers.

After a phenomenal seven game winning streak, State was beaten Wednesday by Clemson and yesterday by Carolina. The Pack now stands 3-8 in the conference.

Coupled with Wednesday's win over Duke, Carolina now has a fine 3-1 record and have stamped themselves as a definite contender for honors in the league.

EXPELLED? DON'T WORRY ABOUT A THING!

At last, all cotton drip-dry shirts are a reality! Van Heusen has achieved this triumph in the new Vantage shirt which is 100% cotton, drip-dries in a jiffy, and needs no ironing! At only $5, it's the all-around shirt for college men, and also has a few special uses which you might possibly overlook.

You're expelled from school. Since you have no money, you're forced to walk home (you live in Lovelyville, 1,357 miles away). The Van Heusen Vantage shirt is perfect for this situation. First, you can wash it in the many brooks you pass as you trudge along the open road . . . and, as you catch a quick wink in a hollow log, it will drip-dry and be neat and snappy for the next lap of your trek. Second, because Vantage is all cotton, it looks so smart that you begin to feel well-educated. People will say, "there goes a cultured chap."

You're water boy on the football team. Ideal spot for Van Heusen Vantage shirts. We ask you, what does a water boy have most of? Precisely . . . and after you hang-dry them from the goal post . . . you can wear them heroically like a quarterback.

You owe the laundry $342.45. Let us say you owe the laundry $342.45 and are ashamed to show your face there, and even feel terror when you smell the disinfectant floating out of the Laundromat. A set-up for Vantage! Since it drip-dries, and needs no ironing, you need never enter the laundry again. And because it's all cotton, it's so elegant-looking, you can pass the laundry with equanimity. The owner, seeing you stroll by in your Vantage, will say to himself, "No sense dunning Morgan for that dough. He's so rich, he's bound to pay me soon."

In Vantage, you inspire confidence. In Vantage, you're set for every college occasion. At better stores everywhere, or write to Phillips-Van Heusen Corp., 417 Fifth Avenue, New York 16, New York.

COED RULES:

Furtado OK's Legislative Resolution

By AL RESCH

Don Furtado, president of the student body, Friday stated that he was pleased with the Student Legislature's passing of a resolution in opposition to the new Women's Residence Council rules.

The resolution put the Student Legislature on record as being opposed to any rules which apply only to freshman women but not to all Carolina Coeds. It was passed by a vote of 28 to 9.

"Though a resolution carries no official weight but only expresses opinion of the group, I am pleased to see that the Legislature recognizes the inappropriateness of the WRC proposals," said President Furtado.

He added that it was his hope that the WRC would take this statement of opinion into consideration when discussing the rules again.

In commenting on an editorial against the presence of a member of the Dean of Women's Office on the WRC, Furtado said, "It has been said by those who favor the inclusion of this representative that it is done in order that the WRC may know the feelings of the Dean's Office before any measure is passed.

"If we are going to take this viewpoint, then we should include on the council representatives from the Dean of Student Affairs' Office and the Student Legislature, for both of these can review actions of the WRC."

Influence

He stated that the inclusion of an administrative official on a student policy making body was undesirable and not in keeping with the tradition of student freedom and independent government at Carolina.

"Although the representative does not have a vote, it is only logical that she can wield a great deal of influence; this is not as it should be," he concluded.

Playmakers Slate Final Production

The Carolina Playmakers will give their final performance of three new one-act plays tonight at 7:30 in the Playmaker Theatre.

The plays are products of the playwriting class of Thomas Patterson, of the Dramatic Art Department.

This is an annual feature of the Playmaker's season. The represented authors since the organization was first founded in 1918 included such figures as Thomas Wolfe, Paul Green, Betty Smith, Howard Richardson, Frances Gray Patton, Bernice Kelly Harris, Josephina Niggli and Kay Porter Lewis.

Cosmopolitan Club Schedules Open House

The Cosmopolitan Club wil hold its annual International Open House from 3 to 5 p.m. Sunday at Hillel House, 210 Cameron St.

The program will include song and dances from Sweden, Norway, South America, Japan and also American folk songs.

Exhibits will represent Scandinavain countries, Holland, France, Italy, Latin America ,the Middle East, Japan, China, and India.

"The officers and the members of the Cosmopolitan Club cordially invite the sutdent body to come and to bring their friends. This is a wonderful opportunity for friendship and international understanding," said Jean Pierre Boissavit, the club's president.

Di Defeats NAACP Bill

The Dialectic Senate overwhelmingly defeated a resolution to abolish the NAACP in North Carolina Tuesday night.

Senators Gary Greer and Larry Good advocated the bill by adopting the view that the NAACP has been a disturbing factor in peaceful integration, and was not favored by political leaders in this state.

The remainder of the bidy and two guests hit the resolution with cries of "prejudice, unconstitutional yehavior, and deprivation of human rights." The negative senators in their attack of the resolution pointed out that state political lealers were expressing prejudice, and that by denying the NAACP the right to function, the state would in reality be denying the organization of legal free expression and the right of assembly.

New Trio Of Men's Dormitories Will House 800 Extra Students

By WYNDHAM HEWITT

The mansions just over the hill-top will be ready for students next fall. The three new UNC dorms will open their doors to more than 800 students.

The new dorms are located on the other side of the intramural field. The dorms afford a beautiful view from the hill top across the fields. Students living in these "palaces" will be able to appreciate the view from verandas that run the length of each floor.

Much of the noise that is found in the dorms now in use will be cut down in the new dorms. There will be no inside halls. A porch will run the length of each floor and the eight and nine men cubicles will open onto the porches.

The cubicles are spacious accommodations for eight men. They feature brown and tan, and brown and green tile floors.

In each of the cubicles there will be four two-man rooms. These men will have access to one bathroom that is also within their cubicle. Each of the rooms have a locking door that opens onto a small hall that leads to the porch. There is a door on the porch entrance that can also be locked and unlocked by the cubicle occupants. This will assure more privacy. The key to the occupants door will also open the outside hall door.

The rooms will have two desks with indirect flourescent lighting. In the new dorms the straw desk chairs will be a thing of the past. They will have wooden chairs with woden seats.

For the student who enjoys the "sleep of the just" the new dorms will feature just the thing. Single beds with either inner-spring mattresses or foam rubber ones. Students who use sleep as an extra-curricular activity will no longer have to worry about roommates feet in their face.

Plenty of storage space will be

Tuesday Night:

Residence Council Opens Study Meet On Freshmen Rules

Women's Residence Council will hold an open discussion on the new freshmen rules Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the Roland Parker Lounge of Graham Memorial.

Rules to be discussed include dorm closing hours, supervised study and lights-out hours. Housing of freshman women in the new wing of Spencer will also be discussed.

According to Lillian Shannonhouse, chairman of the WRC, "The council will endeavor to explain the new rules to the student body in the meeting."

The new rules grew out of a concern for all freshman women by the Women's Residence Council. They were drafted after approval by the WRC, the School of Nursing and the Dean of Women.

In the past freshman women have lived on the University campus, but not in great enough numbers to warrant special rules. With the expected addition of 50 women in the University next fall, the WRC took action toward the new rules.

The decision, which reversed a previous decision by the council that they not allow opposition points of view to come before the council, followed a meeting of the Council Thursday afternon.

The new rules are presently being reconsidered by the Council, and will not be final until after the Tuesday meeting.

Officials said that the discussion will be open to all interested people on campus.

Spencer Dormitory Has UNC Mother Of Year

By RAYMOND GRAY

Spencer dormitory hostess, Mrs. Bessie Renn Buchanan, was announced Campus Mother of the Year Thursday by the Chapel Hill-Carrboro Merchants Association Mother's Day Committee.

She will be honored along with the Chapel Hill mother and the Carrboro mother as a part of the Merchants Association's observance of Mother's Day.

MRS. BESSIE BUCHANAN
. . . will be honored

Although born in Oxford, N. C., she considers her hometown Sanford where she lived for 36 years.

Prior to coming to Chapel Hill in 1946 as hostess in Carr Dormitory, she served as dietitian at Lee County Hospital in Sanford from its opening in 1932 until 1945.

In 1948 she was transferred as hostess from Carr to Spencer where she has been for the past 10 years.

Mrs. Buchanan has participated in many clubs and social affairs. She is a member of the Chapel Hill Methodist Church and the University Woman's Club, a past president of a local music club, a charter member of the Woman's Society of Christian Service of Steele Street Methodist Church in Sanford.

She is also a past president and secretary of the Sanford Mother's Club and a charter member of the Sanford Music Club and many other organizations.

Mrs. Buchanan has two daughters—Mrs. Roy M. Campbell and Mrs. J. Gordon Gifford, both of Richmond, Va., four grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

APRIL 25-26

Brown, Woody Herman To Play For Germans

Spring Germans will blossom forth April 25 and 26 when Les Brown, Woody Herman and other entertainment stars come to Carolina.

The dance will be Friday night in Woollen Gym from 9 p.m.-1 a.m. Mark Cherry, German Club president, said that dinner jackets would be required for all men attending the dance.

Saturday from 3-5 p.m. Woody Herman and the Al Belletto Sextet will give a concert in Memorial Hall.

"Spring Germans should be the best yet for this year with attractions like Les Brown and his Band of Renown, featuring Butch Stone, Stumpy Brown and their new vocalist Laurie Johnson, plus Woody Herman and his Third Herd and the Al Belletto Sextet," commented Cherry.

Cherry also released the list of German Club officers for next year. The new president is John McKee, Zeta Psi; vice-president, Bob Timberlake, Sigma Chi; secretary, Charlie Pittman, Phi Delta Theta; and treasurer, Walker Lockett, Delta Kappa Epsilon.

Tom Walters Reviews IDC Accomplishments

By STAN BLACK

Outgoing president of the Inter-dormitory Council Tom Walters reviewed the accomplishments of the IDC over the past year in his speech at the annual banquet held Wednesday night at Brady's.

Walters noted that, among other things, the IDC defeated a resolution that would have established dorm counselors with wide powers in each dormitory.

On the social scene the IDC sponsored football receptions after games in Cobb Basement and held open house in some dorm's social rooms.

Also several weekends the facilities of the Rendezvous Room and the pool room in Graham Memorial were made available to couples free of charge.

The IDC voted to support the Grail-Intramural Jamboree by a contribution, and at Christmas gave money through the Campus Chest to a needy family in Chapel Hill.

Another project of the IDC was the Dormitory Sweetheart Contest, which culminated in a dance at Cobb at which the Queen was crowned.

Columnists

It has been a philosophy of this editor that the word "obscene" is subject to many definitions, and that no one definition would satisfy anyone.

Moreover, it has been the policy of this editor to let those who are writing regular columns for The Daily Tar Heel have any leeway in subject matter and presentation, provided it did not transgress the law of libel.

A column which appeared in yesterday's newspaper has caused at least a little re-evaluation on the part of the editor. It is apparent that 1) the student body has a definite sensibility in certain areas, and 2) that some columnists have not as yet had the ability to recognize their responsibility to the sensibilities of others.

On the basis the reaction drawn by the column in question, the benefit derived by the individual's learning a sense of responsibility just does not equate with the injured sensibilities of many other people.

The re-evaluation will produce certain results. From this time forth the editor will exercise a certain degree of censorship (however odious that word may sound) on the material submitted by the regular columnists.

A lesson has been learned by more than one.

Council: Take Note

Thursday night the Student Legislature passed a resolution saying in effect that it does not approve of the new coed regulations proposed by the Women's Residence Council.

Thus, the entirety of the student body, via its representative leadership, has cast its say against the restrictiveness and discriminatory nature of the new coed regulations.

The Women's Residence Council should take these into careful consideration. They probably should start with the most restrictive rules—the lights out and closed study regulations, as the first step in reconsideration.

They should look particularly at these rules, because these more than anything else are contrary to the spirit of the University, the facts; and the will of the majority of the University.

They should also take brief stock of the other rules which could afford to be done away with, in the hope that modifications can be made to the other regulations.

They should take counsel not only with the Dean of Women's office and the School of Nursing, but with the entire campus.

The Women's Residence Council has within its power the chance of building a new road of freedom for the freshman nurses without inhibiting the other freshman coeds.

They have an opportunity for courage which has not been available to other councils in the past. They have the chance to resist a trend towards the conservative, the restrictive, and the discriminatory.

The University has been proud of its heritage of student responsibility, freedom, and initiative. The Council should look to these factors, to the facts, and to the counsel of the majority of the campus before making an unfortunate decision.

The Speech

Don Furtado's State of the Campus address was one of the better speeches of the year. It pinpointed several areas of inquiry and refused to dodge isues.

From the new president's start, it looks as if the Carolina student body is in for a profitable year.

A Good Change

The Women's Residence Council reversed an earlier decision and decided to allow an open discussion of the new coed regulations.

This is a change to be hailed, for the Council has finally gone on record as being for open discussion rather than prohibiting the interplay of ideas.

The session, to be held Tuesday night, ought to be profitable for both the participants and the Council and ought to help the Council make a wise decision.

The Daily Tar Heel

The official student publication of the Publication Board of the University of North Carolina, where it is published daily except Monday and examination and vacation periods and summer terms. Entered as second class matter in the post office in Chapel Hill, N. C., under the Act of March 8, 1870. Subscription rates: mailed, $4 per year, $2.50 a semester; delivered, $6 a year, $3.50 a semester.

Variations

Gail Godwin

Somewhere or other on this very campus are some very important people. They may be important already. They may still be anonymous to everybody but their closest friends. They buy text books every semester, eat three time a day, and weaken in purpose like the rest of us when spring comes.

In fact they are very similar to ordinary human beings. Their only difference is that they are going somewhere. They are going to do something. The are artists.

What makes an artist? (By artist, it is meant here anyone who contributes something of his own to the rest of us. It may be a play, a story, an ideal: It may be something else we haven't even become aware of yet.) Different people have voiced their opinions of the artist, his purpose, why he is an artist.

I came across two rather precise observances in the course of one evening. One by Albert Camus, the other by the Cinema section of Time magazine. Camus, when asked what he thought the place of the artist in society should be, replied that the artist of today was not necessarily a champion of social movements, rather he was someone who felt and recorded the thoughts and the hopes of the man who would otherwise be without hope since he had no voice.

Time magazine, on the other hand, was doing a sketch of Academy Award winner Alec (faceless) Guinness whose screen presence has been described as sort of a "relentless search for an identity, a serious and gifted pursuit of the whole." Says Time, "the essence of such an art as its humanity . . . he (Guinness) can interpret a specifically modern sort of hero - the man who is not meant to conquer the world but to battle within himself."

Camus winds up his views on artists (found in Exile and the Kingdom) by saying that, although the artist at one time or another enjoys being thought of as "apart from everybody else," he is really in the middle of humanity. He has become their voice and he must speak.

So it would seem that all artists have one thing in common. They are seeking the answers whether to life, to people, to "the masses", or maybe to themselves. And, if they don't give up but keep looking behind every smiling face and behind every half-heard, half-uttered hope of the man without a voice, they will find what they are looking for. The essence of humanity. And then they will be caught in the center and will have to spend the rest of their lives and most of their waking hours being the "voice" that humanity must have. They will be trapped, in a sense; they will be "being used"; but they will be artists. And when they are old, thye can say like Tennyson's Ulysees that they have accomplished the feat "to strive, to seek, to find, and not to yield."

It is interesting to feel the presence of some of these seekers and to fancy that they have walked the same sidewalks and waked to the same bell that we all have. will keep walking and waking and looking and then they will plunge into us - into humanity - and we will hear their names praised. Our maybe we won't. At any rate, they will be artists - if they don't give up the search before they get there.

The Comics

Editor:

This letter is written to you in regard to the article on the editorial page of April 16 about the absence of comic strips. The main reason that people read the comic strips is because they are full of humor. This article was about the unfunniest that I have ever read. If there was something else in the editorial page besides trash, people would be interested in reading it.

Another article that was also "very humorous" was on the front page of this mornings newspaper. I believe that the swimming team can get along very well without the help of a muscrat.

I believe that some of the Tarheel staff has been watching Kaptain Kangroo too often. He has affected some of the students' minds.

Disc Jockeys, News Flash, And 'The Organization Man'

Whit Whitfield

Short on laughs?

Then why not tune in to one of the Durham radio stations some afternoon. All of the deejays fashion themselves comedians, and since the records are all alike, the humor, even when poorly attempted, is a refreshing relief.

One DJ closed out his show recently with, "Stay tuned for the news at 55 and the Ken Carpenter Show which follows on most of this same station," and "portions of this show were on film."

One local station with no network affiliation interrupts its records with spot "news flashes" about auto wrecks in Los Angeles or some other remote spot. The humor here lies in the fact that no one listening to a thousand watt station scarcely heard beyond the county line is interested in auto accidents in California. But this does add a touch of professionalism to the program —the wire service machines are even heard in the background.

During our perusal of THE ORGANIZATION MAN by William H. Whyte, Jr., we came across a very quotable quote for which we thought we might find a utilitarian purpose (maybe build a column around it), but not beig able to do so, in desperation we throw it out for your acceptance for what purpose you will.

It goes as follows (and in answer to a question, it is not directed at the School of Business Administration): "Once the uneducated could have the humility of ignorance. Now they are given degrees and put in charge, and this delusion of learning will produce consequences more critical than the absence of it."

Replies from Carroll Hall will be acknowledged.

This column would like to offer a salute (of the well-deserved variety) to the guardians of our safety, the Chapel Hill Police Department, who are by far the best ticket-taggers in the world, and it is for this reason that we should be justly proud.

Time and again they have shown their remarkable dexterity with pencil and paper. For instance, just this past Thursday we received a ticket for parking at the dental clinic scarce a dozen feet from a big black and white sign which read, "PARKING FOR PATIENTS AND VISITORS." And we are a patient (grammar?), and have been for a year and a half. Not only this, but we have been parking in this space for months and have never seen a ticket of any kind.

Determined to find a policeman in hopes that he might enlighten us concerning the why's and wherefore's, we immediately went to the combination City Hall, Police Headquarters, Fire Department, and what-have-you building in order to find one. Unfortunately they were all out, and we assumed that they were chasing robbers and tagging cars (the latter is an excellent hobby for policemen). The secretary or ticket-taker provided us with the information we needed however, and was very polite about it all.

It seems that the police are afraid that students will use these spaces designated for patients and visitors as private parking lots (which isn't a bad idea), and that as a stop-gap all student cars are awarded tickets for using these spaces, UNLESS a note is placed on the windshield explaining why you are there and with whom you have an appointment. This much needed information is not contained on the sign which unequivocally states, "PARKING FOR PATIENTS AND VISITORS." Our hats are off and our wallets out to the Boys in Blue.

God Bless 'em!

Reaction To Yardley Column

Editor:

The Daily Tar Heel and the Carolina campus are indeed lucky to have such an authority as Jonathan Yardley to explain the miracle of birth to them.

We were gratified to pick up the paper this morning at breakfast time and to find a veternarian's eye view and blow by blow account of the birth of the writer's eight puppies, "three of them . . brown, three . . black, and three spotted". (I could have sworn that three times three equaled nine.)

As Mr. Yardley finally sagely announces, "As I watched Nicky ive birth to her litter. . . . I can only wonder why womankind needs so much help," we see that it is obvious that he has a first hand knowledge of the perils of having both babies and puppies. No doubt he has interviewed scores of dogs and has gone through at least three years of med school and completely understands the workings of both canine and human body and emotions.

After reading 15 of the 21 column inches dedicated to such intimate details of the little dog's birth pangs that I wondered whether I was reading a true confession magazine for dogs who had gone astray or the latest issue of the veternarian's manual, I waited with bated breath for the ultimate truth that our own pundit, Mr. Yardley, would reveal to us. However, I found that he only feels that women should produce babies with all the aplomb and ease with which dogs produce puppies. Just think Mr. Editor, what would happen to the Maltsusian theory if all women were as polific as Mr. Yardley's little Nicky.

I also wonder if our worthy columnist realizes what a high mortality rate there used to be for both women and their babies before expectant mothers were as he sneeringly says, "oxyidized, hydrogenated, sterilified, ammoniated, and pampered."

And as for Yardley's final statement, whether he meant it literally or figuratively, I thing that it is in completely vile taste, particularly for a newspaper that is supposed to povoke student thought and not just to povoke students.

Mr. Yardley may feel that I write this letter as an outraged female who resents aspersions on one of the most prized functions of the female sex. But no, this is not the purpose of this letter. Good editorials may well be witten citicizing the moden women for being somewhat pampered along other lines, but I feel that someone who attempts to inflict his opinions on others should first of all write about something he knows, and I doubt that Mr. Yardley is qualified to write about how women should reproduce after merely watching his dog. Secondly, I feel that the way someone writes something is very important, and Mr. Yardley has been completely out of taste to the point of being vile. And thirdly, the student newspaper should have better material to fill its 21 valuable inches of editorial page than the immature observations of an aspiring Dr. Kinsey.

Mary Moore Mason

Dear Mr. Yardley:

I have just a short message for you. I wouldn't want to waste your time, as I realize you must spend a great deal of it writing valuable articles for The Daily Tar Heel. It just appears to me that your last article on the birth of your dogs was a bit excessive. Was it necessary to write such a crude, rude, and unattractive account of the birth of dogs. Is it really justifiable to compare such an account with a woman's childbirth? Also can not women be placed on a slightly higher level?

Mr. Yardley, I suggest that before you make any more profound comments, like the last one in your article, you learn a bit more about what you write, before you describe it so vulgarly.

Dear Mr. Yardley:

We have read your column these two weeks with increasing amazement at your naivete. You have "discovered" Winne-the-Pooh (Are you merely unaware of the fact that a sizeable segment of the adult poplation have been reading A. A. Milne for years without feeling even the mildest embarrassment?), analysed the Beat Generation (How many hours of concentrated study prompted your use of the adjectives "confused and insecure?"), solved the world's problems, (what flight of inspired genius produced the slogan "Why not think before you vote?") and explained an important facet of human behavior (People are gullible, both singly and in groups, Mr. Yardley, as is evidenced by the fact that your column continues to appear in the Daily Tar Heel).

Until this morning, we have ben content to endure your use of the editorial page as a verbal teething ring. At first glance this article would appear to be more of the same thing - "J. Yardley witnesses the Miracle of Birth" - but it passes the limits of "adult" discussion, becoming objectionable in its extreme poor taste. It is our opinion that better use could be made of the space occupied by your column - perhaps by someone who is more mature.

An Apology

A good many people have been expressing opinions of shock about my last column under the heading of "Postscript." I don't blame them, and feel I owe an apology to the student body for it. What I wanted to say and what I said are two entirely different things. It was tasteless, and I will admit it. I hope that I may have at least a particle of forgiveness from those who were offended.

I believe that the matter of the birth of eight puppies is one which is both interesting and exciting. I believe that in its essence there is a good deal of value to people. I do not believe that I expressed it very adequately.

I am not accustomed to having to eat my words, but for once in my life I am more than glad to do so. It is often hard to remember that, as a columnist, I have a duty towards the readers of this paper. Leave it be said that I shall not forget again.

—Jonathan Yardley

A Letter To Miller

Editor:

I have heard of and read editorials of no meaning before, but Mr. Miller's column on military reorganization is undoubtedly the worst to date.

He states that the Navy does not want its fleets run by the Joint Chiefs, as the new plan proposes. I suggest that here check the plan. It provides for reducing the Joint Chiefs to office boys of the Secretary of Defense.

He also states, without giving reasons, that the Navy promises to be hurt most if the reshuffle takes place.

There are very good reasons for the Navy's taking leading position in any interplanetary millitary evolution. Navigation has long been a function of the Navy, and its experience with navigation will be of obvious importance when extra-territorial travel is opened.

The Navy has handled the personnel and leadership requirements of maintaining organization on an isolated and often cramped piece of machinery called a ship, and surely Mr. Miller can see the worth of this experience and its application to any future military "space force". Because each service is specialized in problems and leadership requirements, it would be most wise for persons who do not realize this or even have the facts about the problem they are dealing with to refrain from comment.

Coed Rules

It is with a great deal of gratification that I see that the D.T.H. is polling the student body for their reaction to the new rules for Freshman Women proposed by the W.R.C. and the Dean of Women's office. As a student at the University and an interested party, (since all male students are vitally interested in what is happening to their female counterparts) I have, since my arrival here in the fall, been totally unable to understand the reason for the extra rules applying to the female portion of our student body.

In the last three-quarters of a century, practically every nation in the world has recognized the equality of men and women. Howadays it is ridiculous to think that a women can not compete successfully on any level with a man. The presence of women in this university is proof enough of this fact without reference to the outstanding women in all fields of endeavor. Why is it, then, that even though they are allowed only as a minority at Carolina, they must also be subject to an unfair set of rules without their consent?

I think it is a prevalent opinion, if not a recognized fact, that women mature faster than men. If this is so then we men need the strict rules and not the women. It is my contention that if a girl (or for that matter, a boy) does not know the difference between right and wrong by the time she reaches college, then there is not too much the college can do to teach her. In that case, her parents have failed, and not the University. This is the argument that we as students here have used in favor of our high degree of student freedom. As far as prevention goes, the University can not force a girl to study by closed study hours or segregation to a special dormitory, nor can it prevent her from doing anything criminal or immoral by requiring her to be in the dormitory at a certain hour at night and only permitting her to go home on certain weekends.

U.N.C. is supposed to be the leader in the realm of student freedom and responsibility. Why, then, do we restrict this freedom to only the male portion of the student body? Is it because we are Victorian enough to believe that the women can not assume the responsibility that the men have? I think nto. If such were the case, women would not be allowed to vote or participate in any other campus functions. What, then, is the reason? If anyone knows, I wish that they would enlighten me.

As for the approval of the new rules by the majority of the nursing students, I am sure that they would view the situation differently if they had been allowed to live under an equal set of regulations with the men. I am sure that they would much rather not be the sheltered, protected group of girls that the University regulations require them to be.

All this may sound a little funny coming from a student that is not directly affected by these rules, however, I have found that this opinion prevails in most of the male portion of the University with which I have talked. Therefore I see no reason for the rules now in effect, much less the new rules proposed by the W.R.C. or the Dean of Women.

Column

Editor:

So you propose to provoke thought. Well, there is just one thing we would like to know: Do you consider such trash as that bit by Yodeling Yardley on puppy birth as thought provoking? Do you call that journalism?

We have seen filth. We have seen trash. We have seen vulgarity, but we'd probably have to go to a sewage disposal or worse to get a more nauseating feeling than we did after reading that garbage.

You may call it thought provoking, but we believe the word revolting might be more appropriate.

Excuse us while we flash.

State Of The Campus

Don Furtado

This is the first part of Student Body President Don Furtado's address to the Student Legislature Thursday night.)

It is with the greatest humility and sense of responsibility that I accept the great honor and tremendous challenge which has just been officially bestowed upon me.

I realize that I will never be able to fully express my sincere thanks to my fellow students for selecting me to serve as President of our student body. I can only promise that I shall attempt to show myself worthy of your confidence.

No matter how sincerely I devote myself to my duties as President of the Student Body, no matter how diligently I work to find the solutions to our problems, without the assistance of you, the members of the Student Legislature and every member of the Carolina student community, the cause of student government cannot advance. With that cooperation, however almost nothing is impossible.

FREEDOM

Here at the University of North Carolina, we possess a long tradition of student freedom and responsibility tat is envied by counties universities throughout the nation and the world. Too often we forget the tradition, in truth, the obligation, that we have to those who came and fought before us to strive to maintain through our devoted efforts the unique Carolina concept of student freedom and responsibility in order that we may all be more cognizant of the problems which we are going to encounter next year in our continued battle for those concepts. I would like to briefly discuss a few areas in which we must be prepared to take positive action.

I believe that all of us realize the rapidity with which our University is expanding. Thirty years ago, we had 2000 students here. Now, we have 7,000 students. By 1963, we are expecting to have 10,000. This expansion brings with it many problems, for as our size increases, quite logically the number and scope of the problems of student government increases.

A phenomenon known as the "Beat Generation" made its debut on this page last week. The columnist who introduced it stated that the "Beat Generation" did not exist — that it was just a designation hit upon by today's youth to excuse their confusion.

Would that this were true—that the designation "Beat Generation" applied only to a few young people who would soon out-grow their problems. Unfortunately, the phenomenon of being "beat" is a real and basic characteristic of human existence.

The columnist who so lightly dismissed the concern of the self-styled "Beat Generation" for its own predicament would have done well to refer to that generation's manifesto. To be sure, the intellectual voices of the "Beat Generation" have not yet published their credo as such (although their near relations, England's "Angry Young Men" have recently done so; and their French counterparts, as well as the existentialist philosophers from whom they draw their themes, have been given to much public speech).

If Jack Kerouac is the current poet laureate of the "Beat Generation," then John C. Holmes is its intellectual apologist. In an article in Esquire early this year, Holmes discussed at great length the generation's origin, composition, and philosophy.

Holmes' most important declaration was that the "Beat Generation" is a profoundly religious generation; and so it is, although its religious character is evident only to its intellectual spokesmen. When the hero of On The Road, Kerouac's most successful novel, is asked why he runs from one part of the country to the other—when he is asked to explain himself—he says, "I want God to show me his face." This is probably the simplest statement of the motivation behind the seemingly pointless and sometimes negative activities of the most dedicated members of the "Beat Generation."

This is a religious movement because it is dedicated to the search for the relationship of Man to God, and this search is the business of all religion. The active members of the "Beat Generation," whether they are delinquents, artists, or critics, are all engaged in some attempt to reconcile the spiritual with the material.

Every human being is potentially a member of the "Beat Generation." Human life itself is, in an anthropomorphical figure of speech, an experiment in the combination of materiality with meaning.

As soon as "the world is too much with us," we are "beat": at the moment when a human being becomes conscious of the disparity between the real and the ideal, he is "beat"; and when this consciousness becomes as heightened and universal as it is rapidly becoming, to modernize Gertrude Stein's famous baptizing of the Lost Generation, "we are all a Beat Generation."

And it should be noted in postscript that being "beat" is not merely a stage. What happens is that the human organism makes compromises, utilizing psychological mechanisms in the betrayal of its own ideals; thus, a person "adjusts" to the pragmatic user of this world, sometimes with little difficulty. This "adjustment" seems to become more and more uneasy.

The office of Central Records has released the scholastic averages for the fall of 1957. The averages are for the men's and women's dorms.

Steele was the dorm with the highest men's average, a high C. The leading women's dorm was McIver which also had a high C average.

These averages are computed on the quality point bases. That is, 3.000 is an A, 2.000 is a B, 1.000 is a C and all below the are either Ds or Fs.

The averages are as follows.

Pre-Professional Students To Meet

Students from throughout the state who plan to go into the study of medicine and dentistry will meet here today.

The day-long program is being sponsored by Alpha Epsilon Delta, UNC pre-medical honor society. The meeting will be held in Hill Hall on the campus.

The president of the organization, Frank W. Farrell Jr. of Lillington, has announced that the program will get underway at 9 p.m. of with registration.

Three prominent professional men will speak at the opening session at 10 a. m. They are Dr. Kenneth E. Penrod, assistant to the dean of the Duke University School of Medicine; Dr. William W. Dupertuit, assistant dean of superintendent of clinics, UNC School of Dentistry; and Dr. Nathan W. Womack, head of the Department of Surgery, UNC School of Medicine.

After lunch at Lenoir Hall, the students will visit the medical and dental facilities at UNC during the afternoon.

New Dorms

available in the new dorms. The rooms will have two closets and five overhead storage spaces with sliding doors. There will just be one dresser with indirect lighting and deep dresser drawers.

Two telephones, two water fountains and laundry rooms on each floor are among other luxeries the new mansions will offer.

Social rooms with facilities for girls are located on the first floor of the palaces. There will also be game rooms in the basement of each building along with large storage rooms.

Parking will be no problem for the new dorm residents. They will be able to park in front of the dorms and also in a new parking lot that has been built at the lower end of the football field.

By 1967 the University expects to have between 12,000 and 13,000 students. Maybe we can have a replica of the Taj Mahal built to accommodate the expected increase.

Darkhorse Tar Heels Confuse Pennant Race

By RUSTY HAMMOND
Assistant Sports Editor

Coach Walter Rabb knew all winter the task that he would face on the opening day of baseball practice. Gone was practically the entire starting line-up of last year's second place team, with only Shortstop Rog Honneycutt remaining. Absent were faces such as that of pitcher Jim Raugh, now a farmhand of the Detroit Tigers.

So, the sophomores had to come through, and at this point of the season it is safe to say that they still have to come through. Some of them already have, such as slugger Gerald Griffin, chosen outstanding outfielder in the Dixie Classic, Pitcher Wayne Young, who fanned 15 Blue Devils to help his mates over Duke 8-2 Wednesday, and John Burgwyn, now batting in the cleanup slot. Also, the juniors and seniors had to be much improved. Many were veterans, but none were starters.

Yet, the Tar Heels now are sitting on the third deck of the ACC pennant race with a 3-1 conference record, and are regarded by many as the league's surprise team. They had given so-so performances up until the Dixie Classic, when they suddenly came into the limelight, finishing as runner-up. Then they faded again, splitting a southern tour with ACC foes South Carolina and Georgia.

At the beginning of this week, the Tar Heels were in fourth place with a 1-1 record, but that isn't the half of it. There were three teams tied for the top spot with identical 3-0 slates, and Carolina was to meet two of them in the coming week. It was time for the showdown. Looking back, we see that the Tar Heels beat not one, but both of the league leaders they faced. Duke is a half game ahead only because they have won one more game. Clemson remains undefeated, but how good are the Tigers? We notice that they beat Carolina 2-1, and both of their runs in that contest were unearned. Wednesday they knocked off state 6-5, and all six of their counters were unearned, in other words, by benefit of errors. The Tigers meet Duke today, and next Friday will pay a short visit to Chapel Hill. Time will tell.

The team as a whole and individually is performing several miles above pre-season expectations. Carson Oldham is one of the league's top hitters with a .358 average, and has 10 RBI's. Al Pons is rapidly gaining a reputation for coming through with men on base. Pons has 16 RBI's to lead the league, and is hitting at an even .300 clip. Center-fielder Gerald Griffin has a .333 average to go with 4 stolen bases and 2 home runs. Jerry Nester is hittting .364 in spot appearances. There are two men in the pitching department with plenty in the win column and a goose egg in the lost column. Ben Harding is 4-0, and fireman Dave Floyd is 2-0. One of Harding's wins is a 5-3 verdict over State. Wayne Young, soph southpaw, is 2-2 but is improving rapidly as illustrated by his performance against Duke when he struck out 15.

The sweet smell of revenge drifted over Emerson Stadium after the State game, and the players must have felt a certain sense of satisfaction after beating not only the team, but the pitcher who deprived them of the Dixie Classic championship. Joe Jones, who shut them out in the DC final 4-0 on one hit, allowed two early runs in the contest played here and then closed the lid, retiring 12 batsmen in order. It appeared a replay of the final was in order. Then came the big eighth inning for the Heels, in which they scored three runs and chased Mr. Jones to the showers.

In our national pastime, baseball, much has been written about the "perfect play." It is rarely seen, especially in college baseball. The squeeze play, which consists of a runner on third breaking for home and the ball being bunted by the batter, is seldom used if ever, and only when a team needs that run badly. Obviously, the batter must bunt the ball, no matter where it is pitched, or the catcher has but to tag home (with the bases full it would be a force play) and the runner is out. Thursday, with Carson Oldham on third and the sacks full, Oldham broke for home on the pitch and Vaughn Bryson laid down a beautiful squeeze bunt, scoring Oldham. The State pitcher was so "shook" that he didn't even get Bryson at first. This play unlocked the gates, and tied the score. The pitcher, obviously shaken, delivered a good one to Rog Honneycutt who drilled it through second, driving in two more runs and winning the ball game.

The Tar Heels can take a rest from the hectic ACC flag race tonight when they play East Carolina. Tuesday night they resume the scrap for the pennant against Wake Forest at Winston-Salem. Next Friday they are at home against current league-leader Clemson.

By DAVE WIBLE

A battle royal is expected to take place on Fetzer Field this afternoon when Maryland and Carolina, the two track powerhouses of the ACC, face each other in a long awaited duel meet.

The Tar Heels are going all out for this one to avenge the bridesmaid position Maryland has forced them to take last year in the conference outdoor championships. The Terps also left the same honor for the Heels in this year's indoor championships.

Scurlock Ready

Carolina's lankly point maker Dave Scurlock has completely shaken off a ankle injury and will be ready to go full steam this afternoon much to the joy of the Tar Heels. His work today will require full steam, and probably a little more since he is entered in four events. He will start off the afternoon with the 440. Two events later, he will run in the 880. He will then trip on down to the next event, the 220. Finally, he will run in the mile relay.

The Tar Heels sweet striding distance man Wayne Bishop will get a crack at Maryland's Burr Grim in both the mile and two-mile. Fans will remember the great duel between these two at the indoor championships last March, when Grim won the two-mile in the last few yards.

Tar Heel captain Everett Whatley will also be in the mile, along with Cowles Lipfert and Fick Arthur. This will be Whatley's first chance at Grimm this year. Measles forced Whatley to scratch from the indoor championships leaving the mile crown wide open for Grimm. Llipfert will also be in the two mile.

Field Events will begin at 2 and running at 2:30. The meet will be run in the order below, with the last event, the mile relay scheduled for 3:55.

Varsity Baseball Team To Play East Carolina

Carolina's Tar Heels, winners of two ACC games in a row, tonight take a breather from the helter-skelter conference calamity as they journey to Greenville to battle the East Carolina Pirates under the lights.

The surprising Tar Heels, who now hold third place in the league, have come on fast in the past week to stamp themselevs as possible flag contenders. The Heels have a 3-1 conference record and a 10-5 overall slate. They are now on a four-game winning skein which includes South Carolina, Canisius, Duke, and State.

The Heels have four men hitting over .300 and two pitchers with unbeaten records. The batters are Gerald Griffin, Al Pons, Jerry Nester, and Carson Oldham; and the pitchers are Ben Harding and Dave Floyd.

Next week the Heels meet Wake Forest Tuesday night at Winston-Salem and Clemson is here next Friday.

Wolflets Top Frosh, 84-47

The defeat gave the Tar Babies a 1-1 record. The winners for the Tar Babies were Fred Wood in the 100, Worth Sweet in the 880, Bob Eubanks in the broad jump, and Henery Clements in the discus.

THE WINNERS

100: Fred Wood (S), 10.3. 220: John David (S), 23.8. 440: Bill Daughtry (S), 52.4. 880: Worth Sweet (C), 2:01.3. Mile: Art Reed, (S), 4:36. 2-Mile: Art Reed (S), 10:-27.3. High Jump: Bill Michael (S), 6'. Low Hurdles: Claud Gibson (S), 25.6. High Hurdles: Claud Gibson (S), 16.3.

MURAL MEETING

There will be a meeting of all those interested in participating in the Big Four Rod and Gun meet Monday in room 301-A Woollen Gym.

Gamecocks Crushed By Netters 9-0

COLUMBIA (AP) — Undefeated North Carolina swept by South Carolina 9-0 in an Atlantic Coast Conference tennis match here Friday.

The Tar Heels, strong contenders for the ACC tennis title, were forced to three sets in only one match.

The setback gave the Gamecocks a 3-5 record.

Women's Tennis Today

Carolina coeds will be the hosts this morning and afternoon for the Annual Women's Tennis Day which will begin on the varsity tennis courts at 10:30 a.m.

Six four-girl teams have been entered in the tournament which will feature singles and doubles play. Competing with the Tar Heels will be girls from Atlantic Christian, Duke, Elon, Meredith, and Peace.

Pairings will be made at 10:30 a.m. with play scheduled to begin at 2.

Golfers Defeat Davidson Club

Led by a five under par 67 by Joe Callicott, the Carolina golf team won its sixth straight victory by defeating Davidson 24½-2½ here yesterday.

The undefeated linkmen showed no mercy by winning all the individual and team matches. The low man for Davidson was Sam Sloan with a 73.

This afternoon, the Tar Heels will be hosts to a conference foe, South Carolina.

McGuire Presents Trophies

Coach Frank McGuire presented individual trophies to the members of the Winston Dormitory Intramural champion basketball team and spoke informally at their club meeting Thursday night.

Receiving the trophies were Wayne Young, Don Redding, Frank Berry, Winky McDavid, Ron Marquette, Al Resch, Maurice Rhodes and Bill Edison.

Pepper Tice Is New Editor Of Quarterly

Tice, whose full name is John K. Tice, is a graduate student in the Philosophy Dept. He will replace Christian Lefebure at the top of the Quarterly's masthead .

"It is my feeling," said Tice of his plans for the magazine, "that the present trends in editorial policy of The Quarterly have made for a magazine which, because of its merit and its breadth of scope, has demonstrated a high degree of responsibility to the University on the part of the staff."

He said he favored "continuing this policy with the belief that it will serve to encourage young artists and scholars as well as offer the public some of the better contemporary short fiction, poetry and creative scholarship."

Anyone who is interested in working on the staff has been urged by Tice to contact him before the end of the semester, "so that I have a staff ready to begin work at the beginning of the fall semester."

While an undergraduate at Carolina Tice made Phi Beta Kappa and was a varsity swimmer. He majored in English.

The Quarterly editor is appointed by an advisory board composed of five faculty members and the outgoing editor.

New Staff Member

Ken Friedman, pre-law major, from Asbury Park, N. J. has been appointed assistant feature editor of the Daily Tar Heel by Davis Young, feature editor.

Friedman is a member of the Student Legislature, the State Student Legislature, Student Party Sergeant-at-arms, a delegate to the NSA regional conference and former vice president of the Tau Epsilon Phi pledge class.

Legislature Roundup; First Meeting Is Active

By DAVE JONES

Thursday's night's session of the student legislature had two separate and distinct parts. The first was the formal swearing in of officers, the inaugural address, and the reorganization. The second part was the "new business."

By tradition, the chairman of the Student Council swears in new Student Body officers. Jim Long performed his duties in that capacity with dignity and solemnity. First to be sworn was Charlie Gray, then Paddy Wall. Ralph Cummings automatically became the speaker of the Legislature when he took his oath from Long. At that moment Ex-Vice President Furtado rose, and invited Cummings to assume the chair. He did so.

Don Furtado's oath and address concluded that part of the ceremonies concerning the Executive branch of Student Government. Speaker Cummings then administered the oath of office to the 27 new or reelected legislators, while the guests and the rest of the body stood.

The Speaker announced his appointment of John Brooks as parliamentarian. Then the elected officers were chosen. The University Party has a majority of seats in the 25th assembly, therefore they elect their candidates in caucus prior to the meeting.

The Student Party had only one candidate for any office. They nominated Gary Greer to oppose Charlie Pittman as Speaker Pro Tempore. Pittman was elected. All other offices were chosen by acclamation. They are, Doug Kellam, clerk; Craven Brewer, Chairman Ways and Means; Bob Turner, Chairman Finance; Neil Bowden, Chairman Rules; and David Grigg, Sergeant at Arms.

RW-25-1, the first bill of the session was introduced by Roger Foushee (SP). It is a resolution approving the constitution of the UNC Amateur Radio Club. Rep. Foushee requested Special Orders (immediate consideration by the body acting as a committee as a whole). It was granted and discussion began.

Jim Scott of the Radio Club spoke to outline his plans for the club for the next few weeks. In reply to the question, 'Why must we approve your charter tonight?' Scott said that the club would like to elect officers and to draw up a request for an appropriation by next week.

Rep. John Brooks (SP) discussed several technical points in the Speakers Announced For Commencement

Editor Norman Cousins and Theologian Albert C. Outler have been announced as the main speakers for UNC's 164th Commencement Program on June 1 and 2.

Cousins, author and editor of the Saturday Review of Literature for more than 15 years, will deliver the commencement address at graduation exercises in Kenan Stadium on Monday night, June 2.

Gov. Luther Hodges and President William C. Friday of the Consolidated University of North Carolina will be present to confer degrees on the graduates. Presiding at the traditional exercises will be Chancellor William B. Aycock.

Dr. Outler, a former member of the Duke University faculty, will give the baccalaureate sermon on Sunday morning, June 1, in Memorial Hall. He is professor of theology in the Perkins School of Theology at Southern Methodist University in Dallas, Texas.

Class reunions, receptions, concerts and awards programs will be other events of commencement weekend in Chapel Hill. The program gets underway on Saturday, May 31, with class reunion suppers and a reception for all seniors, parents, alumni and faculty.

This year's reunion classes, in addition to the Old Students Club which meets yearly, will be '08, '13, '18, '23, '28, '33, 38, '43, '48 and '53.

New officers of the General Alumni Association will be installed at the annual Alumni Luncheon on June 2. Candidates will be nominated at an Alumni Assembly on April 24 in Chapel Hill, and balloting is carried out by mail.

Special exercises on the afternoon of June 2 are planned by the Schools of Dentistry, Medicine, Nursing and Pharmacy. The awarding of Air Force and Navy ROTC commissions will also be held during the afternoon prior to final graduate exercises.

Cousins joined the Saturday Review staff in 1940 as executive editor, having served previously on the staffs of Current History Magazine and the New York Post.

A native of Union, N. J., he studied at Columbia University's Teachers College. Honorary degrees have been awarded to him by American University, Boston University, Colby College, Denison University, Elmira College and Rikon College.

During 1951 Cousins visited India, Pakistan and Ceylon lecturing under U. S. government sponshorship, and two years later was Japan-America Exchange Lecturer. Among awards bestowed upon him is the Thomas Jefferson Award for Advancement of Democracy in Journalism, given in 1948.

Cousins' writings include "The Good Inheritance: The Democratic Chance," "Talks with Nehru," and "Who Speaks For Man?" He has edited "A Treasury of Democracy" and "An Anthology of the Poetry of Liberty."

Dr. Outler, a native of Thomasville, Ga., did his undergraduate work at Wofford College, received his B.D. degree from Emory University and his Ph.D. from Yale

University alumni will hold their annual assembly here April 24.

At a luncheon meeting in Carolina Inn James W. Poole, chairman of the Alumni Annual Giving program will give a report. This will be the sixth annual report. In the first five year this program has given over $250,000 to the University.

Alumni President James Webb will preside over the business meeting at a dinner meeting at the Carolina Inn. Candidates for officers of the association to serve during the 1958 and 1959, will be nominated.

The nominating committee met last weekend to select a slate of nominees. They will submit their suggestions for candidates at the dinner meeting.

The dinner meeting will feature a discussion on "The University Studies Itself To See What It Will Look Like in 1970." The discussion will be led by Chancelor Aycock with other University officials participating.

Ten meetings will also be held that day for the class reunion committees. These reunions will be held during graduation at the first of June. There will be about ten classes holding their reunions at this time. The classes will be those whose last number in their date is either three or eight.

The class of 1925 has already started working on their reunion project. They are going to print a booklet that will feature stories, pictures and cartoons written by that class especially for this booklet.

Jordan Named To Succeed Scott In Senate

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Hodges yesterday announced the appointment of B. Everett Jordan of Saxapahaw as U. S. senator to succeed the late W. Kerr Scott.

Jordan, 61, a long-time worker in the state Democratic party, currently is national Democratic committeeman. Hodges pointed out that Jordan, a textile manufacturer, was named state Democratic chairman by Scott during his term as governor.

Hodges said he was pleased that Jordan had accepted the appointment.

J-School Prof Will Appear On TV Monday

William Caldwell, Assistant professor of journalism at UNC, will be featured on "This is Carolina," a series of interviews with outstanding persons associated with the University. The program will be carried by WUNC tomorrow night at 8:30.

Caldwell will discuss "The Press and World Affairs." In his discussion he will cover such topics as the accuracy of today's coverage of the news and the problem of news censorship.

He came to UNC after working with the Minneapolis Daily Star and with the United States Information Service. He served with the U. S. I. S. in Sicily and also served as an information officer in the U. S. Embassy in Rome.

NSA Issues Report On Coed Closing Hours

A United States National Student Association report sent yesterday to The Daily Tar Heel, indicated that in schools of similar structure and size to the University of North Carolina, none possessed lights out and closed study regulations.

In some of the schools earlier hours exist for freshman girls during the week, but none had earlier closing hours than 10:30. Weekend closing hours ranged from 12:30 until 2 p.m.

Permission could be granted to freshmen to stay out later than the closing hours in some schools.

Some of the colleges whose rules were taken into account in the report were Indiana, Ohio State, Minnesota, Skidmore, Miami, Michigan, and Brigham Young.

Tri Delt Scholarship

Miss Bee Robertson, Service Projects chairman for the Tri Delt Scholarships, has urged all people who have applications for the Tri Delt scholarships to return them to the Dean of Women's office by Monday afternoon at closing hour.

Tuesday Evening Set For Symphony Concert

The UNC Symphony Orchestra under the baton of conductor Earl Slocum will present a concert in Hill Music Hall on Tuesday evening at 8:00 o'clock. Marjorie Still Farrell, pianist, will be the featured soloist in the Rachmaninoff Piano Concerto No. 2 in C Minor.

This is the 17th concert of the 1957-58 Tuesday Evening Series, sponsored by the University's Department of Music. The public is invited at no admission charge.

The program will open with the Prelude to Humperdinck's Opera Hansel and Gretel, which was first performed in 1893. The second number on the program will be the featured work, the Rachmaninoff Second Piano Concerto with Mrs. Farrell as pianist. A popular work, the concerto is difficult yet highly effective music.

Mrs. Farrell is well known to Chapel Hill audiences, having given in the last few years three recitals in Hill Music Hall as well as a Petite Musicale recital. The pianist began her studies at the age of 7; among her former teachers are Edwin Hughes of New York City and William S. Newman, chairman of the UNC Piano Department.

Mrs. Farrell is currently studying with Jan P. Schinhan of the University Department of Music. Among her awards have been the Percy Craven Weeks Award for 1957 and the Federated Music Club Scholarship for 1957-58. The pianist was soloist with the North Carolina Symphony in 1954, playing the Liszt Concerto in E-flat Major, No. 1.

Following intermission, the orchestra will perform the Grand Canyon Suite by Ferde Grofe. This orchestral suite is one of several by the American composer and was written in 1931. Although the entire work is often performed, the movement, "On the Trail' is the most frequently heard.

Pi Kappa Alpha's Pick Their 'Dream Girl'

Miss Pope is a junior at UNC where she is majoring in primary education.

The Dream Girl Weekend" started Friday night with a combo party at the Goat Hill Country Club. Dick Clark's combo provided the music.

Saturday afternoon and Saturday night the group enjoyed a party at Smith's Lake near Durham. The evening was climaxed by a steak supper Saturday night.

The election of officers of the fraternity was recently held. Mason Wilking of Durham was elected president and Everett James of Robersonville was chosen vice-president. Tommy Alexander of Statesville was named treasurer.

Kenan Prof To Attend Meet In Atlanta, Ga.

A UNC Kenan Professor will go to Atlanta, Ga., Wednesday as part of a North Carolina delegation for a discussion of the value of the humanities to business and industry.

The Tar Heel representatives among the group of southern industrialists and scholars will be: Dr. Sturgis E. Leavitt, Kenan Professor of Spanish at UNC; John Harden of Greensbiro, Burlington Industries Vice-President; and Dr. Allan H. Gilbert, English professor at Duke University.

Dr. Gilbert is chairman of the Southern Humanities Conference, sponsor of the Atlanta meeting. Nine representatives of industry and six educators will discuss promotion of "an intellectual South which will keep with the industrial South."

Music To Start Hour Earlier On WUNC-FM

For the first time in its broadcasting history, WUNC in Chapel Hill will go on the air one hour earlier (previous time—7 p.m., new time—6 p.m.).

Filling in the extra hour will be programs of semi-classical and classical popular music, plus a five-minute news summary at 6:55.

WUNC is an FM radio station, 91.5 on your dial. It is operated and staffed by students at the University working on a voluntary basis. Studios and transmitter are located on the University campus.

Journalism Award Goes To UNC Alum

Vermont C. Royster, senior associate editor of the Wall Street Jiurnal and UNC graduate, has won the Sigma Delta Chi editorial writing award.

The organization is the national professional journalism fraternity and makes annual awards in 15 categories for outstanding work is press, television ,radio and journalistic research.

Royster's award was based on an editorial entitled "The Tragedy of Little Rock. It was written following mob violence over school desegregation and the arrival of Federal troops on the Scene.

He stated that what happened at Little Rock might have been averted if men had acted differently. He added that there had been too much hasty action by all concerned.

Royster won the Pulitzer Prize for editorial writing in 1953.

Dramatique Tryouts Set For Tomorrow

Tryouts for the fourth Petite Dramatique will be held Monday afternoon from noon until 6 p.m. in Roland Parker I of Graham Memorial.

The presentation represents something in the way of an experiment in the nature of poetry reading and poetry dramatization.

Sipp announced that those who wanted to try out could try out as readers, as actors, and also those with any ideas for dramatization are invited.

Sipp added that the listenings would be strictly private, and those who wish to try out should bring their own material.

Robert Frost's "death of a Hired Man," Robert Browning's poetry, and Platonic Dialogues are among the suggestions that have been taken into consideration for production.

The evening's offering will be produced by Seamon Gottlieb, chairman of the Petite Dramatique Committee of Graham Memorial Activities Board.

Those Rules Again

The Women's Residence Council will, Tuesday night, hear arguments on both sides of the fence about the new coed regulations that they have proposed.

Up until now, the Council has argued that the freshmen women need them, that the Nursing School wants them, and that they are standard for the Woman's Colleges in the area.

All these arguments are specious. The freshmen women who have been on the campus have proved by their academic record and by their social dignity that these rules are not necessary.

They have proved that the rules concerning lights out and closed study are more than unnecessary; they might hurt.

The Nurses want the rules because they represent a liberalization of the rules that they presently suffer under, and the head of the School of Nursing should only be considered as one piece of advice about the new rules. Her advice should not weigh too heavily, since from what reports The Daily Tar Heel is able to get, Freshman nurses possess a lower scholastic average than do the other freshman women. Moreover, the Nursing School has had a set of strict rules ever since it was founded in 1951.

One must also consider that the admission standards will not go down, according to the Dean of Women, and consequently the school has no reason to believe that the new freshman women next year will be any less capable of handling their responsibilities than the ones who are already here or who have been here.

The reason that other schools in the area possess this type of rules is specious, since these other schools are girl's schools and not a coeducational university. As Student Body President Don Furtado put it, "This is not St. Mary's, Randolph-Macon or Agnes Scott."

Moreover, in colleges in the United States of similar structure to the University, according to a N.S.A. report, none have such things as lights out regulations and closed study hours. This is in direct violation of individual freedom and responsibility. It is above all unnecessary for students as carefully chosen as those freshman women at the University.

Lastly comes the question of who wants the new regulations. To this the answer is that very few people do want these regulations. A majority of the coeds would not like to see these rules passed. An overwhelming majority of the men do not want these rules. The Student Legislature has voiced its opposition to the rules, and newly elected Student Body President Don Furtado has come out strongly and unequivocally against the proposals.

Hence, the Women's Residence Council is in the position of not representing its constituency. It is in the position of having the majority of its backers on these rules being the office of the Dean of Women and the School of Nursing.

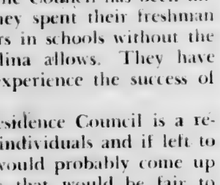
The majority of the Council has been unfortunate in that they spent their freshman and sophomore years in schools without the freedom that Carolina allows. They have not been able to experience the success of freedom.

The Women's Residence Council is a responsible group of individuals and if left to their own devices would probably come up with a set of rules that would be fair to all, and not so stringent as those already suggested.

Unfortunately at the present time they are unable to be on their own, since there is a non-voting member of the Council in the person of a representative from the Dean of Women's office.

President Furtado came out yesterday in favor of eliminating this member from the Council.

He was right in so doing, since student government depends for its success on student responsibility, and the current presence of a member of the Dean of Women's office is a denial of student responsibility.



All other organs of student government function successfully without the interference of the administration; the Women's Residence Council as a responsible group can do likewise.

The Women's Residence Council can forge a new era of freedom and responsibility on the UNC campus or they can fail their constituents.

The result will be known shortly.

The Daily Tar Heel

The official student publication of the Publication Board of the University of North Carolina, where it is published daily except Monday and examination and vacation periods and summer terms. Entered as second class matter in the post office in Chapel Hill, N. C., under the Act of March 8, 1870. Subscription rates: mailed, $4 per year, $2.50 a semester; delivered, $6 a year, $3.50 a semester.

State Of The Campus

Don Furtado

HONOR SYSTEM

Recently, our Honor System underwent quite an extensive remodelling. A change had been necessitated by the tremendous growth of our student population, for it was necessary to find some way by which students could recognize their close relationship with the all-pervading code which is the nucleus of our Carolina way of life. Within the next two weeks, we must conduct an all-out campaign of education among the student body in order that those who live under our new system, the students, may return next year with a full understanding of the exact nature of the restructured councils. Work has already been begun and I hope that before the end of this semester, every student will have a working knowledge of the operation of the Councils.

The second problem with which I am concerned is our need for a new student union. The plans for our present union were drawn up in the 1920s, when our student population was less than 2000. As our campus has expanded, it has become obvious to everyone that Graham Memorial is woefully lacking in facilities and space. This problem is heightened by the fact that Chapel Hill itself offers only a few recreation facilities, unlike such towns as Raleigh, Winston-Salem, Durham, or Greensboro. In addition, as our campus has expanded, it has moved away from the areas in which the union is now situated, making it very inconvenient and often impractical for student use.

STUDENT UNION

All of us recognize the need for a new, more centrally located, better equipped and larger union building. The mere realization of this fact, however, is not going to acquire that union for us. It is going to require the unselfish and diligent efforts of students, faculty, administration, and alumni to get a new union.

On Monday, the report of the Building Committee of the Graham Memorial Board of Directors will be presented to the Chancellor. It is the result of a great deal of hard work, but it is only the first step on our road toward a new union. Each additional step will come as a result of continued hard work and determination.

A third problem which has faced us for several years here is the social plight of the dormitory man's activities. Present rules prohibit him from taking dates into dormitory social rooms. Because of the limited, almost non-existent reception and social facilities of Chapel Hill and the University, this leaves him in a pitiable situation when he wishes to date, or even bring his mother into the dormitory. I feel that this social vacuum is one of the direct causes for the lack of dormitory spirit and unity which is so evident at times. This deplorable situation can be remedied by the institution of a men's dormitory visiting agreement in those dormitories where it is physically possible. Primarily, it would be the job of the IDC to investigate, plan, and enforce such an agreement, and I have a great deal of faith in their ability to work in this area. To acquire the agreement, however, will require the interest and cooperation of numerous organizations and individuals.

There is a fourth problem of perhaps an even more serious nature which the expansion of our University has brought on—the use of a self-liquidating plan of dormitory construction. While recognizing the Universities need for additional dormitories, we also recognize the fact that students are not financially able, nor morally obligated at a state institution to absorb the cost of dormitory construction through spiralling room rents. It is necessary that student government use every method that it can find to show its aversion to such a policy, and thus to help bring to an end the self-liquidating policy.

FRATERNITIES

A fifth problem area is our fraternities and sororities. A large segment of the campus has fraternity or sorority affiliations. As our student body grows, it is only logical to assume that there will be an increase in the number of students desiring to join these groups. To meet this demand, old fraternities and sororities must expand and new ones must be brought in. At present, this is very difficult. This past year a number of fraternities indicated an interest in coming on campus while several already here stated that they desired very much to move to new locations where they would have more adequate facilities. Because of several state statutes and town ordinances concerning zoning of fraternity areas, both of these movements met sudden death. A thorough investigation into the present restrictive ordinances should be undertaken in an attempt to find a means of providing for our expansion. This is an area in which the IFC and the Pan-Hellenic Council, working with the president of the Student Body can do a great deal of progressive work.

That is only one area in which the IFC can and should show its maturity and leadership. This past year, an incident occurred which was spectacularized by a number of newspapers. It did bring to light, however, the fact that the IFC must assume in a more positive manner the responsibility for enforcing its present rules, strengthening the IFC court, and making each fraternity member cognizant of his responsibility to the entire campus. I have great faith in the potential of this body and I am looking forward to a year in which the IFC will assume that position of able leadership of which it is capable.

Education

Louis M. Hacker

Revolt is not taught in the classroom. The youthful Alexander Hamilton was not made a rebel by his teachers at King's College or the young Shelley by his tutors at University College. Youth becomes rebellious when injustice and inequalities are abroad in the land, leaders are corrupt and society has no confidence in itself. It is, in consequence, the status of learning in our contemporary world that is alarming. Educators, as scholars and teachers, have been and continue under a cloud of suspicion. Because of undue concern with security, particularly in the sciences, learning is being regarded as a sensitive area. What Professor Edward Shils so aptly calls "publicity"—free access to scientific knowledge, the rights of publication, open discussion in conferences, and travel by scholars and scientists to other lands and from other lands to ours—is being restricted. Dubious witnesses are being given credence; youthful associations are being exposed to demonstrate unreliability; legislators and self-appointed groups continue to voice their want of confidence in teachers.

Teachers have been asked to sign special loyalty oaths; to purge themselves before investigating committees by giving names of associates; and to surrender an important protection against self-incrimination — the safeguards afforded by the Fifth Amendment. They spend their time and substance defending themselves against calumniators, some of whom are engaged in their traffic professionally. Only too frequently, the administrators of universities have not defended their colleagues under attack; worse still, they have not had the courage to restore to academic life men who have been discharged from teaching posts simply because they refused to answer questions about their private lives by legislative committees. There is a virtual blacklist existing in the American university world that is as mean and cruel as any inquisition.

Why do I raise these uncomfortable questions? It is because I believe that neither universities, nor in fact our free society, can survive and knowledge advance unless we can guarantee to scholars and scientists both publicity and privacy. And unless we are to accept beyond question that universities, their faculties and professional associations, should protect themselves against incompetence and the second rate, the very heart of the principle of free inquiry is surrendered.

REVIEW — PLAYMAKER ONE-ACT PLAYS

It is worth noting that the Playmakers are most entertaining when they least intend to be. The "workshop" productions and their student written and produced one-acters are consistently the most interesting things the Playmakers do, even though they are underemphasized in comparison with the major productions.

Such was the case with the bill of student one-act plays presented this weekend. They were obviously produced on a shoestring and with a minimum of rehearsal and they were given very little publicity; yet the plays were interesting in spite of this.

Gabrielle Roepke's "The Dangers of Great Literature" was the most successful production of the evening. The farce was excellently directed by Page Williams.

The most provocative play of the evening was George Hill's "Mossell and the Laurel Bush," a folk-fantasy with a well-executed psychological plot. Folk drama seems to be most often represented today by the "symphonic dramas," which are mainly tourist attractions and not art. Hill's play was both folk play and art, and a successful combination of the two.

In "The Freudian Years," Kenneth Callendar crammed his unobtrusive plot with every neurosis, psychosis, complex, etc. in the analyst's case-book, and he came out with a succession of sometimes funny jokes. After a while, the point became rather obvious. It was good fun.

The fact that the Playmaker front office obviously relegates these productions to the status of second class productions makes it pointless to review anything more than the scripts. Each of these plays deserved more time and money than it got; the result was that only "The Dangers of Great Literature" came close to being as successful as it might well have been.

In the light of the quality and interest of these plays, perhaps the Playmaker directors should re-orient their thinking toward future productions of student plays.

TELEVISION

4:30 P.M. — Channel 2 — Twentieth Century

Walter Cronkite narrates a half-hour film on "Mussolini," and his rise to power in pre-war Italy.

8 P.M. — Channel 2 — Ed Sullivan

Vivian Blaine and David Wayne, stars of the new Broadway musical "Say, Darling," are the principal guests. The rest of the line-up is about the same as always: something for the kiddies, something for the family pet, something for idiots from six to sixty. Nothing for nobody else.

8 P.M. — Channel 5 — Steve Allen

Besides the regular cohorts — who are individually and collectively the funniest thing on TV — Steve also presents Bob Hope, Patrice Munsel, and Ray Anthony. Ed Sullivan will probably get the bigger audience tonight, as always, because there are more kiddies, dogs, goldfish, and idiots than discerning human beings in the world. Allen still has the better show nine Sundays out of ten.

They Made The News

Davis Young

Four new executive officers for the year 1958-59 were sworn in at the Student Legislature meeting of April 17. The oath of office was administered to each of the four by Jim Long, new chairman of the Student Council.

Installed were Don Furtado, president of the student body; Ralph Cummings, vice president of the student body; Paddy Wall, secretary of the student body and Charlie Gray, treasurer of the student body.

Furtado is a 19 year old junior from Garner. He is a former vice president of the student body, president of the sophomore class and secretary of the freshman class.

He has been a member of the President's Cabinet and the Chancellor's Cabinet and a member of the Consolidated University Student Council. He is at Carolina on an NROTC scholarship, is a member of the Order of the Grail and the Phi Gamma Delta fraternity.

Cummings, the new vice president, is a 19 year old sophomore from Raleigh. He is a past chairman of the Elections Board and of the Traffic Advisory Commission. He served as president of the Alpha Tau Omega pledge class and as an orientation counselor.

He has been in the Student Legislature, the President's Cabinet the YMCA and his membership is numbered in Phi Eta Sigma and the Order of the Grail.

The biggest news story of the week was the new set of rules for freshmen coeds proposed by the Women's Residence Council under the leadership of Lillian Shannonhouse.

The new rules met stiff opposition all over the campus with the exception of the Nurse's Dorms which endorsed them. A poll conducted by The Daily Tar Heel showed that almost 100% of the men questioned and over 60% of the coeds who filled out the questionaires were against the new restrictions.

On Thursday night in the Student Legislature, Representative Gary Greer proposed a resolution to have the Student Legislature go on record as opposing the new regulations. It was passed by a large majority.

The future promised continued campus interest on the "touchy" proposals.

Glancing over the week ,we find that The Daily Tar Heel hired an Assistant Feature Editor in the person of Ken Friedman of Asbury Park, N. J.

On Tuesday night, thirteen new members were tapped into the Order of the Golden Fleece, the highest honorary for men.

Those tapped included Charles Ashford an outstanding student juror and a member of the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity; Wayne Staton Bishop, one of Carolina's outstanding athletes and a member of the Men's Honor Council and Jean Pierre Boissavit, a student from Bordeaux, France, who has done much towards furthering the cause of better international relations during his stay here.

John Brooks has excelled as a debator and legislator and has been indispensible as a parliamentarian; Herman Godwin, who has been a guiding force behind the scenes in student government and who is now chairman of the Orientation for 1958; and Robin Hinson, a graduate student who has been editor of the Law Review.

Jesse Weimar Jones is an alumnus of this University and the editor of the Franklin Press; Buddy Payne has set an outstanding example for all to follow as the captain of the football team and Harvey Peck who has an academic rating of one in the Junior Class.

Clifton Hunter Tillman has been an outstanding participant in the musical organizations; John Whitaker is the "able and competent manager of the college publication"; John Whitty has been a leader in dramatic groups and Jan Philip Schinhan, who has been a leading influence on students, both as a professor and as an advisor.

Thursday night saw both the installation of Furtado as President and the end of office for Sonny Evans who held the same position. During his administration Evans had proposed many revisions and reforms and this week was cited by campus leaders for his outstanding job.

wording of the constitution and after pointing out what he felt to be oversights on the part of the club, he moved that the rules committee have an opportunity to work with the club to help them work out the necessary changes.

The passage of this motion immediately killed all debate on the bill, and turned it over to Neil Bowden's (SP) Rules committee.

The second bill of the evening was introduced by Gary Greer (SP). It was a resolution regarding the Freshman Coed rules. Special orders were given to this bill, and discussion began.

The author spoke first, presenting his ideas. "The rules . . . would inhibit the social and educational activity by restricting their choice of residence, and infringe upon their personal rights by enforcing a closed study and lights out policy."

Greer stated, further, that he felt that there was no justification for these rules since the freshmen women have shown in the past that they can and will assume the responsibilities which accompany freedom, and that since admissions standards will not be lowered there would be no reason to deviate from the traditionally liberal policies of Carolina.

Discussion was bogged down for a few minutes while the question of whether or not the legislature has the authority to pass legislation which would be binding upon the Women' residence council, and if so would there be another bill from the same source forcing them to liberalize their rules. (The Greer bill is only a resolution stating the legislature's opinion and in no way makes an effort to bind the WRC to abide by its provisions.)

Rep. Foushee discussed this question and read the provisions of the Student Government Constitution. He did not make a definite statement, but left the individual members to interpret Art. I, Section I. It states "Supreme Legislative power in the Student Body shall be vested in a Student Legislature."

At this point Speaker Cummings interrupted and asked that the discussion be brought back to the question at hand: is the body in favor of rules which apply only to freshmen girls. A motion of previous question came from the body. It carried and a vote was taken. The resolution carried by 28 to 9.

The designation RW-25-3 went to a bill written by Dennis Rinzler (SP) favoring the building of a paved walk between the north corner of Raleigh Street and Raleigh Road to Lenoir Hall.

The fourth bill of the session was introduced by John Brooks (SP). It will amend the appointing proceedure for members of the selections board that picks our State Student Legislature representatives. These two bills and the Radio Club bill will be acted on next Thursday.

Next Thursday the legislature will meet at 7:00 because of certain necessary orientation proceedures for new members, and because the speaker will make appointments to committees.

HAPPY HOLIDAY
. . . painting at St. Helena

Holiday Work Is Fun

By MORRIS GODFREY

Who says that scraping paint off walls and painting can't be fun—especially at the beach? Seven students from UNC found out that work can be combined with play during the Easter Holidays.

These lucky seven were the guests of Penn Community Center, Mr. and Mrs. Courtney Siceloff, directors of the Center, and residents of St. Helena Island, across the inlet from Parris Island, South Carolina.

This "work and play" project was coordinated by Miss Anne Queen of the YWCA and was jointly sponsored by the UNC YMCA, YWCA and the Cosmopolitan Club. Those participating in the project were Anne Queene, Sipra Bose, Nola Hatten, Virginia Jones, Jean Pierre Boissavit, John Casparis, Thal Elliot and Gene Fales.

The work started in the Cope Building which was formerly used as a workshop. The building is being prepared to house the clinic and sales shop for the residents of St. Helena. The students scraped the walls and the hallways for the clinic and then started painting in the two rooms.

The Penn Community Center was started as a school by a group of Quakers in Pennsylvania. Today it is used as a conference center and community center for the residents of St. Helena.

The students stopped their laborious task to take part in the various activities with the natives of the island on Easter Sunday. They attended the communion service at the First African Church and went to the blessing of a home on the island.

About 90 per cent of the population of the island is Negro, so the group heard many old and original spirituals. For many of the students it was their first opportunity to hear Gulla, the primitive language of the island.

Participating in the group as an observer was Mrs. Mumtaz Jahan Haider, president of Muslim University in Aligarh, India. She is in the United States under a leaders training program sponsored by the U. S. State Department.

lived in Rome, Italy where his father was with the Food Administration Organization of the United Nations from 1951 to 1954. His parents now live in Washington, D. C.

Before entering the French university in September, he will attend a 30-day orientation program at Paris.

Haig will receive his degree here in June. He has been named to Phi Beta Kappa and Phi Eta Sigma, honorary scholastic fraternities. He is also a member of the ATO and has participated in the recent Carolina Symposium.

Fulbright fellowships are sponsored by the U. S. Government on a reciprocal arrangement to foster goodwill among the participating countries. The fellowship provides the student with necessary books, travel and a stipend for one year's study.

Correction

Friday's Daily Tar Heel carried a story in the society column about the Phi Kappa Alpha fraternity naming Miss Catherine Ann Green as queen of their Rose Ball.

The article should have read the Pi Kappa Phi Fraternity named Miss Catherine Anne Greer Rose Ball queen.

There are more ways than one to be a leader

AS OUR NAME clearly indicates, we are in the telephone business.

We own and operate 1,696 central offices in 30 states.

We manufacture telephones, switches, relays and other communications equipment, for our own use—and for the 4,400 other "independent" telephone companies in the United States.

And while — by the yardstick of size — we cannot claim to be the leader, we find ample opportunity for leadership in other ways.

Take the telephone pictured here as an example. It is our own design.

At first glance, it may look quite a bit like other modern telephones.

But you will find three important differences.

The surfaces just above the dial on each side are contoured to guide the mouthpiece-receiver or "handset" into place unerringly.

An extra quarter of an inch is added to the tapered mouthpiece and earpiece.

And the cradle which receives the "handset" is lower in front than in the rear.

The result: It is almost impossible for an "off-the-hook" interruption to service to happen.

This is, as we said, one example of how we seek to do whatever we do better than it has been done before.

And this same ambition guides every phase of our operation, from the development of better equipment for telephone central offices, to the courtesy-training of the people who represent us in dealing with our customers.

By JIM HARPER

Coach Dale Ransom's varsity trackmen yesterday dropped their first home meet of the season to the visiting University of Maryland squad, 90-41.

Individual honors for the afternoon went to the Terp's Ed Cooke, who copped first place in the shot put, javelin, and discus. Also adding to the overall Maryland total was Don Whittaker, who took a first in the 100 and 220 yard dashes.

Carolina's Dave Scurlock won the 440 yard dash, in a photo finish with Bill Wolfe of Maryland. In the distance events, Wayne Bishop took first in the 2 mile event, and placed second in the mile run.

Two more meets are scheduled for Fetzer Field this season, a dual meet with Virginia Wednesday and a triangular meet with State and Wake Forest Saturday.

In conjunction with the Thursday Virginia meet there will be a reunion of the Carolina track teams of 1910-14 coached by Nat Cartwell.

THE SUMMARY

Heels Beat E.C. 12-3

Carolina beat East Carolina 12-3 last night in Greenville under the lights.

State's victory over Duke gives both teams a 4-2 record in the conference, and moves the Tar Heels into undisputed possession of second place with a 3-1 conference record.

State Beats Duke 4-2

RALEIGH (AP) — Duke lefthander Dick Burton had a no-hitter going for six innings here Saturday but it was spoiled in the seventh when North Carolina State rallied for four runs to gain a 4-2 decision.

The win snapped a two-game losing streak for State. It left both teams with a 4-2 Atlantic Coast Conference records.

Speedy Dick Hunter broke Burton's spell in the seventh by beating out a grounder to shortstop. A fielder's choice on Russ Casteen's grounder to second forced Hunter. The the Wolfpack proceeded to wipe out Burton's fine effort as the next five batters shelled out hits.

Golfers Beat S. C. 24½-2½

The Carolina varsity golf team rolled to its 7th connsecutive victory without a defeat today by beating the South Carolina Gamecocks 24½-2½.

Billy Thornton shot a two-under par 69 to gain honors as medalist for the match once again. Medalist for the Gamecocks was Bob McCarthy with a 71.

The team shot very well in its seventh straight win; compiling a team average of 71.5.

The next match on tap is next Tuesday when the golfers meet the Clemson Tigers here in Chapel Hill on Finley Golf Course.

Netters Beat Clemson For Seventh Straight

By ELLIOTT COOPER

Carolina's varsity tennis team took Clemson 8-1 yesterday to rack up their fourth conference victory and their seventh straight win of the season. For the Tigers it was their sixth loss of the campaign against two wins.

Coupled with Friday's 9-0 shutout win over South Carolina, yesterday's win strengthens the Tar Heels position at the top of the conference standings. Coach Vladimir Cernik's netters are now better than half way through their ACC schedule. The remaining matches on the slate are against Virginia, Duke, and defending champion Maryland.

Nasim Defeats Bank

The Tigers were saved from a complete loss in the number two singles where Mohammed Nasim defeated Steve Bank 6-2, 6-4. This match is the first match that the Tar Heels have lost in conference play. Prior to yesterday's encounter the Carolina netters had swept past Wake Forest, State, and South Carolina by identical 9-0 scores.

Carolina won all the other singles matches in straight sets. Bob Bortner, playing in the number one position, whipped Clemson's Sonny Sumner 7-5, 6-2. In the third singles match Geoff Black kept his undefeated string in tact by overpowering Lanier Bryant 6-2, 6-0. The Tar Heel's other singles victories were won by Malcolm Clark, Ben Keys, and Marshall Happer.

Clark and Keys scored the only complete skunking of the day in their number two doubles match where they defeated the Clemson twosome of Bryant and Cooper love and love.

THE SUMMARY

Singles: Bortner (C) defeated Sumner 7-5, 6-2. Nasim (C) defeated Bank 6-2, 6-4. Black (C) defeated Bryant 6-2, 6-0. Clark (C) defeated Cooper 6-1, 6-1. Keys (C) defeated Wise 6-0, 6-2. Happer (C) defeated Lynn 6-3, 6-4.

Doubles: Bortner-Bank (C) defeated Nasim-Sumner 5-7, 6-4, 7-5. Clark-Keys (C) defeated Bryant-Cooper 6-0, 6-0. Black-Happer (C) defeated Lynn-Wise 6-4, 6-4.

VPI Proposed

GREENSBORO (AP) — Virginia Tech, a member of the Southern Conference, has been proposed for membership in the Atlantic Coast Conference by three of the eight ACC members.

Action in the proposal is among the major items confronting the ACC at its annual spring meeting here May 1-2.

Commissioner Jim Weaver today announced the proposed amendments to the conference by-laws. His announcement said that Virginia, Maryland and Wake Forest had recommended that Virginia Tech be invited to join the ACC.

WAA Tennis Results

The Tennis Club of the Women's Athletic Association played host to five four-girl teams from surrounding schools yesterday. The schools participating were Atlantic Christian College, Peace, Meredith, Elon, Duke and Carolina.

Play began at 10:30 a.m. on the varsity courts in the single-elimination tournament. Each school entered two girls in the singles and one team in the doubles. After lunch play resumed at 1:30 o'clock until Ginny Hoyt of Duke and Marion Eells of Carolina reached the finals. Miss Eells was the winner 6-1, 6-1. Peace and Duke vied for the doubles championship with Duke the winner 5-0.

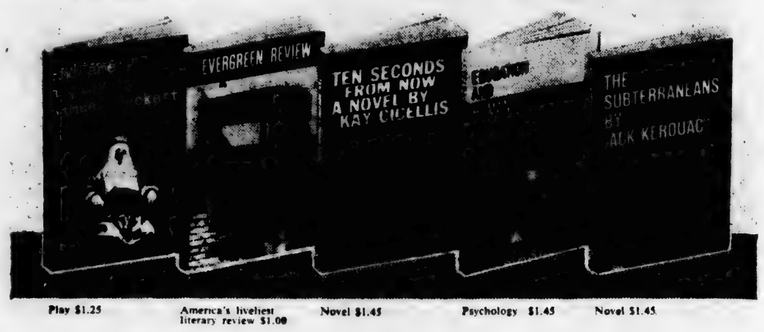
Gamecocks Stop Deacs

COLUMBIA (AP) — The University of South Carolina scored three runs in the bottom of the eighth inning to defeat Wake Forest 5-4 Saturday in an Atlantic Coast Conference baseball game.

The victory gave the Gamecocks a 2-6 conference record and kept them ahead of the Deacons, now 0-4, in the league standings.

Jim Craig, righthander making his first appearance of the season for the Gamecocks after nursing a sore arm, picked up the victory, although he went out for a pinch-hitter in the fruitful eighth. Craig managed to keep 10 Deacon hits well scattered in allowing three runs.



Batting hero for South Carolina was third baseman Ken Rosefield, who doubled home two runs in the first inning and singled in a much — needed third run in the eighth, when the Gamecocks took a two-run margin.

Jane Craige Gray Award Goes To Paddy Sue Wall

Miss Paddy Sue Wall, of Winston-Salem, North Carolina, was named recipient of the Jane Craige Gray Award to the outstanding junior woman at UNC in a presentation ceremony Sunday in the Graham Memorial Lounge.

The daughter of Dr. and Mrs. R. E. Wall, she was presented the fifth annual award, given by Beta Chi chapter of Kappa Delta sorority.

Her citation, read by Dr. James L. Godfrey, Dean of the Faculty, noted that Miss Wall has in her short time at the University, shown outstanding leadership in many phases of campus life.

It noted further her ability and strength of character which have been an inspiration to her associates. She has maintained a high scholastic average, the citation said, and at the same time has given generously of herself to her activities and to her friends.

A transfer student from Mars Hill College, Miss Wall has served as a member of the UNC Student Legislature and of the Women's Residence Council. She has a seat on the Women's Honor Council and is currently the counselor trainer for Women's Orientation.

In the recent spring elections she was named secretary of the UNC Student Body. She is a member of the GMAB Board of Directors; the Angel Flight, sponsors for the Air Force ROTC; and of the Baptist Student Union executive committee.

Other activities include Alpha Gamma Delta sorority, of which she is vice-president; Student Government Budget Committee; Carolina Symposium, Y-Night and Y-Conference committees.

The Gray Award is given in memory of the late wife of Gordon Gray, president of the University from 1950-1955. Mrs. Gray was initiated as an alumna of the Beta Chi chapter in 1950.

The coed in the junior class who best exemplifies high scholarship, leadership, and character is chosen each year for the award and receives a silver card tray. A plaque bearing the name of the winner is kept permanently in the Kappa Delta house.

Miss Wall was honored at a reception following the presentation Sunday afternoon.

The selection committee for the award was composed of Dr. Katherine Carmichael, Dean of Women; Ray Jefferies, Assistant to the Dean of Student Affairs; Sonny Evans, retiring president of the student body; Mary Jane Fisher, women's orientation representative; and Kit Whitehurst, retiring chairman of Women's Honor Council.

Ernest Mackie, Dean of awards, and Luanne Thornton, personnel adviser to women, served on the committee in ex-officio capacity.

Winners of the award in previous year have ben Carol Webster, 1954; Jane Cocke of Asheville, 1955; Cylvia Tarantino, 1956; and Dorothy Pressley of Raleigh, 1957.

UNC Orchestra To Play Series' 17th Concert

The 17th concert of the current Tuesday Evening Series will feature the University Symphony Orchestra directed by Earl Slocum and guest piano soloist Majorie Still Farrell tonight at 8 o'clock in Hill Hall.

The program will open with the Prelude to Humperdinck's Opera Hansel and Gretel, which was first performed in 1893. Featured next on the program will be Mrs. Ferrell's performance of Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 2 in C Minor.

Mrs. Farrell is well known to Chapel Hill audiences, having given three recitals in Hill Hall as well as a Petite Musicale performance. She began her piano training at the age of seven; among her former teachers are Edwin Hughes of New York City and William S. Newman, Chairman of the UNC Piano Department.

At the present time Mrs. Farrell is studying with Jan P. Schinhan of the UNC Music of Department. She received the Percy Craven Weeks Award for 1957 and the Federated Music Club Scholarship for 1957-58.

Glee Club Adds Oriental Note To Spring Germans Weekend

and BEN TAYLOR

The forthcoming weekend of "swinging" Germans will unwittingly take on a oriental motif when the combined voices of the UNC Men's Glee Club and the Hollins College Chorus present major portions of Gilbert and Sullivan's Mikado in Hill Hall Friday night at 8.

The 80-voice ensemble will not, however, confine their talents to the rendering of this famous opera. In addition to the opera, the Glee Club will sing a group of numbers, including an introduction of a new arrangement of the traditional "Dixie". The Hollins Chorus will also sing a group of songs.

The fifty Men's Glee Club voices and the approximately 30 voices of Hollins Woman's College Chorus will join in singing the better known portions of the opera, one the British duo's most refreshing works. Mikado, a "story in song depicting the trials of love in Japanese life," usually calls for elaborate costuming and staging, but the performance Friday night will not entail the traditional stage and costume settings.

Members of the choruses will be attired in regular modern dress, but the solo performers will wear something suggestive of oriental attire, and will use occasional hand props. In an effort to achieve some degree of authenticity a number of comedy scenes will be done with full properties and full oriental dress.

Released by Glee Club Director Dr. Joel Carter, the cast of performers will include: The Mikado, Donald Nance; Manki-Poo, Richard Peterson; Poo-bah, James Tyndall, Ko-ko, Dr. Carter; and Pish-Tush, Richard Gerrish. The part of Katishew will be portrayed by Marily Zschau of Chapel Hill. Female parts, to be portrayed by soloists of the Hollins Chorus, have not been named as of yesterday. The event will mark the main segment of a busy weekend for the Glee Club, as it plans a bermuda party for the visitors on Saturday afternoon. There will also be an informal reception for the girls after Friday night's performance.

"Since the German dance will not begin until around 9:00 Friday night here is an inexpensive date, since the hour-long program will begin at 8 and conclude in penty of time to enable those planning to attend the dance to do so," Glee Club President Charles Shoe said yesterday.

Tickets for the performance will cost $.50, which will go to defer the expenses of bringing the Chorus to Chapel Hill. They may be purchased at Graham Memorial, Y-Court, Ledbetter-Pickard, or from any Glee Club member.

Political Affiliations Won't Affect Posts

Don Furtado, president of the student body, issued a statement Monday inviting interested persons to apply for Student Government positions.

"Applicants for the various positions may rest assured that they will be considered on the basis of their sincerity, interest, experience and potential, not by any political affiliations which they might have," said Furtardo.

He urged persons who would like to be considered for one of the many positions to sign up for interviews in the Student Government office in Graham Memorial. Office hours are 3:30-6 p.m. on Monday and Wednesday, 2-6 p.m. on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

Appointments to be made are: Attorney General and two assistants plus a staff of eight; three members of the Consolidated University Student Council; a seventeen member elections board; and Campus Chest co-chairmen.

Committee appointments include: a six member NSA committee; a seven member library committee; three member campus stores committee; a committee to pick the editor of the campus humor magazine; and a traffic advisory committee and commission.

Memberships also to be appointed are: ten cabinet members; the membership of the dance committee; the audit board; three seats, one year, two year and three year on the Graham Memorial board of directors; a student council member; a campus traffic board; a Victory Village Veteran's Affairs Commission; and the Honor System Commission.

The Carolina Forum, the high school honor system, the summer school student government, the NSA delegation to the national convention in August and the clerks of the Men's and Women's council are also on the list of appointments to be made.

Daily Tar Heel Sets Up Co-News Editor System

Daily Tar Heel Editor Curtis Gans announced Monday that Bill Kincaid, junior journalism major from Lenoir, has been appointed co-news editor to serve with Paul Rule, the present news editor.

Kincaid, who has been serving as assistant news editor, has also worked on The Daily Tar Heel as reporter and City Editor. He was appointed assistant news editor when Miss Ann Frye resigned the post to run for editor of the Daily Tar Heel.

Di And Phi Continue Rivalry In Annual Debate Tonight

Four members of the Dialetic Senate will take the affirmative in a debate tonight, urging the United States to aid the revolutionary efforts of Fidel Castro in Cuba.

Taking the negative view in the annual Di-Phi Debate will be four representatives from the Philanthropic Assembly.

Phi President Jess Stribling, who will preside at the debate, said yesterday that although Castro's rebellion had failed in the past week, he expected the debate to be lively and interesting.

The debate will be held in Di Hall on the third floor of New East at 8 p. m.

Judges will be Dr. James Wallace of the political science department, Miss Jo Ann Aldridge of the English department and a member of the history faculty.

Debating on the affirmative side will be Sen. Dave Reid, Sen. Fred Wolfer, Sen. Gary Greer and Sen. Pat Adams.

On the negative side will be Rep. Dave Matthews, Rep. Bill Jackson, Rep Bill Willis and Rep. Don Jacobs.

At the meeting Claude Teague will be given the Phi-Di Award for outstanding service to the state, nation and its citizens. Mr. Teague is retired business manager of the University and is currently special assistant to Pres. William Friday.

In addition three members of the Phi will be presented awards for service during the year, The outstanding senior, the outstanding freshman and the outstanding debator will be honored.

Proposed Coed Rules To Be Debated Tonight

Women's Residence Council will hold an open discussion on the new freshman rules tonight at 7 o'clock in the Roland Parker Lounge of Graham Memorial.

According to Lillian Shannonhouse, chairman of the WRC, "The council will endeavor to explain the new rules to the student body in the meeting." Rules to be discussed include dorm closing hours, supervised study and lights-out hours. Housing of freshman woman in the new wing of Spencer will also be discussed.

The new rules grew out of a concern for all freshman women by the WRC. They were drafted after approval by the WRC, the School of Nursing and the Dean of Women.

In the past freshman women have lived on the University campus, but not in great enough numbers to warrant special rules. With the expected addition of 50 women in the University next fall, the WRC took action toward new rules.

The new rules are presently being reconsidered by the Council and will not be final until after tonight's meeting.

Officials said the discussion will be open to all interested people on campus.

Christie Farnham, a Junior coed from Bristol Virginia was elected Secretary. And Bill Lamm of Mt. Airy was chosen Sergeant of Arms.

The most spirited race of the evening came when a slate of thirteen candidates was nominated for four seats on the Party Advisory Board. Voting was done by secret ballot to enable the thirteen candidates to take part in the choice. Elected to the policy making group were, Frank Elkins, Gary Greer, Martha Turner, and Betsy Miller.

Recognition of party members who had served well in recent capacities, or who had been elected in campus elections was given to the following; Student Party President Don Furtado, Daily Tar Heel Editor Curtis Gans, Vice President Ralph Cummings, Secretary Paddy Wall, as well as retiring party officers and campaign workers.

Summer School Weekly Editor's Job Available

Applications are being sought for the position of Summer School Weekley editor for this summer.

Any student may apply for this position, but someone with some newspaper writing experience would be prefered.

Interested persons should apply to 206 South Building by April 26. A committee will review the applications and select the editor.

The committee would rather have someone to hold this office for both sessions of summer school.

There is no pay offered, but Sam Magill, Director of Student Affairs, said it is a "good opportunity for experience."

IN THE INFIRMARY

Students in the infirmary yesterday included:

Misses Mary Hafer, Shirley Hamrick, Karen Hanfer, Jimmie Racker, Lucy Pofgate, Dorothy Hopkins and Jeri Lassitser and Michael Tanner, Richard Allsbrook, Lewis Sanders, Joel Snow, Jasper Chesson, Gordon Day and William Lytle.

WITH WOODY HERMAN

Germans To Get Lively Start

Woody Herman will swing the Spring Germans Concert into motion Sautrday at 3 p.m. when he brings his jazz orchestra, The Third Herd, to Memorial Hall.

Also featured in the concert will be the Al Belletto Sextet, trombonist Bill Harris, and vocalist Jerri Winters.

WOODY HERMAN

North Carolina Drama Groups To Meet Here

Twenty six drama groups from North Carolina schools and colleges will convene on the campus Thursday, Friday, and Saturday when the Carolina Playmakers sponsor the annual festival of the Carolina Dramatic Association. With headquarters in The Playmakers Theatre, the meeting will feature the presentation of twenty-five one act plays and one full-length original.

The full-length play, entitled "Pate's Siding," is by Bernice Kelly Harris, noted North Carolina author, and is to be presented by the Goldsboro Community Players on Friday evening.

IN NEW YORK

UNC Officials Speak To Alumni

By THOMAS PEACOCK

(Peacock, a second year law student at Columbia University, was sports editor of The Daily Tar Heel in 1953 and '54.)

NEW YORK—Chancellor William Aycock predicted a minimum enrollment of 12,200 by 1970 in a speech delivered here Friday night before the New York chapter of the University of North Carolina Alumni Association.

Touching on every subject of interest to alumni, Chancellor Aycock spoke in a vein of high enthusiasm for the future of the University, tempered with the warning that adequate preparation was absolutely necessary to growth and progress.

D. James Godfrey also gave a short talk in which he stressed three areas most important to the University's intellectual growth: graduate fellowships, expansion of the library, and publication of scholarly works.

Alumni Secretary Spike Saunders completed the Chapel Hill contingent at the dinner held at the Advertising Club on Park Avenue.

Some of the subjects commented on by Chancellor Aycock were:

Russia competes with this country today because of its extensive educational program.

Though science must be emphasized today, it is "no substitute for our great program in liberal arts."

The salary scale for teachers at other southern universities cannot be used as a guide at Carolina as it is the "eastern and mid-western" schools that are raiding the Carolina faculty.

With 29 members of the faculty over 65 and nearing retirement, the University is faced with an immediate task of training replacements. The graduate housing to be financed by a $2,000,000 loan from the government will help considerably in obtaining talented young men.

Obligation

The University has an obligation to the state and must "take advantage of every media available to make our University mean the most to our people."

There "is no monkey business going on in Chapel Hill in respect to our athletic program, and if a mistake is made we will face up to it. The decision has been made to participate in all phases of athletics, and "once that decision is made we do not see any inconsistency in having an excellent University and excellent athletic teams." However, "we will not lower our standards—every athlete is a student first and an athlete second."

Dr. Godfrey was "amazed how New York becomes less and less like Chapel Hill." New York can be conquered, though: "I told my students to look it in the eye, take it by the throat and tell it to stand and deliver."

He pointed out that since one-third of the University's faculty comes from its graduate students, it is a necessity to get and keep the highest calibre of graduate students.

Library

The ideal library, Dr. Godfrey said, would contain thirty million items as compared to the University's 900,000. The rank of a school and the excellence of its library are directly correlated—they go together and are inseparable.

Finally, as one of the primary incentives to write scholarly works is to have them published, facilities must be provided to publish such effort of the faculty, even when expenses will not be realized.

Among the approximately 100 New York alumni at the dinner were Barry Farber '52, former editor of The Daily Tar Heel and Jerry Vayda '56, former captain of the Carolina basketball team. Farber is now producing the "Tex and Jinx" television show. Vayda recently went on active duty with the Air Force.

The Council

There is a question of why there is so much time taken up with the problem of coed rules.

There is also an answer.

There are two principles called into question by the new regulations. The first is that of student responsibility and of student government. The second deals with the overall philosophy of the University.

Carolina has long been a place where responsible student government is a by-word, and where individual responsibility and initiative has been stimulated. The new coed restrictions are in contradiction to that philosophy, and will put the burden of responsibility of the administration where it does not belong.

One of the basic things that a person is taught during orientation is that Carolina is a place where the individual has a chance to develop and mature. The new rules say that the incoming freshman coed is not up to this responsibility. The other freshman coeds have proved they are.

The overall philosophy of Carolina is one of individualism. it is being challenged by the new regulations.

Moreover, the prerogatives of student government is being challenged by a having a member of the Dean of Women's office, not the Dean of Women, on the council. Again this subtracts from the student's chances of coming to a wise decision on his or her own. This situation is not duplicated in any other phase of Carolina student government, and should be discontinued in this phase.

The rules also should be stricken in part or in whole, in order that the Carolina way of life—responsible democracy—is preserved.

All Thru The Night

Restaurant owner Don Belton has come up with a novelty in Chapel Hill, a restaurant that is open all night. Not since Cafe Mouzo of a year or two gone by, has an all night restaurant graced the streets of Chapel Hill

For those who get hungry or thirsty during the hours of 1 a.m. to 7 a.m., The Chuck wagon offers both food and drink. Mr. Belton is to be congratulated for his addition to Chapel Hill.

Our Face Showing

Over the weekend, a not too amusing incident happened on Franklin St. An elderly woman of Chapel Hill, who is noted as a community helper was driving by a fraternity-sorority district on Franklin St. Outside one of the houses there were two cars parked side-by-side, the one nearest the curb being doubleparked.

The woman honked once to get by, and nothing happened. She honked twice, and nothing happened. She honked a third time.

The car in front pulled up a little and let her pass, and while she was passing, she heard in unmistakeably clear tones, "That old bitch!"

A nice picture of University students for her to carry away.

State Of The Campus

Don Furtado

PARKING

A sixth area with which I am concerned and which has concerned us for the past few years is the student parking problem. It was alleviated to some extent two years ago with the initiation of a ban on freshman and some sophomore cars. This was undertaken as a temporary measure, but the ban is still with us. The continued presence of the parking problems is illustrated by the fact that the Traffic Advisory Commission recently reported that we had 2,584 student cars and slightly over 1,000 parking spaces. As our student body increases we can look forward to an increase in the number of student cars here at Carolina, and therefore must search for some solution to the existing and probably increasing parking problem. This problem may have been answered to some extent by the opening of the Bell Tower Parking Lot, which has facilities to accomodate 500 student cars. It is necessary that we immediately plan some practical and acceptable means of utilizing of this lot, for unless we do there is a real danger that we may lose the privilege of parking there.

A seventh problem area which deserves some intensive investigation and study is the present means of collecting the fines from campus parking offenses. It seems very strange to me that the University pays the salaries of the policemen who give Carolina students tickets for parking violations, and yet the fines for those violations are collected and kept by the town of Chapel Hill.

The eighth area which confronts us is the problem of the present operation of the class cut policy. A re-examination of purposes and practices should also definitely be made in the area of class cuts. This past year, we went before the faculty council with a recommendation that excuses be placed on an honor basis, and a committee was set up to study our proposal. The committee, after a great deal of discussion, decided to institute a policy which student government had long ideally desired—a policy of unlimited absences, subject to the descretion of the individual professor. Our only hesitancy concerning this proposal had been that there would be some professors, who, not understanding the liberalizing intent of the plan, would use the new-found power to place completely irrational restrictions upon their students. This fear has proven to be a reality, and I feel that it may be greatly attributed to the fact that the professors do not understand the intent of the measure, because of the suddeness with which a few professors are so terrbley misusing the new cut plan. I do believe that the plan is, in essence, highly desirable and workable, but the present manner in which it is being administered is tremendously lacking.

FACULTY

A ninth area lies in our lack of adequate faculty salaries and opportunities for faculty study and research. As students, we must remember that the caliber of the professors which we have, directly affects what we can gain through our studies here at the University of North Carolina. We have long been acclaimed as one of the outstanding universities of the South and the nation, but in the past few years we have been losing many of our most popular and capable professors at an alarming rate. This draining away of our outstanding faculty members can be attributed to two things—low salaries and the absence of any system of planned leaves of absence. No matter how much a professor may love and admire Carolina, he realizes the practical elements involved. When another school gives him an offer which is above the salary which he is now receiving, as it usually is, mere practicality usually induces him to leave. Perhaps, this would not be the trend if he found here at Carolina a plan by which he could expect regular leaves of absence granted each year, which makes it almost impossible for the professor, especially the younger and more promising ones, to expand their academic horizons. As students at the University of North Carolina, we must realize our obligation to help maintain the high standards and leadership for which we have been noted. Dean Goldfrey is presently working on a plan to provide for faculty leaves, and when the time comes, we must muster all of our forces to contribute to the battle for this badly needed improvement. It is believed by many people that there will be another request to the state Legislature for an increase in Faculty pay this year. You may ask how we as students may help to bring this about. As we did two years ago, student government at Carolina can contribute to its accomplishment with letters, resolutions, personal contacts, and, if necessary, by appearing before the Legislature to present our feelings on the matter.

"Secrecy? What Secrecy?"

Free Minds And Education In The United States Now

Louis M. Hacker

We must assume, as a result, the defense of integrity from within through self-policing, and by that I mean by faculties and not by administrators or governing boards. Therefore, the teacher who abuses the privileges of the classroom to indoctrinate can be simply adjudged incompetent by his peer, and be got rid of normally. The scholar whose research is spurious because he is following an unaccepted tendency or a barren line of inquiry can also be got rid of. And as for conduct or association likely to threaten the security of the country, there are the orderly processes of law to handle such crimes — although I must point out that, on the one hand, security has been pushed much too far here, and on the other, to my knowledge not a single active Communist engaged in conspiracy has been unmasked in all the years of investigation of American universities.

IRRELEVANT

All other questions raised affecting the private beliefs and associations of educators are irrelevant. They are citizens and as such have the rights of freedom of speech and association all of us properly claim under the First Amendment. And the rights to due process — at the hands of their peers—when their conduct is being called into question, must be equally assured. Due process in this context means a hearing before an academic body, the right to counsel and a full record of proceedings, the opportunity to confront and cross-examine witnesses and to appeal adverse findings.

Questions of political belief have no bearing on such an inquiry unless they are relevant to a man's responsibilities as a teacher and scholar. That is to say, unless there is substantial evidence of the perversion of the academic process, neither retention of a teacher nor his employment should be affected by beliefs or associations, whether they be political or religious.

PUZZLING

In the light of such considerations, the position taken by too many university administrators is not only puzzling but a surrender of their own trust. Thus, the university president quoted previously, after having defended the university's right to examine all sorts of heterodox opinion, goes on to say:

But the freedom the universities claim is not a negative concept. It is not freedom from all restraints, from all commitment, but the positive freedom to perform the traditional functions of research and teaching in the spirit of truth . . .

University faculties have only one true valid defense against such attacks; namely, that they demonstrate, on demand, that their educational methods and their traditional findings have been arrived at by trained personnel through the use of thoroughly rational procedures.

SCRUTINY

Why on demand? Universities and their members, their methods and preoccupations, are constantly under scrutiny, in fact, twenty-four hours a day and 365 days a year: Accrediting associations visit classrooms, test curriculums, evaluate results; university admissions offices admit students to higher studies on the basis of examinations or a knowledge of the competence of college teaching staffs; learned societies and their journals are organs of debate where ideas are tested and new contributions to knowledge closely examined. Within the university itself, no matter how large, the achievements and weaknesses of every department and faculty are known to all the rest, and are equally known in other universities.

The profession of learning watches over its own integrity. We must reject the assumption that its integrity can be preserved only if, "on demand," legislators or self-appointed bodies can periodically call upon the universities to justify themselves.

The Association of American Universities is even willing to surrender the right of privacy altogether. For it has said:

Legislative bodies from time to time may scrutinize (the universities') benefits and privileges. It is clearly the duty of universities and their members to cooperate in official inquiry directed to these ends. When the powers of legislative inquiry are abused, the remedy does not lie in non-cooperation or defiance; it is to be sought through the normal channels of informed public opinion.

INFORMED

Of course. An "informed public opinion" can be created if university administrators themselves, regarding this as their first obligation, will ceaselessly exercise themselves in the education of the public, their alumni and their own governing bodies, in fact that learning has always accepted its responsibilities toward truth. They are likely to get a better hearing if they will demonstrate by their own works, that an open university exists to satisfy all the legitimate needs of the community for its services and for continuing education. But we must not forget that "non-cooperation and defiance," too, have their place; for such conduct, on the part of persons who refuse to be cowed, leads to an orderly examination of their claims to privacy the judicial process and frequently adjudication in their favor. The invocation of the law's protections, in the recent Watkins, Jencks and Sweezy cases proves that "non-cooperation and defiance" can stop unlawful persecutions.

Learning

What of Society's claims on learning? There is no quarrel with the position of public authority that it can require that curriculums be devised to meet professional standards and even, more broadly, to examine the means by which the stability of the world in which we live is to be maintained. But curriculums are one thing; the content of the courses themselves entirely another. As Professor Journet Kahn of Notre Dame University has so properly said:

(Public authority) can in no way prescribe the very truths that are to be taught . . . Its prescriptions remain exclusively in the order of exercise . . . The slightest attempt to tamper with objects on the part of the state is a crime against the natural light of intelligence in which alone all the probative evidence is resolved . . . What is to be taught as true lies completely outside of political jurisdiction.

AD LIBS

On Other Columns And Sports Staffs

Whit Whitfield

Maybe it's just as well that we have only one "Daddy" Winston and one "Natal Nose" Yardley on the staff. We frankly admit that we cannot write with the candor of "Daddy" or the stark realism of "Natal Nose."

But we do have one claim to fame, and that is consistency, and for those people who don't like variations from the norm, this is the column to read. It's guaranteed to be the same drivel from day to day, nothing profound we don't like to think; nothing artistic, for we are not a patron of the arts; nothing universal in scope like omniuniverse or omnigalaxy because our knowledge is strictly limited; and nothig humorous, for our sense of humor is perverted, or maybe unique would be a better word for it.

Consequently, we think of this column as a change-of-pace from the learned essays and treatises usually found on the edit page of this paper. It may not be readable, but it's a durn sight cheaper than buying space fillers like "The smallest incorporated town in Texas is Birdseye with 4 inhabitants" from news services.

During the past two weeks, you have doubtless seen the ads in the Tar Heel asking for student help in the news department. In case you have been wondering why the sports department has not made a similar solicitation, we have the answer for you.

On the bulletin board in the sports office is a list of the staff, and thinking (however erroneously) that it was a somewhat unusual staff we decided to reprint it for you, with certain embarrassing exceptions. It includes:

Wible, Dave
Cooper, Elloitt
Hammond, Rusty
Alyta, Ken
Barrier, Smith
Horner, Jack
Neumann, Alfred E.
Tatum, James
London, Jack
London, Julie
London, Bridge
Kasper, John
Raubus, Orval
Luxon, Norval
Graham, Otto
Graham, Cracker
Roy Rogers and Zorro

It is quite likely that they are spoofing about Zorro, since he is on the edit staff.

Anthony Wolff

The American government last week decided to free Ezra Pound, one of America's noted living poets and men of letters. For the past twelve years, Pound has been a prisoner in St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Washington; he was placed there immediately after the war, after suffering considerable indignity in an American concentration camp in Italy, in order to spare the government the embarrassment of having to try him for treason.

During the early part of the war, Pound made some radio broadcasts from Italy in support of the Axis cause. He has never, as far as the record goes, made any attempt to excuse this activity. In fact, he has had surprisingly little to say about the whole strange business of his Italian activity and subsequent imprisonment. He has continued his poetry in the midst of an insane asylum, while the rest of the world has wondered about America's strange practice of incarcerating its prominent artists; and it has been left largely to Pound's fellow artists to petition for his release.

The issue has never been whether or not Pound was actually guilty of treason or not; certainly that issue is doubtful, but if Pound were a traitor, the degree of his crime would be small in comparison with the many war crimes which the government has been more than willing to pardon in the generous spirit of peace after victory.

The point is that the American government, in order to avoid the embarrassment of bringing a man of Pound's literary stature to trial—with his life hanging in the balance—chose the easy out of declaring the poet mentally incompetent to stand trail; last week his mental incompetence was declared incurable, and on that assumption he is to be freed.

One must wonder at the government's use of the term "mental incompetent." During his imprisonment under that sentence, Pound has produced a considerable amount of poetry, including a large portion of the Cantos, one of the more complex and obscure—and one of the longest—works of poetry in the English language. That a man which it has conveniently judged mentally incompetent is capable of such a thing must be a constant source of embarrassment to the American government.

Whether Pound is guilty or ot, and whatever the degree of his treason, the fact seems clear enough: the government had reason, other than Pound's alleged "aiding and comforting the enemy" to want him out of the way.

For one thing, Pound is a rabid anti-Semite; for another, he is a rather naive economic theorist of radical persuasion; and, worst of all, he is articulate enough to be a potential source of embarrassment to the government.

Not only Pound himself, but also the circumstances surrounding his treatment prior to his incarceration in St. Elizabeth's, are quite suspect. It does not seem too far-fetched to assume that the government, if it did not arrange to have him declared mentally incompetent, was at least relieved when that decision was turned in by the government-hired psychologists. The extreme doubt cast upon this decision both by Pound's literary activities since that time, and by the opinions of other psychologists, have not moved the government to review its decision.

After twelve years, the government has taken the easy way out. In a hearing notable mainly for its brevity, Pound's mental incompetence, which was never established to the satisfaction of many, was declared incurable, and Pound was freed on that basis. It would have been more honest and just as humane to shoot the man twelve years ago.

have through today to be assured of keeping their same rooms.

Reservations for summer terms are due today also.

To reserve a room, a student must make a deposit with the University cashier in the basement of South Building.

Reservation fee for the fall semester is $10.00.

Both double and single rooms are available for the summer. Double room deposit is $20.00. Single room deposit is 30.00. Married couples may reserve rooms in Alexander Dorm by depositing $40.00. Summer room deposits constitute rent for a six week term.

Double rooms for summer are available in Joyner, Old West, Grimes, Manly and Connor. Joyner will be opened for the first summer term. Connor is reserved for graduate men.

MAY 8

Forum To Present Walt Kelly

The Carolina forum will present Walt Kelly, creator of "Pogo," in a public lecture on Thursday, May 8, in Hill Hall at 8 p.m., Chairman Jim Holmes announced Monday.

Pogo's papa will report on the "G.O. Fizzicle Lear" in an illustrated lecture, basing his talk on a recent 90-days-round-the-world trip in which he visited some of the world's troubled spots, addressed cultural groups, talked with the "man-in-the-street," and gathered material for a new book ad background for Pogo's daily activities.

The theme of Kelly's lecture will be "Not So Square A World"—a phrase that occurred to him as the result of his own findings during Pogo's "G.O. Fizzicle Year." His conclusions, found along the alleys, bazaars, oxcart trails, and airway routes of the world have a swamp flavor and a Pogo insight.

A particular favorite of American student and faculty group, Kelly has made over 200 speeches on college campuses. In his national Pogo-for-President campaign in 1956, over 100,000 students sported "I Go Pogo" buttons.

Kelly is a former two-term president of the National Cartoonists Society and a winner of the coveted "Cartoonist of the Year" award.

He is author of 13 books, including "Songs of the Pogo."

Outstanding Cadets Get AFROTC Award

Two Air Force ROTC Cadets were presented Cadet of the Month Ribbons in a special ceremony last week. This award is given every month to the outstanding freshman, sophomore, or junior Air Force cadet. The recipients for the past two months were Cadets Richard G. Rhyne and Sam S. Woodley, Jr.

Cadet Rhyne is a sophomore from Chesterfield, S. C. and son of Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Rhyne. He attended Morven High School in Morven, N. C. and at present is in general college but is planning for a B.S. degree from the Business Administration School. Other activities included being a member of the UNC Glee Club and Arnold Air Society, an honorary organization for cadets.

Cadet Woodley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam S. Woodley of Columbia, N. C. is a freshman enrolled in general college. He graduated from Columbia High School in 1957. While there he was active in all sports and social activities as well as class president.

UNC Scholars Speak At Renaissance Meet

Four UNC scholars will be among the speakers at the 15th annual Southeastern Renaissance Conference which begins Friday afternoon.

Seventeen speakers from eleven universities will present papers on all phases of Renaissance culture during the two-day meeting.

All meetings will be held in the Morehead Building, according to UNC Kenan Professor W. L. Wiley, president of the organization.

In Friday's opening session, at 2:15 p. m., Albert Knowles, UNC graduate student, will read a paper on "Spenser's Natural Man." Another UNC man, Lloyd E. Berry, will discuss "Giles Fletcher, the Elder," and "Milton's A Brief History of Muscovia."

On Friday evening at 7 o'clock, UNC will give a buffet dinner for the conference members.

Following the dinner Dr. Wilton Mason of the UNC Music Department will direct a program of Renaissance music. The program, which will be held in Graham Memorial Lounge at 8:30 p. m., will be open to students. The University Chorus will render the selections with Wilton Mason at the Harpsichord. Martha Fouse, soprano, and Gene Strassler, tenor, will be featured.

Prof. James E. King of UNC will discuss "Renaissance Roots of Cartesian Science" at the Saturday morning lecture session. Shakespeare's "King Lear" is another of the subjects to be discussed at the Saturday morning session that will be concluded with a business meeting and the election of new officers.

"Romeo and Juliet" will be the subject of two papers at the final session Saturday afternoon. Among other topics at this meeting will be a paper on "Mellin de Saint-Gelais and the Saints' Lives," read by Robert Harden of UNC.

High School Debators Hold Final Contest

High school debating teams, successful in the State-wide competition, will enter the 46th annual final contest in Chapel Hill Thursday and Friday.

The contest is sponsored by the North Carolina High School Debating Union.

E. R. Rankin of the UNC Extension Division, who is secretary for the contests, announced that a general meeting of all debaters and coaches attending the contest will be held Thursday at 2:30 p. m. in Gerrard Hall at which time a drawing will be conducted for sections and pairings in the preliminary debates.

The students will make a tour of the campus after the meeting, visiting the halls of the Philanthropic Literary Society and the Dialectic Senate.

The preliminary debates will begin at 7 p. m. Thursday, and the semi-finals are scheduled for 10 o'clock Friday morning. The final debate for the Aycock Memorial Cup is set for 3 p. m. Friday in Gerrard Hall.

The current national high school debate topic is: "Resolved, That United States foreign aid should be substantially increased."

High Schools from all sections of the state will be represented at the meet with each school taking a negative or affirmative position of the debating topic.

Seniors Invited To Enter Contest Of Oration

All graduating seniors with oratorical talent have been invited to compete for the annual Willie P. Mangum Medal at 8 p. m. on April 30.

The medal, the University's oldest award is presented each year by the Dialectic Senate and the Philanthropic Literary Society in recognition of fine oratory.

Oration subjects are to be chosen by the participants and submitted to Dean Mackie's office by 4:30 p. m., April 29. Each oration should be about ten minutes long.

The Mangum Medal was established in 1878 by Misses Martin Person and Mary Mangum of Orange County in memory of their father, Willie P. Mangum, a member of the University class of 1815.

Seniors eligible also include those graduating at the end of the summer session.

Radio Club Holds Election Of Officers

UNC Physics Professor A. Victor Masket, K4CAU, was named Chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Radio Club Friday night in an election to install officers and trustees.

Sophomore Jimmy Scott, W4GHQ, a physics major from Charlotte who has done much work in establishing the club, was acclaimed president.

Other trustees named include: Dr. Burton Jones, W4BOJ, math professor now on leave at Princton; Jim Botsford, W4MFK, a local merchant; Frank Farrow, W4MDA, engineer for WUNC-TV; and 'Mac' McAllister, W4PEY, a local resident.

Other student officers are vice-president, Lewis Steingold, W4BLA, secretary, Simeon Butler, K4ARP, and treasurer, Clarence McLamb, W4AW.

No UP Meeting Tonight; Will Meet With WRC

The University Party will not have its regular meeting tonight, but will have a special meeting with the Women's Residence Coouncil.

This is a special open hearing that will be held in Roland Parker I and II. The Women's Residence Council is holding this meeting so that all sides of new Coed rules can be aired.

Syd Shuford, chairman of the University Party said, "I urge that everyone attend this meeting, for this will be our only occasion to adequately express ourselves on the matter of Freshman Coed rules. It is our responsibility as a representative student organization to participate in this meeting."

Public Health School Gets $35,000 Grant

The UNC School of Public Health will receive a $35,000 grant from the U. S. Public Health Service to train "disease detectives," Dean E. G. McGavran announced yesterday.

Mr. McGarvran pointed out that epidemiologists (disease detective) are needed in staffing research and service programs in health departments, hospitals and other health agencies.

He revealed that present plans are to train students for work in the epidemiology of chronic diseases such as cancer, heart disease, dental disease and mental disorders.

The UNC program will be offered to limited numbers of physicians, dentists and biometricians and will require at least two years of study beyond a master's degree in public health.

The Public Health Service grant will be used to add additional faculty members in the Department of Epidemiology and will provide fellowships for the public health scientists in training.

"The epidemiologist is the disease detective who attempts to trace the natural history of various diseases as they affect groups of the population, Dr. McGarvran said.

"Epidemiology has supplied the answers to the control of many of the major health problems of the world such as malaries, typhoid, yellow fever, typhus and plague.

"As the program develops, it is anticipated that the amount of the grant will increase to provide opportunities for additional students to enroll in the program."

MUSIC MEET

The Southeastern Chapter of the American Musicological Society will meet Wednesday at 8 p.m. in room 108, Hill Music Hall.

As The RAM Sees

By DAVE WIBLE, Sports Editor

Old Rameses made a trip out to Finley golf course yesterday just to see what his woolly little ears could pick up, about the Carolina golf team. Rumor has it that the club, undefeated in six matches has the power to go all the way this year and take the conference championship.

The rumor is well founded as the ram discovered. At the beginning of the season, golf coach Chuck Erickson had to look over his hopefuls with a big question mark in the back of his mind. Sure, he had three returning starters from last year's team but where could he fill in from there. The season didn't look bleak, just questionable.

Linkmen Have Rough Time Starting

The openning weeks of the season were tough for the linkmen. Rain came, went, and then came back to stay longer. Qualifying rounds took twice as long as expected and several early matches had to be rescheduled and later cancelled. Four times, the Tar Heels tried to make their debut, but the lovable Chapel Hill weather held up their opening. Finally a chance came, and the season got under way against Princeton. Carolina won 20-16 but not many questions were answered since the Tigers were not rated took highly.

Thornton Shoots Record Round

Next came Virginia and Coach Erickson discovered he had his number one man in the right spot when Billy Thornton fired a seven under par 65 to establish a new course record for amatures. The Tar Heels won 15½-11½ but the Cavaliers too were not very strong.

Then came Indiana and an iron shot that kept the record clean. The teams were tied with Indiana's Royer leading Thornton going into the last hole. Boyer put his second shot with in six inches of the cup for a sure birdie three. The match was a good as won. But wait! Thornton's second shot from 3 feet out was good for an eagle two. The Tar Heels won 14-13.

Match With Davidson Shows Tom Potential

Barely undefeated in three matches against mediocre competition, the questions were still not answered. Then-a week ago today-came highly rated Davidson. With Thornton firing a three under par 69, the Heels won 16½-2½. The Tar Heel team average for the match was 71, one under par.

Saturday the South Carolina Gamecocks paid the Heels a visit, and fell. Carolina won 24½-2½ as against Davidson and the team average was 71.5. To sum up, in the last two matches, the Tar Heels are as a team shooting below par. All question marks have been erased. The Tar Heels have it, and plan to keep it. If they stay undefeated, it will almost be as great an ackomplishment as the 1956-57 basketball team made. Even in 1956 when Harvie Ward wore the blue and white, Carolina lost a few matches.

The ram decided to find out just who was slapping that ball so well for the Tar Heels. For one thing he learned that five of the six man team are seniors, Thornton, Tommy Langley, Gene Lookabill, Callicott and Charlie Erdman. The only returnee will be the fifth man John McKee, a junior.

First Three Make Solid Nucleus

Thornton is the most experienced man on the club as his score cards show. From Tequesta, Flordia, Thornton entered school here for two years before going into the service. Before he left, local folks were calling him another Harvie Ward. He returned last year to finish his education. Touring with the pros last season, he was the low amature in two major tournments. His game is strongest on the putting green. Thus far this season he has shot par once, and been under the rest of the time.

Langley is a senior from High Point. The old man of the team, he served four years in the navy before returning to Carolina in Feburary of '57. He was a nationally rated golfer as a junior player. He is a long ball hitter and rarely shoots more than par.

Lookabill is the third of the big three. He is from Charloote. Known in the state, He was the winner of many junior tournments. A selftaught golfer, he is averaging around par. He is the real competitor of the team as far as determination goes.

Newcomers Fill Out The Squad Well

These are the three Erickson had to build on. He started with a senior from Greensboro, Joe Callicott. It is Callicott's first year on the team. He soon became the surprise of the team. He followed his five under par 67 against Davidson with a two under par 70 against South Carolina to prove it wasn't luck. The team's soundest player. He has a steady all around game.

The fifth man is John McKee a junior from Morganton. McKee also did well in the junior tournments. He was a finalist in the national four ball junior tournment in 1953. His best of the season is a 69. A scramble player, he gets pars like Billy Joe Patton. His average is around the 74's.

The sixth man is Charlie Erdman a vet who did not play last year. He was a ranking junior golfer before the service. He had a two under par 70 agains South Carolina. A straight shooting golfer, he has shown great possibility.

These six have discovered their potential as a unit and they plan to use it. On May first they will play undefeated Duke, the survior more than likely the season champion in duel meets.

Number 2 Tar Heels Meet Wake Forest Away Tonight

By Rusty Hammon

Carolina's Tar Heels, just back from sweeping their 5th game in a row, return tonight to the hectic ACC baseball wars as they jouney to Winston-Salem to tangle with Wake Forest in a night game on Ernie Shore Field.

The Heels whipped East Carolina College 12-3 Saturday night, to give them an 11-5 overall record. Their 3-1 conference record is now good enough for second place in the league, as State beat Duke 4-2 Saturday to give each of those club identical 4-2 conference slates and elevate the Tar Heels one position on the totem pole. Clemson still rides high and dry at the top of the loop with an unbeaten 7-0 record.

Deacs 6-4 in League

As for tonights foe, Wake Forest, the Deacs have slipped badly this year after being penhant contenders ever since they won the National Championship in 1955. This season, however, they have managed not a single conference win against four losses. So the Baptist boys are in the cellar, but have always been known as a team to watch out for in any sport. Last week the Deac's Rex MacMiller was number 2 hitter in the conference with a 444.

Johnson Winner

Johnny Johnson got the win for Carolina over ECC in relief of starter Ben Hammett. The Tar Heels aided the mound staff with four runs in the 4th, four in the 6th, and one in the 3rd, 4th, 5th, and 8th. Footballer Don Coker gave his finest performance of the year thus far; he had two hits in four trips, including a triple. Captain and Shortstop Roger Honneycutt snapped his slump with a 3 for 4 night, including a double and a triple. Bruce Crump also had a triple for Carolina. Carolina has 3 men hitting over the .300 mark: Carson Oldman, .328; Gerald Griffin .333; and A. Pons. 300.

In all, the Tar Heel ground out 14 hits, while the two Carolina pitchers allowed the Pirates only 6.

The game tonight is scheduled to get under way at 8:00 and on the mound for Carolina will be Wayne Young in his first start since beating Duke 8-2 last week and fanning 15 men in one of the finer performances by an ACC pitcher this year.

Tar Babies Play Deaclets Today

Carolin's Tar Babies entertain Wake Forest's Baby Deacs here today in a double-header beginning at 1:30 this afternoon.

The Tar Babies won their last game 12-3 over Oak Ridge, giving them a fine 6-1 record for the year.

Jerry McNell got the win for Carolina, though he got help in the latter innings. Leading the hitting attack for the frosh were Ferg Norton with three hits, and Carroll Bolick with a bases-loaded double which scored three runs.

Carolina amassed 12 hits as compared to six for Oak Ridge. A sweep today would look good to new coach Pat Earey and his squad.

Tomorrow the Tar Babies will meet South Carolina's frosh here in a single game.

Net Squad Plays Va. Here Today

By ELLIOTT COOPER

Carolina's undefeated varsity tennis team goes after its fifth conference victory of the season this afternoon when it entertains undefeated Virginia on the home courts at 3:30.

The Tar Heel netters are presently at the top of the ACC standings with a 4-0 league mark. After today's match only Duke and defending champion Maryland remain on the Tar Heels conference schedule.

Last weekend the Carolina squad polished off South Carolina and Clemson by scores of 9-0 and 8-1. In addition to conference wins over State and Wake Forest, the varsity net crew has beaten Williams, Harvard, and Illinois.

For Virginia coach Carl Rohmann this season marks his eighteenth year as head man of the Cavalier net team. Last year Virginia compiled a 10-4 overall record, and tied Clemson for third place in the final ACC standing with a 4-2 conference mark.

Coach Rohmann has five lettermen returning to this year's squad in the person of Bruce Bahr, Louis Elnwick, Robert Gugenheim, Robert Moore, and Sheery Snyder.

Carolina coach Vladimir Cernick will send practically the same lineup against the Cavaliers that he used last weekend in South. Carolina. Captain Bob Bortner will play in the top spot followed by Steve Bank in the second position. Junior Geoff Black will play three with Malcolm Clark and Ben Keys in the four and five spots. Either Marshall Happer or Dick Makepeace will be the sixth man.

Unbeaten Link Men Challenge Clemson Today

Averaging under par as a team for the last two matches, the hot shooting Carolina golf team will go against the Clemson Tigers on Finley course this afternoon.

The Tar Heels are undefeated in six starts. They won their last two matches against Davidson and South Carolina by identical scores, 24½-2½. Against Davidson the squad averaged as a team 71, one under par for the course. Against the Gamecocks the squad's average was .5 of a stroke higher.

Carolina coach Chuck Erickson will use the same six that as a team, hit a very hot streak. Billy Thornton, meadlist in three matches this season, will be playing number one. Down the line will be Tom Langley, Gene Lookabill, Joe Callicott, John McKee and Charlie Erdman.

This sextet appears to be the strongest in the conference to date, with a good chance of taking the conference crown. Duke, also undefeated will be main barrier along the way. The teams will meet in a mtach here on May first.

Sunday, Coach Erickson took a squad of 18 to play the members of Highland Country Club in Fayetteville. Freshman Ed Justa, North Carolina junior was low as the Carolina squad won 40-14.

The team's next match will be here with Maryland Saturday.

Men's Honor Council Set-Up To Be Explained This Evening

By WYNDHAM HEWITT

All the men on campus will get a chance tonight to learn what the new organization of the Men's Honor Council is all about. This subject will be discussed in dormitory and fraternity meetings throughout the campus.

There has been much discussion and debate on the reorganization of the Men's Council in the last few months. Those meetings are aimed at trying to explain the new system and correcting past erroneous statements.

The Men's Honor Council stated that because of the debate and discussion and erroneous statements the student body as whole does not have a clear view of the reorganized body.

Hugh Patterson, chairman of the Men's Honor Council said," It is not only a student's privilege, but his responsibility to be informed on matters of Student Government with which he is directly concerned. It is my sincere desire that all students will see fit to attend these various meeting, for only in that way will our new jury system prosper."

Under the new system the Attorney General and his staff investigate the case and present it before the court. The innocence or guilt is decided by a jury of nine men. On this jury are two permanent jurors and seven appointed jurors. The Honor Council will decide the sentence of the violator after the jury has given their decision of guilt or innocence.

Openings Announced On Summer IFC Court

In its regular meeting Monday night, the Interfraternity Council asked for applicants for posts on the summer session IFC Court.

Membership on the Court is open to all fraternity men on Campus who plan to attend summer school.

Anyone wishing to apply should contact Tucker Yates, president of the IFC, at the Alpha Tau Omega house.

It was also announced at the meeting that the R. B. House trophy for the most outstanding fraternity on campus will be presented at the IFC meeting on Monday, May 12.

Bob Bender, chairman of the rush committee, designated the week of September 28 and October 4, 1958 and as the best time for formal rush to be held next fall and that the date was approved by the body.

A report on the Southeastern Interfraternity Convention held recently in Gainesville, Ga., was given. It included information on rush and fraternity finances.

Hugh Patterson, a member of the Honor Council, asked the IFC if the individual fraternities would give 15 minutes of Wednesday night's chapter meeting to an Honor Council member, who would explain the workings and implications of the new jury system. The request was granted.

Orientation Interviews

Thursday will be makeup day for men who have not yet had their orientation counselor interviews. The Orientation Committee will interview from 4 until 5:30 Thursday afternoon and from 7:30 until 9 Thursday night. This will be the last day of interviews and anyone who has not taken the test or had an interview is urged to contact the orientation office at 9460.

Medical School Sets Second Parents' Day

The second annual Parents' Day at the UNC School of Medicine will be held Saturday. According to V. G. Herring Jr. of Goldsboro, president of the UNC Medical Parents' Club, invitations to participate in the activities are being sent to medical students and their parents and to faculty members of the School of medicine.

Last year over 400 parents, students and faculty members with their wives took part in the program. Plans are now being made for the program this year which is expected to be "interesting, informative and fun," it was reported.

Inter-Dormitory Council Honorary Society, 3:30-4:40 p.m., Grail Room; Pan Hellenic Council, 5-6 p.m., Grail Room; Women's Residence Council, 4-6 p.m., Roland Parker Lounge 1; Bridge Lessons, 7-10 p.m., Roland Parker Lounge I; Orientation Council Interviews, 2-4 p.m. and 7-10 p.m., Woodhouse Conference Room; Kappa, 7-9 p.m., Roland Parker Lounge II; Carolina Forum, 4-5 p.m., Woodhouse Conference Room; Independent Women's Association, 7-8 p.m., Grail Room; Stray Greeks, 4-5 p.m., Roland Parker Lounge II.

Patterson Selected To Write TR Pageant

Thomas M. Patterson, assistant director of the Carolina Playmakers and associate professor in the Department of Dramatic Art, has been commissioned to write the Theodore Roosevelt National Memorial Play to be presented this summer in North Dakota as part of the National Centennial Celebration of Theodore Roosevelt's birth.

According to Patterson, who has been a member of the University faculty since 1950, his principal problem in writing the play is not a lack of dramatic material, but rather a lack of time, since he has only two months to write a full-length play.

Patterson commented that the tentative title of the play, which is expected to open June 29 and which will run several summers, is "Old Four-Eyes," the frontiersman's nickname for Roosevelt.

"It was first used contemptuously, but it wasn't too long before the 'punkin lily' dude from the East had won considerable respect for himself and his nickname had become a term of endearment," Patterson explained.

The Theodore Roosevelt National Memorial Park and Badlands Association is producing the play, which will be staged in Burning Gulch near the little ghost town of Medora.

Patterson noted, "Roosevelt owned two ranches, one to the south of town and one to the north. The town was founded 1883 by the Marquis de Mores, who hoped to put the meat packers of Chicago out of business. As colorful a figure as the millionaire Frenchman was, it was young, bespectacled, asthmatic Theodore Roosevelt who left his mark on the Badlands," he added.

The play will tell the story of Roosevelt's ranching days in the Badlands of Dakota, where he took an active part in bringing law and order to the last great refuge of the horse thief and the cattle rustler.

Symposium Interim Head Position Open

Students interested in serving as Carolina Symposium Interim Chairman have been asked to apply at the Symposium Office in Graham Memorial. Those interested in Interim Committee membership have also been urged to apply.

Application may be made by turning a written statement at Roland Parker Lounge I. The applicant should give his reasons for desiring the position, past experience, suggestions for what he would like to see accomplished and any other pertinent information.

Commenting on the applications, Symposium Chairman Sonny Hallford said, "I would like to urge all interested persons to apply. The Interim Chairman and Committee can accomplish a great deal as they prepare for the 1960 symposium."

Germans Dance

Brown Featured Friday Night

Les Brown and his Band of Renown will get into full swing as they play for the Spring Germans dance Friday night from 9 till 1

According to Mark Cherry, president of the German's Club, dinner jackets will be required for all men attending the dance.

"The dance should be the best yet," stated Cherry when commenting on the appearance of the Les Brown Band.

The band has been featured on the Bob Hope television show for several years. They have played for more college dances than any other band in America.

Les Brown holds the record at the Hollywood Palladium for number of engagements. He also holds the attendance record of this famous Hollywood ballroom.

Nine months out of the year, the band stays in California where it plays for the Bob Hope show. About six trips a year are taken to other parts of the country where they play mostly for colleges.

Brown is making his second appearance on the Carolina campus in the past several years. He was featured at the Germans two years ago.

Track Teams Of 1910-14 Plan Reunion Tomorrow

By JIM HARPER

Tomorrow, in conjunction with the Carolina-University of Virginia varsity track meet, the Tar Heel track squads of 1910-1914 coached by Nat Cartmell will hold a reunion with their former coach at Fetzer Field.

Coach Cartmell, in his five year stay at Carolina as head track coach, compiled a 9-1 record for regular season meets, and captured four state championships. In addition, Carolina met and defeated NCA&M (N. C. State) in the first State Cross Country Run in 1912.

Among the returning stars will be Daniel McGregor Williams, and Earl Victor Patterson, captains of the 1910 and 1913 squads. Others expected to attend are Merritt Blalock, (UNC '13) Collier Cobb ('14) Robert Haynes ('12), Joseph Hoffman ('10), Thomas Lorens ('11), William Parsley ('11), Thomas Price ('12), Harry Solomon ('11), Robert Winston ('12) and Philip Woollcott ('15).

The personal homecoming of Coach Cartmell will begin tomorrow afternoon when he will be at Fetzer Field to meet the members of the 1958 track squad, after which he will attend an informal dinner at the Carolina Inn.

On Thursday morning Coach Cartmell will meet with Chancellor Aycock, and have luncheon at the Carolina Inn. The UNC-Virginia meet will begin at 3:00, to be followed by a cocktail party for the former athletes at the home of Collier Cobb in Chapel Hill. As a climax of the day's events, the entire group will meet in a general assembly of the UNC Alumni Association in the Carolina Inn ballroom at 6:30.

Deadline To Apply For Grad Counselor Sat.

Saturday is the deadline to apply for orientation counselor in the graduate division.

Interested persons may get application blanks at the YMCA office. The committee wants members from various departments.

Counselors are expected to return to Carolina on the morning of September 17 for two days of orientation program. One spring meeting will be held to organize the activities.

Free Bridge Lessons

Free bridge lessons sponsored by GMAB's Recreation Committee will be given tonight in the Rendezvous Room from 7-10.

The lessons, which have been taught since the first of the semester, had to be discontinued because of the teacher's illness. However, a new teacher, Phillip Straus, will teach from now until the end of the semester.

Straus, a native on New York, is a senior at UNC and is a Junior Master at bridge. He has played in tournaments in Raleigh and in Morehead City.

Honor Society In History Holds Initiation

Phi Alpha Theta President Taylor Albert announced Tuesday the initiation of 25 new members into the Delta Pi Chapter of Phi Alpha Theta, national history honorary society, held Monday, March 31, 1958.

The society, which requires an A-B average for new initiates, includes faculty members, graduate and undergraduates students of the history department.

Majority Oppose New Rules At Residence Council Meet

By STAN BLACK

The Women's Residence Council held an open meeting last in Graham Memorial in order that the students might express their opinions on the proposed rules changes for freshman women. A number of student leaders, both men and women, spoke on the changes, in a ratio of about two to one against them.

Lillian Shannonhouse, president of WRC and moderator of the discussion, began with a general statement of the Residence Council's position on the changes. She said that the rules are "not to restrict the girls," but rather to help them to "ease into" University life. It was pointed out in rebuttal to this argument that the freshmen women entering Carolina have always been of high intelligence and maturity.

Al Goldsmith, student legislator and former UP floor leader, remarked that freshmen women have continually had an outstanding scholastic average. He stated that he was neither for nor against the measures on an absolute basis, but that he disagreed with the view that there are existing academic or social reasons for many of them. He suggested that the 11:30 lights section and the closed study section be struck from the rules because the lights rule was clearly unenforceable and the closed study rule would prevent the freshmen from attending the many cultural and educational programs that are strong points of the University's educational opportunities.

Julia Ann Crater, past president of WRC, pointed out that the proposed changes have been under two year's thoughtful consideration by the Residence Council and the Dean of Women's office, which assists in an advisory capacity. Stating that most girls come from strict environments into the University, she felt that the rules could serve as "guideposts" to proper conduct for entering fresh men, whom she compared to "puppies needing some leash."

Ann Bachman, who is a senior history major from Baltimore, Md., said that, on the contrary, most girls have more freedom at home than they would have under the new rules. Along the same lines Francis Reynolds, former chairman of the Women's Athletic Assn., brought out the fact that there was a basic conflict between the strict rules system and the more liberal attitude based on the responsibility and maturity of the freshman women.

Don Furtado, student body president, agreed with WRC that there should be equality under rules of Nursing students and other freshmen women, but that we should not "regress," but rather tend toward more student freedom. Sonny Evans, former president, stated that the rules seem to work for a better "tradition of study," but in reality they would only undermine the Honor System through obvious frequent violation. The changes were termed "restrictions rather than aids for adjustment" by Anthony Wolff, Daily Tar Heel columnist.

Angel Flight Entertains Sixty Girls

Angel Flight, sponsors for the Air Force ROTC, entertained 60 girls who had been nominated as sponsors at a tea Tuesday afternoon.

After the tea the nominees were interviewed individually by a selections board and twelve girls were chosen from the group.

The nominees were judged on four qualities: poise, appearance, personality and interest.

Pi Beta Phi Sorority Installs New Officers

The Pi Beta Phi sorority installed new officers for 1958-59 on April 2.

Included as the new officers were Betty Root, president; Carolyn Vaught, vice-president and personnel; Jane Davis, recording secretary; Joyce King Strickland, corresponding secretary; Jane Hatchett, treasurer; Joy Howell, social chairman; Molly Bass, scholarship chairman; Nancy Adams, rush chairman and Ginny Pearce, pledge trainer.

Student Council Report Lists Fourteen Cases

The Student Council has heard 14 cases to date this year, according to a report submitted by John Owens, clerk of the Student Council.

Twelve of the cases involved the Campus Code, and two involved appeals from lower courts concerning questions of constitutionality.

The Council tried violations involving: indecent exposure, larceny, public drunkeness and disorderly conduct, breaking and entering, and public property destruction.

In its decisions thus far, two students have been suspended form school; one for indecent exposure, and one for drunkenness and disorderly conduct involving breaking into a house. Two have been placed on probation, and three have been given official reprimands.

Out of the remaining Campus Code violations tried, three have been found not guilty, and two were dismissed for lack of evidence.

"In each case, the council has dealt with the problem of maintaining a proper student awareness of what the Campus Code entails, hoping to enforce and promote gentlemanly conduct at and away from the University," said Owens.

In his report he went on to say that in the majority of cases tried, it was apparent that student's mistakes were not ones of a habitual nature, but pointed up a lack of leadership, immaturity or intemperance.

"In most instances, it was found that although students were somewhat aware of the details of the Campus Code; there still exists a definite needs for a greater understanding and practice of gentlemanly conduct," he added.

Specifically, the Campus Code states that "Every student shall conduct himself as a gentleman at all times, and insofar as it may be appropriate ,to see that his fellow students do likewise."

Sixty Compete In Master Point Bridge Play

Sixty bridge players participated in the April Master Point game Monday night at Graham Memorial.

The winners of the all-student section are Bill Neustadt and Jim McGee, first place; Kenneth Moser and Norvel Crawford (Duke), second place; Don Gray and Jim Butler, third place.

East-West winners were: Mrs. Anne and Gray McAllister, first place; Bill Reister and Steve Rough, second place; Miss Pace Barnes and Joe Rand, third place.

The director announced that membership in the club is still open. It is not necessary to join in order to play, but any Carolina bridge player has been invited to join the club.

Johns Hopkins Vice-President To Speak Today

Dr. William Barry Wood, vice-president of Johns Hopkins University, will deliver the annual Whitehead Lecture at the UNC School of Medicine today at 4 p. m.

Dr. Wood, speaking in the Clinic Auditorium, will lecture on "The Central Roll of Endogenous Pyrogen in the Genesis of Fever."

The lectures are sponsored by the Whitehead Medical Society. The society was organized in 1908 and named in honor of Dr. Richard H. Whitehead, the first dean of the School of Medicine.

Dr. Wood did his undergraduate work at Harvard and was awarded an M. D. degree by John Hopkins in 1936. His internship and residency also were served at Hopkins.

From 1942-5 he was professor of medicine at Washington University and physician in chief at Barnes Hospital, both in St. Louis.

Seven Coeds Seek Beauty Title

A total of seven Carolina coeds have entered the Miss Chapel Contest.

Vying with three Chapel Hill girls in the local elimination judging for the Miss American Contest next summer, the girls will be rated on both talent and personal appearance.

The three final entries were announced Monday, by Pageant Co-Chairman Lyman Wilkins. They are Misses Cecilia Husbands and Kay Proctor, Chapel Hill, coeds at the University of North Carolina, and Helen Adock, also a UNC coed.

The public is invited to attend the Jaycee-sponsored Pageant, to be staged at 8 p.m. Thursday in the Chapel Hill High School auditorium.

Other Entrants

The other entrants for the title are Misses Gail Minnich, Ruth Hoffman, Diana Johnson, and Louise Crumbley. The winner is to receive a $200 check for college scholarship purposes, a wardrobe, and will represent Chapel Hill in the Miss North Carolina Pageant this summer.

The Pageant Chairman said that previous entrants in the Pageant would model Miss Chapel Hill's wardrobe as a part of the entertainment program. Models will be Joanne Aldridge, the reigning beauty queen, wearing an evening gown; Judy Dockery, wearing a bathing suit; and Clara Tucker, sports outfit.

Several other entertainment features are also planned on the program Jim Crisp's combo will play for the event.

Judges will be N. C. Jaycees President Jack Sharpe of Kannapolis, Elaine Herndon of Durham—Miss North Carolina, Mrs. J. B. Brame of Durham, Past N. C. Jaycees President Bill Henderson of Raleigh, and newspaper columnist Charles Craven of Raleigh.

Entrants will have their final rehearsal on Wednesday evening. On Thursday they will dine at The Pines with the judges, as a part of the judging. Later they will make stage appearances in evening gowns and bathing suits, in addition to presenting their talent.

Congress & The Court

There is currently pending in Congress a set of laws dealing with the powers of the Supreme Court of the United States.

The set of laws, under aegis of Sens. Butler and Jenner, would restrict the court's jurisdiction in cases involving admission of lawyers to practice in state courts, and cases challenging the pertinency of questions asked them by Congressional investigating committees.

There is another proposal which would circumvent the Court's decision that government employees may only be fired as security risks in "sensitive" jobs.

The power of the Supreme Court has often been questioned in the past. But it remains at the present time the single place where individual rights can be preserved from Congressional or state legislation, which would or could abridge these rights.

The cases that are involved in the new pending legislation are all cases which do involve the principle of individual rights.

A lawyer does not have to be out of work in his state, unless there can be shown justifiable cause why he cannot practice. This is part of the equal opportunity principle which is very much ingrained into American democratic theory. The lawyer should have the right to find out from the highest possible soufce, those things that he is lacking in order to be able to practice. He ought also to be able to practice, although a state's political make-up at any particular time might bar him.

The Supreme Court as the organization, which is national in scope and which is able to protect the individual's rights according to the Constitution of the United States rather than the Constitution of state A or state B, should have the power to rule on the justification of the individual's right to practice.

The second case is more blatantly clear. There are often questions asked in a Congressional hearing which are not proper in a court of law. However, unless these questions can justifiably be sidestepped by the Fifth Amendment, the witness must answer the legislators or face contempt of Congress proceedings. The answer that he makes to these questions should not be evidence in a court of law, since they are improper in a court of law.

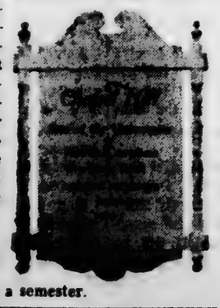
The process of justice is not to punish the guilty, but to protect the innocent, and every possible opportunity for the individual to keep his innocence should be afforded. Congressional committees should not serve the functions of prosecuting attorneys. They should furthermore not try to prevent the judicial structure of the nation from protecting the innocence of any individual.

The Court, then, should be allowed to review cases where questions of Congressional Committee procedure are called into question.

The last bill, the Jenner legislation, is a deliberate attempt to preserve the current loyalty-security program which already is in violation of individual rights.

In simple words, branding an individual with the stamp of "security risk," without the individual having the ability to clear loyalty-security program which already is in dividual rights under the Constitution of the United States. And this goes for "sensitive" as well as "non-sensitive" jobs.

What is more important, the Jenner bill is doing something that Roosevelt never tried to do, when there was a furor about Roosevelt and the Court.



Sen. Jenner is placing the system of checks and balances out of balance, by declaring that Congress has the right to overrule the court. What he is simply saying is that the body which is supposed to interpret the Constitution shouldn't do that job in the future. Moreover, if the bill passes, the power of the court in the future will be nil, for it will be unable to overrule legislation by any Congress which has passed a bill in violation of the Constitution.

The Supreme Court has never been perfect. It will never give, over the process of years, the same interpretation of the Constitution, as long as men think differently from other men.

Yet, the Court remains the one safeguard for individual rights. To abridge the power that the Court has would be disastrous.

State Of The Campus

Don Furtado

COED RULES

The tenth problem area concerns what may be realistically called a regression in the Carolina tradition of student freedom and responsibility. More specifically, it concerns the proposal of the Women's Residence Council to place restrictions on Freshmen women as to study hours, overnight permission, lights out, living areas, and closing hours which do not apply to the remainder of women on the campus. The seriousness of this proposal is not evident at first glance. Student government here at Carolina has a long and proud history. For many years it has been renowned for its traditions of mature individual responsibility. A plan which removes that tradition of student responsibility should never come from a branch of our student government. I think that the proposals were submitted by the Women's Residence Council with the sincere feeling that they were doing the right thing. However, I believe that they were forgetting that this is not Saint Mary's, or Randolph-Macon, or Agnes-Scott, or some similar girl's school, but that this is the University of North Carolina . . . a school which has for years fought any policy of discrimination because of age or class. It is true that these rules will apply only to freshmen and that in many other schools rules of such a nature are found. We even find rules very similar to these in the Nursing School. But this does not make it right. The battle of the WRC to equalize the rules has gone in the wrong direction. If we desire to have a standard policy for all girls, then let us fight for a liberalization of the present rules of the Nursing School, but never should we regress and penalize the rest of the campus because of an undesireable set of rules elsewhere.

The record of the freshman girls who have lived under the very same rules as the upperclassmen this past year is truly amazing. Moreover, there is no reason to believe that the strict entrance requirements will be lowered next year. It seems very premature to apply such unprecedented ruled until such a time as the record of the freshmen women seems to indicate that it might be necessary. It is my understanding that the Women's Residence Council is planning to review its proposals. When it does so, it is my fervent request that they remember that this is the University of North Carolina, a place where individuals are judged not on their age or class, but on their actions. I hope that the result of their reconsideration of the proposals will be that they recognize the inappropriateness of additional restrictions.

These are but a few of the problems which we, as students here at Carolina, must face in the coming year. They may seem very awesome and difficult to surmount, as most of them are. Some of them will probably not be solved in the next year. However, I promise you that I will do everything in my power to lead a united student battle for their solution. We must never content ourselves with mediocrity and contentment with a job halfway done, but must continue to contribute to our long-standing tradition of outspoken student initiative.

I dare each of you to join in our battle.

TELEVISION

6 P.M.—Channel 4—The Subject is Jazz

John Hammond, one of the more interesting jazz commentators, discusses the phenomenon of "Swing."

The novel from which this play is adapted was written by a Polish journalist and an American architect while they were imprisoned together by the Polish Security Police. Living in constant fear of death, and ignorant of the purpose for which they were being held, the two men spent their time composing this story—first in their heads, and later on paper.

KEEP ON THE GRASS!

It is hereby noted with considerable chagrin that preparations are being made to surround what is left of the campus grass with wire fencing.

It has no doubt been noticed by many of the students that the good earth hereabouts is all but nude; so many students have crushed the verdure under their feet that it has all but given up the ghost.

Evidently, the Administration considers this a Bad Thing, and they are in the process of taking action to safeguard the grass from the students.

Such precautions against the destruction of the local greenery would be commendable, except for one thing: it is in most cases impossible to go directly from any one building on this campus to any other building without trespassing on the now-sacred grass. This is ridiculous; the campus is so spread out that cutting corners becomes practically the only alternative to cutting classes.

In most cases, the students are fairly consistent in their choice of short-cuts. It would be much more intelligent of the administration to let them walk where they will, thus wearing paths in along the most practical routes; these could be paved, and everyone, presumably, would be happy.

As it is, the Administration seems more concerned with the symmetry of the campus that its functionality. Symmetry is fine in Greek temples and such, but on a modern campus it is a sign of superficial order at the expense of the true business of the institution.

Those students who have in the past sacrificed the mirror polish on their shoes to the superior achievement of getting somewhere more efficiently are to be commended. It is to be hoped that they will undergo the slight further inconvenience of gracefully hopping the fences (short individuals may go under) in order to hold to their accustomed course. There are probably some members of the Administration who would do well to follow the leader.

Ben Franklin, The Comics And Credits Of The Year

Whit Whitfield

Since Benjamin Franklin is not generally considered a cynic and since we are widely considered so, we would like to quote from this immortal what several pages of print in our column could not say so well. (For those of you who are comic-strip readers, Franklin was an 18th century comic book publisher).

It goes as follows:

"That few in public affairs act from a mere view of the good of their country, whatever they may pretend; and tho' their actings bring real good to their country, yet men primarily considered that their own and their country's interest was united and did not act from a principle of benevolence.

"That fewer still in public affairs act with a view to the good of mankind."

In order to make the quotation more useful to the "men of public affairs" here at the university, the word "campus" could easily replace "country."

All this from a comic book publisher.

While a member of a treaty delegation in his early years, Franklin admitted that rum was used to pacify the savages and make them more agreeable. On one particular occasion Franklin's party "paid" the Indians off with rum and they became so unruly as to give considerable uneasiness to the white men during the night. The next morning one of the old counselors of the tribe appeared before the white men and said, "The Great Spirit who made all things made everything for a purpose, and whatever use he designed anything for that use it should always be put to. Now, when he made rum, he said, 'Let this be for Indians to get drunk with.' And it must be so."

To this, Franklin replied, "And indeed if it be the design of Providence to extirpate these savages in order to make room for cultivators of the earth, it seems not improbable that rum may be the appointed means."

Now, by just exchanging "fools" for Indians you have quite an appropriate (and contemporary) piece of wisdom. (This is not a paid ad for the WCTU.)

Now that the academic year is drawing to a close it might be a good idea to congratulate those people or organizations who have done a creditable job this year (a credit where credit is due bit). And they are:

The RAM & EWE staff, for presenting us with the best semi-annual humor magazine that we have had this year.

Lenoir Hall, for being the best durn cafeteria on campus and the nearest for cigarettes to the library.

Aycock Dorm, for trying to get their composite quality point average up to 1.000 for the second semester.

Jonathan Yardley, for presenting the best pediatric (for dogs?) treatise this year.

The Lower Quad, for stifling the panty raids for so long.

And last, but not least, to Student Government leaders, for their clarification of major nebulous issues on campus.

One of the sociology instructors informed his class that North Carolina formerly spent MORE per year on guana (high grade fertilizer) than on education. Isn't this rather axiomatic? . . . If the column by J. Y. on Friday's edit page was a "POST-SCRIPT," then we'd very much like to see the letter that preceded it . . . Some of you seniors with no job prospects might consider going to Cuba or C. A. Join up with the winning side (after a careful evaluation of the situation) and your chances of grabbing off a high paying government job are excellent, even though there is little security.

Rule's Roost

Paul Rule

There comes a time in the life of every town when the question arises: to meter or not to meter. This seems to be a problem facing Chapel Hill as far as parking is concerned. The cars of students and townspeople filter into the business district in increasing numbers and the city fathers turn to thoughts of the seemingly inevitable parking meters.

It is our thought that perhaps there is a more efficient answer to Chapel Hill parking woes, an answer that would revolutionize the automobile industry.

Instead of the "forward look," why not have the "downward look?" In other words, make cars the same width and length they are now but only six inches high.

All cars would have to be convertibles, of course, until people could be shrunk to fit them.

With these flat cars it would be possible to park several deep. For example, when a shopper went downtown, instead of looking for a space he'd simply park on a Packard, Ford or other convenient vehicle.

Naturally in order to maintain balance the smaller cars would have to be parked on the larger ones. For this the city would need a machine to come along ever so often, pick up a pile of cars, and shuffle them into the proper order.

This device would have to be kept well regulated. An experimental model went haywire and dealt three Studebakers from the bottom of the deck.

It would be necessary to make these "downward look" cars slippery so that if a shopper's auto was third or fourth down in the pile he could grab it by the bumper and pull it out without disturbing the others.

Many folks feel that the use of parking meters in a town close to Durham and Raleigh like we are would drive business out of town and do no more to relieve parking troubles than one hour parking limits without meters. Perhaps these people will agree with us that the "downward look" would be no more radical a thought than the use of the more conventional meters.

Education And Freedom In Focus

Louis M. Hacker

(This is the fifth part of Dr. Hacker's article which appeared in last week's issue of The Nation.)

Granting, in this troubled world of ours, that security is a proper public concern, it must be recognized that any security program is restrictive of the free communication which, as I have pointed out, scholarship and science must have to advance. We must recognize, particularly in regard to science, that we have pushed over-compartmentalization and overclassification, both internally and externally, much too far. And when security, as Professor Shils so cogently points out is mixed with considerations of maximal loyalty, the automony of science is in real danger. Thus, the automony of science is infringed when scientists are prevented, for extra-scientific reasons, from working on problems on which research is possible. It is infringed when scientists are unable to leave America or when foreign scientists are prevented from coming to America to attend meetings and conferences and to lecture at universities. It is infringed when the Post Office and the Customs Service prevent American scholars and scientists from having complete access by subscription and purchase to the newspapers, journals and other publications of other lands.

RESTRAINTS

A good part of these undesirable restraints have flowed from government financing of university science. In this connection, the Council of the American Association for the Advancement of Seience has declared:

Government support has been accompanied by influences which are in some respects inimical to the basic needs of science. Complete freedom of communication regardless of national boundaries is an essential aspect of science; nevertheless, along with government support American science has been burdened with practices that restrict the free flow of information. The interchange of scientific information is sometimes restricted unduly by the overclassification of data that affects national security.

The price of freedom, obviously, is responsibility and today, particularly, the obligations of the world of learning are heavy. Universities cannot command the respect they must have unless they eschew all those demands on them—whether to furnish entertainment for the outside world and their alumni, needlessly attenuate their curriculums, provide unneeded services for their students—which have nothing to do with the advancement and diffusion of knowledge and speculative research. They must live austerely, managing their resources with the economy and efficiency which we demand of government and business enterprise. There is an enormous amount of waste today in university management in part because university administrators are unfamiliar with financial procedures, in part because they too easily take on commitments under the pressures of would-be benefactors. University administrators should have the courage to say "no" to proffers of financial support for undesirable and unnecessary purposes just as they should seek help for legitimate ones. There must be more cooperation among universities in forming library collections, setting up specialized institutes and starting and maintaining scholarly journals. They must pay their faculties well to prevent them from seeking unduly additional sources of employment and by better salaries to obtain for them that regard from the outside world which they rightfully should have.

At the same time, universities must keep an open mind and an open door to experimentation in new disciplines and skills. They must constantly expand the educated class, for in the final analysis the protection of learning will come here. If more and more men will become convinced—and they can be, because they are educable—that speculative effort, or free inquiry, leads to truth, then the university is safe and privacy is safeguarded. By the same token, the stability and progress of society demand more and more training at middle as well as at advanced levels. Universities have a responsibility toward selecting and educating men and women who ultimately will enter into the field of higher learning itself. With this objective there obviously can be no compromise, although in the selection process there is no certainty that youthful promise inevitably leads to adult maturity and creativity. I say, flatly, that the only purpose of the university is not the education of Ph.D.s and therefore only future university professors.

Different kinds of training for what we are beginning to call a mass democracy, in consequence, are required; as well as all kinds of terminal degrees, and programs and courses that do not need degrees at all.

If universities are going to be restrictive, selective and elitist—as too many privately-supported institutions have announced they plan to be, constantly raising the requirements for admission and refusing to make adequate plans to expand with our suddenly growing population—they will perforce shut their doors to the great majority of young people and adults who are not only educable but whose trained services we so desperately need. There is no magic in smallness. The great success of the University of California and the New York municipal colleges, as distinguished institutions of learning, proves that quality and size are not necessarily contradictory.

Hodges Answers Criticism

RALEIGH—(AP)—Gov. Hodges declared emphatically yesterday there was "no deal with anyone" involved in his appointment of B. Everett Jordan to the U. S. Senate. And, Hodges added, the appointment was "not a seat - warming proposition."

The governor said this at his news conference in answer to criticism of his action in naming Jordan, Saxapahaw industrialist and Democratic national committeeman, to fill the vacancy left by the death of Sen. W. Kerr Scott.

There had been criticism in some newspapers and from Scott backers that Hodges expected Jordan to step down in 1960 so that Hodges himself could run for the Senate in 1960.

Hodges said he had never given five minutes thought to whether he would run for the Senate in 1960 and did not know whether he would have run against Scott if the senator had lived.

He said he felt "it was a good appointment."

"If I had been selfishly ambitious, politically ambitious, I could have taken this job myself," Hodges said.

He meant by this that he could have arranged things so that Lt. Gov. Luther Barnhardt would have succeeded him as governor and Hodges, in turn, would have succeeded Scott in the Senate. He said many people had urged him to do this, but "I did not even consider it."

Earlier, Jordan at Roanoke, Va., also had asserted there was no deal involved in his taking the appointment.

He added that although 1960 was a long way off any many things could happen, he planned to remain in the Senate in 1960 "if I can."

Hodges said he hopes Jordan will run for reelection in 1960 "if he does a good job."

Election Day Is Tomorrow At Wake Forest

WINSTON-SALEM—(AP)—After experiencing a much quieter than usual political campaign, the Wake Forest college student body elects new officers tomorrow.

A campus political shakeup has seen the birth of two new major parties, Campus and United. Eight of the social fraternities are aligned with the Campus Party and two with the United Party.

The usual flood of posters, literature and rallies has been cut to a trickle, possibly because the change in parties threw campaign schedules off.

Candidates for the student body presidency are Charlie Rooks of Whiteville, a United Party nominee, and Harvey Durham of Thomasville, Ga., the Campus Party selection. There are 66 candidates for the 38 offices. Voting will run from 8 a. m. until 5 p.m. in the East wing of Reynolds Hall.

Murray Greason of Winston-Salem and Charles Deane of Rockingham are running for vice-president. Marlene McLamb of Salemburg and Leah Lee of Rocky Mount are the candidates for secretary. Earl Shaw of Weldon is unopposed for treasurer.

Heart-Lung Machine To Be Demonstrated

A demonstration of an artificial heart-lung machine is among the day-long activities that will be held at the UNC School of Medicine in connection with the second annual Parent's Day Saturday.

The artificial heart-lung machine is used in delicate operations in the heart and on the major arteries leading from the heart.

The demonstration will be conducted by two senior medical students, Hervy Averett of Fayetteville and Dewey Pate, New Bern. Explanations of the machine will be given by Dr. Richard Peters and Dr Richard Murtland, both of the Department of Surgery

Last year the event was attended by over 400 parents, students and faculty members. The purpose of the Parent's Club is to keep parents informed of the schools activities, enlist the interest of parents in the School of Medicine and foster a close and enthusiastic Medical School-parent relationship.

The program will begin with registration in the lobby of N. C. Memorial Hospital at 9:30 a. m. This will be followed by a tour of the hospital and the School of Medicine.

Old Time Track Teams Honor Cartmell Today

One of Carolina's most colorful old time athletic coaches and a group of men whom he taught the skills back yonder, will be honored here today and tomorrow.

Nat Cartmell of Forest Hills, L. I., New York, is the mentor, now retired, and the occasion will be a reunion of his Carolina track teams, embracing the years of 1910-1914.

Current coach Dale Ranson, who is chairman of local arrangements, says eleven members of these teams, one coming from as far away as Cuba, have accepted invitations. In all, 36 of the old time runners and field men are living.

The alumnus living in Cuba suggested the reunion and is honorary chairman. He is Thomas Vicante Llorens of Central Palms, Oriente, a civil engineer who also engages in the sugar industry.

Cartmell will be the center of attraction. Now 75 years old and retired since July, 1956, Cartmell had a long and illustrious experience as a coach. He is remembered here as a dynamic, colorful instructor who had a lot of fun in his work. Cartmell coached the first UNC cross country team and is credited with originating state high school track meets.

He coached track at a number of other schools, including Penn State (10 years), Princeton, Manhattan, United States Military Academy and Fordham. He also coached some basketball and served as a football trainer at several institutions.

Others, in addition to Cartmell and Llorens who have accepted invitations, are Merritt E. (Molly) Blalock, Sanford farmer; Collier Cobb, Jr., Chapel Hill realtor and insurance man; Joseph F. Hoffman, High Point druggist; William M. Parsley, Charlotte insurance adjustor; Earle V. Patterson, Burlington contractor; William H. Patterson, Baton Rouge, La., contractor; Harry M. Solomon, Wilmington merchant; Richard G. Stockton, Winston-Salem banker; Daniel McWilliams, with the Durham city water department.

The reunion program includes the Virginia-UNC track meet Thursday.

Yanks Defeat Boston

NEW YORK (AP)— The New York Yankees pounded three triples and a home run in one inning-the fourth-during which they scored seven runs and went on to defeat Boston 12-7 Tuesday. It was their sixth straight victory and completed a sweep of the two-game series with the Red Sox.

Dave Sisler, the only pitcher to defeat the Yankees this year, was the victim of a major portion of the assault. The bespectacled right-hander, who beat the Yankees 3-1 last week quit under the fourth inning barrage, after yielding triples to Bobby Richardson and Hank Bauer and a home run to Gil McDougald.

Left-handed Bob Smith, his replacement, was socked for a two-run triple by Andy Carey and singles by Norm Siebern and Richardson before he finally retired the side.

The Yankees, enjoying their biggest day of the young season, bombarded four pitchers for 14 hits, good for 26 bases. Siebern had a home run in addition to two singles. Bill Skowron had three singles. Only Yogi Zerra and pitcher Tom Sturdivant failed to hit safely.

Sturdivant, despite this ferocious support, failed to go the distance and had to have help from Riney Duren in the ninth after he had given up a single to Frank Malzone, Sammy White's first home run of the season, and a single to Don Buddin.

NY Drafts Brennan And Quigg; Kearns Chosen By Syracuse

DETROIT (AP)—The Minneapolis Lakers yesterday drafted Elgin Baylor of Seattle as it first choice as the National Basketball Assn.'s annual player draft began here.

Moments earlier the Philadelphia Warriors exercised their territorial rights and claimed Guy Rodgers of Temple as their first round pick.

Under the NBA draft procedure, teams which finished in the lower portion of the standings are given priority.

The New York Knicks had two choices in the first round since they traded Dick McGuire to the Detroit Pistons last season for the Piston's first choice. The Knicks claimed Mike Farmer of San Franisco and Pete Brennan of Carolina.

The Syracuse Nationals named Connie Dierking of Cincinnati. The St Louis Hawks claimed Dave Gambee of Oregon State and the Boston Celtics picked up Ben Swain of Texas Southern.

Other choices included:

Second round: New York, Joe Quigg, Carolina; Philadelphia, Lloyd Sharrar, West Virginia.

Third round: Syracuse, John Nacincik of Maryland.

Fourth round: Syracuse, Tom Kearns of Carolina; Boston, Dom Flora of Washington and Lee.

Sixth round: Philadelphia, Bucky Allen of Duke.

Eighth round: Minneapolis, Ed Brinkley of Clemson.

Ninth round: Philadelphia, Nick Davis of Maryland.

Fourteen-17th rounds; Cincinnati, Jim Newcomb, Duke.

Tar Babies Play Duke Here Today

Carolina's freshman baseball team, rained out of a double-header with Wake Forest yesterday will try again this afternoon, this time against the South Carolina Biddies here on Emerson Field.

The freshmen now hold a 6-1 record, their latest win, was against Oak Ridge. Their only loss was to Presbyterian Junior College early in the season.

The freshmen have been especially strong at the plate this year. Against Oak Ridge they got 12 hits. Ferg Norton, Caroll Bolick and Tommy Camp have done the majority of the work along that line.

The starting line-up for today's game will probably be Norton at second base, Camp at third, Bud Ellerbe at short, Bolick catching, John Strott at first, and outfielders Dee Frady, Dickie Hord, and Joe Grimsley.

Wayne Allen is the probable Carolina pitcher.

Writers Wanted

Contrary to the belief of the edit page, The Daily Tar Heel sports staff does need more writers. No experience or endorsement by Walt Disney is necessary. All of the other staff members except Julie London and Zorro do not like spring sports.

Thornton Make Second Round In North-South

PINEHUST, (AP)—Medalist Wayne Jackson, defending champion Bill Campbell and three of the latter's 1957 U. S. walker Cup teammates passed first round match play tests in the North and South Amateur Golf Tournament Tuesday in generally routine fashion.

The players had to battle each other, the formidable 7,000-yard No. 2 course of the country club and the elements A series of short but sharp afternoon thundershowers swept the course, holding up play about 20 minutes in all.

Carolina's Bill Thornton won his first match over Cobby Ware of Augusta, Ga., 6 and 5. The Tar Heel golfer will play Jack Penrose of Miami, Fla., today.

Jackson, stocky little private first class from Hampton and Ft. Eustis, Va., won the last four holes with pars to close out stubborn Bill Williamson of Charlotte, 4 and 3. Jackson, two down after thre holes, was four over par before hitting his strides.

Campbell first had to shoot a par four on the first hole of a sudden death playoff to win one of nine match play places in a field of 19 men who had qualified with 81s Monday.

Big League Teams Move For Prep

ST. LOUIS (AP)—A move is under way in major league baseball to give college scholarships to high school baseball stars.

The Detroit Tigers started it with a no-strings-attached plan set up for $500 a year, which is well along the way toward operation.

St. Louis Cardinal General Manager Vaughan "Bing" Devine Tuesday termed the scholarship idea "something definitely worth thinking about."

Devine called Barke Carroll, general manager of the Kansas City Athletics, about a meeting between the two clubs to discuss a state plan.

The Red Bird boss said Carroll suggested the scholarship plan shouldn't be presented only on a local or state level, "but as the type of thing all baseball might consider in league meetings."

Devine said he wouldn't want to commit Kansas City to his thinkin? but he would like to work together with the A's if such a plan is started.

The no-string-attached aspect is important, Devine said. It leaves it up to the boy whether he joins his sponsoring club after graduating.

"Whether or not it imposes a moral obligation depends on the boy," Devine said.

There also is the chance the club wouldn't have use for its college graduate, or that a player would go to school a year or two and sign with another club.

Devine feels this isn't important -that good will would be a certain return, and a major factor, with small chance of picking up another Stan Musial.

Orioles Edge Nats

WASHINGTON (AP) —Billy O'Dell checked Washington threats in the eighth and ninth innings Tuesday to preserve a victory for Jack Harshman as Baltimore defeated the Senators 4-2.

Brooks Robinson collected three of the Orioles' seven hits, including his second home run. He has produced eight hits in 10 times at bat against the Senators this season and has smashed five homers in the majors all agains Washington.

In beating the Senators for the third time in as many meetings this season, the Orioles were forced to survive late threats.

The Senators loaded the bases in the eighth inning with none out but got only one run. After pinch-hitter Jerry Snyder and Ed Yost walked, O'Dell replaced Harshman and the bases were filled when pinch bitter Ed Fitz Gerald popped a single to right. Snyder scored on Roy Sievers' sacrifice fly, but Jim Lemon fanned and Norm Zauchin flied to Al Pilarcik in right field.

Rain Halts All Action Yesterday

Rain hit the Carolina sports scene hard yesterday forcing the cancellation of all scheduled events.

The varsity baseball game at Wake Forest has been rescheduled for April 30. The Tar Heels next game will be here on Friday with conference leading Clemson.

The golf match here with Clemson has been rescheduled to May 8, the day before the opening of the ACC tournament at Winston Salem. The match will be played in Winston.

The varsity tennis match between the undefeated Tar Heels and the undefeated Virginia Cavaliers was cancelled with no meeting rescheduled as of yet.

The freshman baseball doubleheader with Wake Forest was postponed to a later date.

Even though no results of these could be printed, the page had to be filled up.

Kansas Takes Indians

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Big Bob Cerv smashed a pair of home runs Tuesday as he coninued his annihilation of the Cleveland pitching staff and sealed a 9-6 victory for the Kansas City Athletics.

The husky left fielder blasted one of relief pitcher Ray Narleski's pitches over the left field fence with two on in the seventh and these later proved the margin of victory.

This shot, added to his inside-the-park round tripper with the bases empty in the third inning off Cal McLish, gave Cerv a total of 14 runs batted in seven games. He has included four home run in his output.

Chico Carrasquel and Rocky Colavito homered for the Indians. Bob Lemon started for Cleveland and quickly showed he wasn't going to stop the rampaging A's.

Frosh Track With Duke Today

The Tar Baby spikemen will go after their first conference win this afternoon when they entertain the Blue Imps of Duke here this afternoon.

The yearlings have met one other conference freshman squad, State's Wolflets, and were defeated 84-67. They opened their season by defeating Chowan Junior College, and Cranebrook Prep School in a triangular meet.

Field events will begin at 3:15 with track events slated to start at 3:45.

The Tar Babies are not as strong this year as they have been in the past, but interest is increasing and the team as a whole has been improving. Probably the most strength lies in the distance running department where Worth Sweet, and Harry Miller take care of any trouble that might arise in the mile, or two-mile.

In the middle distances, Benjy Seagle and Bob Foxworth have been looking best so far. Seagle is a quarter-miler, and Foxworth an 880 man. Dash Man Fred Wood has also shown promise to be varsity help.

In the field events, the frosh have done well with Bob Eubanks, an outstanding broad jumper.

Additional UNC Offices May Be Put In Steele

UNC has made an application to use Steele dormitory for office space next year, J. Arthur Branch, UNC Business Manager disclosed Wednesday.

Branch said University officials have applied to the Housing and Home Finance Agency to use Steele to take care of some of the departments to be dispossessed when building is started on the proposed addition to Phillips Hall.

The application has cleared the Atlanta, Ga., office of the HHFA, and has been sent to Washington for approval.

Branch stated that the application was not final, and the proposed mov depnds upon the approval in Washington.

No rooms have been assigned in Steele for next fall. If the approval does not come, men will be assigned to the dormitory later.

The University borrowed two million dollars from the HHFA to build the three new men's dormitories and the recently completed wing to Spencer dorm.

Noted Educator Rosenstengel Is Dead At 61

Dr. William Everett Rosentengel, 61, professor of Education at the University since 1941, died suddenly yesterday morning. The cause of his death was not immediately known.

He was stricken at his office yesterday shortly after 10 p.m. He went home first, said the School of Education office, and then was taken to Memorial Hospital. He died before doctors were able to operate.

He is survived by Mrs. Rosenstengel, his son, and three granddaughters.

Before coming to Carolina, Dr. Rosenstengel was professor of education at Northeast Missouri State Teachers College. He had been very active in Missouri schools, having served once as school superintendent.

WRC Elects Officers

The Women's Residence Council elected officers for next year in its regular meeting Tuesday night following the special open meeting on rules changes for freshmen women students.

Annie Lawrie Gard, a junior from Elizabeth City, was elected vice chairman, and Linda Howard, a junior from Alexandria, Va., was elected secretary of the body. The new treasurer will be Mary Montgomery, a junior from Lewisburg, W. Va.

Lillian Shannonhouse will continue as chairman, that office not being up for election.

The WRC, after its open meeting, discussed the proposed freshman coed regulations, but did not reach a decision on the rules.

The Council will carry consideration of the new rules over to their next meeting, probably early next week.

Flying Upside Down Upsets UNC Middies

By PAT DOOLEY

Flying upside down, the officers' club, and 5 o'clock reville are memories for 36 Carolina Midshipmen now after their three day tour of the Pensacola, Fla. Naval Air Station last week.

The annual trip is designed to give local officer candidates interested in Navy or Marine Air programs a closer acquaintance with the actual duties involved in these branches of the service.

The enthusiastic middies accompanied by Maj. L. C. Norton Marine officer here at the NROTC unit, left the Raleigh-Durham airport at 9 a.m. last Monday.

They returned late Wednesday, some more enthusiastic, some less enthusiastic, some a bit green, and all well acquainted.

Members of the group were individually taken up one morning for an hour hop in T-34 training planes.

Some lost their breakfast to a handy little article called a "barf bag" while power dives, snap rolls and the art of flying upside down were demonstrated by instructors.

All but one of the group were sufficiently interested in the experience to go up again that afternoon at the expense of possibly losing another meal.

The middies were occupied every minute of the working day with lectures and tours of the naintenance hangars where planes are made "better than they were when they left the factory."

During their short stay the group practiced escape from a simulated plane, called the Dilbert Dunker, which had ditched in the water, and escape from a parachute after hitting the water.

All was not work and skull sessions however. One of the nights off was spent by a large part of the group at the officers' club.

There the Carolina alma mater was sung by the group led by M.3.C. W. R. Bagwell.

Di Wins Debate For Coveted Trophy Of Forensic Council

By ED ROWLAND

The Dialectic Senate walked off with the Forensic Council's trophy Tuesday night by winning the annual Di-Phi Debate.

Taking the affirmative on the topic of American aid to the revolutionaries of Fidel Castro in Cuba, the Di won by a 2-1 vote of the judges. Judges were Dr. William Ger df the history department, Miss Joanne Aldridge of the English department and Dr. Earl Wallace of the political science faculty.

After the debate, John Brooks presentd the trophy on behalf of the Forensic Council to the Di's team of Rick Wolfer, Gary Greer, Pat Adams and Dave Reid.

Brooks also presented the Phi-Di Award to Claude Teague for the two debating societies.

Dave Reid, former attorney general of the Student Body and currently a law student, summed up the Di's arguments by saying: "We must show the world that our revolution (against Great Britain in 1776) is not a dead thing, but something that is still alive to the cries of the oppressed."

Reid asked, "Was it not through a small group of people working for selfdetermination against tyrannical opposition that we won independence?" He added that Fidel Castro is trying to accomplish the same result in Cuba now.

Rep. Bill Jackson told the audience that "support to Castro would be illegal, impreudent and impractical. Cuba is sovereign and the U. S. must stay out, as our past actions have indicated."

He concluded by saying, "If we aid Castro every little insurrectionist from Mexico City to Peiping will seek aid from us."

Sen. Gary Greer defined "aid" as "not necessarily arms and money, but it may be denying money and arms and food to Batista's government." He said he did not advocate active aid to Castro ("We should remain aloof through the Monroe Doctrine"), but he said we should fail to aid Batista.

Rep. Dave Matthews charged that Castro's followers are mainly professional revolutionaries, Communists and non-Cuban. He cited evidence uncovered by police in Mexico city on a raid on Castro's headquarters there as proof.

Sen. Pat Adams said the United States had aided revolutionaries in Cuba in 1898 "in the most popular of our wars" as proof that we have intervened before. He said Batista is so unpopular that after he came to power in a military coup in 1952 he has used force and suspended elections to stay in office since then.

Rep. Bill Willis declared Castro has a very weak following (400 men) and that he is a bluff and an insurrectionist. He said in "trying to aid the Cubans, he is destroying their means of livelihood by following a scorched earth policy."

Sen. Rick Wolfer urged the United States to assume this role of moral leader of the world. "Any doctatorial regime is evil, "he said, "and we should act decisively to crush one, especially on our doorstep."

While the judges deliberated, John Brooks presented awards to the Phi's outstanding senior, freshman and debator. They were given to Jim Tolbert, past president, William Fachert, current clerk, and Warren Coolidge, current chairman of the Ways and Means Committee.

IDC Hears Dean Weaver On Counseling System Proposal

By STAN BLACK

Dean of Student Affairs Fred H. Weaver addressed the Interdormitory Council Wednesday night about the proposed "counseling system." which "of" affects what is now known as the lower quad. The dormitories affected are Graham, Stacy, Everett, Lews, and Aycock.

The dormitory counselor system as outlined by Dean Weaver provides for fifteen graduate students who would serve as advisors on each floor of the five dormitories in the quad. Dean Weaver said that "any graduate student should, by his mere presence and example on the floor, encourage responsible self-government." The counselors would function purely in an advisory capacity without disciplinary authority, for thepurpose of "talking to freshmen about any sort of problems that might come up." "They can assist in special cases, for instance psychiatric problems or boys who have serious unexpected financal difficulties. There is a special fund at the discretion of the Dean Of Student Affairs that could be used in just such cases."

The advisors would serve as "a natural concomitant of the General College Advisor program. When parents ask the General College Advisor about a boy's scholastic condition, the dormitory counselors could be asked to check personally with the boy" to se if some solution to the problem could be worked out. The counselor system "cannot be regarded as a legitimate arm to the General College, but would supplement the duties of the General College Advisor." Dean Weaver emphasized that there would be "no conflict between the counselors' duties and the duties of the IDC Representatives in the dormitories."

Concerning the problem of how to get freshmen into the lower quad, Dean Weaver noted that about 70% of the students now living in these dorms are freshmen. There would be no separation of freshmen under the plan. "We will not move anyone into the quad. There will be 1300 entering freshmen next year who can easily fill the dorms." On the other hand, nobody who wants to remain in the lower quad will be evicted. The ratio of freshmen to other students will probably remain about the same.

Counselor Interviews Being Held Last Time

Today will be makeup day for men who have not yet had their orientation counselors interviews. The Orientation Committee will interview from 4 until 5:30 this afternoon and from 7:30 until 9 tonight. This will be the last day of interviews and anyone who has not taken the test or had an inetrview has been urged to contact the orientation office at 9460.

Don Furtado Appoints Brooks Pres. Assistant

Don Furtado, president of the student body, announced Wednesday that he has appointed John Brooks as presidential assistant.

Brooks, a junior from Greenville, has served on the Student Legislature, Graham Memorial Board of Directors, the presidents cabinet, orientation committee and the stores committee.

He was speaker pro-tem during his sophomore year. He is a member of the Golden Fleece, the Order of the Grail, and is a Morehead Scholar.

In a statement announcing the appointment, Furtado said "It is a great privilege for me to be able to announce that John Brooks has consented to serve during the coming year as my presidential assistant. The position is not an official position, but one of such a nature has been badly needed during the past few years in order to cope with the expanding demands of the presidential office.

"In essence, John will serve as a second vice president, attending the Chancellors cabinet and other executive meetings, and filling in at various meetings which neither Ralph Cummings nor myself will be able to attend. His experience and dependability will be a great contribution to the executive office of student government.

"During the past three years, John has illustrated continuously his resourcefulness and ability. I have the greatest confidence in John, and I am looking forward to working with him in the com-

Encampment Applications Available At Y

Miss Anne E. Queen, of the YMCA-YWCA staff, has announced that applications for the Encampment for Citizenship program are available in her office. The encampment will be held in New York from June 29 to August 9 and in Califorina from June 22 to August 2.

This summer educational program is conducted at the Fieldston School in Riverdale, at the northern edge of New York City. This year a new unit will be held at International House, Berkeley, California. Anyone between 18 and 23 may apply.

Two Carolina coeds, Misses Sipra Bose and Virginia 'Pooh' Jones, have already applied to attend the camp in New York. Miss Nancy Revelle, a graduate student here, has attended one session and is going to be on the staff of the New York unit this summer.

Miss Queen said that students who have previously attended the Encampment for Citizenship have obtained an unusual experience and have been very grateful for the opportunity. Allard Lowenstein, a Carolina graduate student who attended the six-week session in New York, said that it was one of his best summers.

The cost is $350 for the six weeks, exclusive of traveling and personal expenses. Both partal and full scholarships are available. Those who are interested should contact Miss Queen in the YMCA-YWCA office.

Sigma X Derby Is Scheduled

Seven sororities on campus and the Nurses dorm will compete in the Sigma Chi Derby next Tuesday according to Derby Co-Chairman Dennis McCoy.

The Derby will begin with a parade which will start at the Sun Dial and proceed down Franklin Street to Columbia Street, down Columbia to Cameron Avenue, down Cameron to Raleigh Street and from there to Kenan Stadium. The parade will begin at 2 p.m.

There will be six events in the Derby. The Grand National, a relay race will get things under way at 2:30. The hit the Geek contest, a pie throwing contest, the race to the flesh, the secret event, a skit given by each group and the Miss Modern Venus contest are the other events scheduled.

Vying For "Miss Chapel Hill" Title

Nine Beauties Vying For 'Miss Chapel Hill'

The beauty queen of the University community will be crowned "Miss Chapel Hill" this evening in the local eliminations of the Miss America Pageant.

"Miss North Carolina"—Durham's Elaine Herndon, will be on hand for the ninth annual Jaycee-sponsored Miss Chapel Hill Pageant. She'll be one of five judges who will name the winner from a field of nine entrants.

The public is invited to attend the admission event, which will begin at 8 p.m. in the Chapel Hill High School Auditorium. Pageant Co-Chairman Lyman Wilkins emphasized that the program and judging will be run strictly on the rules for the Miss America selection, with each entrant being judged on evening gown, bathing suit, and talent appearances, in addition to her informal meeting with the judges at a pre-pageant banquet.

The entrants are Kay Proctor, UNC coed from Chapel Hill, Ann Riggsbee and Jean Neville—local secretaries, and the following University of N. C. coeds—Diana Johnson of Asheboro, Pat McAuley of Rocky Mount, Louise Crumbley of Charlotte, Ruth Hoffman of Fort Wayne, Ind., Gail Minnich of Atlanta, and Helen Adcock and Pat Lamm of Oxford.

Miss Lamm yesterday became the final entrant in the Pageant. A graduate student who will receive her Master of Education degree at the end of the Summer Session, she is planning to become a public school teacher. She is a former student at East Carolina College and has been an entrant for the title of Miss Oxford in her home town. For her talent she will sing.

Judges for the affair will be N. C. Jaycees President Jack Sharpe of Kannapolis, Mrs. J. D. Brame of Durham, East N. C. Jaycees President Bill Henderson of Raleigh, Raleigh newspaperman Charles Craven and Miss Herndon.

The reigning Miss Chapel Hill, Joanne Aldridge, is a University graduate student and freshman English instructor. She placed among the 10 finalists in last year's Miss North Carolina Pageant. She and her runner-up for the title last year, Judy Dockery, will act as entrants' advisers in tomorrow evening's selection.

The winner will receive a $200 college scholarship for the college of her choice, a wardrobe, and will represent Chapel Hill in the Miss North Carolina pageant in Charlotte this summer.

IN THE INFIRMARY

Students in the infirmary yesterday included:

Misses Ruth Andrews, Shirley Hamrick, Jeri Lasiter, Martha Taylor and Elizabeth Stack, and Richard Allebrook, Shelton Austin, Vincent Collura, Leter Julian, Frank Inman, William Lytle, Ben Miller, Henry Simpson, and Michael Tanner.

On Kerr Scott

Kerr Scott is dead now a week, and the students of this University mourn his loss with the special sorrow of a favored friend. He was the champion of the unbossed spirit and the forgotten cause, the great rumple of fine feathers and of mental cobwebs. Our generation has it better for his having lived, and we are heavy losers in his untimely passing. Politicians—governors, senators, sheriffs, secretaries of this and that, presidents and kings—come and go: and in these times of militant mediocrities, their comings and goings are briefly noted, their defeats sadden largely their hangers-on and their families, and their families, and contributions are as enduring as their campaign viewings-with-alarm.

Not so Kerr Scott. Even in this early moment, his petty failings fade, and the stature of his good works dwarfs his critics. He dared to think fresh and to breathe free, and of his courage came great things: roads and schools for his people, hope and leadership for bypassed humanity in his state, Frank Graham for the United States Senate. In an era that exalts the conformist even as it bewails conformity, it was the miracle of Kerr Scott that he did the unexpected and the unprecedented—he deviated and revolted, and he got away with it.

To some, Kerr Scott's uniqueness was rampant opportunism cleverly disguised; but then puncturers of complacency are rarely beloved among the complacent. And if opportunist he was, from his "opportunism" during a brief governorship he gave North Carolina her greatest challenges, her greatest senator, and her greatest push forward in half a century. He lit lights on the farms and in the minds of the people of his state and of his contempt for the pompous and the smug came an inspiration to independence that infected thousands of lesser people to bolder deeds and higher goals.

This improbable and refreshing man is of that tiny band of human beings who are more sorely missed the week after their death than the day after, who will be even more sorely missed a year after than a week after, and whose legacy endures and grows and triumph despite defeats and beyond death.

Wanted: Pavement

Tonight, the Student Legislature will have to deal with a resolution concerning paving a sidewalk area from Woollen Gymnasium to the walkway to Lenoir Hall

The Legislature ought to pass this resolution, since the processes of paving the areas which need paving are slow. The Legislature's resolution might do something to speed the process up in this particular case

The specific area in question is traversed during the week by freshman and sophomore men, and freshman through sophomore women, as well as the residents of the dorm area of Winston, Alexander, and Conner.

Muddy shoes, bad falls, general discomfort have been the result of the present lack of paving. It is hoped that this situation will not exist long.

The Open Meeting

It is amazing what freshman women will be called in open sessions. Last night they were likened to unweared puppy dogs by the former chairman of the Women's Residence Council. Somehow this definition does not square with the responsible individuals that the women who have come here as freshmen have proved themselves to be.

The meeting was further interesting by virtue of the fact that the majority of the rules and from angles previously not mentioned. Some of the opposition was voiced on the grounds of impracticality, as well as the grounds of student responsibility, individual freedom, and the unhealthy effects that these rules may have.

The Council should take these rules into consideration again seriously in the light of the responsible opinions expressed at the open meetings.

The Daily Tar Heel

The official student publication of the Publication Board of the University of North Carolina, where it is published daily except Monday and examination and vacation periods and summer terms. Entered as second class matter in the post office in Chapel Hill, N. C., under the Act of March 8, 1870. Subscription rates: mailed, $4 per year, $2.50 a semester; delivered, $8 a year, $5.00 a semester.

Anything Goes

Peter B. Young

This column will offer no unique dietary suggestions to our lovely UNC coeds. But since Jonathan Yardley, in his recent bid for some sort of journalistic immortality has described the birth pangs of his dog, it might not be amiss for this writer to discuss a similar episode in the life of Alley (Cat) Young.

Our story begins, properly enough, with Ralph B. Young, a tres gay tomcat who entered our lives in Baton Rouge about three years ago. The Big Ralph Man drank chocolate milk and vodka over the rocks, ate pizza and garlic pickles, and went to sleep every night on top of the hi-fi set while the band played "Lullaby of Birdland." I mean this cat was the hippest.

There was only one thing wrong. Every time I suggested to Ralph that perhaps it was time for him to think about girls, he would reply, "No, man, girls don't make it," and he would then go outside to dig fire flies. Fire flies, in contrast with girls, made it big, and Ralph used to go out of his furry little skull as he watched them buzz around the yard.

Well, you can imagine my surprise when I opened the door one morning and there was Ralph, sitting on the steps with the most pathetic, scrawny excuse for a cat that I have ever seen sitting next to him. "What's the bit, Ralph?" I asked.

"What's the matter, man," he replied. "Don't you dig distortion?"

"Certainly, man," I said. "But this is like too much."

"That's the whole bit," he said "I dig her because she's so weird." Her!!?? She!!??

So we welcomed Alley (Cat) Young into the family, and two weeks later The Big Ralph Man went to tomcat heaven when, typically, he walked across a highway without even looking for the whizzing cars. We buried him in the back yard of Ken Yoss, one of the South's leading astronomers. Yoss's last report was that Ralph had gone into orbit successfully.

We now jump ahead several more weeks to the time when it became obvious that Alley (Cat) Young was in a family way. (Actually, she was in everybody's way.) Carefully, we nursed her through this trying period. She was not allowed to move any furniture, and we added special supplementary vitamins to her cat food. After all, the litter was undoubtedly Ralph's, and we could not afford to take chances.

Several more weeks went by. One night, when I was rolling out some pizza pies for certain select members of the LSU history department, I noticed that The Old Alley Cat had lumbered into her box in the kitchen and was doing some rolling of her own. Right before my amazed eyes the first kitten dropped. I dashed into the living room to announce the epic event.

T. Harry Williams, the distinguished Civil War historian, asked, "Is that kitten brave, bold, courageous, honest, sincere and true?"

"Yes, sir," I said. "He is all of that."

"Good," said Williams, sipping a hefty screw driver. "Name him after me."

We did. Thus did T. (Horrible) Harry B. Young enter this vale of tears.

Three more kittens followed The T. Horrible One, and my superb pizza was a little late that night. Naturally, since these kittens were fathered by Ralph B. Young we had no trouble in placing them in suitable foster homes. We kept T. (Horrible) Harry, and of course The Old Alley Cat, who spends most of her time these days lying on a heating pad in our bedroom. And T. (Horrible) Harry, profiting from his father's early demise, is probably the most cowardly tomcat who ever lived. He rarely leaves the yard.

And what is the point of this strange little tale? The point, dear friends, is this: Jonathan Yardley was basically RIGHT. The birth of his puppies WAS a miraculous event, fully worthy of extended coverage in this, or any other, paper. The birth of anything—puppy, kitten, flower, baby—is the ultimate miracle before which all words fail. This is what Yardley (whom I do not know) was trying to communicate. This is what drove him to his colossal gaffe. But his heart was in the right place. And let's not have any nasty comments about the road to you-know-where being paved with good intentions.

"Sharp, Isn't It?"

Education: Problem Of Liberty

Louis M. Hacker

The Russians understand this. C. P. Snow, writing in 1956, pointed out (using the figures for 1954) that whereas the United States and Britain were turning out more pure scientists, in terms of population, than Russia was, Russia was educating more applied scientists than the United States and the whole of Western Europe together. In 1954, the United States was graduating 22,500 applied scientists, Great Britain 5,800 and Russia 60,000 in its technical universities and 70,000 in its technical colleges. Nor is this all. In Russia, one-fifth of university-trained scientists go back to teach in technical colleges and secondary schools, so that the number of qualified science teachers in the USSR in 1954 was over 250,000, as compared with less than 50,000 in the United States and 20,000 in Great Britian. This sort of thing we should worry about, rather than the Communist ideology itself.

This, then, is what I mean when I have said, in another connection, that a university must always keep its doors open to all qualified students at all times. The survival of learning and of our society depends upon the acceptanees of this obligation. Freedom of knowledge means freedom for scholars and scientists; but it also means free access to them for every qualified student regardless of age, previous conditions of education, and whether or not he has a degree intention. Whether a student's purpose in formal training (on a full or part-time basis, during the day or during the night, in regular term or during the summer) or the advancement of his self-interest and tastes, or for occupational improvement, the university should receive him. In order to meet all the complex needs of our world and make possible the education the men and women with all sorts of adult responsibilities, universities should be available day and night and 365 days in the year, at the same time that they continue to explore—through every form of communication, including television and correspondence courses—the means for the extension of educational services.

Omniworld

Sam Frazier

Je combattrai pour la primaute de l'Homme sur l'individu—Comme de l'universel sur le particulier. Je combattrai pour l'Homme. Contre ses ennemis. Mais aussi contre moi-meme.
Antoine de Saint Exupery

Who are the real enemies of mankind? Are they Russians? Are they Chinese Communists? Are they Yugoslavians? This is the question which people are attempting to answer every day. They answer that Communists, totalitarians, and monarchists are the enemies of mankind. But this answer is not extensive enough; it only accuses surface manifestations of the real source and soul of mankind's enemies. The real enemies of mankind are over-zealous nationalism and the individual's self-directed energy.

We have discussed nationalism before and tried to explain that any spirit or tendency which tends to isolate any group of people from the rest of the people in the world is a cancerous growth which must be stopped. Nationalism, because of its very nature fits under this classification remarkable well. Yet as we have said before, some "patriatism" is vital for any group of people, although this is true only as long as the "patriatism" is directed toward the internal affairs of the group of people. In the field of international relations it is necessary to have a foundation of "patriatism" but a superstructure of "worldism." Immediately, a new dimension has been entered in this superstructure of "worldism," at least in this modern world; new ethies and rules have to be applied. In the allocation of "patriatism" to one area and "worldism" to the other area, do not arrive at the conclusion that the two can actually be separated or that each exists by itself on its own right. This is a false conclusion. Each is inextricably involved with the other. The individual who has not learned to cherish and respect the customs and traditions of his group is not prepared to respect and cherish the wider and more universal customs and traditions of a world community. Most peoples of the world have reached the first stage, but they have progressed no further now for many generations, leaving the world to suffocate in a compartmented death chamber. This must not be. We must realize the predicament we are in and grasp for our very evident salvation.

The other great enemy of mankind, the individual's self-directed energy, is actually a manifestation of one of the cornerstones of nationalism. To say that selfishness is an enemy of mankind appears to be a very trite thing to say, but it is one of the basic destructive forces in the plan of annihilation for man.

When the animal man appeared on the earth it was not a question of choosing between having a society and not having a society. Without a society the individual cannot exist, because unless there is some deterrent to direct his energy outward, this energy will turn inward and destroy him. There is a constant struggle within every person today to keep this energy outwardly directed. Of course it is not absolutely successful; we all see the results in ourselves.

Partisanship And Propaganda

Partisanship is something we have all grown up with. I am for my school. I am for my family, my country, my religion. Come hell or high water, I am for my party, my product, my service. (What I am saying is that I am for me.)

A recent experiment by one of our University professors revealed that students in his classes who favored a certain statement of international importance tended to believe that the majority of the population also favored it Likewise, those students who disfavored the statement tended to believe that most were in his camp. In fact, one student was so bold as to predict that no one held an opinion contrary to his.

In the history of mankind, we find at certain times Protestantism pitted against Roman Catholicism, republicanism versus a monarchical form of government, realism taking sides against romanticism.

In our modern American, perhaps, if we discount the partisanship in advertising goods and services, the partisanship involved in politics stands out most prominently. Thus, the Democrats against the Republicans is an "old joke" as the Egyptian Ambassador Fawzi would say.

Last week, Commerce Secretary Sinclair Weeks received blasts from Democrats in Congress and from Democratic-supported newspaper editorials. These came as a result of his attack on those, generally in the Democratic camp, who decided to do something "now" about the recession rather than "wait and see."

Secretary Weeks claims that there are among the opposition certain individuals who are using the recession to their political advantage by inducing "the jitters." When we consider that this statement was made in a Republican consign we may question the truth of the generality. However, we must be fair and suppose that there may be some truth in it. It is certainly quite probably that such a thing could happen and we might be very naive in supposing that it is not happening at this very moment.

The important aspect of this whole issue of partisanship in American politics is that all too often it goes to such an extreme that it is reduced to absurdity. It becomes mere propaganda.

Not too long ago I over heard a young voter telling the chief of police of a Western North Carolina community that after he gets through listening to the propaganda blurted out by each political pary, he begins to wonder whether either one is worth bothering to support. The chief replied, "Well, no one believes what they say any way."

If most Americans can thus recognize propaganda in political issues then, perhaps, things aren't so bad. What is bad is that the very reason for the existence of such political nonsense is typical of much in American behavior. Partisanship as such extends beyond its worth as a check and balance system, of getting across the truth, or of instituting the best idea or method. It comes to the point of insulting our very intelligence. It also comes to the point where one camp cannot make a mistake without bearing a cross of guilt for having done so. It becomes a crime against humanity to have made a mistake. This crime as such is treasonous in nature. This whole attitude in partisanship denies the very knowledge that man is irrational at the same time as he is rational. It denies his ability to be wrong as wel las to be right, to be irresponsible as to be responsible. This, of course, does not justify that man can continue to be negative in his behavior. Man utilises learning and correction in his responses. So, what does the guilty camp do in response? Whether deliberately or through rationalization it hides its mistakes and declares all the more vehemently its rightness or righteousness.

The major league baseball season is now about one week old. By this time, every major sportswriter has forecasted the outcome of the season, the World Series, and the various other categories of competition.

It is not surprising that the overwhelming choice for the American League pennant is the New York Yankees. These same Yankees are usually favored to win the Series as well, and various Yankee stars will undoubtedly walk away with more than one team's share of the individual honors.

Nor will it surprise those who follow the game to learn that the Yankees have won twenty-three pennants and seventeen World Series since the turn of the century.

At this early stage of the current season, the Yankees are already in first place; and although any certain conclusions drawn from this fact would indeed be premature, it is as safe a bet as any that the Yankees will occupy that position for most of the season, and will be there after the final game has been played.

Should the Yankees accomplish this feat, or even look fairly secure in first place later in the season, there will probably be a strong revival of the old battle cry—"Break up the Yankees."

It seems that a certain very articulate portion of the baseball world, made up for the most part of other teams and their followers, objects to the Yankees predominance. These partisans feel, perhaps, that there is something definitely un-Christian and un-American in the Yankee record.

This may very well be true. In a nation which is supposed to foster competition and and at least some semblance of equality, the Yankee's habit of winning is not quite kosher. The public gives pragmatic sanction to monopolistic practices in heavy industry; but the baseball industry which many Americans ingenuously regard as a real sport, is supposed to retain the all-American character of its sandlot version.

The anti-Yankee movement seems to have little effect on the state of things, however, and the Yankees continue in their usual manner.

It should be emphasized that this is not altogether a damnable condition. In a world where nothing is certain, and in which Fate and the omnipotent God have been constructed into Luck and the Law of averages, it is comforting still to be reasonably certain of at least one thing besides death and taxes—the New York Yankees. Long may they reign. Amen.

Netters Go After Duke For 5th Win

Arch-rival Duke furnishes the opposition for the Carolina tennis team this afternoon when the Tar Heel netters go after their fifth conference victory of the season at Durham.

The Tar Heel courtmen were supposed to have met Virginia Monday, but a driving rain that afternoon forced cancellation of the match. At this time no definite date has been set for its rescheduling.

Last year the Blue Devils compiled a 7-10 overall record and were fourth in the final ACC standings with a 3-3 mark. In their last outing coach Whit Cobb's squad edged by Virginia 5-4 to hand the Cavaliers their first conference defeat.

This year's Duke tennis team is led by senior Don Romhilt and sophomore Dick Katz. In addition to Romhilt and Katz, Cobb also has lettermen Jack Williams, Bruce Bottoms, and Claude Jack returning for another seasn.

Carolina coach Vladimir Cernik will probably send the same lineup against the Blue Devils that he has used most of this season to compile an undefeated 7-0 record. Seniors Bob Bortner, Steve Bank, Malcolm Clark, and Dick Makepeace will be backed up by junior Geoff Black and sophomore Ben Keys to form the starting six.

Old Timers On Hand

Virginia Cavaliers On Hand For Track Meet With Tar Heels Today

By DAVE WIBLE

It's reunion day for the Tar Heel track teams of 1910-14 and the main event on the card for the old timers is to be the Carolina-Virginia track meet which will be held on Fetzer Field starting at 3 o'clock.

The Carolina coach of those bygone years, Nat Cartmell, will be the center of the homecoming festivities. Coach Cartmell will have an opportunity to see eleven of his charges that he coached during his five years at Carolina. This morning, Coach Cartmell will meet with Chancellor Aycock, and have luncheon at the Carolina Inn. After the track meet, reunion will shift to a cocktail party at the home of Collier Cobb. Tonight, the group will meet in a general assembly of the UNC Alumni Association in the Carolina Inn ballroom at 6:30.

The former Tar Heels will see the newest Carolina track team on a comeback trial. The Heels suffered a sound 90-41 licking Saturday to the Maryland Terps bringing their record to 1-2. Before Maryland, they had defeated South Carolina but their opener was lost to Clemson.

Carolina will be favored today. Virginia has lost to South Carolina, and Maryland this year. The Maryland defeat was even more one-sided than Carolina's loss.

The Cavaliers are strongest in the pole vault department where they have three men who can clear over 13 feet, Pat Whitaker tops the list with Henry Daven Port and Clarence Roberts close behind. Whitaker is also an outstanding high hurdler. More Cavaliers to watch are Sonny Randle in the dashes, and Jack Cravins in the quarter mile.

Carolina's middle distance star Dave Scurlock will go for points in the 440 and 880 today ,and also the mile relay. Wayne Bishop, will double up on the mile and 2 mile along with Cowles Liipfert.

The meet will get under way at 3:00 with the field events. At 3:30 the track event will start with the running at mile.

Blue Imps Win Track Meet

The Duke yearling track squad took 11 first places to defeat the the Carolina Tar Babies 86-45 in a meet here yesterday.

The loss brought the Tar Babies record to 1-2. The only first for Carolina were Tom White in the 100, Benjy Seagle in the 440, Bobby Foxworth in the 880, and Bob Eubanks in the broad jump.

The meet came to a fine finish when Duke won the mile re-lay team by inches. The two teams stayed within five yards of each other the entire race. Duke Jack Merriman, and Carolina's Benjy Seagle pounded down the final straight-a-way side by side. Merriman lunged for the line and won by a nose.

The Tar Babies will meet Duke again a week from Saturday in Durham.

Frosh Beat Biddies

Carolina's freshman baseball squad kept its winning streak going when it defeated the South Carolina Biddies 5-0 here yesterday.

Carolina's Wayne Allen was given credit for the win. The Tar Babies scored four runs in the first and one in the second. Pitchers, Phil Bigdon came on in the fifth, and John Strott in the sixth to relieve Allen.

The Tar Babies will travel to Duke today. They meet State on the road tomorrow, and Wilmington Junior College there Saturday.

PRETTYING UP THE GLEE CLUB—Above are the young ladies of the Hollins College Women's Chorus from Hollins, Va. They will appear tonight at 8 in Hill Hall in conjunction with the UNC Men's Glee Club for a performance of Gilbert and Sullivan's "Mikado."

Spring Germans Get Underway This Evening With Les Brown

By BILL THOMPSON

Spring Germans will swing into action tonight from 9 till 1 at Woollen Gym with Les Brown and his Band of Renown providing the downbeat to start the big weekend festivities.

"The dance should be the best yet," stated Mark Cherry, presiden of the Germans Club, when commenting on the appearance of the Les Brown Band.

The band has been featured on the Bob Hope television show for several years in California where it spends nine months of the year. The other three months are spent in engagements around the country, usually playing for college dances. The Band of Renown has played for more college dances than any other band in America.

Brown holds the record at the Hollywood Palladium for the number of engagements. He also holds the attendance record for this famous Hollywood ballroom.

This is the second appearance of Les Brown in the last several years. He was featured in the Germans here two years ago.

Along with the band will be comedian vocalist Butch Stone; trombonist Stumpy Brown, and vocalist Laurie Johnson, a new singer with the Band of Renown.

All those men planning to attend the dance have been reminded that dinner jackets will be required.

Memorial Hill will be the scene tomorrow afternoon, when the Third Herd, Woody Herman's famous jazz orchestra, presents the German's concert at 3 p.m.

Featured in the concert will be the Al Belletto Sextet, trombonist Bill Harris, and vocalist Jerri Winters.

Fans of the Belleto Sextet's phonograph records will be pleased to hear a number of these selections play at intervals throughout the concert. One of the top ranking small combos in the music business, the Sextet will be playing on its own expressing themselves in the special instrumental and vocal arrangements that have made them famous. Singer Jerri Winters, formerly with Stan Kenton, will be featured with the group.

Bill Harris, for ten years winner of the Down Beat poll as top jazz trombonist, will be one of the featured instrumentalists with the Herman band. In recent years, Harris has been one of the featured stars with jazz at the Philharmonic and has toured the United States, Europe and the Far East with that group.

Glee Club And Girls Offer 'Mikado' Tonight

Hill Hall will witness the oriental harmony of Gilbert and Sullivan's Mikado when the combined voices of the UNC Men's Glee Club and their weekend guests, Hollins College Chorus, present the operetta tonight at 8.

The 80-voice ensemble, under the direction of Dr. Joel Carter, Glee Club director, will also offer separate programs of song following the 40-minute presentation of Mikado.

The cast of performers includes: Donald Nance as The Mikado; Richard Petterson as Nanki-Poo; James Tyndall as Poo-bah; Dr. Carter as Ko-ko; and Richard Gerrish as Pish-Tush. The part of Katishaw will be portrayed by Jo Jurgensen of Chapel Hill. Clara Lewis of Hollins Chorus will portray the part of Yum-Yum.

Glee Club President Charles Shoe remarked yesterday that, "We hope that many of the students planning to attend the Germans Dance tonight will drop by Hill Hall from 8 till 9 and watch our joint performance. The fee is nominal and will go only to defray the expenses of bringing the Chorus down. A lot of preparation has gone into the production and we can assure an interesting program to anyone who comes to the concert."

Sunday Set For Wesley Weekend

"Who Is My Neighbor" will be the theme of the Wesley Weekend to be held Sunday at the University Methodist Church.

Dr. Waldo Beach, professor of Christian Ethics at Duke Divinity School, will deliver a sermon "And Who is My Neighbor?" Sunday at 11 a.m. at the Church.

Other activities scheduled include a discussion on "What Does the Bible Say About Race?" at 9:30 a.m. in the Church basement, lunch and discussion in Lenoir Hall at 12:30 p. m., and a student panel on "What Can Be Done To Better Race Relations in the South? in the Church basement at 5:45 p.m.

Student Gov't Appointments Are Still Open

Student body President Don Furtado has urged all persons interested in student government appointments to sign up for interviews in the Student Government office in Graham Memorial.

Appointments to be made include an Attorney General and two assistants plus a staff of eight men and six women; three members of the Consolidated University Council; a seventeen member elections board; a six member NSA committee; Campus Chest co-chairmen; a seven member library committee; a three member campus stores committee; a committee to pick the editor of the campus humor magazine and a traffic advisory commission and committee.

Other appointments include: ten cabinet members; the membership of the dance committee; the audit board; three seats, one year, two year and three year, on the Graham Memorial board of directors; a student council member; a campus traffic board; a Victory Village Veterans Affairs Commission; and the Honor System Commission.

The Carolina Forum, the high school honor system, the summer school student government, the NSA delegation to the national convention in August and the clerks of the Men's and Women's council are also on the list of appointments to be made.

J-School Softball Game Has Gun-Toting Umps

By ANN FRYE

Gun-totin' umpires kept order Wednesday when the senior journalism majors beat the juniors 34-9 in a nine-inning soft-ball game on the Camp New Hope field.

Behind-the-plate umpire Stuart Sechriest fired caps repeatedly at players and spectators who flung wild bats, had tantrums and shot firecrackers.

The seniors led all the way, with pitcher Buzz Merritt allowing only nine hits. Senior coach Ray Smith said the game was so successful, he hopes the tradition will continue.

Junior coach George Hord had no comment.

Before the game started, players and spectators were told Dean Luxon (of J-School) sent his regrets that he was unable to be present to throw out the first ball.

Shades of Hollywood prevailed as players sported sun glasses, burmuda shorts, golf caps and unfilled pipes. Umpire Sechriest performed the almost impossible task of smoking a cigar through his mask.

Major leagueless scouts commented favorably on the game. The most promising player, they agreed, was four-year-old Lynnie Sullivan, pinch-hitter for the juniors and son of senior slugger, Leonard Sullivan. "The only thing that kid's got to learn is to run to first base instead of the pitcher's mound," they said.

Backing up Merritt on the senior's team were basemen Sullivan, Al Elmer, John Ashford and Dick Crouch. Fielders Bill Cheshire, Jerry Shields, Glenn Keever and Ed Butchard said they enjoyed watching the game.

The juniors had Al Resch on the mound and John Hubbard behind the plate. Players Thornton Worthington, Roy Lucas, Wyndham Hewitt, Ben Taylor, Jerry Alvis, Alex Coffin and Tommy Bolch were in there scrappin', according to junior manager Hord.

The umpires, all journalism instructors, threatened to flunk any player who disputed their decisions. Ken Byerly watch first base and William Caldwell kept tabs at third.

Miss Jo Anne Smith ,also of the J-School faculty, kept account of runs, hits and errors. One of the players was heard to remark to her, "I didn't make an error 'cause I never got close to the ball!"

Correspondents summed up the game: "A good time was had by all."

IFC Asks Upper Quad Cellars As Social Areas

Rudy Edwards, new president of the Interdormitory Council, outlined the main objectives of the IDC in the year to come in a speech before the body Wednesday night.

The IDC would like to have the basements of the dorms in the upper quad, which are now used as storage space by the University, turned into game rooms with space for pingpong tables and vending machines. Signs indicating the location of the various dorms should also be put up to guide visitors to the campus.

Edwards noted that Dean Fred Weaver was speaking to the body later in the evening on the proposed counselor system, which he thought the IDC should support. In a later vote the IDC postponed decision on this matter until next meeting.

The Dorm Sweetheart Contest should be upgraded into an important beauty contest, Edwards said.

He stated that the IDC should work for a better-coordinated social program, possibly including the purchase of a cabin for parties. The present 75c social fee should be raised to $1.00 per man. The IDC would like to buy a piano for Cobb Basement for dances to be held there, so that a piano will not have to be rented from Graham Memorial every time one is needed.

The intramural program could possibly be revitalized by placing Phys. Ed. majors in the dorms to direct dorm teams. Also the new dormitories near the hospital will need to be integrated into the campus, with a responsible student administration in charge.

Jaycees Invite Students To Join Road-E-O

Chapel Hill Jaycees have invited Carolina students between the ages of 16 and 19 who hold drivers' licenses to take part in a driving Road-E-O tomorrow.

There will be two parts to the contest. The first part will be a written test in Woollen Gym at 10:45 a.m. The second part, which is driving skill, will be held at 2 p.m.

The driving skill test will be held on The Intramural field. Cars to be used will be furnished. The official will be Judge William Stewart.

The winners of the Chapel Hill contest will be sent to the state contest. The winner of the state contest will be sent to a national meet in Washington, D. C. First prize at the national meet is a $2,000 scholarship.

The contest is open to women as well as men in the 1 to 19 year age group.

For information concerning the contest interested persons may contact Jaycee Peter Vanstory or Darwin Bell, chairman of the Road-E-O committee.

Solons Pass 4 Bills, Fill Board Seats

By DAVE JONES

Last night the student legislature passed four bills. Dennis Rinzler's (SP) Bill to ask for the paving of the walk from the corner of Raleigh Road and Raleigh Street to the steps behind Lenoir Hall Was passed by unanimous vote. A resolution commending the immediate past student body executive officers was also passed by a unanimous vote when its author, Rep Roger Foushee (SP), asked for special orders. The third bill passed was one changing the manner of appointing the selections board which chooses the UNC delegates to the State Student Legislature. The two committee members previously appointed by the interim committee are now to be chosen by the Speaker of the legislautre. And the fourth, was a bill to amend the Honor Council law requiring the chairman of the Honor Council Commission to sit in on jury selections and requiring a seven member selections committee. The committee was reduced in size to four, the chairman was relieved of the requirement of sitting on it, and was allowed to set up more than one committee to expedite selections.

A statement of policy introduced jointly by Speaker Ralph Cummings, SP floor leader Rudy Edwards and UP floor leader Dave Biren was adopted by the body.

Dorm Counselor System Revamped For Next Semester

By AL RESCH

An experiment in improvement of residence hall living will be tried out on the University campus next fall.

The purpose of this program is to provide counseling assistance to freshman and sophomore students in the University.

The experimental program will start next year in the Lower Quad. In each of the lower quad dormitories, there will be a graduate counselor on each floor whose responsibility will be the improvement of dormitory life on each floor.

The plan was approved by Chancellor William Aycock about two weeks ago.

According to Dean Weaver, dean of student affairs, the new plan of counseling is aimed at improving the general atmosphere of residence halls. "It is hoped that the counselor plan will be an aid to assist entering students and to extend advising services of the General College," he said.

Dean Weaver pointed out that of the entering freshmen at UNC, approximately 40 per cent graduate. He then added that it was hoped that the counselor system would increase the percentage of those entering as freshmen actually graduating.

In order to stress his point Dean Weaver gave the following facts concerning those students entering Carolina: 900 students entered the freshman class at UNC in 1953; out of that number 30 graduated prior to June 1957 and 294 students graduated in June 1957. In August 1957 or January 1958 some 57 students of the class graduated. In the spring of 1957. 144 were still enrolled.

From the 1953 class 133 were lost by scholastic ineligibility, 79 by withdrawal, 13 suspended, 3 to the Armed Forces and 147 dropped out.

In commenting on how the new counseling program would be financed, Weaver stated, "Dormitories must be self-sustaining out of

APO's Parents' Day To Have Full Schedule

The eighth annual Parent's Day celebration will be May 4. Appearing as a highlight at the event will be the internationally known U.S. Air Force Drill Team.

Other activities planned for the affair are to include special demostrations and exhibits in various departments of the University. Visiting parents will be guided to points of interest on the campus.

The Alpha Phi Omega service fraternity is sponsoring the affair.

A faculty reception during afternoon will be entertained by songs from the visitors.

A concert by the University band will conclude the day's activities.

PanHel Group Sends Girls To Fashion Show

The Panhellenic Council made final plans in its meeting Wednesday afternoon to send six delegates to the Panhellenic Fashion Show to be held this coming Monday in Raleigh. All schools in the state having sororities are sending delegates. The fashion show will be entertainment for a meeting with Raleigh high school senior girls who will be entering college next fall.

The Council also changed the date of its Workshop for sorority officers from May 5 to May 12. The Workshops will deal with the duties and problems of the various offices. Rush problems were discussed briefly.

New 'Ram And Ewe' On Streets; Man On Street Is On Its Cover

By WYNDHAM HEWITT

The second issue of the University's humor magazine, Ram and Ewe, hit the news stands last Tuesday. The magazine is available at most of the news stands in Chapel Hill.

The Daily Tar Heel Staff regretfully declines the invitation to the dawn meeting of the University of North Carolina's Doubting and Shouting Club as announced in The Ram and Ewe. Instead we give an open invitation to anyone interested to join our staff of wheelers and dealers.

Ruth Hoffman, secretary of the Ram and Ewe said there will probably be one more issue this year.

The magazine has such features as "Expose of Russian Frat Party" and Eunice Euphoria's love lorn column. In the Russian Expose a reporter "tells all concerning evil Red orgy."

To add spice to the magazine many cartoons and jokes have been included. For the movie goer there is a column publicizing all the new flicks. The magazine also has a complete selection of ads. They range from those of the local merchants to those of a drunk rental service.

The cover of the publication has a picture of America's number one man on the street, Gordon Hathaway. Seeing this esteemed man's picture on the cover of the magazine has inspired a poll of the man on the street in Chapel Hill.

It is his opinion that the recent copy of Ram and Ewe is excellent. The magazine has been praised for its comedy, illustrations and stories. The only thing that seems to be a little confusing is, who is the man on the cover and why?

Some questions have arisen as to, 'which professor was that on the cover?"

Some quotations from the Man On The Street in Chapel Hill include:

"The old Tarnation was better but this issue of Ram and Ewe begins to look more like a real humor magazine."

"Looks much more like a real magazine than the first one—Great improvement in quality and material."

"Art work excellent."

"This issue is thicker, the last one looked like two pieces of paper stapled together."

"Jokes are terrific."

No Squares Allowed'

Sound And Fury Plans Well Underway

Sound and Fury will present "No Squares Allowed," directed by Cecil Hartsoe, May 2 and 3 at 8 p.m. in Memorial Hall.

The play, produced by G. C. Pridgen, will star Hannah Kirby, Hoke Simpson, Oliver Bloomer, Hope Sparger, Pete Flahive, and Larry Anderson.

The story centers around a sophisticated 20-year-old girl living in New York. Her father, a big time lawyer interested in advancing policitically in the state, is hot on the trail of a crooked union boss named Ulysses Muffa who is in love with his daughter.

To complicate things Muffa has an ex-wife much larger than he who interferes with his passes at young Dorothy.

Dorothy, however, doesn't love Muffa but a musician named Harry.

The outcome of the play is very entertaining, according to Sound and Fury officials.

Music will be by Michael Dunn and Cecil Hartsoe.

The play was written by UNC students Jonathan Yardley and Michael Dunn.

Tickets will 50c each.

LAUGHING IT UP WITH SOUND AND FURY—Hannah Kirby and Hoke Simpson, who play leading roles in the all-student production, seem to be enjoying themselves in their parts.

Grad Club Supper Meet

The Graduate Club will have a supper meeting Monday, April 28. The speaker will be Tom Donnelly, a recent Ph.D. from the UNC Statistics Department, and now a research associate professor in the School of Public Health.

He will lead a discussion on the topic "Social Science—an art or a science."

All interested persons have been invited to attend the meeting.

Pi Lams Initiate Seven New Members

Seven new men have been initiated by Pi Lambda Phi Social Fraternity.

Counselors

The former president of the student body and the University administration has come up with a program that, it is hoped, will give the University a start on filling a need that has not previously been met.

The program, which culminates an effort over a period of years to alleviate the situation whereby over 60 percent of the students who enter the University do not graduate, calls simply for a paid graduate counselor on each floor of each dormitory, who would in general be responsible for the mental and physical welfare of the students on the floor.

Up until now, the advisor program in the dormitory has been in the main to deliver to one lucwy graduate student the privilege of a free room. The advisor's responsibility was little, and his duties nebulous. His job, needless to say, was in the main inadequate.

There was indeed a question of whether to have an advisor at all in the dormitory, since he was detracting from the room rent the University was receiving and contributing very little to the students over whom he had responsibility.

Yet there obviously is a need for someone whom the student can talk to about his problems. There is also an obvious need for some sort of maintenance of quiet in the dormitories during evening study hours, without having to worry about flying beer cans, rolling coke bottles, loud talk the poker game next door or 'Short Shorts" blaring out of a neighboring room's radio.

There further needs to be someone whom a student can come to with academic problems since the ratio between General College advisors and the students whom they advise is something like 1-200.

There also needs to be built up some sort of a dorm spirit, which is lacking due to the type of construction that the majority of Carolina dorms possess.

For all these reasons, there is a necessity for someone, and until there is some sort of a guide to what helps out these problems most, there must be a certain amount of experimentation in this area.

The program that has been suggested is perhaps the largest step taken in the right direction.

It is not a perfect program. It will be more perfect with the cooperation of the students involved. It will be even more perfect when it will be extended to all students.

But the need at the present time is basic to freshmen and sophomores.

Moreover, it will bring a new, pleasant concept of dormitory living that heretofore has been impossible.

And finally it will bring a raise in the academic level of the University, by providing a suitable study atmosphere. Now, it is next to impossible to study in dormitories, and during the crucial periods of the semester when quizes and term papers come hot and heavy the library is no place for studying.

Since there is no other place to study on this campus, there must be some bettering of the situation in one or both of these areas.

This the counseling program can accomplish in part, if the Interdormitory Council takes the initiative in supporting this and and working with the individual counselor. This may cause a revision in the IDC court set-up, but at the same time, it will aid the counselors in an exceedingly difficult job.

The program is a step ahead. It must succeed.

Israel: Ten Years Of Progress

K. R. Gabriel

(This is the first of a two part article by Mr. Gabriel, who resides in Israel and is a post-doctoral student in the statistics department here at the University)

The most striking thing in the first ten years of Israel's independence is the trebling of its population, presumably the most rapid increase in the history of any nation.

Most of the increase was due to the immigration of more than a million Jews. About half of them came from Europe, being the survivors of the massacre of six million Jews by Nazi Germany, and many having spent further years in DP camps or under communist rule in Eastern Europe. Most of the other immigrants came from the Arab countries, principally North Africa, Iraq and the Yemen, where growing xenophobia made their life increasingly insecure.

Most immigrants did not come to Israel from idealistic motives or in order to better their economic lot. This was an exodus from countries in which their families had been massacred and their security undermined, to a country which offered them one thing—the chance of building their own future by themselves. Though the immigrants have come from many countries, and have brought with them a tremendous variety of customs, languages, ideas and ways of life, they have in common the experience of having struggled to survive in an alien and hostile world, and the overwhelming desire for a home in which they will be secure amongst their own people. To Jews who had been through the holocaust in Europe no other country could ever give the feeling that they are safe, that THIS CANNOT HAPPEN HERE.

This common heritage, together with the common experience of rebuilding the land of Israel, facilitates the integration of Jews from such diverse origins as Russia, Cochin, Morrocco and the USA. The differences do not disappear in the much less noticeable among the native born.

Israeli-born sons and daughters of earlier immigrants know and care little about their parents' origins. They have grown in their own country and the problems of Jews in an alien world are unknown to them. This has produced a new generation, generally healthier and taller than their parents, and increasingly self reliant and proud. They are often taciturn, unpolished, scornful of high sounding phrases and ideals; they have shown themselves excellent pioneers and fighters, but they do not care to be told that they are idealists.

Israel's citizen army is an example of the spirit of the country. After compulsory full time service, every able bodied man and woman (excepting mothers) is in the active reserve, going for a few month's training every year and being on instant call at any time. Few Israelis enjoy being soldiers, but it is accepted as inevitable in face of the hostility of the Arab states, and the young army has shown a considerable degree of competence and fighting ability.

Jonathan Yardley

It has recently been suggested to me that, editorially at least I am quite naive. This interests me tremendously, as I had never really given the matter much consideration. As a consequence I was quite taken aback by the rather gratuitous suggestion.

The people who made this observation are probably quite right. I am rather naive—that is, I have an abiding faith in the essential goodness of mankind, am constantly amazed by the seemingly ordinary feats of nature, and like to think that occasionally someone, somewhere, agrees with what I say in this column.

I do not intend to place myself as a paragon of virtue, but I must confess that I am happier with the naive me than the me that would result from over-infiltration by those who—or so they would have me believe—are not naive.

One of the greatest faults with most of the people of this country and with most of the members of the student body of this university—is that they consider anyone who does not believe that the world is going to hell to be either naive, stupid, uninformed, or insane. I would like to suggest that they re-evaluate the situation.

I assume, for a great many reasons, that there is a motivating power behind the revolution of the earth and the activities of we humans who live upon it. Because I am essentially Christian, I think that this power is good, and that it is known as God. Perhaps this is being naive; I think not. I prefer to console myself with the realization that I need something to believe in. Perhaps I am not as exalted as my fellow students.

I received an anonymous letter today which I would like to quote from. I hope the author will not mind, for it was a wonderful letter, one of understanding and beauty.

"The simplest expressions of faith and the most beautiful happenings are looked upon with great disgust simply because our tiny minds refuse to grasp so simple an expression of supreme wonderment. Flowers bloom, grass grows, the sun shines, eggs hatch, mammals give birth to their young—these are among the by-passed beauties."

This person has caught the heart of the matter. These things, simple, ordinary to us are the greatest events of our lives. The simple things are the ones that matter. Pause a moment—could you live without them? Could you sneer without them? The next time you stop at your sneering post, think briefly on what you are deriding You may not sneer.

There was a double implication in the accusation of "naivete" which I do not like: first, that naivete is a characteristic not to be admired, second, that the readers seemed to have done some misconjuring.

Idealism is, of course, tied in with naivete, but the two are not synonymous. I prefer to think myself more idealistic than naive. If naivete is, by definition of the twentieth century youth, a seeming inability to grasp the unpleasantness of the present situation, then I fear I fail the test. I know as well as they that things are not all too bright. But I like to look on the hopeful side, slim though it may be at times.

Ever since the world began to assume complicated proportions naivete has been laughed at and scorned. And so has idealism. The young people who scorn today are essentially the same as those who laughed Wilson and his League of Nations out of existence.

There seems to be a fear of anything idealistic in the twentieth century. This is understandable. As I mentioned in an earlier column, the people have been fooled again and again, and to them an idealistic proposition seems just as foolhardy as a diabolical one. This, however, is insufficient excuse for refusing to grant a person the freedom to be amazed at the supposedly simple happenings of everyday life.

Ogden Nash once suggested, in an absolutely delightful poem, that babies are really much more sophisticated than adults. After all, does a baby express astonishment at jets, rockets, sputniks, and the many wonders of the modern world?.

Perhaps those who scoff at the naive should be likened to the babies. And perhaps someday they will recognize the magnificence of these "everyday miracles." And perhaps they will grow up someday.

Letters On Spring Plus

Editor:

"Never lose an opportunity to see anythig beautiful.
Welcome it in every fair face.
every fair flower, and every fair sky.
And thank Him who is the duthor
of all loveliness.
And drink it in earnestly and deeply with all your eyes,
It is a charmed draught, a cup of blessing."

Just now, North Carolina in general, and Chapel Hill in particular, is a thing of beauty. We Tar Heels don't have to travel anywhere to see beauty: Simply pause where ever you are, open your eyes and drink it in. What amazes me is that every year I am just as surprised and thrilled as if I had never seen it before.

All the year around there is something on the campus to enjoy, but it is not until now that you can see how the raking and scraping, planting and fertilizing of the yard men really pay off. In March the Japonica tried to bloom several times but were frozen. However, after Easter, undaunted, they burst forth in a blaze of glory.

Last week the cherry trees lining the quandrangle were in bloom. This week, the dogwood, the pink bud, the flowering peach, the tulips, the azaleas are in full bloom. In North Carolina, April, not June, is the month that the "green door opens and loveliness comes through."

Let me beg you, as you walk through the campus, particularly behind New East and the Alumni building, and in front of Old West, to take your eyes off of the sidewalks for a few minutes and feast on this miracle of Spring. It is indeed a charmed draught, a cup of blessing.

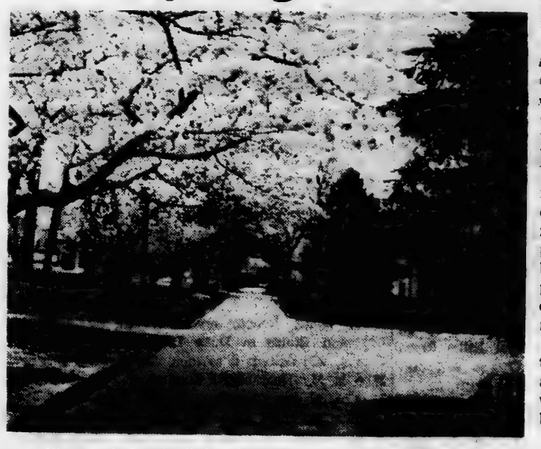
Sad and morose, that's my name
The weekend is here but studying is my game
Everyone else is out raising hell
But I have a quiz I'm afraid I will fail

Why should I worry, why should I fear?
I should go to the Tempo, and have a beer.
Beautiful spring has sprung everywhere,
But I've got to study; it just ain't fair.

A Frustrated chemistry major

Editor:



On scanning the editorial page of today's Daily Tar Heel, we began to read the column known as "View and Preview" by Anthony Wolff, your supposedly literary critic. After one paragraph he forgot his job and began to criticize something that is far from literary. We have no objection to this, except when such an unfounded and asinine subject for criticism is brought up.

We challenge Mr. Wolff to name two buildings on this campus (excluding) the Medical Center, possibly) which cannot be reached in the ten minute period allotted without undue haste and without stepping on a blade of grass. One of us, having had classes as far separated as Alumni Hall and Wilson Hall, finds it very easy to do. Also, there are brick walks leading to a door of every building on campus. Therefore, walking on the grass is certainly not necessary unless you just happen to be lazy.

Carolina has long had the reputation of having one of the most beautiful campuses in the Nation. Thouands of dollars are spent every year to keep it this way; money which is spent in vain because of the irresponsibility of such students as Mr. Wolff. We personally feel that the chains (not "wire fencing") which are being erected by the Grounds Department will not be a blemish on the campus and will certainly improve the looks of the grass. They are just reminders of the responsibility which the students have of keeping the campus beautiful.

Perhaps Mr. Wolff should have stayed in New York City (we notice he is from there) and attended Columbia or NYU if he has no inherent love for the natural assets which this university provides, or tries to provide.

It seems that there is some rule about not using "I" too much in newspaper writing. Maybe some journalism or English major can make this clear. However, some of the DTH columnists have used this rule without much thought. In every column that some of the boys write one sees 10 or 15 "we's" and "our's". It is obvious from context that the writer is refering only to himself. If the writer isn't giving his personal views on some particular subject, it would be a great help to his readers if he would say who "we" is.

Maybe a writer for newspapers shouldn't use "I" too much, but that doesn't mean that he should mentally compose his sentences using "I" and then just plug in "we" as he writes. It doesn't take a literatry genius to compose sentences without using "I" or "we" and still give personal opinions.

Why not use "I" in a column? A columnist should be giving his readers a personal view on some subject and there is certainly nothing wrong with using an "I" now and then. At any rate, this would be better than a generous scattering of "We's" throughout the column when actually the writer means "I".

When people read a column they read it to see what the particular writer has to say. If some of the DTH columnists continue to flood us with "we's", it would be less confusing if they would sign the column "The Boys" rather than with their name.

The current controversy over the new rules for freshman women is important in two respects. There is, of course, a principle involved—a principle of freedom and self-determination—and this principle must be carefully considered in any decision on the matter. In the short view, however, it is more important to discern whether or not the new rulings will serve any purpose and, if they do, whether or not this purpose is to the best interests of the individuals concerned and the University.

It has become obvious during the course of the current controversy that the new rules have no rational explanation. It is claimed by the Women's Residence Council that the new rules are being instituted in order to assure the academic success of the new students. The Council has by implication declared the incoming Freshman women incapable of surviving in the atmosphere of the University, months before these women are even to arrive on campus.

The freshman women currently on campus have evidently proven themselves well able to regulate their lives to their own satisfaction and to the satisfaction of the University requirements pertaining both to conduct and studies. Thus, the record clearly marks the new rules as unnecessary.

The only plausible reason for their being instituted at this point, before any need for them has been demonstrated, is that the new freshman women are known to be uniformly inferior in the area of self-discipline to the freshman women now in attendance. In view of the fact that the new women will be entering the University in the same rigorous professional disciplines (pharmacy, med. tech., etc.) in which the current freshman women are enrolled, this possibility seems quite doubtful.

If by some chance the new freshman women are not up to the standard of their current counterparts, the new rules will certainly not serve their intended purpose. Whatever study habits the new girls bring to Carolina, and whatever their aptitude and attitude, they are not going to be altered by three months of strict regulation.

At best, the new rules will encourage the new freshmen, most of whom will enter Carolina from an atmosphere of relative permissiveness, to violate the Honor Code: minor infractions of the rules will probably lay the foundation for more serious offenses later on.

At worst, the new regulations will make the University unattractive to those mature girls whom it would do best to attract. Most girls of freshman age are well able to take care of themselves; many of those who are not will learn soon enough, and the lesson will be more valuable because it has been learned through experience.

More serious than the seeming uselessness and ill effects of the new rules is the violation of principle which they represent. In the first place, the rules have been made without the vote of the people concerned. This is a blatant denial of the very basis of American democratic government—that the people shall enact for themselves, through their elected representatives, those laws which they feel necessary for their own well-being.

It is, moreover, a valuable part of our tradition that the individual be allowed the maximum amount of self-determination which is consistent with the safety of the community. This concept is basic to the Protestant Ethic to which we subscribe.

No only do these new rules deny basic American concepts of individual liberty, but they also do serious damage to the cause of student freedom on this campus. The fight for the great measure of self-determination which we now possess—and should cherish—has been a long and often hard one. As is to be expected, there are elements in the Administration, the Legislature, and the population which are conservative or reactionary in their views on student liberty. If the students of this University admit that they are in any degree incapable of self-goverament, these elements may well attempt to further limit student freedom.

It would seem, then, that the new rules for freshman women have no justification in respect to either principle or practice. And yet they were instituted by a group pledged to serve the best interests of the campus and the co-eds. Throughout the controversy, the Women's Residence Council has demonstrated that its only conscious aim is to benefit everyone involved.

In the face of the obvious sincerity of the Women's Residence Council, this inconsistency between their aim and their result can be accounted for only by questioning the reality of their conscious motives. In other words, while the Women's Residence Council sincerely believes that it is motivated by the altruistic sentiments which it professes, it seems evident that their real reason for instituting the new rules in something quite different.

In support of this, it is interesting to note that the new rules were formulated last October by girls who had never had the experience of entering the University as freshmen. Their assumption was that the incoming freshmen girls would be just as confused by their new-found freedom as they themselves were, with the freshmen's difficulty being increased by their relative lack of maturity.

Obviously, this is a rather unjustified assumption. It has been noted before that women entering the University as freshmen will in most cases be more accustomed to a permissive atmosphere than will girls entering as juniors after transferring from stricter schools.

What the girls on the Residence Council did was to project their own maladjustment upon entering as juniors on the girls coming to Carolina as freshmen. If anyone should have stricter rules, it should be the juniors rather than the freshmen. In view of this basic misdirection of responsibility in the Residence Council's thinking, the whole subject of the new rules becomes suspect.

Dorm Counselors

Lower Quad Picked For Plan

dorm rent. The maintenance and staff; including dorm housemen, resident counselors, janitors and managers; must be payed out of this cost."

The University has a fund which pays for one-half of the coed dormitory counseling program and one-third of the new men's counseling program, according to Weaver.

The new program will be included in the block rent increase which will pay for three new dorms constructed near Kenan Stadium, the addition to Spencer Dormitory, part of the new wing of the Nurses Dormitory, and a dormitory for the division of health affairs.

The net increase in room rent earmarked for the counseling program is $5, explained Dean Weaver.

The counselors will be paid $1250 dollars a year, but must pay their own room rent and expenses. This amounts to the equivalent of a year's scholarship, Weaver added.

Weaver pointed out that the cost of $5 per student is little compared to the cost of $40 per student necessary to sustain the counseling program at the University of Michigan.

The program at Michigan, Weaver pointed out, included three staff members on each floor, with added advantages in study area, social activities, and guidance.

The problem to be overcome, according to Weaver, is the present style of dormitory construction, which makes study, friendship, and social activities difficult.

The program will be limited to the lower quad, since it is in the nature of an experiment, according to Weaver.

The lower quad was taken after Weaver contacted the Director of Housing in order to find out what was the natural proportion of freshman and sophomore students in any year. The naturil proportion in that area is approximately 75 per cent, making ideal test conditions for the program, which is primarily designed for freshmen and sophomores.

No juniors or seniors will be moved out of the area, Weaver pointed out, but the plan was to encourage the residence of freshmen and sophomores so that some indication could be given as to the success or failure of the program.

The dormitory counselor's function would be to serve as an adviser for students in personal affairs, a helper in academic matters, and as a person who has full knowledge of a person's character in order to prevent difficulties before they arise.

He would also be there to preserve a certain atmosphere for study in the evenings, not as a disciplinarian, but implementing the job of the Interdormitory Council, working through the council.

A test plan is now in operation in Cobb Dormitory and has been for the past school year. The object of this test is to see if the plan can be adapted for overall dormitory use.

According to W. D. Perry, overseer of the new Cobb test, said, "It appears on the surface that the counseling plan has been a great help to those students who took advantage of the opportunity to get help in their problems."

He added that more freshmen and sophomores were using the help, though the Cobb plan is open to all students regardless of class in Carolina.

"Counselors have been active and have had more work than they could possibly handle. Even the students who have been taking advantage of the Cobb plan have indicated that they were helped," said Perry.

Students under the present test are now in the process of being interviewed to determine the exact effect the plan has had on the overall program.

The Cobb plan differs from the new plan in several ways, but the most important is that where the Cobb counselors are now obligated to 185 students who might seek help, the new counseling plan will have only 35 students for each counselor.

In connection with the talk by Weaver, the IDC decided to take a vote to determine whether they as a group would support the plan. The vote will be taken at the next IDC meeting.

Rudy Edwards, president of the IDC, said that he thought the plan would help the students and that he was in favor of seeing the plan put into operation.

Major Problem Is Recession, Says Jordan

SAXAPAHAW, N. C. (AP) —B. Everett Jordan, who is preparing to take a seat in the U. S. Senate, said Thursday he considers the recession the major problem that confronts the nation. "It's got to be dealt with quickly," he added.

However, Jordan said he had not made up his mind on whether there should be a tax cut to combat the recession.

Asked in an interview his stand on proposals to extend the reciprocal trade program, Jordan said, "I don't think there is any question but that we've got to continue our reciprocal trade with foreign countries."

However, he said, something should be done to protect American industries such as textiles and plywood and veneer plant from competition with foreign imports.

Jordan, a textile manufacturer himself, said the situation of the farmer "is one of our big problems and I shall pay a lot of attention to that."

UNC Medical Students Win Research Awards

Two fourth year medical students of the UNC School of Medicine have won awards in nationwide competition for papers presented on research they did in the field of inheritance of human diseases.

The two students are W. R. Bullock Jr., of Bethel, and Vernon McFalls, of Greensboro.

Both young men received Sheard-Sanford prizes which are presented annually by the American Society of Clinical Pathologists. The rewards are in the form of cash grants.

Their work was done under the supervision of Dr. John B. Graham, associate professor of pathology at the UNC Medical School. Dr. Graham has been engaged in the study of genetics, which deals with the inheritance of diseases, for the past five years.

Both papers entered in the national competition were in the field of pathology. These papers were originally prepared by the two students as thesis to meet the requirements of the School of Medicine for an M.D. degree.

Bullock's paper was on "Carrier State of Plasma Thromboplastin Component Deficiency" while McFalls paper dealt with "Genetic Study of Vitamin D, Resistant Rickets and Hypohosphatemia."

Bullock's research work was with mothers of boys who suffered from an unusual form of hemophilia, a disease that prevents blood from clotting. Generally speaking, hemophilia is transmitted by females but occurs only in males. However work has been underway at the UNC School of Medicine for several years with female dogs who suffer from hemophilia. This is the only known group of female animals in the world that have hemophilia.

In his research project, Bullock attempted to get all possible information from mothers who were transmitters of the disease that would lead to a test that could determine the presence of hemophilia in advance. Bullock's work involved 16 mothers and sons, the mothers being transmitters and the sons having the disease.

For his research project, McFalls made a study of a large family in eastern North Carolina who had inherited rickets. Rickets can cause improper bone formations due to the body's improper utilization of calcium and a deficiency of vitamin D.

McFalls took blood samples of the members of the family, made analyses, conducted other studies and determined how the disease was inherited.

Renaissance To Be Topic Of Conference

Four UNC scholars will speak on phases of Renaissance culture during the two-day meeting of the 15th annual Southeastern Renaissance Conference in Chapel Hill.

A program of Renaissance Music, directed by Wilton Mason, will be open to the public at 8:30 today in Graham Memorial Lounge.

There will be 17 speakers from 11 universities to present papers on all phases of Renaissance culture during the two-day conference.

Four soloists of the University chorus will be: Wilton Mason, Harpsichord; Martha Fouse, soprano; Efrim Fruchtman, viola da gamba; and Gene Strassler, tenor.

In today's opening session Albert Knowles, UNC graduate student, will read a paper on "Spenser's Natural Man," followed by Lloyd E. Berry's discussion on "Giles Fletcher's The Elder" and Milton's "A Brief History of Muscovia."

UNC Prof. James E. King will discuss "Renaissance Roots of Cartesian Science" at tomorrow morning's lecture session.

Shakespeare's "King Lear" will also be discussed tomorrow morning after which a business meeting and the election of new officers will conclude the morning lecture.

"Romeo and Juliet" will be the last two papers read at the final session tomorrow afternoon.

Other speakers during the conference include: George W. Williams and Simeon K. Heninger, Jr. of Duke University; Prof. Robert H. West of the University of Alabama; Prof. Karl L. Selig of Johns Hopkins University; I. B. Cauthen, Jr. and Fredson Bowers of the University of Virginia; Rosalie E. Wellington of the University of Florida and Thomas B. Stroup of the University of Kentucky.

Pre-Registration

Appointment books will be available for all undergraduates listed in General College to sign up for pre-registration appointments Monday, April 27 through May 4. The books will be in South Building.

Pre-registration will begin May 5 and continue until May 17.

This will be pre-registration for fall semester.

University Club Hears Jefferies

Ray Jefferies, of the office of the Dean of Student Affairs, spoke briefly Tuesday evening to the University Club. He outlined the areas in which the club had operated in the past several years and explained how his office was able to help the club in achieving its goals more easily and at less expense.

Jefferies briefly discussed outdoor pep rallies, and problems involved, such as fire prevention and clearances. He stated that he felt this year would be very good one for school spirit. He also expressed a desire to see the University Club weld school spirit in to one powerful force for team support and sportsmanship.

All committee chairmen were urged by President Dave Josey to have their reports as nearly complete as possible by next week. At that time the club will hold a special meeting featuring a speaker, refreshments and inspection of the new office.

The resignation of Frank Elkins as publicity chairman was announced, and Dick Stoker was appointed to replace him.

In other business five members of the Interdormitory Court were elected. Those chosen were Jerry Morgan; Graham Adams, a sophomore from Rocky Mount; H. E. Holland, a freshman from Raleigh; Jim Scott, a sophomore from Charlotte; and Bill Johnson.

Tom Walters outgoing president of the IDC, was presented a gavel by Paul Walter in honor of his valuable services over the past year.

Doug Bayliff, chairman of the social committee, announced that the Rendezvous Room and poolroom in Graham Memorial will be open free of charge to couples Saturday night from 7:30 to 11:30.

A petition to Chancellor Aycock asking for a new student union was circulated to all dormitories through the dorm presidents. It was also announced that the proposed Tennis Court Dance will not be held until next fall.

NC Symphony In Chapel Hill Wednesday

The North Carolina Symphony will be in Chapel Hill Wednesday, April 30 for an 8:30 p.m. concert in Memorial Hall.

Soloist will be soprano Helen Boatwright, who is well known throughout New England and the New York area as a versatile and talented singer.

The student membership of $1 in the North Carolina Symphony Society entitles the holder to attend any of the regular membership concerts played by the Symphony during the year. Student wives are also admitted for $1.

On Friday, May 3, the Symphony will play in Durham at the auditorium of the Duke Woman's College Campus at 8:30 p.m. Soloists will be the Duke University Woman's Glee Club.

On Monday, May 5, the Symphony will be at Woman's College in Greensboro at the Aycock Auditorium for an 8:30 p.m. concert. In this role will be the combined a cappella choir from Guilford male's College of the University College and glee club of the Woof North Carolina.

The Symphony will be in Raleigh on Wednesday, May 7 for a concert at the Josephus Daniels Junior High School at 8:30 p.m. Soloist will be pianist Fred Sahlmann, who has been called the finest young pianist ever to appear with the Symphony.

The purchase of a $1 membership will give admission to any or all of these concerts.

Memberships are now on sale at Symphony Headquarters, Bingham X, between Bingham Hall and Lenoir Hall, and will be on sale at the door at each of these concerts.

In Local Court

The following UNC students were tried in Chapel Hill Recorder's Court this week:

Harold E. Igoe, Charleston, S.C., traffic light violation, costs, $13.30;

Philip S. Morgan, Purefoy Rd., Chapel Hill, expired registration plates, costs, $13.30;

Charles Gray, III, Nutley, N. J., parking violations, costs $16.60;

John C. Council, Jr., Sumter, S. C., stop sign violation, costs, $13.30;

John W. McAlister, III, Winnetka, Ill., parking on sidewalk, $7.80.

Conference Leading Tigers Play Tar Heels Here Today

By RUSTY HAMMOND

The Carolina Tar Heels, currently holding onto second place in the ACC pennant chase, face their toughest test of the season today when the league-leading Clemson Tigers come to town to attempt to fatten their 8-0 unbeaten record.

The Tigers are running away with the flag so far, and no one able to halt them. There aren't too many games left to be played, in the conference seems to be and if anyone wants to stop the rampaging Bengals, they had better start fast.

Although the Tar Heels are in second place with a 3-1 record, it could be stated that they have yet to prove themselves in this tough league, for they have played the least number of games of the entire eight teams. Today they can do it.

The conference standings (unofficial) as of yesterday were:

Clemson	8-0	1.000
Carolina	3-1	.750
Duke	5-2	.714
State	5-3	.625

Clemson boasts the league's leading hurler in leftie Harold Stowe, who currently boasts a 6-0 record on the season, and he is the probable starter on the mound for the Tigers in today's scrap. Another possible starter for the Tigers is right-hander Ed Lakey, with a 4-1 record.

Carolina also has a pitcher who is unbeaten in Ben Harding who sports a 4-0 slate, and either he or Wayne Young is the probable starting moundsman for the Tar Heels today.

Carolina's last conference game, with the Wake Forest Demon Deacs last Wednesday night in Winston-Salem was called off because of rain and rescheduled for the latter part of April. Carolina whipped East Carolina 12-3 last Saturday night, and beat Duke and State last week. The Heels now stand 11-5 in all games.

The probable starting line - up for today's game for Carolina; Bruce Crump, C; Vaughn Bryson, lb; Carson Oldham, 2b; Al Pons, 3b; Roger Honnecutt, ss; Tommy Saintsing, lf; Gerald Griffin, cf; and John Burgwyn, rf. Gametime is 3:30 p.m. in Emerson Stadium.

Tennis Team Clubs Duke 8-0; Undefeated String Now Eight

Carolina's powerful tennis team won its eighth straight match by clubbing the Duke Blue Devils 8-0 on Duke's courts yesterday.

The win brings the Tar Heels conference record to five wins against no losses. The match was shortened because of darkness. Steve Bank and Bob Bortner, Carolina's number one doubles team battled Duke's Dick Katz and Don Romhilt to a 10-8, 8-6, 6-6 deadlock when the coaches decided that play could not go on.

The match was a fine tilt and served notice that the Romhilt due will be a strong doubles contender in the conference tourney in two weeks.

Bortner and Bank each had a fairly easy time defeating Romhilt and Katz respectively in singles play, but faced a tough team when the Blue Devils got together.

The Tar Heels next match will be at Maryland tomorrow.

THE SUMMARY

Singles: Bortner (C) over Romhilt, 6-1, 2-6, 6-0; Bank (C) over Katz, 6-1, 6-2; Black (C) over Williams, 0-6, 6-2, 9-7; Clark (C) over Ruben, 6-2, 6-2; Keys (C) over Jack, 6-4, 6-2; Makepeace (C) over Graham, 6-2, 6-0.

Doubles. Bank-Bortner (C) and Romhilt-Katz, called due to darkness. (Score: UNC 10-8, Duke 6-3, tie 6-6); Clark-Keys (C) over Williams-Ruben, 6-2, 6-2; Makepeace-Black (C) over Graham-Jack, 6-2, 7-5.

Penn Relays

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Villanova's great track team, college champions of the NCAA outdoor and IC4A indoor meets, goes after its third straight distance medley relay title today in the opening of the 64th annual Penn Relay Carnival at Franklin Field.

The giant two-day carnival has attracted more than 3,500 track and field athletes from 560 schools and colleges, including a liberal sprinkling of Olympic stars.

Another Olympic star competng Friday is Bobby Morrow of Abilene Christian College. He will anchor his school in the qualifying heats of the quarter-mile and half mile relay races.

Morrow, Olympic sprint champ, renews his rivalry with Duke's Dave Sime in a special 100-yard dash Saturday. Sime defeated Morrow three weeks ago at Big Spring, Tex. Before that, in 1956, they raced twice—and each won once.

Two other runners are in this special event — Morrow's teammate, Bill Woodhouse, who beat him recently, and Penn State's Bobby Brown.

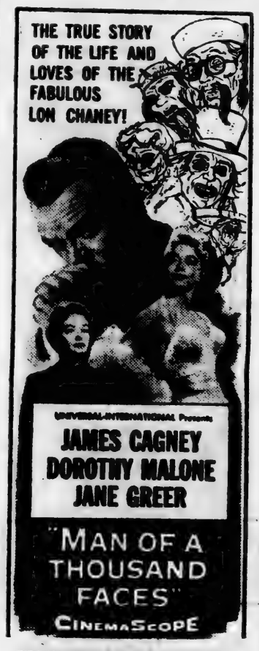
Rod And Gun Meet Set For April 30

The second Annual Big - Four Rod and Gun Field Meet will be held at the Durham Wildlife Club Area on April 30th.

This event, which is sponsored by the UNC Intramural Department with the aid of the Durham Wildlife Club, is to encourage the other Big Four Schools to begin participating in rod and gun activities.



The events in the field meet are target shooting, trap shooting, bait casting, and Archery. All students, whether they are male or female, may participate. The highest scores from each school count toward the final team score.

In last year's meet, Carolina and State tied for the top honors. Trophies are awarded to the individual winners of each event. This year, the intramural department of state College is providing the awards. Students on NROTC rifle team are not permitted to enter the competition.

The head supervisors for the meet will be Tom Johnson, Bill Bailey, and Don Atkins, all from Carolina. They have invited all interested students to call the intramural department. Transportation will be provided to the meet.

All events will begin at 2 p.m. and should be over by 5:00 p.m. Because of limited time, contestants will be permitted to enter only one event. If time permits, they may enter other events on a recreational basis only.

THE CASE OF THE MISMATCHED COORDINATES

I was placed under arrest at Guadalajara. Case of mistaken identity. The locals thought I was a rum-runner, name of Pepe Sanchez. Luckily, my Van Heusen sport shirt and matching walking shorts proved to them that I was a Yank.

I needed a quick one, so I floated into a tank joint in my Van Heusen leisure coordinates and ordered a V-8 on the rocks. Then I saw her.

"Pepe!" she called. She musta been talking to me—and I wasn't going to knock it.

"Si, Chiquita," and I followed her upstairs. She kissed me hard on the mouth. I misunderstood.

"How about a game of Spanish Jotto?" I asked. She misunderstood.

I felt her fingers under my collar. "Where is it, Pepe?"

"Where's what?"

"The microfilm, idiot. You were given orders to carry the guided missile data inside your slotted collar."

Little did Chiquita know that my Van Heusen sport shirt had Collarite sewn-in stays. Nobody was going to substitute microfilm for my microthin stays . . . because my stays can't come out . . . even in laundering.

The door flew open. A man stood there in flashy, ill-fitting yellow walk shorts with a pink sport shirt. Except for the guy's scrounge leisure clothes, he coulda been my twin.

"Get him, Pepe!" said Chiquita.

He jumped me, and in the ensuing struggle, I stabbed him with his own collar stay. I turned Chiquita over to the authorities and Pepe was given a decent burial in Van Heusen matching sport shirt and slacks. The microfilm was recovered, the plans saved—and we owe it all to Van Heusen. Why not show your patriotism by wearing Van Heusen leisure slacks, sport shirts, walking shorts, and swimwear.

Carolina Tracksters Take Nine Firsts To Defeat Virginia 86-45

By DAVE WIBLE

Carolina's track and field men gathered nine first places to outclass the Virginia Cavaliers 86-45 in a meet here yesterday.

The Tar Heels had the battle all the way. In five events the Carolina cindermen swept all three places leaving Virginia nothing for her trouble. The Cavaliers, however, pulled the same trick in the pole vault.

In the hot humid weather, and performing before a 1910-14 Carolina track team, Carolina's fine middle distance man Dave Scurlock got back into usual form and won the 440 and half-mile. Scurlock also anchored the mile relay team, but could not overcome a long Virginia advantage when his turn came to run. He did make a tremendous effort and finished only five yards behind Virginia's Pat Whitaker.

Carolina had three more double winners. Wayne Bishop and Everett Whatley ran side by side in the mile finishing together for a tie. Bishop came back and won the 2-mile going away. Basketball player Ray Stanley, proved he is adjusting well to his new activities by winning both the javelin and the broad jump. Hurdler Lyndon DeBorde showed his superiority by winning both the high and low hurdle events.

The clean sweeps for the Tar Heels were in the high jump, broad jump, mile, and high and low hurdles. Walley Graham was first in the high jump followed by Bob Sherrill and Lou Glascock. In the broad jump, Stanley, Ed Brawley and Ward Sims cleaned house in that order.

Finishing third in the mile behind Bishop and Whatley was Tar Heel Fick Arthur. In both the low and high hurdles DeBorde was followed by Charlie Sowers and Lou Glascock.

THE SUMMARY

Shot: 1—Call (V), 2-Kemper (C), 3-Semples (V), 46' ¾".

Frosh Tie Blue Imps

Carolina's freshman batmen tied the Duke Blue Imps 4-4 yesterday at Duke before the game was called on account of darkness, after 10 innings.

The Tar Babies scored the tying runs in the top of the ninth when Joe Grimsley smashed a ground ball through shortstop to score Caroll Bolick and Bud Ellerbe. Bolick got on with a single and Ellerbe doubled to put men on second and third to score off Grimsley's hard hit ball.

Duke got the jump and scored two in the first. The Tar Babies tied it up at two all but went behind when Duke scored runs in two successive innings.

Bob Deaton and John Stott pitched for the Tar Babies, Stott relieving in the sixth. Today the Tar Babies will travel to play the Wolflets.

UNC Fencers To Meet VMI On Saturday

The Tar Heel fencers journey to Lexington, Va. this weekend to do battle with the fencers of Virginia Military Institute on Saturday afternoon. Victorious over their adversaries in an earlier meet of this year by a bout score of 16-11, the Tar Heels hope to repeat in the return meet in Lexington. The first meet of the season was held here at Woollen Gym.

Coach Barrow said yesterday that his team was much improved since their previous meet, but undoubtedly the VMI team has also improved. "We will miss several of our top men who are unable to make the trip, but I feel we will still be able to give them a good meet. This will wind up our season as far as team competitions go, however the individual intramurals championships which are held annually will start next week. There will be trophies for the first three places in each weapon (foil, sabre, epee) and these competitions which will this year be cosponsored by the Intramurals Dept. and GMAB, will take place in Graham Memorial on each of the first three successive Fridays in May—the 2nd, 9th and 16th. The competitions will begin promptly at seven and everyone is invited to attend.

"Every male student in school is eligible to compete regardless of previous experience and each fencer in a given weapon will fence every other in the course of the bouts on that evening," Coach Barrow stated.

Football Story-Teller Herman Hickman Dies

Hickman was 46. His home was at New Haven, Conn.

He had been in Providence Hospital since March 28, after suffering an ulcer attack at La Plata, Md., while on his way to Florida with Mrs. Hickman to visit his mother.

An operation was performed last Monday and Hickman appeared to be progressing until yesterday evening when an acute hemorrhage in the esophagus set him back. Attending physicians said severe liver and kidney complications made his condition critical.

He lapsed into unconsciousness this morning and died at 4:15 p.m.

Mrs. Hickman and his mother were at the bedside, along with New York restaurateur Toots Shor and Dave Driscoll, a business associate.

Hickman, a star lineman at Tennessee, retired as head coach at Yale several years ago. His Tennessee drawl, wit and broad knowledge qualified him as a television performer in fields other than sports. He could quote poetry for hours and wrote verse.

He conducted sports programs on both radio and television and wrote articles for magazines.

Undergrads May Arrange To Pre-Register

Appointment books will be available for all undergraduates listed in General College to sign up for pre-registration appointments Monday, April 27 through May 4. The books will be in South Building.

Pre-registration will start May 5 and continue until May 17.

This will be pre-registration for fall semester.

Launching Postponed

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla., — (AP)—Technical troubles yesterday prompted the Air Force to postpone a scheduled launching of the Bomarc ground-to-aid missile, the key weapon in the U. S. air defense arsenal.

Officials said the shoot was "scrubbed" at 12:53 p.m. (EST) because of an undetermined malfunction in the launching equipment.

Sam Magill Will Speak At SP Meet

Monday night at 7:30 Sam Magill will speak to the Student Party on the new freshman advisor system planned for the lower quad. After his speech he will inswer any questions from the floor.

"This is a very important issue and I feel that students should acquaint themselves with the proposal, "said Leon Holt, Student Party Chairman. "We would like to extend a special invitation to those who are going to be Orientation Counselors next fall."

This is another one of the programs presented by the Student Party to educate students to campus affairs. The meeting will take place in Roland Parker Lounge I and II.

Woody Ends Weekend With Big Concert Today

Woody Herman and his Third Herd will move into Memorial Hall today at 3 p. m. to give the Spring Germans concert.

The appearance of Herman and his band will close out the final Germans Weekend for this school year.

Appearing with the Third Herd will be the Al Belletto Sextet, one of the top ranking combos in the music business. They will be presented at intervals during the Herman concert.

One featured instrumentalist of the Third Herd will be Bill Harris, for ten years winner of the Dorm Beat poll as top trombonist in jazz. In recent years he has toured the United States, Europe and the Far East.

Les Brown and his Band of Renown entertained at the Germans Dance last night from 9-1.

Woollen Gym, the scene of the dance, was decorated similarly to the way it was for Winter Germans, with tables arranged around the dance floor to leave a maximum of space for dancing.

Appearing with the Brown band were Butch Stone, Stumpy Brown and their new vocatlist. Laurie Johnson.

YDC Chooses Next Year's Top Officers

Plans Finished For APO's Parents' Day

By RAYMOND FLETCHER GRAY

Alpha Phi Omega Fraternity will sponsor its eighth annual Parent's Day on the UNC campus Sunday afternoon, May 4.

Lee Kittredge said yesterday that some 1600 invitations had been sent to the parents of freshmen and sophomores, but all parents are welcome.

Beginning at 3:30, there will be a faculty reception in front of South Building, followed by a speech by former UNC Chancellor R. B. House and a band concert.

Refreshments will be served all afternoon by coeds in each of the women dormitories and exhibitions and displays will be presented by different departments throughout the campus.

The Playmakers' Museum in 101 Saunders will feature animal and human masks made by students and a model of Forest Colony at Roanoke Island.

Other Playmaker relics will be Professor Koch's pipe, a small library of books donated by Roland Holt, interesting Russian puppets and Chinese shadow puppets, Victorian costumes, dolls from the Philippines, and scenes from Paul Greene's first play—"The Last of the Lowries."

In addition the Playmakers will exhibit photos and paintings of the early playmakers — Paul Greene and Archibald Henderson, and collections of play posters and newspaper clipping as far back as 1918.

There will be exhibits and displays in the zoology, geology, library, chemistry, and physics museums.

Other buildings and places that will be open for public inspection will include: The radio-TV—departments in Swain Hall, Consolidated University Offices in the old Institute of Government building, Pearson Hall's Art Gallery, Coker Arboretum, Forest Theater, the Sundial, Battlepark, Kenan Stadium, and the Circus room in the Monogram club.

The Morehead Planetarium will present several shows during the afternoon.

The ROTC Airforce will have a drill and a bugle corp. The Naval Armory will be open to inspection.

Restaurant Segregation Challenged In Virginia

ALEXANDRIA, Va., — (AP)— A Washington Negro has filed a suit in U. S. District Court here aimed to crack Virginia laws and customs of racial segregation in public eating places.

Charles T. Williams filed the suit yesterday against Howard Johnson's Restaurant here on Washington Street, saying in the complaint that the restaurant refused to serve him on April 20 because of his race.

The suit asks $500 damages each from the restaurant, the manager and a waitress.

It asks also for a judgement that a restaurant situated adjacent to an U. S. Constitution,

Two Members Of Faculty At Art Education Meet

Professor John V. Allcott and Associate Professor George J. Kachergis of the UNC Art Department are in New York this week, April 24-27, for the 16th annual conference of the National Committee on Art Education.

Sponsored by the Museum of Modern Art, this year's sessions are scheduled under the general title, "The Art in Art Education."

The Carolisa participants join with some 100 other art education, history, directorial and instructional experts and with practicing artists in a series of concentrated discusions groups and lectures which appraise and analyze almost every phase of art and education in terms of present day expansion and direction in the field at large.

Evaluations and critical review of methods as relating to aesthetic experience for the individual are balanced by considerations of the school child's art experience as an aid to his crative growth in all areas.

Professor Allcott, as chairman of a discussion meeting, will introduce the featured speaker, John McAndrew, professor of art at Wellesley College and director of the Farnworth Museum, Wellesley, Mass.

Modern Venus Contest Heads Sigma X Derby

Seven sororities on campus and the Nurses dorm will compete in the Sigma Chi Derby Tuesday according to Derby co-chairmen Dennis McCoy and Jerry Long.

Six events will be included in the Derby. A relay race, The Grand National, will get things under way at 2:30. The hit the Greek contest, a pie throwing contest, the race to the flesh, the secret event, a skit given by each group and a Miss Modern Venus contest are the other events scheduled.

In addition to the Nurses dorm the Chi Omega, Delta Delta, Pi Beta Phi, Alpha Gamma Delta, Alpha Delta Pi, Kappa Delta, Kappa Kappa Gamma sororities will have entrants in the contests.

Last year's winners were the Chi Omegas and the Kappa Deltas. Miss Judy Dockery won the Miss Modern Venus Contest.

This year's Miss Modern Venus will be given a bathing suit which was donated by a Chapel Hill clothing store.

Chapel Hill merchants have donated articles which will be given away as gifts to spectators.

The Derby will begin with a parade which will start at the Sun Dial and proceed down Franklin Street to Columbia Street, down Columbia to Cameron Avenue, down Cameron to Raleigh Street and from there to Kenan Stadium. The parade will start at 2 p.m.

Twenty-two girls are entered in the Miss Modern Venus contest. They are Misses Bobbie Madison, Washington, D. C.; Patsy McCauley, Rocky Mount; Dottie Bull, Montgomery, Ala.; Susan Tuggle, Charlotte; Gail Willingham, St. Petersburg, Fla.; Mary Cabel Carlan, Candor;

Navy Plans To Launch New Carrier

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The Navy yesterday announced its fourth super sized aircraft carrier, the Independence, will be launched June 6 at the New York Naval Shipyard.

Mrs. Thomas S. Gates Jr., wife of the Secretary of the Navy, will christen the 60,000 ton warship. The Independence will become waterborne by flooding the huge dock in which she is being built instead of being launched in the normal manner of sliding down the ways.

Source Of Migraines At Last Isolated

PHILADELPHIA, —(AP)—The pain chemical that apparently causes migraine headaches has been isolated, a New York researcher said yesterday.

The chemical, dropped on an open human blister, has produced pain.

It may also have a relation to the shifting moods and the difficulty in thinking that migraine sufferers sometimes experience.

Common salicylate or aspirin is capable of blocking the action of the pain chemical in laboratory tests. So reported Dr. Loring Chapman, experimental neurologist at the New York hospital—Cornell Medical Center.

The pain chemical was put into a basin with the uterus of a rat. The uterus contracted, much as a muscle might during pain. But aspirin added to the basin seemed to block the action of the pain chemical.

Little had been known about how aspirin worked in the human body except that it was an effective inhibitor of pain.

The pain chemical was described as a polypeptide—fractions of protein produced by an enzyme in the brain.

The polypeptide acts to enlarge blood vessels and enable them to carry more blood to the brain in moments of stress.

In some cases the polypeptide seems to get out of hand, leaking into the area around te skull where it causes pain by its action on nerves.

Educator From South Africa Compares Notes On Race Issue

By CHARLIE SLOAN

Africa isn't all dark continent, Mau Mau and movie sets.

Dr. Violaine Idelette Junod, a lecturer in Native Administration at the University of Natal in Durban, Union of South Africa, visited the Carolina campus Thursday filling students in on a lot they didn't know about South Africa and even some things they hadn't thought about in the United States.

A pleasant women with a clipped British accent, Dr. Junod was born in Portugese East Africa. Her father was a Swiss missionary and at present is National Organizer of the Penal Reform League.

At a late coffee break at YM-YWCA staffer Anne Queen's house, Dr. Junod got her first opportunity to talk informally with students. She has already visited the University of Chicago, the University of Michigan, and spent some time in New York.

She left Chapel Hill early yesterday morning for a swing through the South to the West Coast. Eventually she hopes to settle down and spend what's left of her sabbatical leave studying conditions in a Southern Community.

During her short stay in Chapel Hill she was kept busy in a full schedule of lectures and meetings, yet at the end of the day she was bright and cheerful she joked and chatted with the students at Miss Queen's house as if she were a student herself.

"Our Little Race Problem"

"After hearing about the situation in South Africa, you almost feel thankful for our little race problem," was one comment heard after Dr. Junod completed a lecture before a Sociology class. Yet at no time did she attempt to compare the relative magnitudes of the race problem in the two countries.

The Union of South Africa does seem to have a racial situation that makes the United States' look a bit puny.

To a population of two and a half million whites there are ten million Africans, one million colored, the African term for mulattos, and 360 thousand Indians.

The two and a half million whites are the only ones who have the power to vote and the control of the government.

Segregation is carried to its greatest extremes, she said, and added that racial bars are expected to be tightened even more by the Afrikaaner controlled government.

Under this policy of apartheid the government agency comparable to

Today Is Parents' Day In School Of Medicine

The second annual Parent's Day will be held today at the UNC School of Medicine.

Over 400 parents, students and faculty members are expected to attend the day-long event which is sponsored jointly by the UNC Medical Parents' Club and the School of Medicine. Registration will begin at 9:30 a.m. in the lobby of N. C. Memorial Hhospital. This will be followed by tours of the hospital and the School of Medicine.

A business meeting of the Medical Parents' Club will be held in the Clinic Auditorium at 11 a.m. Malcolm B. Seawell, attorney general of the state of North Carolina and representative of the State Administration, will bring greeting from Governor Luther Hodges

UNC Chancellor William B. Aycock will welcome the parents and visitors to the annual event. V. G. Herring Jr. of Goldsboro, president of the club, will preside.

Dr. W. Reece Berryhil, dean of the Medical School, will speak on the activities of the school. A motion picture, "The Medical Student at Work," will be shown.

This will be followed by a demonstration of an artificial heart-lung machine. This machine used in delicate operations in the heart and on the major arteries leading from the heart.

The election of new officers for the club will be one of the items on the agenda during the business meeting. Aside from club officers, regional officers also will be elected. For adinistrative purposes, the state is divided into five regions.

A barbecue luncheon will be served on the campus near the hospital at 1 p.m. This will be followed by additional tours of the hospital and Medical School.

Regional meetings of the club will be held at 2:30 p. m. in various location in the hospital and School of Medicine. These meetings will be followed with tours of the UNC Medical Center.

Foreign Student Advisor Posts Open For Fall

Advisors are needed for foreign student orientation. The program will be September 13-15. Some 60 advisors will be needed.

The purpose of this program is to help foreign students to adjust to their new environment, to learn the mechanics of the University, to get some acquaintance with the American way of life and to form a personal relationship with the student community.

Top Military Men Discuss Security

By J. M. ROBERTS
Associated Press News Analyst

Differences among the three military services over the best approach to national security have seldom been more clearly focused than by the three top leaders who addressed the American Newspaper Publishers Assn. Thursday.

Gen. Curtis Lemay, Air Force Vice Chief of Staff, called "mutual deterrence" a myth and said the danger of general war is increasing along with the rise in Russia's striking potential.

He thinks the Air Force would have to do 90 per cent of the retaliatory work.

Gen. Maxwell Taylor, Army Chief of Staff, said that under mutual atomic deterrence the danger was from limited war, and emphasized the need for manpower.

Admiral Harry D. Felt, Naval Vice Chief, said missile-firing naval units, especially submarines, would provide better forward defense than Taylor's and Lemay's expensive foreign bases.

Each man was speaking from the background of the traditions and interests of his own service.

Each has his own job to do and his own service to sell.

Each probably figures he can rely upon the others to look after themselves, so that in the end all three services will be able to provide the nation with the broad capabilities it needs.

There is here, however, a difference of political evaluations as well as military concepts.

Under the American system, Congress and the executive departments are supposed to lay down military objectives, and the military departments are supposed to lay plans, within the limits of Congressional appropriations, for attaining them.

Coordination is supposed to be provided through civilian heads of the military departments, a part of the general executive system.

When there are differences in concept among all three groups as to the conditions which most urgently need to be met, conditions develop as they are today, leaving the uniformed groups to compete for appropriations.

Under her former general staff system Germany made great use of such war resources as she had, but became anathema to democratic systems.

The Democracies have never discovered how to have a staff of military experts free from the predilictions of the individual services, to run the services with one hand and also cooperate fully with the civilian executive to make the military fit within the general economy.

If the military invades politics there is disruption. If politics infiltrates the military there is tragedy, as in France in World War II.

Yet the new war is one of economics and politics behind fought against the background of military threat.

IN THE INFIRMARY

Closed Study Rule

Of all the regulations under consideration currently by the Women's Residence Council, the one regarding closed study is perhaps the most odious and the most unwise.

This rule, designating the hours of 8-10:30 on weekdays to be study hours for all freshman coeds, whereby they must remain in their rooms, is the most patent example of distrust in the idea of student responsibility that has come to the University in a long time.

A rule such as this is made because there is a general feeling that at the present time the group, currently not subjected to such rules, is not living up to its responsibility or that the group coming in will not live up to its responsibility.

In the past the group of freshman women have consistently responded well to the measure of freedom that they possessed. Some have had better averages as first semester freshmen than they have had as juniors and seniors, and their general average has been more often than not higher than the all-women average. Moreover, the freshmen have not been noted for wild carousings or out of the ordinary behavior, unless it was out of the ordinary toward the good.

There is a question then of whether the rules apply to the future when coeds may not be chosen as carefully. However, the Dean of Women has stated that the standards of admission will be kept up at a high level. This will insure the University of the same high caliber girl that they have had in the past.

Designed to create "good study habits," the rule is of necessity one person's or one group's definition of what good study habits are. Good study habits are those study habits most effective for students trying to achieve academic success at the University. The hours between 8-10:30 do not of necessity constitute good study habits, but rather would tend to abridge the student's ability to determine what constituted effective study habits. There is one student on this campus who came here as a freshman from a Woman's College which had as stringent rules as those proposed. Once at Carolina she developed effective study habits which consisted of studying from midnight on in the evening and which resulted in her being on Dean's List for four out of the five semesters that she had been in residence. It is this type performance that the University should try to cultivate and which these rules will hamper.

It is a biological hypothesis that is generally adhered to that people have different hours in which they are most efficient and different hours in which sleep benefits them most. Hence, the question of health does not figure into the question of late studying or afternoon studying, but rather there is twenty-four hours latitude for a student to pick from which to adjust his time for studying, classes, recreation, and sleep. The individual girl has to make this decision according to her constitution. A fixed set of hours serves absolutely no purpose.

The Dean of Women, when the editor first talked to her about the new rules, related the story of her trip to the far west. She pointed out that one co-educational college had rules, and another didn't. She said that she would not mind sending her daughter to the first college, but that she would have reservation about the second school.

Then she reflected a moment and said, "It depends on the girl."

The type of girl that the University wants to cultivate is the type of girl who can make the best use of freedom, an individual who can stand on her own two feet. This type girl will be driven away from the school by the new regulations.

Moreover there is the consideration of just what goes into a college education. It is not book work alone that comprises one's education. It is a combination of extra-curricular activities, social activities, and scholarship that make education worthwhile. What this rule would do would be to prohibit incoming freshmen from getting their start in activities. Moreover, dating is an intrinsic part of social education, and so long as an individual meets his academic responsibilities, he has the right to the luxury of social activity. The new rules would inhibit both extra-curricular and social participation so necessary for a well-rounded education, and so available on the UNC campus.

There is indeed a question of practicality in all this. These rules are an invitation to the breakup of the UNC Honor Code. They invite violation, for the type of girl that UNC wants to cultivate, is not the machine that will grind at someone else's request during a required two and one-half hour period every night. The time that one does not spend doing this is in violation of both the spirit and letter of the rules. Moreover, this would occur with a frequency that would keep the House Councils and Honor Council busy all year long, and generate a negative spirit of violation rather than a positive one of trust. Rules must be made in a way that they can be lived up to.

There is a further consideration as to how the rules fit into the overall philosophy of the University. The answer to this is that they don't at all. For years now, the University has been taking great strides toward the accomplishment of a great measure of student freedom and responsibility. A rule providing for supervision in academic affairs cuts the ground away from the progress that has been made, and leaves the University bereft of its increasing heritage of student freedom.

Hence, there is a question as to what the rules will do. In simple terms closed study will only keep a girl within her dormitory during the evening hours of the weekdays. This simply does not equate with the evil that the rules will bring on or the lack of necessity for these rules. Indeed, this very restriction in area is an invasion of individual freedom.

The facts are more than apparent. The answer is almost self-evident.

For what it may be worth, we understand that Charles Schulz may be a presidential candidate on the Republican ticket in 1960, which should bring joy to the hearts of you comic fans. . . Congratulations to women's dorms are in order. All five of them ranked well ahead of the 17 men's dorms in the quality point figures released last week. This means one of two things. Either women are considerably smarter and more industrious than men, or they can cheat better (Or is this heresy to mention?).

We may be in the wrong, but it is our opinion that women are now generally considered equal to men in almost every respect. We would submit, however, that if women wish to be equal in the strictest sense, they must give up some of their rights to men. They are already up on us.

In case you're wondering what these rights are, consider;

The right to walk on the inside, away from the street. This is one of the many Victorian customs that the woman must relinquish in order to be equal.

The right to have the door opened for them. Men like to get in first sometimes, particularly when it's raining. This is another Victorian inequality.

The right to leave the check for the man. This must be given up to retain their equality.

The right to let the male be the aggressor in the dating cycle. Women should do the calling for a few years, as well as provide the transportation.

The right to drive like an idiot should be given up, if for no other reason than to assure the safety of others, mainly the hapless males.

The most important right which women must give up in order to be truly equal to men is the right to be draft exempt. Some woman can, with my good wishes, have our place in line. (Call it cowardice if you will.)

We would like to put in a plug for several leading magazines who are having subscription troubles. We're speaking specifically of TIME, LIFE, NEWSWEEK, and SPORTS ILLUSTRATED (Look at the Luces).

If you're having the same trouble we're having, namely getting offers every week of a "half-price sale," a "graduation" special, or a "less than 6 cents a week" sale, then why don't some of you subscribe so that the remainder of us won't have to fill our circular files.

The latest sucker-bait is a "less than half the original—graduation special—April 1st—once in a lifetime—for old subscribers only" sale. And if the price gets any lower, they can pay us and we'll take several subscriptions.

VARIATIONS

Lifeblood Of The University

By Gail Godwin

The weather has become bearable again and as a result the many classroom windows have been flung open. As I walk from one place to another I am conscious of a new noise. It is an alive noise, a varied noise. Sometimes a steady drone; sometimes not unlike a radio-TV announcer; and sometimes an excited, staccato beat. The noise is emanating from the classroom windows and suddenly I am conscious that it is the noise that is the very lifeblood of the university . . .

The professors are speaking.

As I beat a path to Y-Court, the prospect of seeing familiar faces and joining in the ballyhoo which hovers over the concession stand quite eradicates any contemplation on the thing I have just heard and felt.

It is not until late afternoon when classes are done and the buildings are silent and empty that I am aware of the absence of that certain sound coming from the windows, tossing words and phrases to passers-by under the windows, and aiming directly at the students which fill the classrooms where the professor lectures.

Yes, it is the end of another school day and the students have dispersed to their varios diversions. And the professors have also gone home, perhaps with a question on their minds: did they hear?

Do we hear? That is, do we hear anything but the voices, the sound, the monotone, or the staccato?

Have we heard the idea which is neatly or obscurely wrapped in the package of the words? Do watchh the "man in front" and think: "Ha. He wore the same shirt on Tuesday," or "Wonder if he'll let us out early."

Do we ever look at him and listen and say inwardly: Here is another person, just like I am a person, and he has an idea and now he is standing up there in the middle of the room trying to communictae.

And sometimes he communicates quite successfully and sometimes his words bounce off our armour with the force of steel against steel.

And then we go home at night and perhaps never think of him again until the next class. And he goes home, and maybe eats with his family or eats alone downtown, and maybe does many other things besides think of us.

Or perhaps he does. And he decides that Thursday or whenever the next class meets he has something that we will all love hearing. And he may even look up information on this thing we will love to hear.

Postscript

Jonathan Yardley

I am still worried about the "Beat Generation," especially since I am now told that this phenomenon is "profoundly religious." I had not particularly noticed this aspect of the Twentieth Century Man, so I guess I'd better be clued in.

I think, however, that it will be extremely hard to convince me that the Beat Generation is one founded upon the Rock of Ages.

Religion, and most of all the Christian religion, is something that cannot be experienced in a superficial way. It is, first and foremost, an emotional and intellectual experience which enables the human to find a rational basis for his being, his actions, and his designated purpose.

The Beat Generation Man says: "I want God to show me his face." I assume this means that he wishes to see the presence of God evinced in the many wonders and beauties of the earth, not the literal meaning of a kindly face peering from above a tree.

The man who wants to be shown the face of God is not religious; he is a hopeful doubter. One cannot be religious until he believes. If the Beat Generation is still in search of God, how can it possibly be religious?

It would be better to say, then, that the Beat Generation—and we have not yet agreed that it exists—is potentially religious. It is still searching, in a somewhat childish way, for the proof of God. What it does not seem to realize is that God cannot be proved; he can only be believed, professed, worshipped, and followed. The last is the crux.

I have been told that the most important thing a good Christian can do it try to "live the life of Christ." Talking will do no good unless it is substantiated by the evidence of a life lived in humbleness, piety, mercy, kindness, supreme faith, and the countless other things which go to make up the good Christian.

Before the Beat Generation professes itself "profoundly religious" it had better look at the condition of its own house. I may be wrong on this score, so correct me if I am, but the overall impression I have of the typical Beat Generation character is a man who has not succeeded in anything except being unsuccessful.

I see the Beat Generation Man as disillusioned with his own abilities—abilities which he had probably overrated from the start—unhappy, dissatisfied, confused—I am going to use that word again and as far as I am concerned those of you who consider it unoriginal and naive can forget the rest of this column—and, most of all, dissappointed. In the professed search for the answer they can find a rationalization for their purpose on earth.

There certainly have been people who must have been born just for the purpose of speculating upon the relationship of God to Man. They were great men, too—men like Aristotle, St. Augustine, Nietsche and Thomas Aquinas.

These men, however, approached the problem in the proper way. In the first place, they were humble about their attempts—they realized that they were but men, inadequate before a matter beyond their comprehension. And they realized that they were facing a problem that man cannot lick. And they never underestimated the capabilities of God—and of Man.

I am not sure whether these vociferous members of the Beat Generation are plagued by superiority complexes or inferiority complexes. Whichever it is, one fact stands out—they are desperately trying to convince all of us that what they are doing is worthwhile, that they are the ones whose duty it is to investigate this problem, and they are going to find the answer. Perhaps they are, but they must change their attitude first.

It is of great emotional concern to each of us that at times during our lives we speculate upon our relationship with God, or whatever power we place our beliefs in. But we approach the problem with more realism than these people who supposedly are so BEAT that nothing is beyond their comprehension—all the sordid secrets of the universe have been opened before their bloodshot eyes, and now they search for the truth. The truth, they will find, is in themselves. They must know themselves before they may know it.

In fact, what appears to be taking place is the establishment of a unilateral authoritarian relationship which is irrationally motivated. It is irrationally motivated because such relationships, which can exist only outside the sphere of democracy, are only superficially in the best interests of the passive party—in this case, the incoming freshman women.

An analogy can be drawn between this type of authoritarian relationship and the political phenomenon of imperialism. On the local scene there is paternalism, in which one group of girls appoint themselves as guardians for another group. On the international scene, imperialism involves the supposed safeguarding of the best interests of one nation by another.

Only the most chauvinistic person in this sophisticated age still contends that imperialism is motivated by anything but self-interest. This has become axiomatic to the extent that even the government makes only perfunctory attempts to conceal its self-interest in such practices.

In the current situation, the motivations of self-interest are not quite so conscious as they have become in the world of international politics. The Women's Residence Council is not conscious of the real reason behind their actions.

This assertion might seem unwarranted were it not for several remarks made in the course of open hearings on the new regulations—remarks which were made by those who formulated and support the new rules, and which are quite inconsistent with the supposed spirit and content of the rules.

The present President of the Council, in her remarks preferatory to the recent open hearing, repeatedly asserted that "the new rules are not intended to restrict the incoming freshmen women in any way, but rather to help them to adjust."

This is palpably untrue. "Adjustment," in its proper and most constructive sense, implies a bilateral process in which the individual is creatively taught through his own experience to adopt the behavior pattern which best suits his needs; "restriction," on the other hand, denotes the sort of unilateral forced conformity which is being instituted by the Residence Council. The fact that such forced conformity is usually superficial and tension-producing, while real adjustment is internalized and emotionally satisfying, bears repeated emphasis.

Later on in the open hearing, the former President of the Council—the head of the group which formulated the rules under consideration—presented her justification for the new restrictions. In the course of her remarks, she disclosed with admirable honesty the fact that she was jealous of any opportunities for Freshman women at Carolina. Her attitude was that those freedoms which she had inherited as an upperclassman should be the exclusive property of upperclassmen; she further stated that she hated the very idea of freshman women being allowed participation in the Carolina community. In support of the new regulations, she compared the freshman women to puppies that should be kept on a short leash by their superiors until they are trained.

In the light of these remarks, the whole system of new rules becomes transparently diagnostic. And the obvious diagnosis is rather frightening: it is very possible that a sadistic and/or destructive impulse on the part of the women on the Council has manifested itself in a superficially unselfish piece of legislation.

In other words, the members of the Women's Residence Council, themselves suffering from the tension and uncertainty of being thrust from a restricted pre-Carolina life into the atmosphere of freedom here, are unconsciously attempting to resolve their discomfort by 1) projecting their difficulties on another group, thus re-identifying themselves by comparison as mature and well-adjusted; and by 2) creating a sort of "second class citizenry," thus implying their own superiority.

The situation in which the Council members find themselves, and which may have motivated them to set up the new rules, is one of freedom from restraint which has resulted in anxiety. They have been freed from a strict tradition which has hampered their growth, but they have also been freed from the specious but real security which such a tradition provides. It is the inability to cope effectively with this lack of security, and the resulting need to escape from the freedom which has removed it, which seems to be at the bottom of the new rules.

Even if it were possible to ignore the strong implications of the psychological analysis of the situation, the simple fact that the new rules for freshman women are unnecessary, unenforceable, and unfair should prevent their adoption. The added possibility, however slight it may be, of the validity of the deeper analysis of the Residence Council's action should make it impossible for the Council to reaffirm its decision with a clear conscience.

Israel: An Evaluation

K. R. Gabriel

The return to the biblical home land and the feeling of being at home in Israel is expressed in a great love of the land and its history. Cross country hikes are most popular, and archaeology enjoys a vogue unequalled in any country—of course there is much scope for it. Young Israel identifies itself with the continuation of Israel and Judea of biblical days. Modern Israeli literature and drama often takes its basic material from the Old Testament, drawing parallels to the present experience.

Settlement in Israel meant the development of a country that had been neglected for centuries and ravaged by war, erosion and nomadic incursions. The country of Palestine was mostly rocky or sandy and presented a forbidding aspect until one discovered the remains of hillside terracing, river dams and aqueducts fallen into disuse since the Roman Empire. Israel is undertaking the task of restoring its country to its former prosperity. Forests and groves have been planted on many mountains, terraces painstakingly built in the hills to allow the cultivation of vines and fruit trees. Land has been reclaimed by draining swamps and by arresting the spread of dunes. River waters are being diverted to irrigate areas that were previously desert.

To do this Israelis have turned farmers. Settlement of a barren tract by new immigrants who had left careers in medicine, law, and commerce has been a common experience. And the land yielded—so that today some 750 settlements exist, many of which are prosperous and lush, and Israel already produces 70 percent of its food consumption.

Israel is not, however, principally an agricultural country — only some 18 percent of its labor force are engagel in farming. Industry has been developed on a considerable scale, including cement factories, chemical and oil processing plants, textile mills, and various plants engaged in processing foods, clothes, tires, pipes, and tubes, diamond polishing, assembly of automobiles, etc. A merchant marine of some 40 ships is another important economic branch.

Scientific progress has been made at Israeli universities and research institutions, and Israel is among the few countries which produce Salk vaccine and heavy water.

Economic development has drawn very heavily on outside investment and help, as has the settling of the new immigrants for whom housing and jobs had to be provided. The balance of trade is heavily weighed against Israel, and part of Israeli industry is still in its early stages and not yet paying its way. There is much to be done in improving productivity so as to make Israel viable economically. In the long run this is imperative, but in the short run Israel considers its primary duty to be the immediate provision of a haven for every Jew who is insecure, and relies on outside help to enable her to do this.

Israel has been generously helped from abroad, principally by world Jewry (mainly in the USA) and by the government of the United States. The link of Israel to Jews all over the world is not solely as a haven for their persecuted brothers, but also as a spiritual and national home. The achievements of Israel reflect on the pride and courage of Jews everywhere and seem to enhance their standing wherever they live. It is the common experience of Israelis to be received with wonderful affection and admiration by Jews in the free world, and behind the Iron Curtain every Israeli youth and sports delegation has been mobbed by enthusiastic Russian Jews in spite of all police actions.

With Israel's destiny as the Jewish homeland, the Jewish religion plays a special role in the new state. The Israeli's ties with the Old Testament are particularly close as it is the history of his land and people and is written in the Hebrew language he speaks. The ultimate role of religion in the state has not been resolved yet—orthodox citizens desire considerable incorporation of religious law into state institutions (giving Moslem and Christian minorities parallel institutions), whereas liberal citizens favour the separation of religion from the state.

The general social outlook in Israel is that of a welfare state. General health and old age insurance were instituted as a matter of course and health and social services are among the most developed in the world (the average length of life is as high as in the US). The prevailing political outlook is a form of moderate socialism similar to that of the British Labour Party, and the trade unions are probably the single most powerful non-government organization in the country.

The mode of government and politics in democratic with a parliamentary system. Apart from a censorship on purely military matters, freedom of speech and press is taken for granted. Toleration of unpopular views has gone to the extent of allowing the communists (who are supported by about 2 per cent of the electorate) to preach open sedition during the Sinai fighting. A multiplicity of parties makes for lively internal politics, but has not hitherto produced too much instability in government. Educating immigants from the despotic Arab countries to live in a free democratic framework is not always easy, an old people are often incredulous of their rights as free men.

As a democratic country, Israel looks to the West. It is not a member of any political or military alliances but its closest ties are with the USA and France. In the awakening East Israel has forged especially close links with Burma, Ghana and Turkey (e. g. Israeli doctors and farm experts are working in the backwoods of Burma, the Ghana merchant marine is being trained by Israeli seamen and partly financed from Israel, highways and hospitals in Turkey have been constructed by Israeli engineers). In the Middle East Israel stands alone among hostile turbulent nations, and will continue to stand until the hoped for day when its neighbors will join with it in co-operating for peace and the development of the Middle East.

Yesterday's Answer

'Fast Time' Will Begin This Sunday

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

At 2 a.m. Sunday, much of the country once again will put clocks on daylight-saving time.

That means the hands on timepieces will be shifted ahead to 3 a.m. The purpose is to give folks an extra hour of sunlight in the afternoons through the summer.

The so-called fast time, first espoused by Benjamin Franklin but gaining little support until the present century, has won most favor in the populous Northeast. However, it has been adopted by various communities across the country.

In some places it remains in effect until Sept. 28 and in others until Oct. 26.

Millen Elected Head Of Phi Delta Theta

Don Millen has been elected president of the Phi Delta Theta fraternity for 1958-59.

Other new officers include Dave Floyd, preceptor; Al Salley, reporter; Jim Epps, secretary; Freddy Deans, treasurer; Chuck Cushman, warden; Graham Claytor, house manager and Charlie Pittman, rush chairman.

GM Basement Closed

The IDC is closing the basement of Graham Memorial tonight from 7:30-11 for use by dormitory residents and their dates only.

The pool room and the Rendezvous will be open to couples only. Refreshments will be furnished free.

Mangum Dorm Party

Last Friday night Mangum Dormitory held one of the most successful parties of its recent history at the Elbow Room, a converted drive-in movie projection room on the Greensboro highway.

Approximately 40 or 50 people attended the party, which began at 8 p.m. About one-half of the boys brought dates to the affair and the group enjoyed a gay evening dancing to the latest hits.

Gary Nichols, well-known in this area for his version of the popular song "Island in the Sun," appeared as guest entertainer for the festivity and sang several special numbers.

Cold drinks and pretzels were served to the bermuda-clad group during the evening.

Sigma Nu Pledge Weekend

This weekend will feature a round of festivities for the Sigma Nu's as they celebrate their annual White Star weekend.

Yesterday the parties began with a formal dinner at the Chapel Hill Country Club. Following the dinner, in an atmosphere of tuxedoes and evening gowns, the pledges and their dates were presented to the group. A UNC coed, Nancy Black of Rockingham, was crowned White Star Princess and presented with a bouquet of white roses. She was escorted by Steve Hoard of Tarboro.

A local vocal group, The Shades, composed of Jim Talley, Art Kilpatrick, Carter Jones, Pete Brake and Dick Hayes provided entertainment for the formal affair.

Each girl was presented with a five-arm star centered with the Sigma Nu crest as a favor.

Following the dinner, the group returned to the house and danced to music provided by The Vibrators, a Greensboro combo.

Tonight the Sigma Nu's and their dates will travel to the Sigma Nu Estate for an Italian Rivera party. Joe Hatchet and his Big Axe combo from Danville, Va. will be on hand to liven up the evening.

Sunday morning, the Sigma Nu's will hold a sunrise service in big fraternity court.

Last Thursday evening, the Sigma Nu's played host to the Tri Delts at a Congratulations party. The affair was held to celebrate the winning of the Valkyrie Sing.

Phi Kaps Party

Yesterday afternoon the Phi Kaps entertained their dates at a party on the patio of their back lawn, followed by a picnic supper. Later in the evening the group continued their festivities at the house.

Tonight the Phi Kaps and their dates will attend a "Supressed Desire" costume party in the basement of the house. Appropriate decorations will be used and the patio will feature Japanese lanterns.

Each boy and girl will be dressed according to a role that he or she has always longed to assume. A prize will be given to the couple with the best costumes.

ATO Festivities

Last night the ATO's entertained their dates at a dinner at the house and tonight they will play host at a shrimp supper. Following the supper they will travel to the Elk's Club in Durham for a bermuda party. Josie Brown's combo from Albemarle will liven up the dance with the latest hits.

Sunday the ATO's will end the weekend of festivities by again entertaining their dates at a luncheon.

Phi Delts Party

Tonight the Phi Delts will entertain their dates at dinner and then retire to the basement for an evening of lively dancing to the music of Doug Clark's combo from Chapel Hill.

The Phi Delts are also planning a party with the Phi Gams, the Zetes and the SAE's and have scheduled the Hot Nuts, a local combo, to play for the combined affair.

DU Founder's Day

This weekend the DU's are celebrating Founder's Day with a series of parties. Last night they attended a dinner at the Ranch House and then donned evening clothes for a semi-formal dance at the Durham Elk's Club.

Today at 12 noon they will attend a luncheon at the house. Later in the afternoon they will hold their annual pledge initiation ceremony in Di Hall, and then return to the house for a buffet dinner.

The evening's entertainment will feature an informal combo party at the house with music and dancing.

'Funniest Story' Entry

This morning, the Order of the Old Beanbirds pecked three new members. This organization, composed of coeds who are known to have a Bird-Like Nature, was formed last Fall by some girls in Smith Dormitory.

Membership in the Order is based upon birdlike, aesthetic qualities and is not limited solely to residents of Smith Dormitory.

A Beanbirds can be recognized by the little blue pins which they wear and by their ability to twitter and tweet—particularly in T-Court.

So—be on the look-out! A Beanbird may be watching YOU!

AFRICA

History Has Familiar Ring

our Bureau of Indian affairs now almost as a second government of the country through its dealings with the Africans. Dr. Junod never called the natives "Negroes." In Africa they are properly called "Africans."

Except where top level Africans touch the fringe of government, all contact between the white race and the other three is frowned on. This means African teachers for African students, African doctors, African everything in dealings with Africans.

History Of Two U. S. A.'s

At this point the history of the southern hemisphere's U.S.A. takes on a striking similarity to our own country's. A prevalent criticism among our North is that the South is still fighting the Civil War. In the Union of South Africa it is the Boer war that crops up discussions.

The Boers, or Afrikaanners, original Dutch Settlers in Africa, are violently opposed to any mingling with the Africans, Dr. Junod pointed out, while the British, who came on top in the battles with the Boers, like to think of themselves in a paternalistic situation, a dreadfully liberal point of view to the Afrikaners.

To make the situation even more complicated, the Boers hold the controlling offices in the government. Dr. Guy Johnson of Carolina's Sociology Dept., observed that this is a result of a highly selective group formed after the Boer conflict, called the Broederbund, the Brotherhood in English, which fought to gain power in government and work other members into power. This group comes very close to resembling the South's Ku Klux Klan.

But similiarities in the histories of two nations cannot be expected to continue indefinitely, and in the field of expansion Dr. Junod described a striking difference.

In the United States the westward movement was a positive one, opening up new territory, and creating heroes of history. Then she described the African trek that opened up the frontier there. The new land was not marked with paths of glory, for the Boers were running away, running away from the British and their "liberal" policies toward the Africans.

Urbanization

Today South Africa differs from the American South in that it is thoroughly industrialized.

Industrialization, Dr. Junod said, started out taking the Africans from the preserves, analogous to our Indian reservations, and allowing them to work in the mines from set periods. The men left their families in the Kraals and lived together in dormitories.

When the shops started hiring Africans the terms in the cities increased, and soon the families were brought from the preserves. Now a major part of the African population is concentrated in the urban areas.

Living in the cities, she pointed out, has broken down a lot of the old superstitions and beliefs of the natvies, and has virtually eliminated any danger of them organizing into groups of formidable size.

Traffic

On the way back to the Carolina Inn from Miss Queen's house, Dr. Junod was asked how traffic in South Africa compared to the U. S. "Very much the same," she replied jokingly, "thanks to your fine, big American cars."

Is she planning on paying another visit to Chapel Hill? Dr. Junod said yes, and the group of students promised to show her more of the students' side of life, starting with a popular back-alley, basement beer cave. She seemed eager to see University life from a students' eye view.

SWEENEY IN THE TREES

Spring is here—the season of tree-sitting contests. This I applaud. Tree-sitting is healthful and jolly and as American as apple pie. Also it keeps you off the streets.

Tree-sitting is not, however, without its hazards. Take, for example, the dread and chilling case of Manuel Sigafoos and Ed Sweeney, both sophomores at the Nashville College of Folk Music and Woodworking, and both madly in love with a beautiful alto named Ursula Thing, who won their hearts singing that fine old folk song, I Strangled My True Love with Her Own Yellow Braids, and I'll Never Eat Her Sorghum Any More.

Both Manuel and Ed pressed Ursula to go steady, but she could not choose between them, and finally it was decided that the boys would have a tree-sitting contest, and Ursula would belong to the victor. So Manuel and Ed clambered up adjoining sapens, taking with them the following necessaries: food, clothing, bedding, reading matter, and—most essential of all—plenty of Marlboro Cigarettes.

We who live on the ground know how much you get to like with a Marlboro. Think how much more important they must be to the lonely tree-dweller—how much more welcome their fine, mild tobacco; how much more gratifying their free-drawing filters; how much more comforting their sturdy, crushproof flip-top box. Climb a tree and see for yourselves.

Well supplied with Marlboros, our heroes began their tree-sitting contest—Manuel with good heart, Ed with evil cunning. The shocking fact is that crafty Ed, all unbeknownst to Manuel, was one of three identical triplets. Each night while Manuel dozed on his bough, one of Ed's brothers—Fred or Jed—would sneak up the tree and replace him. "How can I lose?" said Ed with a fiendish giggle to his brother Fred or Jed.

But Ed had a big surprise coming. For Manuel, though he did not know it himself, was a druid! He had been abandoned as an infant at the hut of a poor and humble woodcutter named Cornelius Whitney Sigafoos III, who had raised the child as his own. So when Manuel got into the tree, he found much to his surprise that he had never in all his life felt so at home and happy. He had absolutely no intention of ever leaving.

After seven or eight years Ed and his brothers wearied of the contest and conceded. Ursula Thing came to Manuel's tree and cried, "I am yours! Come down and pin me."

But Manuel declined. Instead he asked Ursula to join him in the tree. This she could not do, being subject to mopery (a morbid allergy to woodpeckers), so she ended up with Ed after all.

Only she made a mistake—a very natural mistake. It was Jed, not Ed, with whom she ended up.

Ed, heartbroken at being tricked by his own brother, took up metallurgy to forget.

Crime does not pay.

Carolina Takes 2-1 Win Over Clemson

By RUSTY HAMMOND

The Carolina Tar Heels became the first ACC team of the current season to beat front-running Clemson here yesterday, as they whipped the Tigers 2-1 to strengthen their hold on second place and stamp themselves as the biggest threat to Clemson's loop supremacy.

The Tigers had a perfect 8-0 record in the conference coming into yesterday's game, and their losing pitcher, Harold Stowe, had his perfect 7-0 record spoiled by the upsetting Tar Heels.

The Tar Heels, now definitely gaining the nod as the ACC surprise team of the year, upped their conference mark to 4-1 with the win.

Young Gets Win

Wayne Young picked up the victory for Carolina, and pushed his record to 3-2 as he went all nine. Young struck out eight Tigers along the way, and the one run which the Tigers got was unearned.

Carolina went ahead 1-0 in the second inning when catcher Burce Crump singled, went to third on pitcher Young's single, and came home when Carson Oldham's infield drive was bobbled.

Clemson made a new ball game of it in the top of the fifth; two hits and an error paving the way.

Pons' Hit Wins Game

But in the home half of the fifth the Tar Heels went ahead to stay Oldham singled, went to second on a balk, and scored on Al Pons' game-winning drive.

Young, a sophomore from Mooresville, made up yesterday for the heartbreaker he lost to Clemson when Carolina played the Tigers in South Carolina. In that game, Young gave up only four hits and no earned runs but lost the contest 2-1 on errors by his teammates. But yesterday it was Young's game all the way. The big fellow was in hot water in the top of the ninth when, after he retired, the first man, Clemson put men on first and second via a single and a walk. But Young then put his shoulder to the wheel, as he fanned the two final Clemson batters to retire the side.

Tar Heels Challenge State And Wake Forest In Track Today

By DAVE WIBLE

After only a day's rest, the Carolina varsity track team goes back into action this afternoon when it challenges the State, and Wake Forest tracksters here on Fetzer Field beginning at 2 o'clock.

Thursday, the Tar Heels conquered the Virginia Cavaliers 86-45 in a conference bout. The Tar Heels lost their season opener to Clemson, and were also set back by Maryland last Saturday. Their record has balanced with victories over South Carolina and Virginia.

Today's meet was originally set to be a duel meet at Wake Forest, but was moved here and made a triangular affair when the UNC-State meet earlier in the season was rained out.

Carolina will again be the favorite today. State is strong in spots but has no depth. Wake Forest is just completing a track on its new campus and has not had the facilities to field a strong team.

Strong men for the Wolfpack are dash men Mike Miller and Robert Teasley along with 2-miler Billy Insco and pole vaulter Warren Haines. The top from Wake Forest is distnace man Jim Medlin.

Carolina's top distance man, Wayne Bishop, who tied for first in the mile, and won the 2-mile against Virginia will enter only the 2-mile today. He is reaching peak condition and will be going for a good time.

Dave Scurlock, fast recovering from a sprained ankle he suffered at the beginning of the season, will travel his usual three event route with the 440, 880, and the anchor leg of the mile relay. Scurlock won the 440 and 880 Thursday.

The meet will start with the field events at 2:30. The running events will get underway at 3.

PERRIN HENDERSON
Wrestling Captain

Henderson Selected Captain Of Mat Squad

Perrin Henderson, 137-pound rising senior of Charlotte has been named captain of the 1958-59 UNC wrestling team. Henderson was elected at the team's annual banquet here.

Coach Sam Barnes, who is also a professor in the English department, was presented by the squad a set of Winston Churchill's "History of the English Speaking People." Barnes' team won six and lost four.

Freshman coach Jim Carse was presented a gift certificate by his team. John Matney, a freshman from Danville, Va., who was undefeated this season, was elected honorary captain of the freshman team.

N-S Golf Finals Today

PINEHURST, N. C. (AP) — Dick Chapman, wobbling after a fast start, pulled his game together in time to beat Bill Hyndman with a par four on the 19th hole Friday and join Herb Durham in the finals of the North and South Amateur Golf Tournament.

Durham, the Dallas, Tex., first time starter in this 58-year-old tournament, also scored a 1-up victory in regulation distance over Jack Penrose of Miami, Fla.

Chapman and Durham will play for the championship over 36 holes Saturday, starting at 9:45 a.m. EST. The afternoon rounds start at 2.

Chapman, 47-year-old Pinehurst winter resident who has tromped fairways the world over and bagged an impressive collection of titles, never has won this one on on his home course — the 7,000 yard, No. 2 layout of the Country Club.

Twenty-four years ago he was runnerup to seven-time winner George T. Dunlap in his best effort.

Today he seemed on the way to a rousing victory. He shot the front nine in 33, three under par, to lead by three holes. He still led by three leaving the 16th tee, but he lost three holes in a row to pars when all he needed was a half on any of them to wrap it up.

Tourney Nets Increase

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The money that 24,200 fans shelled out for the two performances of the National Collegiate Athletic Assn.'s District Three basketball tournament here March 14-15 netted $40,810.

That was about $17,000 more than the same tournament netted the year before at Philadelphia.

Figures disclosed Friday by Dr. Tom Scott of Davidson College, who directed the Charlotte tournament, showed these receipts: ticket sales, $53,934, and programs radio and television rights, $6,610.50, making a gross of $60,440.50.

The four tournament entries received these travel and hotel expenses: Temple $1,686.15; Maryland $1,440.30; Dartmouth $2,332.05, and Manhattan $1,873.05.

The teams also will share in the net of $40,810 according to their finish in the tournaments. Temple, which won here and advanced to the NCAA finals at Louisville, will receive the top amount when that is broken down.

Expenses included $6,277.92 Coliseum rental, referee fees and taxes.

Charlotte is bidding for the 1959 tournament.

Herman Hickman Dies

WASHINGTON (AP) — Herman Hickman, sports commentator and former football coach at Yale, died yesterday.

Hickman, a former grid star at Tennessee, entered Providence Hospital March 28 after being stricken with an ulcer attack at La Plata, Md.

He was then en route to Florida with Mrs. Hickman.

Attending physicians said the round, jovial sports commentator underwent an operation last Monday and had been in satisfactory condition until Thursday.

Then he suffered an acute hemorrhage in the esophagus, the tube leading down into the stomach.

Bleeding was controlled, the doctors said, but because of severe liver and kidney complications his condition remained critical.

Hickman was 46.

His wife, Helen, and mother Mrs. Howard Hickman, were at the bedside with Toots Shor, New York restaurateur, and Dave Driscoll, a business associate.

Hickman retired from coaching several years ago and had been commenting since then on the sports scene for radio, television and magazines.

Hickman's home was in New Haven, Conn.

YOU'RE OUT—A Clemson batter takes a hefty swing and a miss to strike out. Wayne Young pitched the Tar Heels to a 2-1 victory over the league leading Tigers yesterday. Today, the Heels take on the South Carolina Gamecocks here at 3 o'clock.

Tennis Squad Tours North

By ELLIOTT COOPER

The annual "northern swing" is next for the undefeated Carolina tennis team. The Tar Heel netters start the six-match road trip this afternoon when they meet Maryland's defending Atlantic Coast Conference champions at College Park.

A victory this afternoon would assure that Tar Heels of at least a tie for the ACC championship depending on the outcome of the Virginia match, if and when it is rescheduled. If the match with the Cavaliers is not rescheduled, a Carolina victory this afternoon would automatically give the Tar Heels the conference crown.

Doyle Royal's Terp netters have already lost one match this year to Virginia by a 5-4 score. Last year the Terps beat the Heels for top spot in the conference.

Terps Lose Freishtat

Graduation last year put a big dent into the Terrapin lineup when it took Dave Freishtat out of competition. In addition to being the number one man in the Maryland attack, Freishtat was the conference singles champ last season. This year's Terp net squad is built around Jackson Yang and Carl Bucks. These two are being backed up by Don Schweitzer, Tom Beall, Humberto Domenech, and Don Palmer.

After the Maryland match the Carolina players will drive north to Williamstown, Mass. on Sunday where they will meet Williams the following day. Monday's encounter will be the second meeting of the year between the two clubs. In the first match the Tar Heels shutout the Ephmen with a 13-0 triumph.

Tuesday the Tar Heels will tackle Amherst, and Wednesday they will meet Harvard for the second time this season. When the Crimson netters came south the Tar Heels edged them out by an 8-7 count. After Harvard the Heels travel to New Haven to tangle with a powerful Yale six.

The road trip ends next Saturday in Washington, D. C. with a match against George Washington.

Golf Team Entertains Maryland Here Today

Presently on a very hot streak as a team, Carolina's undefeated varsity golf team will try to protect its record against the Maryland Terps here this afternoon.

The linksmen have gone without a defeat in six straight matches their last victory was against South Carolina exactly a week ago. Rain cancelled a match with the Clemson Tigers Tuesday giving the Heels a chance to polish their clubs for the final drive towards the ACC championships which will be in two weeks at Winston Salem.

Billy Thornton, the Tar Heel's number one man and Gene Lookabill number three, made a go of it on their own this week and entered the North-South amature tournament at Pinehurst this week. Lookabill was defeated in the first round, and Thornton made it to the second before being beatened.

These two will slip back into the blue and white this afternoon along with Tommy Langley, Joe Callicott, John McKee and Charlie Erdman. Callicott has burned the course in the last two matches with a 67 against Davidson and 70 against South Carolina.

Not too much is know about the strength of Maryland who finished with a 6-4 record last season. They finished sixth in the conference championships.

The Terps will be the last foe for the Carolina squad before it meets the undefeated Duke Blue Devils here next Thursday.. That match is expected to be the showdown for the duel-meet conference championship this year.

Reunion Here Brings Back Old Memories

Old time UNC track coach Nat Cartmell and eleven of the men he tutored on the cinder path here in 1910-14, have come and gone, and they had a good time.

They were here in a two-day reunion and had an opportunity to see the track Tar Heels of 1958 turn in their best work of the year in flattening Virginia, 86-45.

"You've got some fine runners," Cartmell told Coach Dale Ranson, who had been local chairmen of the festivities. "Some of those boys really move in the distance runs, which were my specialty." He especially liked Dave Scurlock and Wayne Bishop, Tar Heel running aces.

At a reunion luncheon, Cartmell, a colorful, articulate man of 75 who lives in Forest Hills, N. Y., reminisced over his long coaching career. He retired from coaching a few years ago.

"You fellows I coached at Carolina seemed to want to do something for the college and that's why it was a pleasure to work with you." He added, "I really never coached a bum in my life."

Cartmell said he always felt that "I left a piece of my heart in Chapel Hill," and his wife, who was with him, added, "I think you left all of it here."

About 25 of the men Cartmell coached here are still living, and eleven were able to attend the reunion.

The group consisted of M. E. Blalock, Sanford; Collier Cobb, Jr., Chapel Hill; Joseph F. Hoffman, High Point; Thomas V. Llorens, Orienta, Cuba; George B. Mason, Castonia; William M. Parsley, Charlotte; Earle V. Patterson, Burlington; William H. Patterson, Baton Rouge, La.; Harry M. Solomon, Wilmington; Richard G. Stockton, Winston-Salem; and Daniel McGregor Williams, Durham.

Pi Kappa Phi Elects 1958-59 Officers

Pi Kappa Phi fraternity elected new officers last Tuesday.

They are: C. W. Carter, archon; Lloyd Infinger, secretary; Neal Kelly, treasurer; Pete Fortner, historian; Neal Brumley, chaplain and Ed Machibe, warden.

'G. O. Fizzicle Year' Is To Be Marked Locally By Walt Kelly

The "G. O. Fizzicle Year" will be given a thorough discussion when Walt Kelly, creator of the widely syndicated comic strip "Pogo," speaks Thursday in Hill Hall.

The free public lecture, which is to begin at 8 p.m., is sponsored by the Carolina Forum.

Forum Chairman Jim Holmes announced that Kelly will give an illustrated lecture on "Not So Square A World." His talk will be based on a recent 90-day world tour in which he visited some of the world's troubled spots, addressed cultural groups, talked with the man-in-the-street and gathered material for a new book and background for Pogo's daily doings.

Kelly will discuss the "G. O. Fizzicle Year" which he has developed in the Pogo strip.

A particular favorite of American students and faculty groups, Kelly has made more than 200 speeches on college campuses. In his national Pogo-for-President campaign in 1956, over 100,000 students sported "I Go Pogo" buttons.

Kelly is a former two-term president of the National Cartoonists Society and a winner of the coveted "Cartoonist of the Year" award. He is author of 13 books, including "Songs of the Pogo."

The Carolina Forum is the official speaker-sponsoring agency of the Student Government and regularly brings to the campus prominent national and international figures, most of them from the political and economic world.

Seniors To Compete In W. Mangum Event

All graduating seniors have been invited to compete for the annual Willie P. Mangum Medal at 8 p.m. in Di Hall Wednesday.

The medal, the University's oldest award, is presented each year by the Dialectic Senate and the Philanthropic Literary Society in recognition of fine oratory.

Oration subjects are too be chosen by the participants and submitted to Dean Mackie's office in South Building by 4:30 p.m. Tuesday. Each oration should be about ten minutes long.

Judges for the event will be Prof. C. O. Cathey of the history dept., Prof. C. H. Holman of the English Dept., and Rev. Sam H. Magill, director of student activities.

The Mangum Medal was established in 1878 by Misses Martin Person and Mary Mangum of Orange County in memory of their father, Willie P. Mangum, a member of the University class of 1815.

Seniors eligible also include those graduating at the end of the summer session.

Student Council

Applications for a woman's seat on the Student Council are available from Jim Long at the Chi Psi Lodge, Phone 8-9062. The seat is vacant to sit on cases of constitutionality.

All those interested are invited to a meeting of the Student Council Tuesday at 8:30 p.m. in the Grail Room of Graham Memorial where interviews will be held.

PREVIEW OF THINGS TO COME

On Wednesday The Daily Tar Heel will begin a three-part series on sanitation problems in areas where Carolina students live.

Davis Young and Ken Friedman are doing the series in response to complaints that in on particular neighborhood there has been "a great deal of questioning concerning the sanitation."

Legislature Considers Responsibility

By DAVE JONES

Legislative responsibility was the topic of a policy declaration introduced at Thursday's session of the Student Legislature. Its purpose, according to its authors, Speaker Ralph Cummings (SP) and floor leaders Dave Biren (UP) and Rudy Edwards (SP), is to guide those new legislators who are not familiar with the working of the body.

The declaration asked that all legislators consult with the head of an organization before they introduce anything pertaining to it. It also asked the legislators to consult with the two floor leaders on style and policy and to use the privilege of special orders judiciously.

The first bill of the session, a resolution approving the constitution of the UNC Amateur Radio Club was held in committee. Rules Committee Chairman Neil Boden(UP) reported to the body that there was more work to be done on the club's constitution and by laws before it would be ready for consideration.

John Brooks' (SP) bill giving the legislature a more direct voice in the selection of State Student Legislature delegates, and the last of the previous week's bills, Dennis Rinzler's (SP) resolution asking for the paving of the walk between Lenoir Hall and the corner of Raleigh Street and Raleigh Road, were passed.

Bill Wilson, a freshman from Raleigh, was elected by the body to a three year seat on the Graham Memorial Board of Directors. Harold O'Tuel and Bob Turner were elected to the two year and one year seats on the Publications Board, respectively.

'Battle Of Coeds 'Will Be Event Of This Year's Sigma Chi Derby

Kenan Stadium, usually the scene of football games, will see a different type of contest Tuesday when the "Battle of the Coeds" is held.

The event is the 14th annual Sigma Chi Derby which includes pie-throwing events, relay races and other unusual competition.

Climaxing the afternoon will be the "Miss Modern Venus" beauty contest, in which 23 UNC coeds will compete.

The derby will start at 2 p.m., with a parade in downtown Chapel Hill. The actual events are scheduled to begin at 2:30 at the stadium.

Derby entries will come from the seven social sororities on the campus and from women's residence halls.

Mary Cabel Carlan, Candor; Doreen Greenfield, Venezuela, S. A.; Ruth Hoffman, Ft. Wayne, Ind.; Nan Schaffer, Tallahassee, Fla.; Betsy Miller, Coral Gables, Fla.; Carolyn Myers, Raleigh.

Sue Voigt, Manhasset, N. Y.; Bonnie Richardson, Atlanta, Ga.; Nancy Evans, Nashville; Linda Watkins, Charleston, S. C.; Martha Fortune, Brevard; Phyllis Krafft, Chicago, Ill.; Beverly Culbreath, Stedman; Hilda Holt, Greensboro; Lynn Merchant, Asheville; Cathy Carden, Burlington and Anne Martin, Atlanta, Ga.

Trophies are given to the organization scoring highest in the overall Derby as well as to "Miss Modern Venus." No admission will be charged and door prizes will be given.

Past derbies have drawn as many as 3,000 spectators since their inauguration at UNC in 1944 by the Alpha Tau chapter of Sigma Chi. The fraternity's chapters throughout the nation stage more than 100 such derbies each year.

Planning Conference Planned For May 2

The first annual North Carolina Planning Conference will be held here at the Institute of Government on Friday, May 2. This meeting will bring together public officials and civic leaders interested in the planning and development of North Carolina cities.

Among those invited to the conference are members of planning boards and boards of adjustment, city managers, mayors, city councilmen, building inspectors, city attorneys, and Chamber of Commerce executives.

Co-sponsors for the meeting are the Institute of Government and the North Carolina section of the American Institute of Planners.

A major purpose of the conference is to consider the desirability of forming a statewide organization for the purpose of advancing mutual interests in planning. Those attending will be told of aid available from state agencies and will be able to ask questions to planning authorities at small-group clinics.

Registration will be held Friday morning at Knapp Building preceding the 10 a.m., opening session. Albert Coates, Institute director, will welcome the conferees and Philip P. Green Jr., assistant director, will discuss conference aims.

The relation betwen state government and local planning will be studied Friday morning, covering such areas as local planning assistance, street planning, school planning, water and sewer planning and economic development.

Five speakers, all from Raleigh and state officials, will be Robert Barbour and J. Edgar Kirk, Department of Conservation and Development; James S. Burch, State Highway Department; John L. Cameron, Department of Public Instruction; and Wilbur E. Long Jr., State Board of Health.

Dennis O'Harrow, executive director of the American Society of Planning Officials, will deliver the conference's principal address on "Planning and the Future" early Friday afternoon.

Local Exhibit Marks Israel Anniversary

An exhibition in observance of Israel's 10th anniversary is currently on display in the foyer of the Wilson Library. It will be shown through May 4.

Arranged under the supervision of Mrs. Myra Lauterer of the library staff, the exhibit was brought together through the efforts of Dr. Reuben K. Gabriel, post-doctoral student in the Department of Statistics, who is on leave this year from his teaching post at the Hebrew University in Jerusalem.

Included are recently published books on Israel; a wodern colored scroll "Haggadah" (text of the Passover services); a few of Israel's new ship stamp series and jewelry, figurines and other art objects made in Israel—items which are rarely seen in Chapel Hill.

Mrs. Ruth Fein, wife of Dr. Rashi Fein of the Economics Department, and Mrs. Michaela Gabriel, wife of Dr. Gabriel, contributed a number of the objects.

IN THE INFIRMARY

Students in the infirmary yesterday included:

Misses Jenny Graham, Martha Oliver, June Martin and Ann Riggins and Russell Norman, Willard Ramsey, Edward Riner, Lacy Dilday, William Lytle and Frank Inman.

Iranian World Travelers Now On University Campus

Two young Iranians are here on the UNC campus as part of their ten year motorcycle trip around the world.

Issa and Abdullah Ommidvar have completed 65,000 land miles of what promises to be a 150,000 mile tour of the world in an effort to promote peace and cultural understanding among nations.

They are currently staying at the Chi Psi Lodge, and will present a program on one phase of their tour, their arctic expedition, in the Main Lounge of Graham Memorial, Tuesday night at 8:30.

Also included in their program is a display of Iranian culture in the Morehead Planetarium starting Monday afternoon and continuing through Wednesday. The Ommidvar brothers will also appear in a special taped interview on WUNC-TV radio this evening at 7.

The display in the planetarium will include photographs of Iranian architecture, original miniature paintings, handicrafts, carpets, and other items.

These items comprise part of the 400 pound load that they have carried with them ever since they left Tehran four years ago.

Included in their pack is much photographic equipment, which they have utilized in making movies, slides, and photographs of the area and people that they have seen.

The idea of the trip was conceived just after the brothers entered college. They subsequently dropped out of school, and proceeded to educate themselves in everything from archaeology to the workings of an internal combustion engine.

Since then, they have run through four sets of tires, and many gallons of gasoline, visited with the heads of state of many countries, climbed many Himalayan mountains, lived with the Bushmen of Australia, visited and lived with the Eskimos in northern Canada and Alaska, and visited many colleges and universities in the United States and other countries.

The majority of their trip is supported by themselves, through their efforts as movie makers, lecturers, and demonstrators. Assistance has been given along the way by people who were interested in them and who offered encouragement for this type of cultural interchange to continue.

The Anglo-Arabian Oil Co. has paid for their gasoline and oil along the way, and the tires have been furnished by a rubber company.

During the trip, the Ommidvar brothers have been receiving souveniers which they have sent back to Tehran in hopes of starting a museum of natural history. However, even when they complted the trip, and have amassed many items from all the countries of the world, there still is a possibility that the museum will not be built for lack of funds. The brothers plan to go on a speaking tour in order to raise funds for the proposed building.

American And Indian Education Have Resemblance Say Visitors

By EDITH MacKINNON

The higher education system of India bears a marked resemblance to that of the United States according to statements made by Indian educators in a recent visit to UNC.

Winding up a month's stay on the Carolina campus, the three visitors are part of a group of 14 Indian educators making a three-month study of U. S. higher education under the International Educational Exchange Program of the Department of State.

Observing at UNC were Mrs. Mumtaz Jahan Haidar, Dr. M. A. Basir Khan and Mr. Mohibbul Hasan Khan, all of Aligarh Muslim University in northern India.

The purpose of the exchange program is to promote a better understanding between the people of the United States and the people of other countries.

UNC is one of eight American institutions playing host to the educators. Other host institutions are Harvard, Princeton, Kansas State, Pomona College, and the Universities of Chicago, Oregon and Michigan.

Following their visit to Harvard, the visitors said they chose Carolina because it was considered one of the best state-supported universities in the South and because of its general college system. While studying the education system in general, the educators planned to concentrate on the general college level.

"The main difference in our systems occurs in the first two years," commented Dr. Basir. He explained that in his university the freshman and sophomore years include a study of the humanities and either social or natural science. At UNC the general college program includes a study of all three fields.

Soft-spoken Mrs. Haidar is principal of Muslim University Women's College and expressed a great interest in the program of the Consolidated University's Woman's College in Greensboro. While visiting Carolina the Indian team made a trip to Greensobro to observe the work at WC. They have also visited Duke University and State College.

Mrs. Haidar commented that they had met quite a few students when she took part in the recent work project sponsored by the University's YM-YWCA. The project took place on St. Helena island in South Carolina.

Dr. Basir is a Reader in Zoology at Aligarh University and said he was looking forward to his forthcoming visit to the UNC Medical Center.

Mr. Hasan is a Reader in history at Aligarh. His particular field of interest concerns the medieval and modern history of India and the field of history and culture of the Middle East.

The Indian team showed a lively interest in the affairs of students on the UNC campus. All three had followed the recent political campaigns closely, and Mrs. Haidar had a favorite in successful student body presidential candidate Don Furtado from Garner.

The campaigns showed a great similarity to the election system of students in their own university, the visitors said. The educators were impressed that UNC political hopefuls put their posters only on bulletin boards and alloted spaces.

"At home they put them everywhere," Dr. Basir connented. "But we let the students do their own cleaning up after the campaigns," he added.

The team asked many questions concerning the relation of students to the administration, the management of student government, sororities and fraternities and political parties.

Commenting on the number of self-help students on the campus, Mr. Hasan asked how this work influenced the academic work of the students.

Although Aligarh University has athletic programs including such games as cricket and rugby, the educators seemed surprised at the amount of time spent in American universities on football and other sports. "Do these football players have to keep their grades up too?" Mr. Hasan asked.

The team was especially interested in the coeducational program in this country. At their own university, coeducation is a fairly recent addition and is now instituted only on the graduate level.

Following their UNC visit, the In-

Day Of Decision

Tomorrow, the Women's Residence Council will come to a decision on the proposed freshman coed rules.

It is hoped they will weigh the facts carefully. It is hoped that they will remember the tradition of the University. It is hoped that they will realize the good that comes of student initiative and responsibility.

It is also hoped that they will act on their own, weighing the opinion of the student body, the women, and the administrations of other colleges and universities of similar size and structure to the University of North Carolina.

It is finally hoped that they will take the counsel of students, and not of the Administration, for it is on this principle that student government is founded.

In part, the future tone of the University rests on their decision.

Academic Freedom

Today marks the end of a week that was celebrated nationwide, and went unnoticed on the UNC campus. The week was called "Academic Freedom Week."

It was sponsored by the United States National Student Association to reaffirm "man's right to knowledge and the free use thereof."

The concept of academic freedom often escapes those who need to protect that freedom most — the students.

It is a concept that is being threatened in the world at large today. It is a concept that must be preserved.

It was not too long ago that the University ran a symposium on the subject of survival, at that time the idea of survival was intimately bound up with the idea of freedom for the mind of man, not just mere physical existence.

Americans are somewhat spoiled in that they have never had to live in a situation where they were unable to think freely. They have been in a situation where narrow-minded individuals and undemocratic legislation have prohibited the free interplay of ideas.

Some of these situations still exist today. Some are cloaked under the veil of "security" and still others under the shroud of "Obscenity".

They should not exist, and if "Academic Freedom Week" is to stand for anything, it should stand for the continued fight to break through all barriers prohibiting free thought and speech throughout the world.

It is an uphill battle, for there are many nations whose very constitution bars the right of individual's to speak freely, to think freely, and to gather knowledge freely.

It is doubly complicated when in America, the supposed bastion of free thought and speech, there are restrictions placed on these freedoms, and there is no clear cut definition of what free speech and thought are.

"Academic Freedom Week", is designed to foster an understanding of the concept of knowledge without restrictions, thought without fear, and speech without censorship.

This should be the goal of all peoples everywhere. This should be what education is striving for.

If it is not, then education might again re-evaluate what it is teaching.

The goal of all citizens should be to preserve and extend the blessings of liberty to all mankind.

It is a goal worthy of man.

Memorial Hall

A milestone has been reached at the University when there was last week a decision to replace those hard backed, hard sitting seats in Memorial Hall with more comfortable models.

There also was a resolve to improve the acoustics in that venerable building.

It is with great relief that one notes these changes. They have been a long time coming, but it's good they are here.

The Daily Tar Heel

The official student publication of the Publication Board of the University of North Carolina, where it is published daily except Monday and examination and vacation periods and summer terms. Entered as second class matter in the post office in Chapel Hill, N. C., under the Act of March 8, 1870. Subscription rates: mailed, $4 per year, $2.50 a semester; delivered, $6 a year, $3.50 a semester.

On Coed Rules

Gary Greer

Amid the vehement opposition to the rules which have been proposed by the Women's Residence Council for the "Bumper Crop" of freshman women that will arrive next fall, there has emerged in the mind of the writer at least, the question of which rather than whether. This is to say that perhaps some of the rules would be advantageous to the girls in their period of adjustment. This is not to say, however, that I am in agreement with all of the proposed regulations, or even half of them. Just which of the proposed rules are justifiable in terms of historical need or of logical prudence? Are the rules psychologically sound? Will they accomplish that for which they are intended? These and many more questions must be answered by the Women's Residence Council before they will be able to make a wise decision which will benefit all

To allude to psychological interpretation or to the age-old slogan of "administrative pressure" in order to criticize the WRC is certainly to detract from that group's fervent efforts to do the right and proper thing; to ascribe any vengeful motives is unfair. At the same time, however, one must not forget that even the best of us are subject to rational and liberal advice especially in matters which are as basic as the honor system itself.

Three of the proposed rules are not justifiable, not enforcable, and, in fact are not by any means preparatory to the development of a mature, self-disciplined personality, nor are they of such mature as to yield "good study habits" or to produce academic, cultural, and social success.

The rule pertaining to closed study is one which would deprive freshman women of many desirable, wholesome social and cultural outlets, it is a rule which would correlate scholastic achievement with restriction of movement. for closed study can never guarantee anything more than that one will be restricted to the confines of a room or a hall!

To legislate the hour at which a coed's "darkness exposure" wil begin is as unwise as to legislate the number of calories a girl will consume per day, for both would be based on the assumption that a freshman is incapable, of providing for her bodily needs, is not responsible enough to regulate the most personal aspects of her survival! The policy of lights out makes no provision for individual differences, rather groups all people under one system which is regulated, prescribed and unrealistic.

A third proposed rule which denies individual differences, which would prevent a freshman woman from getting "homesick" more than three times during her first semester at Carolina, is one which is based upon an immature outlook towards the varying needs of different people, and which has as its prime example and precedent the regulations found at many "finishing schools." It is a rule which has no end, meets no need, and which only breeds frustration and antagonism.

Finally, all of the rules are in great contrast to the tradition which has come to obsess the student at Carolina, which has inspried us, challenged us, and made us what we are — Carolina ladies and gentlemen.

TELEVISION

4 P.M. — Channel 5 — Wide Wide World

Dave Garroway narrates a 90-minute investigation of the Hollywood personality — how the "star system" developed, and how it is used to create a star. Joanne Woodward, one of the finest of Hollywood's young artists, is the case in point.

Mr. Garroway's excursions into the complexities of American culture are too superficial to be very enlightening; nevertheless, they are usually entertaining and superficially informative.

4 P.M. — Channel 2 — Twentieth Century

Today's program is devoted to the various American explorations of space. (Note: this program will be repeated at 5 p.m. on Channel 11.)

6:30 P.M. — Channel 5 — Hansel and Gretel

It seems a sharp commentary on American television and the public that controls it that fairy tales are among the most popular and lavish productions offered.

8 P.M. — Channel 5 — Steve Allen

Actress Claudette Colbert, sex-pot and would-be singer Abbe Lane, and Broadway writer-director Abe Burrows are Steve's guests tonight, along with the regular crew.

8 P.M. — Channel 2, 11 — Ed Sullivan

Tonights assortment of talent runs the gamut from Sal Mineo, Georgia Gibbs, and Patachou, through Jack Carter, to such stuff as a family of Swedish tight-rope walkers.

This show is best suited to those who don't like anything in either quantity or quality.

9 P.M. — Channel 5 — Chevy Show

IFC Statement

Bill Redding

First of all I think the IFC needs more publicity. Many people do not even realise there is an Interfraternity Council. Many people are unaware of the donations, awards, and scholarships the council gives, and at present favorable publicity would greatly benefit the council.

I also think that the members of the council should take a greater interest in the activities of the IFC. There should be more participation in the meetings. I think the council has improved a great deal in this respect but there is room for much more improvement.

In my opinion there is one branch of the council that has practically failed to function and this is the IFC Court. The court should take a definite stand, enforce the rules of the council, and attempt to inform everyone of these rules and regulations. Through the efforts of the court the average fraternity man could become more aware of his position and responsibility. This in itself would be a great step forward for the fraternity system.

If possible I would like to see the council sponsor an IFC Weekend in the spring. This could possibly be built into one of the biggest events of the social calendar.

The IFC must also consider the fact that enrollment at the university is ever increasing and in order for fraternities to maintain their present percent of the student body that is affiliated, either the present fraternities must expand or new fraternities must be invited to this campus. Some preliminary work has already been done in this area by the Director of Student Activities.

I would also suggest that the Interfraternity Council and Student Government work closer together. Many problems that face fraternities also face the rest of the student body, and it is only through combined efforts that they can be effectively solved. Perhaps the addition of the IFC President to the President of the Student Body's Cabinet would be a step forward in solving this problem.

Finally, I would like to mention one other area in which the council could do a great deal of work. This is in the area of conduct and responsibility. Fraternity members are looked to as the leaders in this campus, yet time and time again they have failed to accept the responsibilities that have been placed on them. I believe that the council is very aware of this, and it is now up to them to convey this to the rest of the fraternity members on this campus. Much of the social conduct which results in unfavorable publicity and opinions is the result of poor judgement. If the president of the house or any member had used a little discretion, initiative, and influence many things would not occur that bring a bad name to the fraternity system. It is up to every fraternity man on this campus to conform to the rules and see that his fellow fraternity man does the same. Perhaps if this were done there a new visiting agreement such as the one proposed this year would be accepted and put into operation. If fraternity men fail to accept this responsibility some outside party must accept it. Therefore I urge the council to channel its efforts in the immediate future towards work on this problem.

In summary, I would say that the council has had a very successful year. I believe the council has come to life in the past year and now realizes its position on this campus. The student body and the administration looks to the Interfraternity Council to exercise leadership and under the direction of the new officers I believe they will fulfill all expectations.

The Ending Of "The Young Lions": Hollywood Should Be More Careful

John Sipp

In a recent article in Look Magazine we were treated to a backstage insight into film making when Marlon Brando's views on his playing of Christian Diestl in the movie The Young Lions were printed. They were interesting and I think quite intelligent. Brando wanted to humanize the German "golden warrior"; a view objected to by Irwin Shaw, the novelist from whose book the film was adapted. Brando won. The German emerged as a truly admirable man caught in the Nazi machine. A German who was willing and proud to be a soldier for his country but not a policeman, butcher or genocidist, Although we oppose some of his views, we certainly respect his idealism.

Brando's opinion changed the original concept of the film (let's try to keep the book out it, we are talking about a movie not a novel). There is where the trouble began. Hollywood changed a significant aspect of the film and failed to compensate for it in the film's conclusion. At the end of the film the German is shot as he is wandering around in the woods after having smashed his machine gun against a tree. The big question is how are we to react to his death. My contention is that the ending was the result of a giant goof on the part of the film's director, author and producer.

The following are possible reactions that I feel are pausible considering the ending and what has led up to it.

1. We are supposed to feel, "I'm glad that one more, or even the last German, is dead."—For the best part of two and a half hours we have been shown that this German soldier is an admirable human being, why then should we feel anything but sad to see him killed?

2. We are supposed to feel. "Dean Martin has finally overcome his cowardice, and I'm glad he made it." — The German is twice the man that Martin is. The German is unarmed. How much bravery does it take to shoot an unarmed man who is not even aware of your presence? The German would not do this in the desert ambush scene even though he was warned earlier that refusal to obey an order would result in his immediate death.

3. We are supposed to feel. "The Jewish boy is a hypocrite." Hasn't he just said, "Now the human beings can rule the world." One minute later his buddy shoots down a clearly defenseless man and he does even say a word or imply disgust. Maybe the Jewish boy isn't one of the human beings he himself is referring to and his buddy isn't easy. That's pushing irony too far.

4. We are supposed to feel, "War makes men animals."—Certainly shooting an unarmed man and then standing there watching him bubble up his last breath face down in a creek is not the work of the human being as he is usually represented. But both these Americans are human beings. Martin is deeply steeped in the "human" weakness of fear, and the Jewish boy is the ideal human being we all wished we could be like but seldom are.

5. We are supposed to feel, "Americans are human only towards Americans not their enemies."—The Jewish boy wipes the dirt from eye of an anti-semetic American who is one of a group that has unmerifully beaten him three Saturday nights in a row. And he has also saved two more of them from either drowning or enemy capture, the second with the help of Martin. But both watch the German die pitifully and walk away apparently unmoved. Yet the Jewish boy was certainly moved and moved deeply when he touches a dead German in a french not ten minutes earlier.

6. We are supposed to feel, after seeing the horrors of war? "The Germans were responsible for the Concentration Camp conditions and therefore deserve to die." This German wasn't. In fact this thought has been brought home to us twice; one at the camp itself and once in police station in Paris:

7. We are supposed to feel, "The war is finally over and Johnny (Noah) can come marching home again to wife and child, that is if the New York taxis don't get him first."—That might be a typical Hollywood ending but this picture tries quite hard to be a little above this level. Why can't the German return home too? He doesn't deserve to be killed any more than the two Americans (check the blatant disregard of "Hollywood poetic justice"). And if the sympathetic German must be shot so that Martin can return to his mistress and his New York musical — What price glory, Hollywood?

The above seven views are all possible feelings aroused by this ending,. Some of them are quite ugly; none of them are very pleasant. I do think that college level audience could not be made to accept any one of these possibilities, IF it was made clear that one of them was being shown but nothing is clearly shown. In fact almost any interpretation of this ending does violence not to one but all three of the characters involved.

Brando is killed. He does not "deserve" to die and certainly not the way he does die. The means of death is the objection not the end per se.

The Jewish boy preaches humanity to man and the dignity of man but does not object to his buddy shooting down an unarmed man.

Martin tries to be a hero, tries to overcome his weakness but in fear murders a man, though he is an enemy, and is not moved much by it: he looks with indifference on the fate of another, even being the instrumentality of that fate and it is just that same fate which produces so much fear in himself.

The question is: Did Brando's insistence on his own interpretation of the German foul up a preconcieved ending? If the script originally called for a Nazi and Brando played it as a German idealist, rewriting with permission as he went, why didn't someone see that the pre-written ending had to be changed? A meaningless and brutal death of a sympathetic character does not properly end this story.

If Brando wanted to keep the character sympathetic why didn't he insist upon the German remaining the soldier he was and die fighting the enemies of his country? This is in keeping with the character. He would be a proud soldier who dies in battle. Martin then would overcome his cowardice by killing a young lion, not by watching a helpless kitten drown.

Hollywood is getting a little sloppy with its endings of late, and it is getting worse. Advice—Starting now spell it ART not ART.

Lillian Shannonhouse, much publicized head of the Women's Residence Council, again figured prominently in the news.

This time, her group held a debate on Tuesday night at which the majority of those present were in opposition to the new rules for freshmen coeds.

Among those who spoke on Tuesday and figured in the discussion were Don Furtado, Al Goldsmith, Julia Ann Carter, Ann Bachman and Francis Reynolds.

Hugh Patterson, newly elected chairman of the Men's Honor Council, got his group off to a flying start for the next year by holding discussions in every dorm on campus on Wednesday.

These talks featured the talents of many campus leaders who were on hand to encourage more students to turn out for the Honor Council Jury and to explain the changes in the Honor System.

Three of Carolina's all-time great basketball players were drafted by the New York Knicks and the Syracuse Nationals.

Drafted by the New York club for future activity in the "big time" were Pete Brennan and Joe Quigg. Carolina's fiery little guard Tommy Kearns was the choice of the upstate club.

General College Dean Cecil S. Johnson, was initiated as an honorary colonel in the Tar Heel Air Force this week. This organization is an honorary group of the UNC Air Force ROTC.

Dean of Student Affairs, Fred Weaver, also made headlines this week with his announcement that fifteen graduate counselors will be employed next year in the Lower Quad.

There will be one on every floor of each of the five dorms in the area. They will be acting as aids to the men living in these dorms and will be required to spend a great deal of time in individual counseling.

This week also saw the announcement that Steele Dorm will be converted to office space next year.

On Tuesday night, the Dialectic Senate defeated the Philanthropic Literary Society to win the coveted Di-Phi debate and the trophy which goes to the winner.

Paddy Wall, newly elected secretary of the Student Body, was the recipient this week of one of the highest honors that can be given to a coed on this campus.

Sunday, she was presented with the annual Jane Craige Gray Award, given annually by the Kappa Delta sorority. Also present at the ceremony was Dot Pressley, last year's winner.

Monday night, the Student Party elected Leon Holt to be its new chairman. Holt is a well known personality on campus having been president of his dorm, a member of the Student Legislature and manager of Bob Carter's campaign for the Student Body Presidency. He is also a member of the Order of the Grail.

Sigma Chi, Denny McCoy, chairman of the Sigma Chi Derby to be held this Tuesday, was busy this week making final plans for this year's event in Kenan Stadium.

Taylor And Radford Win 1958 Tanner Award At Faculty Meet

The Tanner Award for "excellence in inspirational teaching" was announced today at a meeting of the University faculty, with prizes of $500 each going to Associate Professor George V. Taylor and Associate Professor Albert E. Radford who teach history and botany respectively.

Chancellor William B. Aycock revealed the 1958 winners of the award which is given each year by the children of the late Lois Spencer and Simpson Bobo Tanner.

The award is given for "recognition of excellence in inspirational teaching of undergraduate students, preferably with respect to their influence on first and second year students."

The faculty committee aiding in the selection of teachers for the award stated, "We are looking for teachers who, in the opinion of students and fellow teachers, have succeeded in their subjects unusually well; we need not inquire into the methods by which these excellent results are achieved. These methods are highly individual and probably are not subject to sucessful analysis."

Dr. Taylor, a native of Trenton, N. J., has taught at the University of Wisconsin and Michigan State College, and was graduated from Rutgers with his advanced degrees from Wisconsin.

Dr. Raford, a native of Augusta, Ga., was graduated from Furman University and received his Ph.D. degree in botany at UNC in 1948 and has been a member of the UNC faculty since that time.

This is the third year that the Tanner Award has been given. Winners in 1956 were Dr. Bernard Boyd, chairman of the Department of Religion, and associate professor of social science James R. Caldwell Jr.

The winners last year were William M. Geer, instructor in history and social science, and assistant professor David Basile of the Department of Geology and Geography.

Chancellor Aycock made special mention of all six men who have been chosen for superior classroom teaching.

Provisions of the Tanner grant which serve to guide those who select the teachers are as follows: "Sole consideration, in the selection of qualified faculty members, is to be given to excellence in personal, classroom, or lecture room teaching. The emphasis is to be particularly upon influence and attainments of selected faculty members in the field of personal teaching as contrasted to other activities in which faculty members attain eminence, including research, authorship, compilations, public service, etc . . . This is not to stipulate that such other activities shall bar faculty members from awards. Such other activities may extend the wholesome usefulness of an excellent teacher, but it is intended that the sole purpose of this Fund is to encourage excellence and inspirational personal teaching of undergraduate students by the faculty of the University."

Iranians

The brothers started their trip by going east from Iran through Afgnanistan and Pakistan, and covered all the Asiatic countries with the exception of Communist China.

They were invited into Communist China, but did not go, when they were told by the American embassy in Hong Kong, where they were at the time, that if they went to China, they would not be allowed into the United States. The reason given was the fact that the U.S. does not extend diplomatic recognition to Communist China. This occured at the time that tix newsmen went into China contary to State Department orders.

The Ommidvars said that they intended to go to China after they completed their tour of the rest of the world.

Harding Pitches Tar Heels To 2-0 Win Over Gamecocks

Tracksters Top State And Deacs; Frosh Win

By JIM HARPER

Carolina's track teams were both victorious in respective meets at Fetzer Field yesterday afternoon, the varsity winning its triangular meet with State and Wake Forest 90-44-13, and the Tar Babies defeating the Wake Forest frosh 76-54.

The varsity completely dominated the afternoon's play, taking eleven firsts in individual competition, and winning the mile relay in a good time of 3:26.8.

Individual Honors

Individual honors went to Dave Scurlock and hurdler Lyndon DeBorde, each of whom scored victories in two events. Scurlock won the 440 in 49.5, and the 880 in 1:58.4, while DeBorde took both hurdle events—the lows in 15.0, the highs in 24.6.

Another probable double victory was thwarted when Jim Varnam, who had previosuly won the 100 yard dash, pulled a muscle in the 220 shortly after coming off the blocks. At the time he dropped from the race he was leading the field.

In the distance events, Captain Everette Whatley won the mile run in 4:18.7, and Wayne Bishop dominated the field in the two mile, winning in 9:19.5.

Freshman Meet

In the frosh division, the Tar Babies won nine individual events, and also took the mile relay.

Worth Sweet was the outstanding Carolina performer, winning the 880 in 2:02.3, and the mile run in 4:30.5. Frank Houston of Wake Forest dominated the dashes in winning both the 100 and 220.

The next varsity meet will be May 3 at Duke, followed by the ACC meet on May 9 and 10, also at Duke. The next frosh meet, with the Big Four freshman, will be held at Duke, May 7.

Saturday's Answer

Carolina Gains First Place In ACC Race

By RUSTY HAMMOND

Ben Harding, big gun of the Carolina pitching staff, notched his fifth win of the season against no defeats here yesterday as he fired a 7-hit shutout over the South Carolina Gamecocks, leading the Heels to a 2-0 victory.

Coupled with Clemson's upset loss at the hands of Wake Forest, the victory put Carolina in first position in the ACC. The Deacs beat the Tigers 5-4 yesterday at Wake Forest. The complete standings in the ACC now read:

Team	W	L	Pct.
Carolina	5	1	.833
Clemson	8	2	.800
Duke	6	2	.750
State	5	4	.428
Virginia	3	4	.428
Wake Forest	2	4	.333
S. Carolina	2	9	.181
Maryland	1	6	.142

The Tar Heels scored their first run in the second inning when shortstop and captain Roger Honeycutt slammed a 400 foot home run to dep right field with nobody on. The Heels added another in the seventh when Carson Oldham walked, advanced to second on Gerald Griffin's sacrifice bunt, and scored on Al Pons' single to center. Pons, rapidly gaining a reputation as a dangerous hitter with ducks on the pond, picked up his 18th RBI of the season with the hit.

The victory was the seventh in a row for Carolina and it gave them a 13-5 overall record.

Although the Gamecocks got seven hits off Harding, he scattered them effectively over the nine innings. South Carolina got two hits in only one inning, the ninth, and got no extra base blows.

The Tar Heels have a busy week comig up with three ACC games on tap. They play State at Raleigh Tuesday, Maryland here Friday, and Virginia here Saturday.

Freshmen Win

Carolina's freshman baseball club, slapped the ball in every direction as they overpowered the State Wolflets 11-4 in a game Friday.

The win brings the Tar Babies record to 8-1. Jerry McNeil was the winning pitcher for Carolina. McNeil also did all right at the bat, getting 2 hits and batting in 3 runs.

Last night the Tar Babies played Wilmington Junior College at Wilmington. The results of that game were not available at press time.

Terps Hand Golfers First Loss Of Season

Carolina's varsity golf team dropped its first match of the season yesterday when the Maryland Terps upset the Heels with a 15-12 victory on Finley Golf Course.

Until the loss, the Tar Heels had gone six matches without a defeat. The linkmen of Duke were predicted to be the only barrier in the way of a perfect season. The Terps arrived fired up and sharp. Last year they finished sixth in the conference championships.

The Terps came out on top 9½-8½ in the match play, and 5½-3½ in the "best ball competition.

Carolina's Bill Thornton kept his usual poise and went the round for a five-under par 67 to take the medalist honor for both teams. arolina's number two man Tom Carolina's number two man Tom Langley had a bad day and was Carolina's number six man Joe Callicott did the best job on a Maryland man, defeating Hogg, 3-0.

The next match for the Tar Heels will be with the undefeated Duke Blue Devils, here next Thursday.

The Summary

Thornton (C) defeated Dean Beaman, 2½-½. McFerrin (M) defeated Langley, 3-0. Best Ball, Maryland 2, Carolina 1.

Lohren (M) defeated Lookabill, 21. Callicott (C) halved with Del Beaman, 1½-1½. Best Ball: Maryland 3, Carolina 0.

Owen (M), defeated McKee, 2½-½. Erdman (C) defeated Hogg, 3-0. Best Ball: Carolina 2½, Maryland ½.

STUDENT UNION
There is a need. See Page 2.

VOL. LXV NO. 150 | Offices in Graham Memorial | CHAPEL HILL, NORTH CAROLINA, TUESDAY, APRIL 29, 1958 | Complete AP Wire Service | FOUR PAGES THIS ISSUE

Officials Make Plans For New Student Union

The Building Committee of the Graham Memorial Board of Directors submitted their plans for the new student union to Chancellor William Aycock at the Chancellor's Cabinet meeting yesterday morning.

The plan calls for a 130,000 sq. ft. building, which would cost approximately $2,250,000. the plan set the location of the new union for Emerson Field, possibly to be joined to Lenoir Hall, in order to provide cafeteria facilities.

The building would angle towards Winston Dorm and Woollen Gymnasium.

Included in the new building would be a special office for the President of the Student Body, an office for the Attorney-general and his staff, an office for the executive secretary, and office space the secretary, treasurer, and other student government officials.

Also there would be two large chambers which would serve for the Student Legislature, the Dialectic Senate, and the Philanthropic Literary Society, as well as an office for the vice-president of the student body.

To meet the need of supplying a place for defendants and witnesses to wait before appearing on trials, the committee recommended specially constructed judicial chambers with ante-rooms.

Also included in the plan is enlarged space for the Daily Tar Heel, The Yackety-Yack, and the Carolina Quarterly.

Included in the building also will be space for the Student Activities Fund office, a chamber for the Order of the Grail, which will serve as a meeting room, an office for the director of the union, as well as for the assistant director, the activities board president, the activities board, an information desk, and custodians' quarters.

The building, if accepted and financed will house a bowling alley, a billiard room, a book store, a ping pong room, a soda fountain-snack bar, two television lounges, an indeterminate number of quiet lounges for study, a main lounges, music listeningand playing rooms, meeting rooms for 10 to 200, a barber shop, a photography darkroom, a post office, and and arts and crafts shop.

There will also be a 750 seat auditorium, which will house the free film series, the foreign film series, the Petites Musicales, and the Petites Dramatiques, and a campus night club, which will supply facilities more conducive to dancing than the current Rendezvous Room, according to the committee.

There is also a possibility that there will be a large segment of the building used as a religious center including the Y.M. and YWCA.

Other organizations such as the Carolina Symposium, Carolina Forum, and Women's Residence, may have office space in the new building.

The plans will be reviewed by the Building Department, before being reviewed by the Administration, assigned a priority, and sent on to the General Assembly in Raleigh for an appropriation sometime next year.

The current building is planned on the basis that there will shortly be 10,000 students at the university, and that the present student union, Graham Memorial, is inadequate to meet the needs of the student body, according to Joel Fleishman, chairman of the Building Committee.

SOUND AND FURY FANTASY

'All I Do Is Dream Of You'

By BARRY WINSTON

Boy, what a messed up campus this' is! Nothing ever happens right around here.

Just let me tell you what happened to me. Everything went fine Friday, see? I picked up my date at the bus station when she got in from G'boro at 4:30 Friday afternoon, and then we had a great supper, and then we went to the dance that night.

I even managed to make my last class on Saturday morning. Then, Saturday afternoon, we tripped out to the Patio to soak up a brew or two, and listen to some of that live music. So far, fine. And supper at the fraternity house was passable.

But then the trouble began. My date wanted to go to the Woody Herman Concert, and I wanted to stay at the house for the party that night. Finally, after three cries, and an "I'm-going-home-on-the next-bus" routine, we settled on a satisfying compromise. We'd stay at the party for awhile, then go to the concert at Memorial Hall, and then go back to the house for the rest of the evening.

Nothing very complicated about that, is there? But just listen. We stayed at the house until eight o'clock that night, sitting around, sipping orange drink, and then my date announced to me that it was time to go to the concert.

Well, by that time, I was in that sort of mood where you're ready to take off walking for New York if somebody suggests it, so I didn't argue the point. I just went upstairs and put on a tie, like a good little boy, and off we went for Memorial Hall.

I thought it was sort of funny, when we got there, because there wasn't another soul around, but I figured we must be a little early, so we went on in and sat down. Got the best seats in the house, too. After about fifteen minctes, and still not the first person had shown up, I was beginning to sweat it, and my date was beginning to look at me like I was a leper.

Fortunately, I had had the foresight to bring along a small supply of that orange drink, and that quieted her down a little. In fact, it quieted her down so much that she started snoring. How about that? An import, and she couldn't even hold a little bit of orange-aid!

Anyhow, there I was, sitting in Memorial Hall, waiting for Woody and his Herd to show, and my date flaked out next to me. So then you know what happened? No. Woody didn't show.

But the curtains parted and there were a bunch of college students. College students! Six-fifty I pay for a miserable ticket to a concert, and what do I get? College students!

I was ready to leave, but I couldn't get my date to wake up, and there was plenty of orange drink

Modern Venus Contest Will Be Derby Climax

A "Miss Modern Venus" beauty contest will climax events at UNC's 14th annual Sigma Chi Derby scheduled for 2:30 p.m. today at Kenan Stadium. Twenty-three coeds will compete in the contest.

Derby entries will come from the seven social sororities on campus and from women's residence halls. The Derby will include the "Battle of the Coeds," pie-throwing events, relay races and others unusual competition.

In case of rain the Sigma Chi Derby will be held Thursday at regularly scheduled times, according to Jerry Long, Derby co-chairman.

The afternoon's activities will begin with a 2 p.m. parade in downtown Chapel Hill which will move on to the stadium. No admission will be charged and door prizes will be given.

The first Derby at UNC was staged in 1944 by the Alpha Tau chapter of the Sigma Chi fraternity. Since that first event derbies have attracted as many as 3,000 spectators. Throughout the country Sigma Chi chapters sponsor more than 100 such derbies each year.

Fall Orientation Committeemen Are Chosen

Herman Godwin, Campus Orientation Committee chairman, announced Monday that men's orientation counselors for next year have been chosen.

Godwin said in a statement to The Daily Tar Heel that "I wish to congratulate those men chosen as counselors for the fall orientation program. The selections committee interviewed over 200 persons, and the choice of the final group was quite difficult. We were in many cases forced to eliminate capable persons. To those men chosen, let me stress the importance of the job they have undertaken. The efforts of this group during Orientation Week will reflect on the University for the next four years."

He added that 228 men applied for orientation positions and 201 were interviewed. 151 men were finally chosen.

On two successive Thursdays, May 1 and May 8, there will be compulsory meetings of all counselors in Gerrard Hall at 7:30 p.m. At these meetings any questions on Orientation Week will be cleared up.

Two Iranian Motorcyclists Speak Tonight

Issa and Abdullah Ommidvar, the Iranian motorcyclists, who have traveled 65,000 miles all over the world in an effort to build peace and intercultural understanding will speak tonight in Graham Memorial's Main Lounge in a program entitled "Across the Top of the World."

The program is designed to describe both the purpose of the Iranians' tour, and their experiences in the arctic with both the Alaskan and Northern Canadian Eskimos.

The world travelers will give short talks prior to showing slides on the arctic. This will be followed by a film of the summer life of the Alaskan Eskimo, and the winter life of the Canadian Eskimo. The film will last about one hour.

The two Iranians are also giving an exhibition of Uranian art, architecture, weaving, and utensils in Morehead Planetarium. This is only the third time that the Ommidvars have opened the exhibit in the United States.

The exhibit comprises a large part of the 400 pound load that they are carrying around the world. The exhibition will held through tomorrow.

The Ommidvars, from Chapel Hill, will probably head south and visit the South and Central American Countries.

On thei rtour, they have conferred with several heads of state, an exception being President Eisenhower, who was too busy, according to a letter that the two brothers received.

Arsonist Trial Won't Be Held In Current Term

HILLSBORO, N. C., (AP)—Solicitor W. H. Murdock said Monday a young Medical student who admitting setting 10 fires in Chapel Hill in January will not be tried during the current term of Orange Superior Court.

Murdock said 21-year-old Richard Thomas Satterwhite of McCain will remain in the Raleigh Institution for further observation and treatment.

The trial had been set tentatively for the term of Orange Superior Court which opened Monday.

Hospital officials said the youngster, who claims he is beset by uncontrollable urges to start fires, is not yet mentally competent to stand trial on the arson charges.

Satterwhite kept the Chapel Hill Fire Department on edge during his spree which included nine minor blazes. Another, at Swain Hall of the University of North Carolina, resulted in $60,000 in damage.

Superior Court Judge Leo Carr ordered Satterwhite confined to the state mental hospital on Feb. 3for 60 days.

Carrier Current Radio Set Up In Five Dorms

By WAYNE CHESTER

Never underestimate the usefulness of electricity, for it seems to be unlimited.

In Winston, Conner, Alexander, Joyner and parts of Cobb the students are currently recieving radio programs over their electic lines.

It's all part of an experiment being carried on by the Radio-Television and Motion Pictures Department at Swain Hall.

The experiment is called Carrier Current Radio, and transmission is carried by the electrical circuit which connects Winston, Conner, Alexander, and Joyner. Parts of Cobb dormitory recieve the transmission through their steam lines which are connected with the other dorms.

This method of broadcasting involves no sound waves and its coverage is limited. However it would be possible to cover the entire campus with such a system.

This experiment is being carried out at 1645 kilocycles. It is operated by a transmitter located in the basement of Joyner Dormitory.

It has been operating on a test period for one week, and it is uncertain just how long the operations will continue. It is a technical experiment only.

The station has been playing music continuously from 7-11 p.m. The music is interrupted only by a tape recorded voice identifying the station.

Response from the students who live in the dorms which receive the Carrier Current Station has been good, and Swain Hall officials would like to hear from more of these students.

Summer School Weekly Editor Is Announced

Davis Young, rising sophomore from Princeton, New Jersey, today has been appointed editor of the Summer School Weekly.

He has worked as a member of The Daily Tar Heel staff since September as reporter, columnist and his present position of feature editor.

In addition to his Daily Tar Heel work, Young has been active as a member of the Student Legislature, assistant publicity chairman of the Carolina Symposium, the Student Party and the Honor Council Jury. He will be an orientation counselor in the fall.

Young immediately appointed Barry Winston as associate editor.

In a statement given to The Daily Tar Heel, Young said, "I would like to express my sincere thanks to Mary Alys Vorhees, Curtis Gans, and Doug Eisele for the confidence they have expressed in me by urging me to seek this position.

"Along with the Summer School Student Body President, this is the most important and challenging job on campus during the summer. I know that I will learn much from sitting in the editor's chair.

DAVIS YOUNG
Summer School Weekly Editor

"To the students who will be here in the summer, I promise a lively and provocative paper. I would like to encourage all of you to apply for positions on it as soon as possbile as there are a lot of good jobs left."

Married Students' Families Threatened By Open Sewage

By KEN FRIEDMAN and DAVIS YOUNG

The people who live on Isley Street, Stinson Street and the North Columbia Street Extension (on the northern fringes of Chapel Hill) are predominantly students at the University of North Carolina. Most of them are married and have young children.

They are faced with a serious and unique problem; a problem which has existed for some time and finally came to a head last week.

They have not been provided with proper facilities for sewage disposal and, as a result, have had to use septic tanks in an area where the soil is unable to absorb any excesses of liquid. When an outdated pump, which controlled the disposal, broke down, open sewage was literally floating around the neighborhood.

This posed a particular hard ship for the student-parents, whose youngsters were prone to wander in and about the contaminated material.

Last week an extensive investigation of sanitation conditions in the area was begun. It was revealed, upon discussion with the residents, that the problem has existed for quite a while, with little or no relief. Open sewage was found resting at the bottom of several large ditches and many other swampy and polluted regions.

Women were found who cannot hang clothes in their backyards and who have to maintain constant vigilance to prevent their children from wandering more than a few feet away from the house.

They discovered that an unidentified woman had, on April 19 1958, fallen into one of these open ditches and emerged covered with toilet paper and various other remnants of open sewage. Her identity remains a secret due to the fact that she does not wish any publicity to evolve from her mishap. The ditch was unlighted and was not roped off.

The unfortunate victim had no warning of her impending danger. Further investigation disclosed that a local construction company had dug the ditch and left it in that precarious condition.

Families have moved out in protest. Some, whose sewage was not affected, left because of the stench and the obvious health obstructions. Those who have stayed on have fought for correction or relief.

Since then several property owners, who rent in the area, have agreed to tie on to a sewer line which is being run through the neighborhood. The afore-mentioned ditch has supposedly been "landscaped." The "landscaping" consists of several layers of good, old Carolina mud. Geological tests, provided by a local geologist revealed that substances resembling human fecal matter and other questionable materials were still present, even in the top soil.

Interviews have been held with realtors, health inspectors, building officials, residents, etc., in an attempt to discover the causes and locate the blame for this dilemma. They have come away with a variety of answers.

The problem remains obviously and emphatically unsolved, despite several claims to the contrary. Residents are willing and anxious to discuss the problem in hopes that the remaining offenders would tie onto the line and correct the other deficiencies.

In the next three days, The Daily Tar Heel will present statements from many of those involved.

Oratory Contest Open For Seniors

All graduating seniors have been invited to compete for the annual Willie P. Mangum Medal at 8 p.m. in Di Hall Wednesday.

The medal, the University's oldest award, is presented each year by the Dialectic Senate and the Philanthropic Literary Society in recognition of fine oratory.

Oration subjects are too be chosen by the participants and submitted to Dean Mackie's office in South Building by 4:30 p.m. Tuesday. Each oration should be about ten minutes long.

Judges for the event will be Prof. C. O. Cathey of the history dept., Prof. C. H. Holman of the English Dept., and Rev. Sam H. Magill, director of student activities.

The Mangum Medal was established in 1878 by Misses Martin Person and Mary Mangum of Orange County in memory of their father, Willie P. Mangum, a member of the Seniors eligible also include those graduating at the end of the summer session.

Senior Day Set May 7; Full Schedule Planned

Senior Day will be held Wednesday, May 7, at The Patio from 3:30 to 12 p. m.

Festivities for the afternoon include a beer baseball game, a chipping contest, a casino with "gambling" tables, a show including the campus' best talent, and the annual Ugly Man Contest.

Following a barbecue supper, there will be dancing to the music of Nick Kearn's Combo.

In case of rain the party will be postponed until Thursday, May 3.

UNC Student In Two Car, $700 Wreck

A two-car collision on U.S. 15-501 north and N.C. east in Orange County Sunday afternoon caused no injuries but did an estimated $700 damage to both cars.

According to the Highway Patrol, a 1955 Plymouth, driven by UNC student James Ficklen Arthur, Jr., 20, of Sigma Nu House, was traveling east on N.C. 54 at an estimated speed of 35 m.p.h., made a left turn, and collided with a 1957 Chevrolet traveling on highway 54. At the time of impact the Chevrolet was reportedly going 10 m.p.h.

Damage to the Plymouth's bent front fender, grill, and hood was estimated at $300.

Damage to the Chevrolet's right front door, side, and front seat was estimated at $400.

IN THE INFIRMARY

Students in the infirmary yesterday included: Miss Elizabeth Gregory, and Thomas Conger, Boyce Davis, Fred Gregory, Rosnie Hardison, Frank Inman, William Lytle, Taylor McMillan, Willard Ramsey, Edward Riner and Charles William.

A Student Union

The Building Committee of the Graham Memorial Board of Directors unveiled the fruits of several months labor yesterday morning.

They plan that they pet before the University administration and the campus is one for a union centrally located, a union possessing quiet study facilities to relieve some of the pressure in the dormitories, a union which has recreation facilities for the entire campus and meeting space for all campus activities, a union which is truly a student union.

All the several month's labor may go to naught, if the student body does not rally behind the new union.

There have been several complaints about Graham Memorial from that of being off the beaten path, to having only four pool tables, to having too little office space to put out a daily newspaper.

The building is obviously not meeting the student's needs at the present time, and is not getting the type of participation it deserves.

There is often talk of student apathy, and there is such a disease raging through school. However, there at least can be made the effort to combat the disease by putting into the student's hands the tools to combat the disease.

Such a tool would be the new union, which would preserve the concept of a student union as well as providing the facilities for study, recreation, entertainment, and activities for the entirety of the student body.

To get this new union into existence, it will take the concerted effort of the student body in a display of their eagerness for such a union. It is this type of student support that will get the union.

The President

The two Iranian motorcyclists, who have been touring the world in an effort to promote world peace through understanding, have shed some light on the character of the President of the United States.

It isn't every day that men come from another part of the world on a good will mission. It isn't every day that they travel by motorbike. And it isn't every day that people have such a noble purpose—a mutual cultural fused to visit with them for two minutes, understanding and world peace.

Yet the President of the United States rewhile they were in Washington, although he did agree to accept their gifts by proxy.

Sometimes nations are judged by the little things, and President Eisenhower showed that the current administration can bobble all the little things. His golfing trips are well advertised, and no one can say that there are not times when the President needs a rest, but a two minute interview to foster the cause of a peaceful world is not too much to expect.

President Eisenhower has showed at this time, as he has in the past, that his ties are not with the people of the nation and world, but with the brass and upper echelons of society.

This is not the type president, the chief of state of the United States of America should be.

Postponement

The Women's Residence Council has postponed decision on the new coed rules until sometime in the future. The decision may come tomorrow night.

When they take into consideration of these rules, it is hoped they will take cognizance of the facts that have been brought out. It is hoped that they will act wisely and with discretion.

It is hoped that they will preserve the liberal tradition of the University of North Carolina.

Town Landlords

Whit Whitfield

Not everyone in Chapel Hill has been fortunate enough to live in an apartment—most people can't aford it because of the law of supply and demand (one of the Eisenhower measures).

Not only are the prices ridiculously high, but often the restrictions on the tenants are even more ridiculous, and more often than not they include much more than the "No pets, no children" clause. Those of you who have had to rent in Chapel Hill can more fully enjoy the following excerpts from a form letter from one of the typical Orange County landlords than the average student.

Subject: Floorwaxing.

". . . you haven't waxed your floors in the past four weeks, and it is urgent that you do so immediately and be sure that you keep them waxed regularly every three or four weeks . . . If you wear out the finish on the floor, that means a new refinishing job which will be very expensive to you . . . Remember your lease calls for it whether you saw it in the lease OR NOT."

Subject: Garbage.

"Please be careful to put your garbage and papers and etc in the garbage can because this makes for a better appearance of the yard and premises in general." (He didn't say what an "ETC." was, but it's obvious that someone has been putting it in the yard instead of in the garbage can. At least that's the way we would interpret this sentence.)

Subject: Garbage II.

"Your garbage can will have a number on it, and you're supposed to put your garbage and trash in this can and not in your next door neighbor's can. So, be careful about this as you wouldn't expect your next door neighbor to put their garbage in your can, therefore you shouldn't put yours in their." (There has obviously been some confusion among the tenants about whose garbage goes in whose can and vice versa. The landlord has been quite helpful as you can see in resolving this perplexing situation.)

* * * * *

Recently President Eisenhower presented to the nation a solution to the recession problem, and it was simply this, that the consumers should do more spending. Exacly what the consumers, particularly the several millions unemployed, should use for money he didn't say. Maybe he was thinking of the barter system.

"Yes, This Is The Department Of Defense"

Roundup

Dave Jones

"A Bill to Test the Bipartisanship of the Student Legislature of the University of North Carolina." This could very well be the title of the bill introduced Thursday night by Rep. Rudy Edwards (SP), asking to have trash cans placed in the quadrangles.

Actually this bill seems harmless enough. Why would anyone argue about something so simple as whether or not trash cans are needed?

However, there is an issue: Will the 25th assembly continue its good record of work done during the first two sessions?

To date the 25th assembly has introduced fourteen bills, five of them have become law. Of the remaining nine, only one appears headed for defeat. This beginning is nothing short of phenomenal in the light of the work of the "do nothing" 23rd assembly which took office just a year ago, and which beat down this same measure by a purely partisan vote.

The members of this legislature will do well to consider the merits of the Trash Can Bill as such and ignore any other considerations. "Unsightly trash cans" or not, a mixed vote not along party lines can and will do much Thursday night to clear the air, establish a spirit of cooperation, and get needed work done.

One of the most significant pieces of legislation which has come up or will come up this session is the Dace Biren (UP) - John Brooks (SP) bill to rewrite the elections law. It is significant that the man who was cheated of his opportunity to run for Vice President by the rigidity of the existing law should co-author this bill. Under its provisions there will be a board composed of the authors, Bob Furtado, the new chairman of the Elections board, Rudy Edwards (SP), and two other members from the legislature .

The bill that stands the least chance of passing now is the $3700 appropriation to the UNC Amateur Radio Club. There are two considerations here which will be weighed by the body and by the Finance Committee. The first is money. Do we have a large enough non-appropriated balance to take care of such a large sum?

The second consideration is the club itself. Is it sound enough and well organized enough to make mature and responsible use of the equipment asked for? At present there doesn't seem to be sufficiently strong answer of "Yes" to either question to insure the passage of the measure.

Opinions Of Tar Heel Readers

Robert T. Adams

Recently there have been several articles in various magazines on the so-called Beat Generation. These articles have attempted to analyse our generation and label it as beat. The word beat is a pun meaning beat in the sense of a musical beat, beat in the colloquial sense of being tired and worn out, and beat meaning defeated. I think the defeated comes most nearly to what these articles are trying to say. The argument appears to be that our generation is defeated by a chaotic society; that certain external situations (i .e. peace time draft, etc.) have caused us to suppress our emotions to the extent that we only get release from participating in extreme activities known as "thrill kicks."

THE BEAT GENERATION

My point is that this is not a beat generation but an empty generation. Defeated implies that we have fought, but we haven't done anything. Our generation is empty because we haven't had an ideal, a goal, in which to develop a self. This development of self is the key to our generation. What has happened is that we have bunched together into groups in which an individual who expresses a "self" is a nonconformist who endangers the security of the group and thus is ostracized. This problem is expounded in articles on conformity, a return to Conrad in literature, and a recent interest in existentialism.

However, the most tragic and subtle evils of the over-all problem lies in the suppression of our emotions. Everywhere we go the incesstant drone of "play it cool, man" or a variation of this theme is heard. In dating we must "play the game" and never show how we really feel, lest we get involved. This suppressing of emotions is tragic because it destroys the self little by little until the individual becomes empty. We want to blame conformity and loss of self on external circumstances of a chaotic nature such as wars, atom bombs, and guided missiles. The blame lies in ourselves because, with no external way to develop a self, we are forced to look within ourselves and we refuse to do this. Instead, our generation is marked by "thrill kicks" in an effort to jolt alomst empty souls. I am convinced that when we, as individuals, turn inwardly, and look at ourselves as we really are before it is too late, the answer will be found.

Letters: On Beat Generation And Walking On The University Grass

Editor:

I should like to make a few comments concerning Jonathan Yardley's column on the "Beat Generation," in Saturday's Daily Tar Heel. I am motivated to do this not only because I think that the column was one long mass of confusion, but also because the confusion was unfortunately attempting to deal with the only ultimately important question—the meaning of our existence.

First of all, Mr. Yardley, let me assure you that the person who told you that the Beat Generation (and although you define this term rather vaguely, from what you say, I would consider myself a member) was "profoundly religious" made the mistake of assuming that you were able to understand the distinction between "religion," as you use the word, and the "religious response," to which he was obviously refering. No one was trying to convince you that the "Beat Generation" is one founded upon the Rock of Ages." Nothing could be further from the truth. It is also hard for me to understand how you could make the unbelievingly ridiculous statement that religion (in your sense of the word, i.e. organized religion) is something that cannot be experienced in a superficial way. Look around Mr. Yardley, if you honestly believe that all the people who go to church every Sunday—who get a "real religious experience" from the music, or less likely, the sermon,—are all sincere, "non-superifical," religious persons, then I suggest that your conception of religion is even more shallow, more superficial, then I had originally thought.

It seems to me that you reach the peak of your shallowness, however, when you make the statements—which you obviously think are very logical—that no one is religious unless he believes, and since the Beat Generation is still searching, then they are certainly not religious. This statement is true as long as we are referring to your narrow conception of religious. Certainly the Beat Generation is not religious in this sense of complacent acceptance of traditional religious beliefs. Repeating the creed in church, "I believe in God the Father . . . etc.," just does not have much meaning for us. However, Mr. Yardley, I should like to submit that we are religious in a much more basic sense, i.e. in the sense of the religious response—a passionate concern for understanding some meaning in our existence. If you see this as "somewhat childish," at least understand what you are criticizing. We are not seeking some traditional, mathematical, proof of God's existence, as you suggest, but rather we are seeking an understanding in which the word "God" will have some truely basic significance in our lives. We are not concerned with a mathematicial proof of God, because even if one were possible, of what real significance would this have for our own individual lives?

The one thing in your column that I do agree with is your observation that the people you classify as the Beat Generation feel "unhappy, dissatisfied, confused and dissappointed." You suggest that a possible explaination for this is that we are not humble that we do not realize that we are but men. It sems to me that we are much more humble, that we realize much more deeply that we are but men, than anyone whom you classify as "religious." You see, Mr. Yardley, we do not know the answer to the meaning of our lives and the only difference between us and the people you call religious is that we know it, and we admit it. For this reason I do not understand your opinion that the "religious" persons (in your sense of the word and in which you include yourself) are more "realistic" then the people you call the Beat Generation. It is not us Mr. Yardley who claim that "all the sordid secrets of the universe have been opened before our bloodshot eyes," but it is rather the people you call religious who claim to have the God-given answer in their back pocket. We are certain of only two things Mr. Yardley, and that is that we have a passionate desire to understand and that we are faced with the complete irrationality of the world. Albert Camus speaks of these two certainties in his book of essays The Myth of Sisyphus, in which he says," What other truth can I admit without lying, without bringing in a hope I lack and which means nothing within the limits of my condition."

My feeling, Mr. Yardley, is that we need more people with a passionate concern, more people in what you call the Beat Generation, to replace some of your complacent "religious" people whose only hope is a blind acceptance.

Anthony Wolff speaking, Tar Heel, April 23: "It is in most cases impossible to go directly from any one building on this campus to any other building without trespassing on the now-sacred grass. This is ridiculous—"

This is ridiculous. There are many paved walks criss-crossing the two main quadrangles, leading directly to most of the class rooms. The students have plenty of time, ten minutes, to get from one class to another. If the students took some pride in their campus it wouldn't be necessary for the University to erect wire fencing to restrain these six foot babies who have no self restraint. Maybe a few more walks could very well be laid, but it is a safe bet that the fences would still be needed. Those who have to climb over or under the wires might well be asked to leave the University. They probably are a law unto themselves and would be chronic wire jumpers in any situation.

I suppose you could chalk it up to youth, but the feature writers of the Tar Heel would be much more effective if they left off sarcasm and trying to be witty when they address themselves to the administration on matters concerning the student body. They could well begin now to learn the lessons that will stand them in good stead when they get out on their own in the wide wide world. When writing in the Tar Heel if they don't observe the rules of good journalism the administration can't be blamed if it ignores their arguments even when they are legitimate and in a good cause.

John Gould writing in the Baltimore Evening Sun recently gives the following succinct advice on writing editorials: "An editorial," he said, "needs to be logically fair, intellectually honest. It may be pro, con or neuter, but it must always be 'constructive.' It should have the three required qualities of all good writing—clarity, vigor and grace; and it should convince and persuade, rather than preach.

This is mighty good advice coming from Mr. Gould. I hope the young staff of the Tar Heel will read, learn, and profit thereby.

SIGMA CHI DERBY

All bosom worshippers and other fetishists will repair to Kenan Stadium at 2:30 this afternoon for the annual celebration of the Venus-Adonis Complex. The affair will feature a semi-striptease for girls who wish they could and boys who wish they would, and an opportunity for all those who wish to throw something at someone to relieve their frustrations—all this in addition to the main event in which the local goddesses will bare their legs and bear their bosoms for the inspection of the local connoisseurs.

Aside from the more obvious and inherent pathological aspects of the Derby and other similar affairs, there is a dangerous consequence of such fetishism. It has been pointed out by many observers, and on this campus by the Reverend A. L. Kershaw during his visit here last year, that the current popular emphasis on the female physique is deterimental to the majority of females who are not generously endowed in respect to the celebrated particulars, but who are otherwise altogether admirable.

A NOTE ON TIPPING

It is the constant complaint of waiters at the local restaurants that their student cusomers do not tip. This fact is quite easily explained: Most students have very little money, and tipping is a hardship which many of them are unwilling to accept. It is also true, of course, that the South in general, for a number of reasons, has never subscribed to the custom.

Nevertheless, the local waiters have a legitimate gripe; they work on a pay scale which anticipates that the greater part of their livelihood will be provided by tips. Without them, their pay is in many cases next to nothing.

The customers, too, have a legitimate gripe: Why should they be expected to dish out a fixed percentage of the bill every time merely because the restaurant owner does not pay his waiters enough?

The fact is, though, that meals are priced as they are on the assumption that the customer will not do this, then he should be willing to accept a rise in the price of the meal. One way or another, the waiters have as much right as anyone to make a living.

The most equitable attitude toward the whole question is to accept the tip as a part of the price of a meal, and then to consider the advisability or possibility of dining out in light of the total expense. To do otherwise is to cheat the waiters.

In other parts of the country where tipping is the custom, the usual gratuity is something between ten and twenty percent of the bill; the amount varies, of course, with the quality of the Restaurant and the service.

There is no reason why students who eat out should not conform to at least the minimum standard—ten percent. Not only is this the waiters' legitimate expectation, but it is also liable to result in better service.

High Point APO Installed By UNC

Alpha Phi Omega's UNC chapter installed a new chapter of the Scouting fraternity at High Point College last Sunday.

Nine members of Carolina's chapter, several from State, James Wadsworth, Chairman of the Advisory Committee, Frank Youndell, Scouting Adivsor and Bill Roth, National First Vice President, attended the ceremony.

Rho Chapter has installed all but one of the APO Chapters in North Carolina.

Di And Phi Join For Discussion On Regulations

The Phi and the Di will meet in joint session tonight at 8 p.m. in Phi Hall in New East to debate rules for the student nurses in the School of Nursing.

Gary Greer, president of the Di, will introduce the bill, which calls for rules governing nurses to be made the same as those governing coeds at the University.

Jess Stribling, president of the Phi, will preside over the meeting. This will be the last meeting over which he will preside; election of officers for the coming year are scheduled for next week by the Phi.

Special invitations have been extended to the Dean of the School of Nursing, the Dean of Women and coeds, in addition to student nurses.

PLEDGE WEEKEND

President Friday Is Honorary AKPsi

William C. Friday, president of the Consolidated University of North Carolina, was initiated Friday night into Alpha Kappa Psi professional fraternity as an honorary member.

The initiation took place just prior to the Spring Pledge Dance and Banquet held in the Crystal Ballroom of the Washington Duke Hotel in Durham. L. R. (Rush) Jordan, Grand Vice-President of Alpha Kappa Psi and past president and alumnus of Alpha Tau Chapter, presented a certificate of honorary membership in the Business Administration fraternity to President Friday in a ceremony following the dinner, which was in honor of pledges and their dates and wives.

Guest speaker for the evening was State Senator O. Arthur Kirkman from High Point, a past Grand President of Alpha Kappa Psi. Senator Kirkman, speaking on the financial problems of North Carolina schools, emphasized the need for expansion and improvement in higher education. Urging all present to think of their responsibilities as future citizens, he asked for higher taxes to support the schools.

The Alpha Kappa Psi Scholarship Key was presented to Edward B. Fowlkes, a junior B. A. student from Tarboro, for his maintenance of a high average over a three year period.

Guests recognized were Professors E. E. Peacock and Isaac N. Reynolds, both of the School of Business Administration, and the wife of Senator Kirkman.

Paul E. Fisher, Chapel Hill; Rossie P. Hardison, Jr., Wallace; Edward E. Hollowell, Aurora; Mike Johnson, Asheville; H. Joe King, Charlotte.

Stanley Leftwich, Mt. Airy; Russell I. Quick, Chapel Hill; Tommy Ricks, Durham; Robert F. Rowe, Lexington; Leo F. Simpson, Jr., Morehead.

John Thomas Taylor C,harlotte; Pat Williford, Angier, and Dewey Wright, Chapel Hill.

The climax of the dance came with the crowning of Woman's College student Miss Mary Men Key as Sweetheart of Alpha Kappa Psi. Eddie Bird, chairman of the Sweetheart Committee, presented Miss Men Key with a bouquet of flowers and a gift.

Last Musicale Features Organ

The ninth and last Petites Musicales for the spring semester is scheduled for Sunday evening May 4.

The program will feature Dr. Francis Hopper, professor of music and head of the organ department of the University of Louisville. Dr. Hopper will give an organ recital at Hill Hall at 8 p.m.

Dr. Hopper has studied at the Union Theological Seminary in New York, where he earned his degrees of MSM and DSM, and at the School of English Church Music in Christlehurst, England. While Dr. Hopper was studying in England he gave frequent Sunday afternoons recitals in both Oxford and Cambridge. While studying in New York he was organist for Sunday morning services at Carngie Hall.

Presidential Appointments Are Still Open

Student body President Don Furtado has urged all persons interested in student government appointments to sign up for interviews in the Student Government office in Graham Memorial.

Appointments to be made include an Attorney General and two assistants plus a staff of eight men and six women; three members of the Consolidated University Council; a seventeen member elections board; a six member NSA committee and a Campus Chest co-chairmen.

Other appointments include a seven member library committee; a three member campus stores committee; a committee to pick the editor of the campus humor magazine and a traffic advisory commission and committee.

The list also included ten cabinet members; the membership of the dance committee; the audit board; three seats, one year, two year and three year, on the Graham Memorial board of directors; a student council member; a campus traffic board; a Victory Village Veterans Affairs Commission; and the Honor System Commission.

The Carolina Forum, the high school honor system, the summer school student government, the NSA delegation to the national convention in August and the clerks of the Men's and Women's council are also on the list of appointments to be made.

Final Jury Interviews

The Honor System Commission has announced the final series of jury interviews for this year. The interviews will be held on the second floor of Graham Memorial from 2-4 p.m. on each afternoon this week, Tuesday through Friday.

All students who are interested in serving as a juror under the new honor system, have been urged to go to Graham Memorial this week and undergo the brief but important interview which will qualify them for jury duty. The appointment list and applications will be in the Student Government office.

Intramural Track Meet

The Intramural track meet gets underway at 5:30 here with preliminarys in the 60-yard dash, 100-yard dash, 220-yard dash, and the field events including the high jump, broad jump, shot put, and discus. Final in these events plus the 440-yard relay, 880-yard relay and ½mile will be held tomorrow. There are three divisions competing, Grad, Dorm, and Frat.

Softball practice for the Big Four sports day begins today at 4:00. Those interested should check by the Intramurals office.

left, so I decided to stick around and see what these clowns were up to. I even put on my glasses, so I could see who they were. And I knew some of them!

Right there, big as life, was Hannah Kirby, all decked out in an evening dress, running around singing, and dancing and all sorts of things. Hannah, in case you don't remember, is that swingin' chick who led the Chi I's in the Valkyrie Sing. You know—the one who took her shoes off.

And there was Hoke Simpson, looking like he had just stepped out of a recording session. Come to think of it, he probably had. Hoke' the boy that did "Number One"—that song about the basketball team last year—and "Gigi." He and Hannah looked like they were having a big time up there, singing and dancing around together.

In fact, it looked like so much fun that I decided to go up and join them. But after I had fallen over three rows of seats trying to get to the front, I gave it up as a bad job, and went back to watching.

Finally it dawned on me. They were doing a show. And there were all sorts of interesting people in it, besides Hannah and Hoke. Hope Sparger was playing somebody or other (I never did catch her name) opposite Oliver Bloomer over whom she towered by about three feet. Well, maybe the orange drink made her look a little taller than she is, bct they really made a pair up there.

Larry Anderson was playing the part of somebody who had something to do with Hannah but Icouldn't tell for sure what he had to do with her, because by that time I was having a hard time keeping my eyes in focus. Orange drink is terrible for the vision, in case nobody ever told you.

The last thing I remember clearly is seeing Cecil Hartsoe running around making like a director and screaming that he was never going to another show in his life—this is his fourth you know, and he's really beginning to show signs of wear.

And Woody Herman never did show up, but I had a good time, anyhow, watching those people do that show, whatever it was. I woke up about four o'clock that morning on the front lawn of the fraternity house.

I'm beginning to think that the whole thing was a dream. And I don't have the foggiest notion what happened to my date. She may still be flaked out in Memorial Hall, for all I know.

Not really. 'Cause if Coke had been around in Caesar's day, Caesar would have treated himself to the sparkling good taste, the welcome lift of Coke! Caesar's motto—"I came, I saw, I conquered." Pretty good motto for Coke too—the prime favorite in over 100 countries today!

Tar Heels Number 1; Three Tilts This Week

Tar Heels, Number 1. Last year the sport was basketball and the number referred to the nation and this year it is baseball and number 1 represents the ACC, but the surprise is just as great either way you look at it. Coach Walt Rabb's Carolina baseballers have won seven games in a row, five of them against conference competition. They have knocked off the three teams most in contention and right now sit on the top of the totem pole with a 5-1 record. Wake Forest, famous upsets in every sport, turned the trick again last Saturday as they put the skids on leagueleading Clemson 5-4 while the Tar Heels were busy whipping South Carolina 2-0. So the Deacs, who have won only two conference clashes all year, helped put the Heels on top. So far, Clemson's ill-fated journey up Tobacco Road has helped everyone but the Tigers, as they have dropped their last two straight to Big Fourt teams, and still have a long way to go before returning to the comparative peace and quiet of South Carolina. The Bengals visit Duke Thursday and Friday and move over to State on Saturday. They will have to do some fast playing to come out of those three days in god shape.

3 ACC Games This Week

Speaking of grinds in the schedule department, the Tar Heels have three more big ones coming up this week, all against ACC competition. The Heels play a return engagement with State at Raleigh today, Maryland is here Friday, and Virginia visits Chapel Hill Saturday. State should be the toughest of the three. The Pack has a pair of outfielders who are slapping the ball all over the league in gridder Dick Hunter and Russ Casteen, brother of pitcher Danny. Hunter is hitting .422 and Casteen has a .360 average to date. State also has a pair of pitchers who mean trouble to any opposing team—Dan Casteen and Joe Jones pitched a one-hitter over Carolina in the finals of the Dixie Classic but the Tar Heels got him 5-3 here at Chapel Hill.

Pressure On Carolina

The pressure at this point is on Carolina. Clemson has only four more conference games remaining, while Carolina has eight left. Should Clemson finish without losing another game, Carolina would have to win the rest of its games to finish on top.

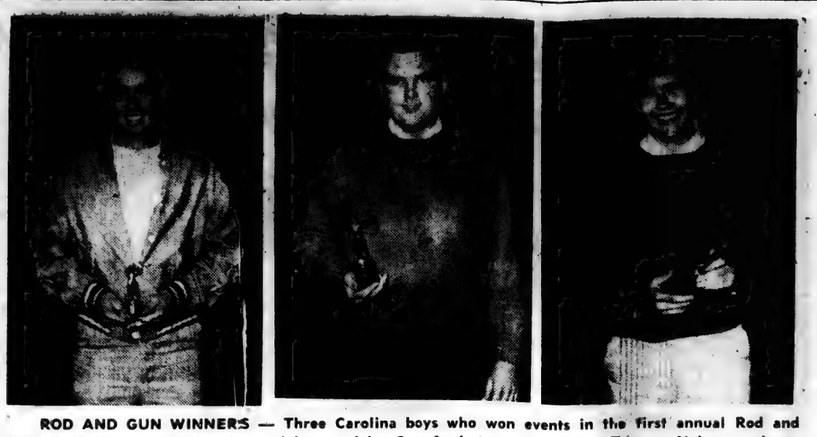
Stowe's Perfect 7-0 Record Spoiled

Clemson's Harold Stowe, ace of the pitching staff with a 7-1 season mark, said in an interview with the Greensboro Daily News last week, "Of all teams, why Carolina-". He was referring to the fact that the Heels inflicted his first loss of the year last Friday in Chapel Hill and spoiled his perfect 7-0 record. Stowe, a product of Gastonia, stated that the reason for the success of his teammates, who finished last season with a paltry 8-10 record, is the coaching of Bill Wilhelm, acquired this winter. Wilhelm was Walt Rabb's assistant here at Carolina last year and played Carolina League ball with the Greensboro Patriots last summer.

Only 4 Runs For Heels — But Enough

By way of oddities—Carolina scored only four runs in its two games last week, but it proved to be enough. The Tar Heels beat Clemson 2-0 and South Carolina 2-1. It is interesting to note that pitchers Ben Harding and Wayne Young gave up a grand total of 0 earned runs last week. Young has a phenomenal 0.59 earned run average, and Harding has racked up five wins without a loss.

Tar Babies Looking Good



Outlook—The frosh baseball team has really been looking good and should furnish plenty of help to the varsity nine next year. The Tar Babies have compiled an 9-1 record, and have beaten such teams as Duke and State. Standouts include Ferg Norton, 2b; Carroll Bolick, catcher; Dee Frady, lf; Tommy Camp, 3b; and pitchers Jerry McNeil, Wayne Allen, and Bob Deaton to name a few.

Raugh Now With Augusta

Whereabouts—one of Carolina's all time great baseball players, pitcher Jim Raugh, is now with Augusta. Daugh is in the Detroit Tiger organization, and was previously scheduled to play with Durham of the Carolina League but made the jump sucessfully in in spring training.

Emerson Stadium Packed

A pleasant sight which we at first mistook for a mirage last week was Emerson Stadium packed with nearly 4,000 fans for the Clemson game. It could be that the pleasant weather is pulling them out of the dorms, but we'ed like to think that maybe the Carolina fans are waking up to the fact that they have quite a baseball team.

Carolina Meets State Today At 3:30 In Conference Contest

Riding on the crest of a seven-game winning streak the Tar Heels of Carolina today journey to the state capital to battle the State College Wolfpack in an Atlantic Coast Conference contest.

Carolina is sitting on top of the standings today with a 5-1 conference slate, compared to runner-up Clemson's 8-2. Last Saturday, while Carolina was beating South Carolina 2-0, Wake Forest upset front-running Clemson to put the Tar Heels in first place for the time this year.

Ben Harding led the Tar Heels to the victory over South Carolina as he pitched a 7-hit shutout over the Birds, never allowing an extra base blow. Roger Honneycutt slammed a 400 foot home run to lead Carolina batters for the day, and Al Pons got his 18th run batted in of the season.

The first five men in the Carolina line-up are all hitting over .285 going into today's game. Gerald Griffin leads with a .343 average, folowed by Carson Oldham at .328, Al Pons at .300 Vaughn Bryson with a .286, and John Burgwyn with a .286.

State's Dick Hunter is burning up the league with a blazing .422 average, and his outfield teammate Russ Casteen is sailing along at a .360 clip. The Pack has two of the better pitchers in the league in Dan Casteen and Joe Jones. Jones will probably be on the mound for the Wolfpack today, since it was he who shutout the Heels on a one-hitter in the finals of the Dixie Classic.

Carolina counters with two equally top-notch pitchers, Wayne Young and Ben Harding. Harding leads the team with a perfect 5-0 retord. Young, who received credit for the win over Clemson as he struck out eight batters, has a miraculous 0.59 earned run average to go with a 3-2 record and a 15 strikeout performance against the Duke Blue Devils earlier in the season. Young is the probable starter for Carolina today.

Gametime is 3:30 and WCHL will broadcast the game from the State College campus in Raleigh at 3:20.

Fencers Beat VMI By 19-8

The UNC fencers returned a previous meet here and traveled to Lexington, Va. last Saturady where they defeated the VMI swordsmen by a total bout score of 19-8 for the meet. Scoring impressive wins in Sabre (8-1) and Foil (7-2), the Tar Heels were bested in Epee by a single bout (5-4). The Tar Heels were without the services of their No. 1 epee man, Bob Clay, and their No 2 man, Carroll Raver. In the foil division Carolina's Bill Orr and Dave Evans both won three out of three, taking victories over VMI's foilsmen. Hill, Schaaf and Mahoney. Lopez of UNC scored his single victory in foil over Hirsch of VMI and lost to Mahoney and Hill for the 7-2 foil total.

In sabre, both Mudd and Aldridge handed defeats to all three of VMI's sabremen, Caldwell, Garrison and Marlowe. Dave Matthews of UNC defeated two out of three losing only to Caldwell of VMI to give Carolina the victory in sabre by an overwhelming 8-1 margin.

Despite the lack of their top two epeeists, UNC managed to score four victories over their opponents in that weapon with Bill Orr doubling in both foil and epee and winning two out of three in the latter, losing only to Fox and defeating Smith and Winiker, all of VMI. Carolina's other two victories in duelling sword were collected by Mudd (doubling in sabre & epee) and Simpson who each took one of three at the expense of VMI's Smith and Fox respectively. None of the VMI fencers were able to duplicate the feat of four of Carolina's men by winning three out of three, but in epee, Fox and Winiker of VMI did win two out of three with Smith's single victory over UNC's Simpson totaling five bouts to UNC's four in epee.

The annual individual intramurals championships will begin this Friday evening in Graham Memorial with the foil individual competition and will be followed one week later on Friday, May 9th by the individuals in sabre and concluded the following week, also Friday (the 16th), with the duelling sword championship.

Frosh Win 7-0

The Carolina Tar Babies upped their season record to 9-1 Saturday night as they beat Wilmington Junior College 7-0.

Wayne Allen pitched a five -hit shutout for the freshmen and also got 3 hits in five trips, including a double. Ferg Norton got 2 for 4. The Tar Babies meet State's Wolflets here today at 3:30. They previously beat State in a game at Raleigh.

Baseball Attendance Up

NEW YORK (AP)—The Los Angeles Dodgers are running ahead of the all-time record attendance pace while spearheading a National League increase of more than 50 per cent over last season.

The Dodgers have hauled in 377,601 customers in nine appearances in the Los Angeles Coliseum. When the Cleveland Indians set the big league record of 2,620,627 in their pennant-winning 1948 season they had 207,844 after nine home games.

The Milwaukee Braves, who established the National League mark of 2,215,404 paid admissions last season, drew 196,748 in their first nine games in County Stadium in 1957.

The Dodgers had a gate total of 169,620 in nine Ebetts Field games a year ago. The capacity in the Brooklyn park is 32,111 and in the Coliseum it is about 94,000.

The San Francisco Giants also show a healthy increase. Although the capacity in Seals Stadium is less than half that of the Polo Grounds 23,448 to 62,000, the Giants have played before 169,728 home fans. In as many showings in New York in 1957 only 68,695 turned out.

In addition to the Giants and Dodgers only the Chicago Cubs and St. Louis Cardinals are moving in front of last season's attendance figures. Milwaukee is 6,000 behind. Philadelphia and Cincinnati trail by 25,000 and Pittsburgh by 22,000.

Rod And Gun Meet Set

The second annual Big Four Rod and Gun Field Meet will be held Wednesday afternoon at the Durham Wildlife Club. The UNC Intrumaural Department, with the aid of the Durham Wildlife Club is sponsoring the event to encourage the other Big Four schools to begin participating in rod and gun activities.

This year the meet will feature four events: target shooting, archery, trap shooting, and bait casting. Trophies, provided by the State Intramural Department, will be given to the individual winners of each event.

Carolina and State Tie

In last year's meet Carolina and State tied for first place in the team standings. This years Tar Heel team group will be led by John Crawford, Tommy Nelms and Gay Cowan all of whom won events in the first meet. State is expected to enter a strong team again this year along with Wake Forest.

All students except those on the R.O.T.C. rifle teams are eligible to participate. Any number of students from each school may enter with only the highest score in each event counting toward the team score. Due to limited time, however, contestants will be permitted to enter only one event.

Any interested students should call the intramural office (9424) to secure further information. Transportation to the meet will be provided.

The noted American Poet, e. e. cummings (sic) will give a reading of his poetry in the Women's College Auditorium at Duke University at 8:15, Thursday evening. Tickets will be sold at the door for $1.00. University students and the general public are invited to attend.

Honor Council Needs People For Summer

"We need to have seven men and seven women serve on the two Honor Councils for the summer session," commented Student Body President Don Furtado yesterday.

"We are urging anyone planning to be here over the summer to come by the Student Government Office and apply immediately for these important jobs. It is not necessary to have had previous Honor Council experience. A sincere desire to assist in the operation of this all important phase of our student life is the primary requirement."

Application blanks may be picked up any afternoon and filled out on the spot. It is hoped that a large group of people will come by the Student Government office and apply, so that a wide degree of selection can be used.

At the same time applicants apply for this, they may also fill out a blank for a position in next year's student government to serve on some vital committees. These include many openings, and Furtado has called for a large turnout to fill these vacancies.

Furtado also announced that applications may be made for the seven member executive committee which takes the place of the Student Legislature during the summer.

'No Squares Allowed' Features Leading Campus Personalities

By MARY MOORE MASON

The slender dark haired boy sat on the edge of the stage in Memorial Hall, strumming a guitar and singing softly a ballad called "In My Quiet Way." Suddenly an intimate ball of vivaciousness and energy burst onto the stage in the form of a dimpled, brown haired girl.

"Hi, Hoke!" she yelled, waving to the boy and then to the gang of mobsters who sat in the audience.

"Well hello, Hannah," he said, nodding to the Siamese girl and the ape that followed her out on the stage.

Hoke Simpson and Hannah Kirby are the leads in this year's Sound and Fury production, "No Squares Allowed."

Hoke, a sophomore from Larchmont, N.Y., has already gained fame not only on the campus but around the country through his recording of "Number One", a calypso song about the unbeaten basketball team and "Gigi", a romantic ballad. Since he has been at UNC he has been in the Cavalcade of Talent and has entertained at numerous parties and functions.

In "No Squares Allowed" Hoke portrays an earnest, quiet young progessive jazz musician who turns out to be a surprise to Hannah who portrays a charming young dilettante who gets mixed up with the underworld.

Since coming to Carolina, Hannah has been the originator and the director of the Circle Nine, a singing group of coeds who appeared in the Cavalcade of Talent. She was also director of the Valkyries Skit which her sorority presented.

The lively musical, which will weave itself around the exploits of big city musicians, politicians, and gangsters will be given this Friday and Saturday nights in Memorial Hall.

It will also feature such attractions as a talking ape, a dancer from Siam, and a 5'9" blond female bodyguard with a bra holster.

Law Group Initiates 16

Phi Alpha Delta law fraternity held a banquet honoring its 16 new members at the American Legion Hut last Friday night.

Al Cleveland, new Justice of the Ruffin Chapter Justice of the Twelfth District of Phi Alpha Delta, presided over the banquet.

The pledges initiated that afternoon and honored at the banquet were James Clark, Carl Churchill, Ted Jones, Bill Bush, George Doughton, James Holshouser, Dwight Crandford and Thomas Spence.

Others include Robert Lindsay, James Fasul, Duane Johnson,

Al Goldsmith Appointed New Interim Symposium Chairman

Al Goldsmith, junior history major from Lincolnton, has been appointed new interim chairman of the Carolina Symposium.

He is a past treasurer of the Symposium, UP Floorleader of the Student Legisture, Speaker Pro Tempore of the Student Legislature and Vice Chairman of the University Party.

He has been on the Orientation Committee, The Daily Tar Heel staff, a member of the Chi Phi fraternity and a candidate for the Student Body Presidency in the recent spring elections.

His membership is numbered in the Order of the Grail, Phi Eta Sigma and Phi Apha Theta, history fraternity. Next month he will be inducted into Phi Beta Kappa.

Goldsmith issued the following statement to The Daily Tar Heel after his selection yesterday: "I am greatly honored to have been selected for this position. To follow in the shoes of such an outstanding chairman as Sonny Hallford . . . is quite a task.

"An Interim Committee of both students and faculty members will be set up within the next few days I would like to personally urge all interested students and faculty members to apply for membership on the Interim Committee be contacting me at the Symposuim Office in Graham Memorial or at the Chi Phi House."

Sonny Hallford, chairman of the 1958 Symposium, also commented on the selection of Goldsmith to the group's highest position. He said, "On behalf of the Executive Committee of the Carolina Symposium on Public Affairs, I am happy to announce the selection of Al Goldsmith as Chairman of the Interim Committee.

"With his experience and understanding of the Symposium, I am confident that he will achieve many accomplishments during the interim period as preparations are made for 1960. I extend the best of luck to him."

Carolina Offers Sophs Advanced Fall Courses

Advanced sections of several sophomore courses will be offered next fall, Dean Cecil S. Johnson of the General College announced yesterday. These sections are open to second-year students with an overall "B" average or consent of the department concerned. Qualified freshmen may register for them at spring pre-registration, which begins Monday for General College students.

In these advanced section students of proven ability will spend more time on the meeting and implications of the material than in the regular sections. The aim will be to probe the material in greater depth, to consider its relationship to that of other fields, and to examine it critcially, using insights from recent research wherever possible. In order to encourage discussion the sections will be kept small, and instructors will be chosen for scholarly competence and skill in small-group work.

This new sophomore venture is an extension of the Program for Superior Freshmen instituted four years ago at Chapel Hill and is made possible by a $100,000 grant from the Carnegie Corporation.

"In opening these advanced second-year sections for honor-roll students we have enabled persons of demonstrated capacity to share in work appropriate to their abilities," explained Dean Johnson. "There are at least 120 students in the present freshman class who are abe to work successfully at a advanced level. They have shown it. Anyone who earns a 'B' average in his first year has the attributes of what we call a superior student."

Plans for the advanced sections have been co-ordinated by a faculty committee working directly with the departments involved. As a point of policy the departments have agreed to grade these sections by general sophomore standards rather than "curving" the distribution within each class or marking the students against one another. The purposes of this is to insure, as far as possible, that no participant receives a lower grade than the same performance would have brought him in a regular sections.

The departments have also agreed to concentrate upon a more mature and sophisticated presentation of the material rather than to broaden

Residents Tell Views On Sewage Problem

By DAVIS YOUNG and KEN FRIEDMAN

(This is the first of three articles that will present statements from various people connected with the sewage problem in the Stinson St.-Isley St.-N. Columbia St. area.)

Today statements are being run from those people who are living in the neighborhood that has been faced with this trying problem for so long.

Names are not being used for reasons that will become obvious as you read through some of the material that we have gathered from these people. Instead, we will refer to the remarks made by these people as Statement A and Statement B etc.

All of these statements are running with the permission of those involved. Each of them has been signed by one of the two persons doing the research for this article and by the person presenting the statement.

Two copies of these signed statements are in the possession of The Daily Tar Heel and a third has been given to the other signer. These steps have been taken as a protective measure for both the paper and the individuals involved.

SIGNED STATEMENT A

The sewage problem has existed in our neighborhood for as long as I have been here.

We haven't been able to pin down who owns the pump. A man by the name of D. P. Henry has the town charter for it, but he doesn't look after it and says it isn't his responsibility.

We first rented from a man named Dale. He always co-operated with us. He would even come in the middle of the night. A local realtor by the name of Kutz (Kutz Realty Co. of 1408 E. Franklin St.) then took over and eventually gave us some co-operation.

Every time the pump broke, we were the first to have trouble. We have also been discomforted by overflowing of our bathroom.

When the pump would be out of order, they would dump the open sewage into the vacant lot next door. It smelled terrible and was creating a most unpleasant atmosphere.

We have over 40 children in the

UNC Has Never Had Enough Union Space

By AL RESCH

(The following is the first of a series of articles pointing out the need for a new student union on the UNC campus.

Some of the questions to be considered are why Carolina needs a new union, in what ways would the building of the new student union help the individual student and how the new union would help or improvet he general atmosphere on the Carolina campus.

A Daily Tar Heel editorial of 1952 by a member who proposed a new union at that time pointed out, "Greatly increased enrollment and academic specialization during recent years have contributed to a fragmentation of student interests and a feeling of campus disunity. These conditions, if substantial unity and common purpose are to be regained and preserved, require that a great unifying force be applied. It is our belief that the best possible answer to this need is a student union building, physically adequate, centrally located, and sufficiently broad in scope of operation."

The University was founded in 1789 and since that date it has constantly grown until it now has over 6,500 students living on the campus.

It was not until 1924 that actual work was begun on a student union, a "home away from home" or the "campus living room" as it has often been called. The build-

UNDER CLOUDY SKIES

Derby Runs Smoothly - On Mule-Back

By WYNDHAM HEWITT

Yesterday afternoon under partly cloudy skies Kenan Stadium played host to the 12th annual Sigma Chi Derby.

It was a field day for coeds. The highlight of the festivities was the winning of the Miss Modern Venus contest by Gail Willingham.

The contest was judged by Frank McGuire, UNC basketball coach, Joe Augustine, Miss Joanne Aldridge, of the UNC English Department and Luann Thornton from the Dean of Women's office. Runner ups of the beauty titled were Ruth Huffman and Martha Fortune.

Things were kept running smoothly by Buddy Payne, presiding steward, and his two co-workers Dennis McCoy and Jerry Long.

The Derby had five races. Among these were, Hit the Geek contest, Race to the Flesh and sorority skits. The over all winner of the races was the Alpha Delta Pi sorority. The runner ups were Kappa Delta in second place and Tri Delta in third place.

An amazing amount of accuracy was seen by coeds in the Hit the Geek contest. They couldn't miss with a piece of chocolate pie in their hands.

Evidently they had been missing out before. In the skit contest three of the sororities knocked the Carolina Gentlemen for dating imports.

The Kappa Delta sorority won the skit contest with their production of Wild Flowers. This was a take-off on Alice in Wonderland.

Pi Beta Phi won the prize for best costume in the skit event. They put on a production of MacBeth.

As the coeds lined up for the secret event an air of mystery and puzzlement was seen on most faces. At one end of the stadium were eight donkeys lined up side by side. At the other end of the field were coeds lined up side by side.

All the girls had to do was run down the field and mount a donkey and ride him back. But for some reason the donkeys didn't want to move.

With the help of their trainers, who pushed, prodded, pulled and used every other available means. Betsy Lyon nosed her filly across the finish line first with Mariana Miller running a close second.

Parking Problem

There has always been a complaint among the students about a lack of parking facilities offered at the University.

Parking facilities or the lack thereof has been a concern of University officials for a long time, and caused within the last two years, freshmen and sophomores without C averages to be deprived of the privilege of having a car in Chapel Hill.

There probably is not a person on the campus who does not want to see this car privilege restored to these students, because most feel that discrimination by class for no other reason, except that it is perhaps the easiest way to draw a line.

However, there must be a line drawn so long as there is no space for cars to be parked, and congestion is the order of the day.

The University recently opened a parking lot near the hospital and bell tower, which was designed to take up some of the overflow of student vehicles. If this experiment was successful, it might lead to future experiments of the same nature and perhaps to a return of car privileges for all students.

Yet, at the present time, the new parking lot is not being used. Students find it inconvenient to walk a hundred extra yards, and would rather cause congestion in the other areas of campus.

The University campus is growing. It is expanding in a direction that will put this new parking lot near the center of campus. However, if students do not make use of the lot it will be taken over by medical school personnel, and the opportunity to expand car privileges and provide for more space of this type for student vehicles will be lost.

Students, who usually don't, must take the initiative in order to preserve the student vehicle privileges on this campus as well as the ability to extend those privileges to other students.

The Grass Again

A crop of new fences have appeared on the UNC campus. They have surrounded every available area of grass space, and have provided a topic of comment for several days.

One student reflected that these fences would definitely benefit the track team, in that they would provide some excellent high jumpers in the coming year.

Another student pointed out that these fences would indeed be effective in that the student body was generally too lazy to crawl under or climb over them.

Another commented that they made as unsightly a spectacle as the parched and trampled grass.

Perhaps the most significant thing about the new fences is that they serve as a reminder for students who are careless and irresponsible, that they cannot remain that way always. Sometime and somewhere their irresponsibility is going to catch up with them, and somebody is going to build a protective wall.

Instead of cherishing the natural beauty of the Chapel Hill campus, students have made it their business through carelessness to mar that beauty. Unsightly fences are the result.

Spring

Spring is official or at least the U. S. government has given sanction to it.

A few days ago the Post Office opened its center doors, thus heralding the great event.

With a sigh of relief, students on the campus can toss away their long red woolen underwear, and breathe freely, for according to Washington at least, there won't be any cold spells for quite awhile.

The Daily Tar Heel

The official student publication of the Publication Board of the University of North Carolina, where it is published daily except Monday and examination and vacation periods and summer terms. Entered as second class matter in the post office in Chapel Hill, N. C., under the Act of March 8, 1870. Subscription rates: mailed, $4 per year, $2.50 a semester; delivered, $6 a year, $3.50 a semester.

A NOTE ON THE 'BEAT GENERATION'

We seem to be having some trouble on this page with the existence or non-existence of a reported phenomenon known as the Beat Generation. The opinion from this precinct is that the Beat Generation exists; a colleague across the page insists that it does not exist, but that he has an answer for it anyway.

The fact is that the Beat Generation exists, whether we like it or not. It certainly exists in those who claim it, just as Christianity exists in its followers.

The "charter members" of the Beat Generation, as well as the followers of Christianity, hold certain opinions as to the condition of mankind.

If the Beat Generation is anywhere in error, it is not in its claim to existence, but rather in its apparent claim to originality.

The first member of the Beat Generation was Eve; Adam, the first conformist, joined up, and since then the only catholic religion has been the religion of the 'beat.'

This theory is, of course, not subject to objective proof; no such broad social theory is. It is based on the assumption that the critical fact of human existence is Man's emergence from nature, his expulsion from the Paradisal womb.

The validity of the Beat Generation's social theory is best demonstrated by mankind's timeless struggle to regain the Unity which he lost socially through his divorce from the natural conditon, and individually through his very birth. In reference to this philosophical synthesis, history becomes meaningful—perhaps more meaningful than it is in any other theoretical context.

The currently popular allegation made against the Beat Generation is that it espouses a religion of destructiveness, negation, and despair. This is not true. The admitted members of the generation—those who are conscious of the human predicament—are searching in various directions for both the definition of that predicament and an escape from it in terms of emergent Man.

Great artists, from the poets of Genesis and Job through Shakespeare, Eliot and Hemingway, have given imaginative expression to the "beat" predicament; and the effect that these artists and others have had on human thought attests to the validity of their artistic vision.

It is the compulsive attempt of the great and unaware mass of humanity to escape the human predicament and to deny its implications which results in most of the ills to which man is the weary heir.

This, in brief, is the rationale of the Beat Generation.

The generation is nothing new; in fact, it is as old as Man himself. The only recent development is the self-consciousness of the present members, and this self-consciousness is only to be expected in a world which has become increasingly introspective. The Beat Generation is essentially Christianity with a new twist: the desired aim is identical; but the current activity is in search of a self-contained rationale for existence, while conventional Christianity postulates the existence of a reason and will outside of and superior to the natural world.

Anything Goes

Peter B. Young

Woodrow Wilson Herman, still swinging though slightly paunchy, wailed into Chapel Hill Saturday afternoon for a concert program at Memorial Hall that "gassed" approximately 1200 fans.

According to Herman, this new band is "an extension of the Third Herd, and there'll never be a Fourth because 'Third Herd' sounds so good."

The band, sparked by bald Bill Harris, sounded quite good too, considering that the group has not yet had time to really jell. The major weakness would seem to be a lack of exciting soloists to go along with the aforementioned Harris who came on like gangbusters with "Bijou" and "Gloomy Sunday."

Harris, incidentally, lost his hair in a typical barber shop tragedy. He told his barber to "get it as short as you can, man," and then went to sleep. When Big Bill awoke, he discovered to his horror that the barber had taken him at his word.

With the exception of Harris, this is a very young band. Most of the men could disappear into the UNC student body without causing a ripple. A good example here is the second trombone, 20-year old Larry Mahouberac, who was a student at Louisiana State University until a year ago when he "bugged out" for the big time.

As Herman, a hard-headed businessman, puts it: "I don't care whether a cat is 12 years old or 112 years old, so long as he blows."

Herman's business orientation also comes out strongly in his discussion of the narcotics problem in the jazz world. "It's gotten much better in the last five years, but there was a time back in 1947 and 1948 when many of the best guys in the business had an illness." Illness, of course, is Herman's polite euphemism for addiction.

And why has the situation improved? "Well, the kids coming up now, kids like I got in this band, have seen their idols destroyed by narcotics, and they've learned that this is a very bad kick. Secondly, the leaders gradually weeded the junkies out. There wasn't anything formal like a blacklist, but word gets out that you simply can't afford to hire a guy with an illness." Musicians with an "illness" bring raids by Federal officers which are very bad for business.

And what has happened to the jazz men with illnesses? "Most of them just sort of disappeared like."

And did the powerful musicians' union make any kind of an effort to rehabilitate the talented musicians who were "weeded out" by this occupational hazard? "No, man," said Herman, whose face registered a mixture of pain, embarrassment and distress.

The concert program, actually more suitable for a stage show at a movie theater, featured old Herman flag-wavers such as "Apple Honey" and "Four Brothers," along with new flag-wavers such as "The Preacher" and "Like Some Blues." In a stroke of pure theatrical genius, the Herd concluded the concert by making a flag-waver out of "Dixie."

Missing from the program were the real concert pieces of the band: "Summer Sequence" and "Lady McGowan's Dream" by Ralph Burns; and "Ebony Concerto" by Igor Stravinsky.

The Al Belletto sexette offered the audience a good sampling of exciting informal jazz. Jerri Winters, who sang with the sextette, proved to be an almost perfect copy of Sarah Vaughn, thereby sparking one aficionado to observe: "Man, she's something of an original. All the other chicks are copying June Christy."

This is not yet a great band. In no sense of the word does it rank with the first Herd that starred men like Flip Phillips, Davey Tough, Sonny Berman and Red Norvo. Nor does it rank with the second Herd that front-lined Stan Getz, Zoot Sims, Red Rodney and Shorty Rogers. But this "extension of the Third Herd" is a good band with the potential to explode into greatness. Right now, it needs better soloists and time. Several more months on the road will make a lot of difference.

"Well, Men, What'll We Refrain From Doing Now?"

Letter: Don't Walk On Grass

Editor:

If I were asked to name the basic sources of the greatness of this University, one of the first I would mention would be the extent to which the University has always trusted and expected its students and faculty to control themselves, rather than be controlled by external curbs and authorities. It has earnestly tried to leave it, just as far as possible, to each of us (1) to decide how and in what way we will conduct ourselves, and (2) to implement our decisions as we should, and as we must, if we are to have the kind of campus society we can be unapologetically proud of.

Few things fill me with more pride than when I see students responding to this opportunity. The extent to which they adhere to the honor system, and the way in which they take and keep their places in line at Lenoir Hall and at other eating places are excellent examples of students and faculty controlling themselves as maturing and mature individuals. (There is some "chiseling" on the part of a few, but the percentage is exceedingly small.) In all such conduct, one can really see democracy in action. For the basic reason for believing in anything like democracy as a possible way of living together is the daring assumption that individuals can and will control themselves, if only they will make up their minds to do so. I wish that this fact could become more deeply ingrained in our thinking and purposes.

There is, however, one area of campus life where we seem not to have made even a beginning in self-control and self-government. I refer to the inexcusable and shameless way in which we wantonly, even if thoughtlessly, cut corners and make paths any and everywhere on the campus for no better reason than to "save" five or six steps. Are we really that anemic? The time saved could not possibly amount to more than five or ten seconds. I am never more chagrined than when I see such lack of self-discipline and self-control in our actions. These paths are so firmly packed that every foot of them must be dug up and replanted, if grass is to grow where they are. And for the University to have to go to the needless expense, which must be considerable, of putting up posts, chains and wires as reminders (not as obstructions) to use only the designated walks to get from place to place on the campus is a crying witness to our failure to control and govern ourselves. And to see, as I have, numbers of students exhibit no more character and self-control than to step over or go under these simple reminders put up by the University is humiliating and discouraging indeed.

What galls me even more is the fact that this does not have to be. No one can convince me that our students could not correct this overnight, if only they made up their minds to do so. And if they once stopped to realize what such a decision on their own initiative would mean to them in terms of self-discipline and to the University in terms of money, as well as appearance, I am naive enough to believe not only that they could, but also that they may, even yet take it upon themselves to force themselves to use only the numerous designated walks to get from place to place on the campus. If the students as a whole will do this, I would not be surprised if the University would not be willing, provided the Budget Bureau would allow it, to turn over for student purposes a good part of the money the students would thus save the University. I suspect the amount saved over a year's period would be considerable.

But regardless of any money saved or received, I for one am willing to continue to insist on using only the regularly provided walks to get from place to place on the campus. Yes, I know that is a limitation on my freedom. But I remember also that both nature and our form of government has conferred on me also the freedom and the inestimable privilege, as well as responsibility, of governing and controlling myself. And since the best life, campus appearance, or anything else is achieved neither by the single avenue of expression nor by that of repression but by the proper use of both, I have no hesitation in choosing the freedom to check and restrain myself wherever such is clearly better for all concerned.

Does any one want to join me in this, without fuss or fanfare? The effort required is not great; the cost is only a few steps; and the rewards are greater than you may think.

Postscript

Jonathan Yardley

I fear that I must spend one more column on the subject of the Beat Generation. To my way of thinking this tag is proving itself an unpleasant stigma to our generation. I am trying to persuade the readers of this column that they are being unjustly accused, and hope that I may hear some reaction from some members of the student body besides my fellow columnist who believes that the tag is justified. While I appreciate his position, I feel that this argument should be fought by more than two.

The statement which I wish to question today is the following: "As soon as 'the world is too much with us,' we are 'beat': at the moment when a human being becomes conscious of the disparity between the real and the ideal he is 'beat'; and when this consciousness becomes as heightened and universal as it is rapidly becoming . . . "we are all a Beat Generation."

This statement implies a confusion between the terms "beat" and "realistic." Let it be said more accurately that when "the world is too much with us" we have at last realized this "disparity between the real and the ideal." It is an awakening to the truth, rather than a resignation and depression implied by the word "beat."

To be realistic is not to be discouraged. One becomes aware of this rather alarming difference between what he had always assumed to be the great ultimate truth and the actual scheme of things at a number of times during his life. The first period comes when the child realizes that the world does not revolve around him; the second comes with the painful growth into adolescence; the third with the transition from adolescence to young manhood; the fourth and most crucial period comes as the young man steps from the sheltered world of college into the big, wide, and somewhat terrifying world of manhood.

Very few people become alarmingly discouraged at the climax of any of these periods of transition. Most of us, a little surprised and off-balance, take the ills of the world and society with a grain of salt and go on about living our lives.

The question seems to be whether or not people are becoming more discouraged by the awakening to reality than they used to, for today people are being accused of being "beaten" by phenomena which formerly only momentarily distracted them.

It seems to me that we are not a bit more discouraged by these events now than generations were before us; it's just that we are, apparently, hopelessly self-pitying. We have been forced into the most unpleasant situation any generation of the history of the world has ever seen. It is not merely a case of faction, or a society, or a nation being destroyed—the fate of the world is going to be in our hands.

A great many people live on this earth, and the thought that the life of even one may depend on the hands of any given individual is a frightening one. The way to beat this problem of responsibility, however, is not to adopt a defeatist attitude, which the mythical Beat Generation has done.

If it is true that our generation is "beat," something must be done to alleviate the situation, or we shall never know success. What we need is strength, not weakness.

Editor:

I am an undergraduate student. I have time to study, time to work, time to play, and time to read. Many of my fellow students have time to do these things, but when it comes to reading, we like to shy away from our lessons. Many times we have a vague but intense desire to read a good book. We need to browse through the library in order to choose the proper book for the moment. But due to a certain outmoded custom at Carolina, when we have that intense but vague desire to read, we are restricted to the reading rooms that contain only class related material. In short, we have undue restrictions against browsing in the library.

I wonder if library restrictions on browsing are conducive to mass reading. They certainly do not contribute to mass reading outside the lesson's sphere. Ample precedent has been set by book stores operating for profit and at least two progressive universities to suggest that unrestricted browsing promotes the desire to read.

Why does the Intimate Book Shop here in Chapel Hill advertise for people to come in and browse even if they have no money? The book store owner knows that readers like to browse. A person does not always know exactly what he wants to read. He must look at books first and maybe read the introduction and a few passages from the book. The Intimate Book Shop certainly doesn't say, "If you don't know exactly what you what, don't come here; and above all, don't browse among our shelves: you might get the books out of order."

It seems as if our university would have our library books where all of us could browse through them. Certainly we would read more books if this were the case. However, this is not the case. Out of a total of approximately nine-hundred thousand books in our library, only three-hundred thousand (and this includes encyclopedias, dictionaries, and other purely reference books) are on the open shelves to be browsed through.

North Carolina citizens can truthfully boast," We have nine hundred thousand books in our library at Chapel Hill!" What they don't know or else do not care about is that six-hundred thousand of these books are not easily assessable to the overwhelming majority of us unless we know the title of the book. These books are in a room called the stack room. There is an outstanding sign on the door that reads, "Stack Permit Holders Only."

Who is allowed a stack permit? The privileged few are the graduate students and those few undergraduates who are candidates for honors and must write a major research theme during their junior and senior year.

Why is everyone not allowed inside the stack-room: There are no real reasons, but there are a few flimsy excuses such as: (1) We can't trust the undergraduates to put the books back into the proper places. This would cause inconveniences for the librarian, you know. (2) The graduates are apt to be more honest than undergraduates. If we let the undergraduates in there, more books would disappear. (3) The undergraduates would make so much noise, the graduates could hardly study in there. (4) It has just gotten to be the custom here to have the stacks restricted.

Let us examine the flimsy excuses just mentioned.

Perhaps a few more books would get misplaced on the shelves if every student were allowed in the stack room. However, if only 10 per cent of the students at Carolina read one extra book per semester because of the stack room freedom, that would be six hundred more books read per semester than are now being read. It would be worth the librarian's extra work to spread this much more knowledge. If the stack room were selling books they would want people to browse through the shelves. Just as more people will buy books if they can see the book first, students would check out more books to read if we could pick up and examine the book first.

Can we undergraduates not be trusted in the stack room? If we cannot be trusted to check out a book before we leave the library with it, the honor system means nothing. If the administrators of the University do not have enough faith in our honor to assume we will check out a book before we take it from the library, how can we, the students who are here to be educated by them, have faith in the honor system?

Perhaps we would make more noise. Certainly the noise of many individuals turning a page could produce a large volume of sound. But surely graduate students are not restricted to studying in the stack room. Even though graduate students necessarily use the stacks more for research than we do, six hundred thousand books should not be practically reserved for them. It is perhaps possible that the graduates could suffer a minor inconvenience if the overwhelming majority of the student body were benefited by it.

At least two progressive universities have realized the need for undergraduates to browse through the book stacks. For several years the University of Virginia, which is approximately the size of Carolina with a comparable library, has allowed all of its students to browse through the book stacks. Princeton University has about forty-eight miles of book stacks through which all students can browse.

We undergraduates are not iconoclastic, but we do believe that expediency should change a custom if the custom is outmoded. We are against censorship of all kinds. We like to browse in a library in order to pick out books that do not necessarily pertain to our lessons. We are proud of our honor system and believe it will work in the library just as it has elsewhere. Having freedom of the book stacks would cause an increase in the total amount of reading and contribute toward making us an educated student body—not merely a degree seeking study body. In an otherwise progressive institution, it is painful to our pride that our university did not lead the way in allowing all students freedom of the book stacks. It will be a disgrace not to follow the commendable lead of other progressive institutions especially after they have shown that it can be practically done.

neighborhood who have been exposed to this condition .

They dumped so much sewage one day that I had to call the City Manager, who sent the Chief of Police out to get the men responsible for the broken pump. He rounded up three local men by the name of Dale, Kutz and Roberts, as well as others.

Some of the houses in this neighborhood have been condemned. However, sewage was dumped in the lot next to my house even after this condemnation. The Health Officer was very lenient and kept extending the time limits for the fixing of our problem.

Only the City Manager has given us the co-operation that we deserve.

At least 11 houses were without any sewage disposal the last time that the pump broke.

A number of the residents of this neighborhood have left because of this problem. Of my six closest neighbors in October, only three of them are here now. One of these houses has had two tenants besides the original one since October.

SIGNED STATEMENT B

We are not satisfied with the sewage conditions in this neighborhood at the present time.

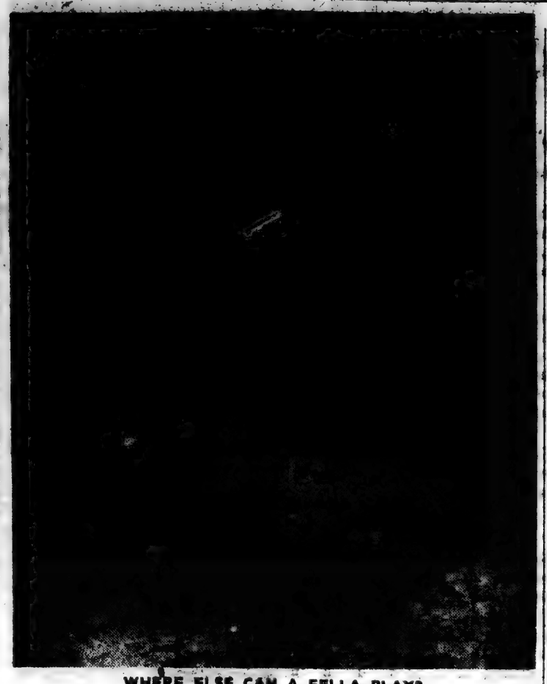
The group putting in the sewers appears to have done the job on a "shoestring," which has resulted in sloppy and cheap workmanship.

In our next door neighbor's yard there was a hole from 8-10 feet deep. It was there for at least two weeks and was neither lighted nor roped off.

We have called the Public Health Office in the past and we have never been reached by them in response to these calls.

Some of the yards of our neighbors are swampy and run off into ours.

We feel that the contractor is mostly at fault, but also have to put some of the "blame" for the sanitation conditions of this area on the realtors and local government officials.



However, we would like to emphasize that our landlord, Mr. Walker, (Allen Walker of Hillsboro) has been most co-operative at all times and has done his best to correct this situation.

We are paying $70 per month for an unfurnished house. We also have to cover the cost of utilities. Mr. Walker was kind enough to paint the interior and fix up the house before we moved in.

We did not know of the sewage conditions in this area before we moved. It has gotten progressively worse.

We have one small child and must maintain constant vigilance to prevent him from playing in the open sewage.

We would recommend Mr. Walker, but no other realtor controlling property in this area.

Willie Mangum Medal Contest Tonight At 8

Carl A. Barrington, Pat Adams, and Edmund L. Meekins will compete for the annual Willie P. Mangum Medal at tonight 8 o'clock, in Di Hall.

The medal, the University's oldest award, is presented each year by the Dialectic Senate and the Philanthropic Literary Society in recognition of fine oratory.

Barrington's topic will be "I Speak for Democracy." Adams will speak on "How to Become B.M.O.C. OR 13 Easy Steps Toward Failure," and Meekins on "The Effects of McCarthyism in America."

Judges for the event will be Prof. C. O. Cathey of the history dept., Prof. C. H. Holman of the English dept., and Sam H. Magill, director of student activities.

The Mangum Medal was established in 1878 by Misses Martin Person and Mary Mangum of Orange County in memory of their father, Willie P. Mangum, a member of the University class of 1815.

the coverage or increase the quantity of work required, recognizing that superior students need less classroom drill on fundamentals and more exploratory and analytical consideration of the subject-matter.

The advanced section are listed with the suffix "A" in the printed class scheduled for 1958-59. A qualified sophomore may take as many as five of these sections, depending upon his curriculum and his schedule, or he may take any lesser number he pleases—three, two, or even one. If a freshman raises his general average to "B" during the second term he may revise his fall registration by mail during the summer substituting advanced sections for regular ones at that time.

Freshmen who wish further information on the superior sophomore program should attend a special meeting scheduled for 7:00 p.m., Thursday at 105 Gardner Hall. Representives of the General College will be present, as well as personnel from some of the departments. Those who cannot attend the meeting may consult the departments concerned or Professor George V. Taylor, secretary of the Chancellor's Committee on Superior Students, 203 Saunders.

ing was completed in 1931 in memory of the former president of the University, Edward Kidder Graham.

At this time, the regular enrollment was 3,025, representing an increase of about 80 per cent over that of the time at which the building was first projected.

Between the time of President H. W. Chase's announcement that the union would be built in 1920 and completion of Graham Memorial in 1931, the following buildings were constructed; Ruffin, Grimes, Mangum, Manley, Steele, Spencer, Everett, Lewis, Graham, Aycock (all dormitories, the library, the Bell Tower, Kenan Stadium, Venable, the Carolina Inn, Saunders, Manning and Murphy Thus, the location of Graham Memorial became increasingly "off-center" in location even before the building was completed.

Since 1931, the developing campus has steadily moved in the same southerly direction, and the following buildings have been added: Winston, Connor, Joyner, Alexander, Cobb, Stacy, Whitehead, Mclver, Alderman, Kenan (all dormitories), the Monogram Club, Lenoir, Wilson, the medical buildings. Woollen Gym, Naval Armory, Morehead Planetarium, new classroom buildings and most recently, three new dorms which are located behind the Gym.

In the original plans for Graham Memorial there were to be two wings, one on the north end and one on the south end of the central unit. The proposed additions would have included a ball room with a stage which might serve for small dances, theatrical productions, and lectures; sleeping accomodations for alumni and guests; a bookstore; a radio room; a faculty lounge; offices of the Alumni Association; offices for other campus activities; and general committee rooms for meetings.

Magill Gives Progress Of Counseling System

Sam Magill, Director of Student Activities, outlined the proposed counseling program for 1958-59 before a meeting of the Student Party Monday night.

Magill gave the progress of the counseling system, beginning with the coming into being of the Inter-dormitory Council and undergraduate counsellors.

Under the encouragement of two immediate past Student Body Presidents, Bob Young and Sonny Evans, the administration has embarked on planning and experimental projects to find out if anything could be done to cut down on the 40 per cent of the freshmen class who do not return for their sophomore year.

The first step, Magill explained, was the Cobb experiment. The University hired four counsellors at salaries that were considerably higher than those currently being paid. They are now finishing up their year of learning what can be and what can't be done.

Next semester the five dorms in the lower quad will continue this plan with 15 Graduate Counsellors, one for each 33 men. They will be paid $1250 a year, and will be actually available on a regular schedule.

In answer to a question from the floor about authority over the students, Magill said that this was in no way an effort to undercut Student Self Government and that the only authority that the Counsellors will have will be "Charesmismatic".

David Mathews was elected unanimously to the vacant legislature seat from Dorm Men's IV. Chairman Leon Hold announced the following party appointments; Betty Zeh, chairman Social Committee; Paul Woodard, chairman Membership Committee; Ronnie Rowe, precinct co-ordinator and Jane Haile file clerk.

NC Symphony

The annual Chapel Hill appearance of the North Carolina Symphony will be at Memorial Hall tomorrow at 8:30 p.m.

Soloist will be soprano Helen Boatwright. Miss Boatwright is well known throughout New England and the New York area.

The nationally known 60-man orchestra is directed by Benjamin Swalin.

Tar Heels Defeat State 7-0; Play At Wake Forest Tonight

RALEIGH—Righthander Wayne Young hurled Carolina to its 8th straight win with a 7-0 victory over State here yesterday.

Young scattered seven hits as the Tar Heels strengthened their hold on first place in the Atlantic Coast Conference race with a 6-1 record. State is now 5-5 in the ACC and is virtually eliminated from the title picture.

Young went all the way. He was only in trouble twice—in the first and sixth innings but pitched himself out of the hole with no damage.

Leading 3-0, Carolina drove starter Owen Wright from the mound with a two-run spree in the seventh. Wright is now 2-3 for the year.

Young had a perfect day all the way around. He hit two for two, and scored once. Second baseman Carson Oldman, and Left-fielder Tommy Saintsing each had two for four at the plate.

Tonight, the Tar Heels meet the second of three conference foes they will challenge this week when they play a night game at Wake Forest. This will be the first test of the season with the Deacons. The game was postponed because of rain last week.

Ben Harding, the team's top southpaw with a 5-0 record, is slated to toe the rubber against the Deacons, who upset Clemson last Saturday to help boost the Tar Heels into first place.

Harding has been a mainstay in the Tar Heels' speedy rocket to the conference pinnacle. The junior from Boonville blanked South Carolina 2-0 for his team's fifth loop win against one loss in, his latest outing last Saturday.

Of Carolina's conference wins, Harding has recorded three, two over the Gamecocks and a third over State.

Intramural Track Finals To Be Run This Afternoon

The annual Intramural track and Field day got off to a start under threating skies yesterday, and the men of the dorms, fraternities and graduate schools attempted to bring glory upon their names.

Yesterday's action was primarily to weed the field down to size for the finals which will begin at 5:30 this afternoon. The three divisions will run finals in the 60, 100, 220, ½-mile, and 440 and 880 relays this afternoon.

Yesterday the field events went into the finals. Lee Shaffer of ATO won the fraternity high jump. Clinton Burnham of Lewis won the event in the dorm division, and Dick Wilson of Medical School won the graduate division.

In the fraternity broad jump, Neil Dickman of the Phi Kaps won. The fraternity division was the only one entered in this event.

David Leffler of the Kap Sig house won the fraternity shot put. Dan Bardy of Cobb won the dorm division and Fred Ogden of Dental school won the graduate division.

Rip Hawkins of Cobb won the dormitory discus. Dave Leffler of Kap Sig won the fraternity and Fred Ogden of Dental School won his graduate division.

FINAL SUMMARY

High Jump — Shaffer (ATO), tie between Ainslie (SAE) and Goodman (ATO), 5'10".

Dorm High Jump — Burnham (Lewis), Nelms (BVP), Lotz (Cobb), tie Bagwell (Winston), and Brown (Winston), 5'10".

Tar Babies Lose To State; Meet Oak Ridge Here Today

State freshman Gordon Neville pitched his team to a 3-1 victory over the Carolina frosh yesterday at Emerson Stadium. Neville, who pitched for Chapel Hill High School last year, went all the way and shutout the Tar Babies for eight innings after yielding one run in the first frame.

For the Tar Babies it was only their second loss in twelve starts this season. Prior to yesterday's contest the Carolina frosh had beaten the Wolflets twice and had a perfect record against them. Their only other loss this year was a decision which they dropped to Presbyterian Junior College.

The only Carolina score of the game came in the opening inning when Ferg Norton scored on a wild pitch. From the second inning on the game belonged to Neville who limited the Tar Babies to three hits, one each by Russ Hollers, Carroll Bolick, and Joe Grimsley.

Pat Earey's base ballers will try again this afternoon to bag win number eleven when they meet Oak Ridge on the home diamond at 3 o'clock.

Big-Four Schools Set For Field Meet Today

The Second Annual Big-Four Rod and Gun Field Meet will be held this afternoon at the Durham Wildlife Club Area starting at 2 o'clock. In case of rain, the meet will be held tomorrow.

The meet, which is open to all students except those on R.O.T.C. rifle team's are eligible to participate in the five rod and gun field events. The Big-Four schools will be competing against each other in archery, bait casting, target shooting, trap shooting, and fishing. Trophies will be given to the individual winners of each event.

Carolina's Intramural Department sponsors the meet, with the aid of the Durham Wildlife Club members. The department is going all out this year to make it a successful meet. Transportation will be provided to anyone who calls the Intramural Department (9424) between 9 and 12 a.m. today.

A new event has been added this year, fishing. The contest will be on an individual basis only with any student elegible to compete for the trophy. There will be two divisions; one for bass, and another for brim. Fishermen may enter one or the other.

In the target archery event, each archer will shoot 2 ends (12 arrows) from 25, 35, and 45 yards. The arrows and bows will be furnished but it will be permissible to use private equipment.

Bait casters will cast twice at each of five casting loops placed at different distances around the lake. Each man will cast four rounds. Again private equipment may be used, but rod, reels and practice plugs will be furnished. Spinning outfits are permissible.

Target shooting will be done with standard 22 target rifles. Five shots will be taken from 50 feet for the prone, sitting, and off-hand position.

Six-Gun Glory

By Luke Snort

Big Jack Slade was tired. He was tired of the dust. He was tired of the lonely nights on the prairie. He was tired of the saloons and the dance hall girls. But most of all he was tired of the killing. He just didn't like to shoot people. He hated it. But he couldn't help himself. There was always some young punk that just had to try to prove himself against the reputation of the flashing six-guns of Big Jack Slade. Besides, he was a coward.

So Slade decided to get out while he still had a whole skin. He made up his mind the night he had to shoot up half the population of the town of West Buffalo Chip, in the Dakota Territory. It wasn't very pleasant. It cost him almost ten dollars in ammunition. So he headed back East, where he had come from as a small boy, on that wagon train that had been wiped out by Indians.

And he found just the thing he was looking for to give him the peace and relaxation he needed so badly. Now you can see him, every afternoon, sitting in the Main Lounge of GM, playing chess, or bridge, or just reading and listening to music. He's changed his name, of course, but you can't miss him. He's the one with the ten-gallon hat.

Law School Observing Law Day This Evening

"Law Day—USA," as proclaimed for May 1, 1958 by President Eisenhower, will be observed in the final program of the Heck Lecture Series featuring North Carolina Attorney General Malcolm Buie Seawell and Dean Brandis at 8:30 p.m. Thursday in the UNC Law School Courtroom.

Mr. Seawell will be the main speaker for the evening.

This program will be carried over WUNC-TV from 9 p.m. until 10 p.m. with the regular "Ideas" program.

Son of the late Supreme Court Justice and North Carolina Attorney General, A.A.F. Seawell and Mrs. Seawell, who resides in Chapel Hill, Mr. Seawell, 49, is a graduate of Sanford High School where he won his first debating contest.

After receiving his B.A. at UNC in 1931 and his LL.B. from the UNC Law School n 1933, he became a member of the staff of the Institute of Government in 1934 and a member of the State Parole Commission where he served from 1935 until 1938.

He served in the Office of Secretary of War in Washington during World War II and was appointed Superior Court Judge in 1955 after several years of private practice and other positons.

Govenor Hodges appointed him Attorney General of North Carollina in March, 1958.

He won state-wide recognition in 1952 when the Imperial Wizard of the Ku Klux Klan was sent to prison on charges of conspiracy and assault while Mr. Seawell was serving as Solicitor. This action ended the KKK terror in that area of the state during that period.

Mr. Seawell was married after the war to the former Frances Poole. They have two children: Malcom B. Jr. who is a preministerial student at Davidson College and a daughter, Terrell.

Student Wives Plan Picnic For Saturday

Sarah Dodson, picnic chairman for the Student Wives' Club announced plans today for the group's annual picnic.

The picnic will be held Saturday afternoon, May 3, at 3:30 in Umstead Memorial Park. There will be games for all, including husbands and children, and a covered dish dinner will be served. For reservations, call Mary Gover, 2316.

Other members of the picnic committee include Nadine Anderson, Clara Richardson, Mary Bass and Jo Anne Young.

In case of rain the group will gather at Victory Village Nursery.

Orientation Meeting

Tonight at 7:30 in Gerrard Hall, there will be an important and compulsary meeting of all Men's Orientation Counsellors for the fall.

Orientation Chairman, Herman Godwin, stated yesterday that "This meeting is mandatory for all men's counsellors. I hope all if you will be able to come, as we have a lot of important business to conduct."

Complete Text Of Regulations Proposed For Freshman Women

SOCIAL RULES

A. Closing Hours: Freshmen must be in the dormitory: Monday through Thursday—11:00 p.m.; Saturday—1:00 a.m.; Friday and Sunday—12:00 midnight.

The Permission Form for signing in and out, signed by the girl's parents, must have been received by the Dean of the School of Nursing, or Supervisor of Dental Hygienists, or by the Dormitory Hostess before any permission to leave town can be granted. This form is kept on file in the Dormitory. Only such permissions as appear on this form will be granted.

1. Students sign out at the dormitory desk without special permission from the Dormitory Administration when expecting to return to the dormitory after 8:00 p.m., when not planning to leave the city limits. Listed are the places not considered out of the city limits: Pines, Glen Lennox, Ranch House, Chapel Hill drive-ins, Larry's Brady's, Watts.

Failure to sign out or in is a House Council offense. Taree of these will constitute one House Council offense toward Honor Council.

2. Students sign out at the dormitory desk with a permision signed by the Dormitory Administration for: a. Day or week-end trips away from Chapel Hill. b. Evening engagements which involve leaving Chapel Hill.

C. Freshmen student may have three out-of-twon permissions (not to exceed six overnights) during fall semester in addition to University holidays and between semesters.

HOUSE REGULATIONS

1. Freshmen must observe closed study Monday through from 8:00 p.m. until 10:30 p.m. Telephone calls may be received between 10:30 p.m. and 11:00 p.m., but students may not leave the dormitory nor receive guests at this time. Violation of this is a House Council offense, but will not count toward Honor Council.

2. During these hours, they are to remain in their rooms, or they may use the Nursing Reading Room, or the Division of Health Affairs Library, or dormitory study room. They must be at their place of study by eight o'clock.

3. When it is necessary to consult anyone concerning her studies, the student is on her honor to return to her room immediately.

4. No talking on the telephone is permitted (except long distance calls).

5. A student may be excused from closed study only one night a week to attend a campus activity lasting after 8:00 p.m. Girls wanting to be excused must get permission from the Dormitory Administration prior to the time she is excused.

6. Those Freshmen not making a C average semester must observe closed study during second semester. Each freshman shall report her grade average to her house president at the beginning of second semester.

The Dormitory Executive Council reserves the right to alter closed study regulations at any time they deem it necessary.

Visiting in Fraternity Houses

Freshmen with parents' permission may visit fraternity houses under the following regulations:

Freshmen students may have dinner and remain until 8:00 p.m. Monday through Thursday, and on the weekends until freshman closing hours.

In the event that the IFC Visiting Agreement is altered, the above regulation will be reconsidered.

Few Jury Applications, Reports Council Chief

Hugh Patterson, Men's Honor Council chairman, released a statement yesterday, urging students to apply for membership on the Men's Council.

Patterson said, "A week ago, a concerted effort was made by many men on this campus to acquaint the student body with the new reorganization on the Men's and Women's Honor Councils. At that time many students expressed the desire of wanting to become a juror in the future. During the past two days, interviews have been held to select students who wish to be jurors but few people have been interviewed.

"As this lack of participation might be the result of deficient knowledge on the students' parts as to the requirements to be met and the procedure to be followed in becoming a juror, I will try to present this information now.

"Any student at the University of North Carolina is eligible to be a juror provided that he wishes to be one. A student need not have had any previous experience on an Honor Council to be considered for a position on the permanent jury list.

"If a student wishes to become a juror, he should go to the Student Government office Thursday or Friday afternoon and fill out an application blank which he will find there. Then he should wait to be interviewed by members of the Honor System Commission who are holding interviews in the Woodhouse Conference Room of Graham Memorial from 2 to 4:30. Thursday and Friday afternoons of this week. A student to be prepared for these interviews need only have a good basic understanding of the Honor System and the new reorganization of the Councils.

"The function of a juror during a trial is to question the defendant concerning the case at hand and to decide the innocence or guilt of that individual.

Council Deletes Portions Of Recommended Coed Rules

By STAN BLACK

The Women's Residence Council passed most of the previously proposed rules for freshmen women in a meeting Tuesday night, striking out the lights-out section and the beach-weekend permission section, and changing Saturday night closing hours from 12 p.m. to 1 a.m.

Lillian Shannonhouse, chairman of WRC, issued the following statement along with the rules:

"Women's Residence Council, after re-evaluation and reconsideration of the Freshman Rules, has reached its final decision. The following are the rules which we feel both necessary and adequate for govrening the freshman women on the campus of UNC. These rules are, however, subject to the approval of the Administration."

In commenting on the rules, she said that she thought that they would be put under the Honor System, with authority residing in the dormitory administrations. She emphasized that there would be nothing resembling a monitor system. The rules are still subject to the final approval of the Deans of Nursing and Women.

Several women students associated with the Women's Residence Council either present or former members commented on the rules.

Mary Montgomery supported the rules becuse "freshmen nurses need less strenuous rules and the entering freshmen women need guidance. The rules will work no hardship on their social life."

Jean Sutherland, a Nursing student, said that she "wouldn't support them just as a liberalization of nurses' rules, but only because all freshmen need them. There should be equality in the rules."

Sue Ballentine, a Pharmacy student, stated, "The proposed closing hours are understandable and lenient enough to allow sufficient social life. Closed study seems unnecessary to me, but much thought has been given to this phase of the rules. WRC is mature and their proposals should be respected."

Annie Lawrie Gard supported the rules, although "more than likely changes will be made next year, as the rules are not permanent. The changes could be either way."

Paddy Wall, secretary of the student body, stated, "Although I hate to see the freedom which I feel offers freshmen girls the opportunity to mature by making their own decisions concerning their study and dating habits taken away, I feel that Residence Council has considered carefully and that the new rules may be beneficial. I hope that the students will support these rules and make the atmosphere as pleasant as possible for the new freshmen."

Carter, Mitchell, Zeh Take Top GM Positions

Bob Carter, Jack Mitchell and Betty Zeh were selected to serve in the three highest posts of Graham Memorial Activities Board yesterday.

Carter will serve as president, Mitchell as vice president and Miss Zeh as secretray, according to an announcement by Beeny Thomas, the outgoing president.

The new president is a junior from Selma and has been active in campus affairs during his three years at Carolina. He served this year as treasurer of the Student Body, and is a member of the Student party. He is a Morehead Scholar, former member of the Student Legislature and ran for President of the Student Body in the recent spring elections. He is a member of the Order of the Grail.

Mitchell is a freshman from Chattanooga, Tenn. and a member of the Phi Delta Theta fraternity. He will serve as an Orientation Counselor in the fall as well as participating in the work of the YMCA Freshmen Camp. He worked this year as Business Manager for Sound and Fury, as Director of the "Christmas Round the World "pageant and as Stage Manager for the Carolina Cavalcade of Talent.

Miss Zeh is a member of the Alpha Gamma Delta sorority. She has been active this year as a member of the Student Legislature, Student Party and on the Office Committee of GMAB. She will serve as an orientation counselor in the fall.

Carter said upon notification of his selection, "I consider it a great honor to have been selected for the position of President of GMAB. Benny Thomas has done a tremendous job this year in planning and organizing GMAB and I hope the new Board can continue this fine work.

"I would like to urge all interested students to come and fill out an application for the positions open on the Activities Board. Interviews will be held next week and I hope to have appointments made for the chairman of each GMAB committee by next week."

Thomas also added, "I feel that Bob, Jack, and Betty are certainly qualified and capable to carry out the responsibilities that they have assumed. I am well pleased with this slate of officers to head GMAB for next year, and I believe that the programming of our student union is in good hands."

NEED FOR A UNION

GM Outdated At Completion

By AL RESCH

This article is the second in a series of four describing the need for a new Student Union on the UNC campus.

Even before Graham Memorial was completed, it was already outdated because of a double in the enrollment between the time when it was first proposed and when it was finished in 1931.

With the constant increase in enrollment since 1931, there has been created a greater need than ever for what could be called a "center of campus activities."

When the semester system was instituted into the University system of education, there was created a situation which has never been solved. The students were now limited in what could be done during the weekends. In general, there was no improvement in living conditions to keep the students in Chapel Hill.

It has been said that one of the reasons for converting to the semester system was to keep the people on campus over the weekend. It was pointed out that when the University was on the quarter system, a student could get a long way from school and many times neither the officials of the school or the parents had any idea where the students were.

Now the question arises, what are the students going to do on campus or around the town of Chapel Hill.

At the present time Chapel Hill offers little in the way of entertainment to the students of the University. There are two movies, numerous beer parlors or eating establishments but not a place in the city limits of Chapel Hill which offers the students a chance to take dates for an evening of dancing.

There is even a city ordinance in the town of Chapel Hill which prohibits the building of a pool rooom or bowling alley for public use.

With the student's right to possess cars undergoing limitations possible elimination, socially speaking the person who does not belong to a fraternity has real dating problems.

When a person belongs to one of these social institutions such as a fraternity, he has no real need for a car. It is when the student neither has a car nor is in a fraternity that problems arise.

Chapel Hill just doesn't offer enough facilities to make dating enjoyable to many of the students.

This is where the new union could help. It could furnish a place to dance with a snack bar near at hand; it could furnish music rooms and could have a main lounge where the couple could be entertained.

It may be said that the Rendevous room in Graham Memorial is never used so what is the need of a place if the people are not going to use it. The answer to this problem is that apparently the atmosphere around the Rendevous room is not as it should be for a person to take a date. With the Pool Room just next door, many students spend their nights playing the game. They are all boys, and are constantly milling around outside the opened door of the Rendevous Room.

Many people think that this is no place to take a date.

With girls' hours being 1 a.m. on the weekends, the problem has been increased. Graham Memorial is locked up before the time for the girls to be back at the dorms. Until recently not a single eating place outside a sandwich shop near the police station remained open into the morning hours.

Though the fraternities serve to fill the needs of many people's desire for social recreation, they lack in their creating of an atmosphere for study. Dormitories are often noisy and people find it hard to study there.

Recreation is not all that a new union would offer as a services to the students who took advantage of it. As has been stressed for years, the students need a place in which there would be an atmosphere for studying. A reading room in the new Union would help to solve this need.

The library has long been considered the center of study on the University campus, but even it has faults, the main one being that is closes at such an early hour that the students are forced to go elsewhere in order to find suitable places to study.

One of the needs of the students that could easily be answered is that of furnishing a place where people could meet. When parents of boys come to see them, the father comes into the dorm while the mother sits patiently in the car.

With the building of a new student union which was located centrally, the parents could go there

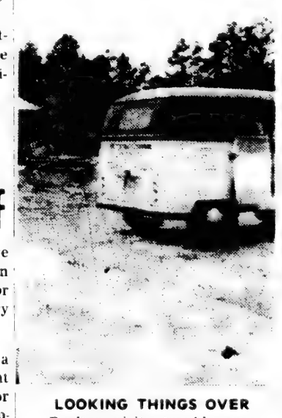
LOCAL REALTORS ANSWER



Contractors Tackling Problem

By DAVIS YOUNG and KEN FRIEDMAN

This is the third article concerning the sewage conditions in the Isley St.-Stinson St.-N. Columbia St. area of Chapel Hill.)

Today you are reading statements from two local realtors and comments from a local contractor who is putting in some sewage lines in the neighborhood being discussed in this series of articles.

These statement refute many of

LOOKING THINGS OVER
Realtor visits trouble area

the words that you read yesterday from some of the residents of this neighborhood. In some ways they are serving as a rebuttal.

Yesterday there were two statements that claimed that there is a very definite sewage problem in this neighborhood. The Daily Tar other statements similar to these other statements imilar to these two which were held out due to a lack of space.

The first comment is from Kutz Realtors of 1408 E. Franklin St. The first of yesterday's statements came from a person renting from Kutz. When contacted, Kutz issued the following release to the paper:

"We've corrected any problem involving anybody's house we rent. We have taken steps to remedy any problems as soon as possible.

"The sewage problem is solved for the neighborhood. The new line has picked up everything on Stinson, Isley and N. Columbia is being worked on now.

"Th swage problem is solved for the neighborhood. The new line has picked up everything on Stinson, Isley and N. Columbia is being worked on now.

"The entire area is now on a gravity flow sewer." Kutz went on to say that the open sewage most definately had existed. However, he observed that it was cleared up as soon as possible.

He said that the health board is very strict and has always "made me fix every septic tank when anything is wrong."

He said in response to a question about the students that he felt that "I am performing a service to the students and the community."

He admitted that at one time 19 families were without sewage in the area due to the faultiness of the pump.

John Foushee of the Foushee-Olsen Co. of 108 N. Columbia St. was the other realtor Daily Tar Heel reporters talked with in conjunction with this story. Neither of the people giving statements to The Daily Tar Heel rent from him, but two of the four unused statements originated from his tenants.

He said, "We have tried to get the individual property owners to go in together. We manage two houses on Stinson St. and have been over with Dobson, the Health Commissioner and the University Construction Co. in an effort to straighten out this situation.

"They have agreed to permit us to tap onto the sewer at a cost of $200 per house with an additional tap fee of $25 to the city of Chapel Hill.

I rent, is not here, but he has authorized me to hook onto the sewer line at his expense.

"We would most certainly inform a customer of the water problem now, before he moved into the information.

When I rented them, I did not know of the water problem. The rain this year has been a factor in the problem. There has been more septic tank trouble in the past winter than ever before."

Mr. Edward Fields of the University Construction Co., which is in the process of digging some of the sewage lines in the neighborhood, said he was aware that a woman had fallen into a ditch dug by his company and that he had informed her that "she had no business being that near to it."

He went on to say that he is not compelled to rope off or light up any construction that his company is doing when it is on private property. He claimed that the spot where she fell was private property.

As to his knowledge about the sewage situation in the neighborhood being discussed, he said, "I about the sewer situation."

don't know a thing in the world

(Tomorrow in the, fourth installment, comments from the Health Office and the Chapel Hill Building Inspector on the situation as well as a statement from the county seat—Hillsboro will be printed.

IN THE INFIRMARY

Students in the Infirmary yesterday included:

Misses Leila Ibrahin and Doris Kerry and George Sasser, Edward Riser, Dennis Parks, Kenneth White, John Tillsotson, George McLarty, Robert Murray, William Floyd, Harold Richman, Robert Zimmerman, Louis Sanders, Larry Harris and Curtis Fields.

A Decision?

The Women's Residence Council has acted, and in so acting has neglected the facts, student opinion, and their position in the scheme of student responsibility.

They have compromised the tradition of the University of North Carolina and created a second-class citizenship.

They have destroyed what measure of good will was left between the students and the so-called student leaders on the Council.

They have, in effect, abdicated their responsibilities, prostituted the tradition of the University, and sold the incoming freshmen down the river.

There comes a day of reckoning. The reckoning will be done by the students of the University who created the Council, and who were not consulted in the decision.

Indeed the only people who did consult those whom the Council is representing was The Daily Tar Heel who found that an overwhelming majority of the constituents opposed the regulations in whole or in part, and who were left in the lurch when the Council refused to abandon some of the rules found most objectionable.

It is significant that the Council dropped certain rules, but this could not have been accomplished without intelligent leadership from outside the council in the form of advice from the women, student leaders, and other interested people.

It is for the women to decide whether the decision that the Council made was a decision at all, or rather an extravagant display of stubbornness and appeasement.

The Council has failed those who elected it.

Journalism School

The journalistic enterprise is a hard one to define. Its basic purpose is to breed an awareness by the public about the events and people that surround them and are within their midst. It strives, secondly, to promote the thinking enterprise.

This week the Journalism School of the University received its accreditation. A small milestone has been passed in furthering the journalistic enterprise on the UNC campus.

Congratulations are in order for Dean Norval Neil Luxon.

Trash Cans

The legislature tonight will take another look at the problem of trash receptacles.

Last semester these needed items were defeated on a purely partisan vote, in one of the poorest displays of political shinanegans that the Student Legislature has witnessed.

It becomes obvious when walking not only in the dormitory districts but also in the classroom districts that the gutters that are to house the litter are inadequate, and that the litter in the gutter does not make an appetizing sight.

There should be a certain pride on the part of students in the neatness of their campus. Whether this pride exists or not, there is no opportunity to demonstrate this pride for lack of receptacles to put trash in.

The beauty of the campus should be everyone's concern, whether they live in a dormitory or fraternity.

It should be the concern of the buildings and grounds department, and the Student Legislature should make that department aware of the need for litter receptacles.

This resolution should pass tonight.

Radio Club Issues Reply: Answers Dave Jones — Yes

Open Letter to Dave Jones:

The two questions you ask in your column of Tuesday, April 29, concernsing the U.N.C. Radio Club may be answered simply by "yes". The student body has in its reserves an adequate sum of money to simply lend the club the money to purchase the necessary equipment to put a club station on the air. The equipment will remain the property of the students. The club has agreed to pay a rental of $50 a year on the equipment.

The government of the United States of America, through its legal arm, the Federal Communications Commision, considers certain individuals qualified and mature enough to grant them licenses to own and operate amateur radio stations. These licenses are required to exhibit to an F.C.C. examiner the ability to send and receive the international morse code at a rate of 13 words (65 characters) per minute. It is also required that the licensee be thoroughly familiar with the section of federal law which deals with the amateur radio service. Thirdly the amateur must have an extensive knowledge of the technical aspects of radio in general.

I think, Mr. Jones, that you have relegated this matter to the level of a personal crusade in which you have raised a standard and are attempting to be both judge and jury in a manner which can not be considered praiseworthy. As evidence of this, I submit the fact that on Saturday, the 19th of April, I personally presented you with a typewritten article concerning the election of officers of the club and a general statement of the purposes of the club. This report was not printed. When you were questioned as to the where-abouts of the article by the club president, you stated that it must have been lost in the Tar Heel office. If this is so, Mr. Jones, may I remind you that this is no way to keep shop.

The Daily Tar Heel is the only sounding board through which we can present our case to the student body in general. I urgently request that you consult with members of the club as to its intents and purposes before you draw your own unqualified conclusions about the maturity and responsibility of its members.

Amateur radio is considered to be an invaluable service to the people of the United States. Each individual station is a service to the community in which it ie located.

I hope that all people concerned with this matter, and this includes every student at this University, will give this matter due consideration.

Lewis B. Steingold, W4BLO
Vice-President UNCARC

Open Letter to Mr. Dave Jones:

In your "Roundup" column of Tuesday, April 29, you asked two questions about the U.N.C. Amateur Radio Club; you then proceeded to give an answer, of sorts, to the questions. It is quite obvious to those who are informed on the subject tht you have no evidence for implying that the club is not mature and well-organized enough to be responsible for the equipment we are trying to get. This borders on the ridiculous. The Club Trustees, who under Federal Communications Commission regulations are responsible for the proper operation of Club Equipment, includes (all fully licensed "hams") Dr. A. V. Masket, a Professor in the Department of Physics, Frank Farron, chief engineer for WUNC-TV, and Jim Botsford, a local Radio-TV repairman who is Engineer for WCHL. Included in the club are several hams who are also commerically licensed: i.e. they are licensed to operate any radio station under FCC rules. Are these people "mature and responsible"? I hope you do not think they are not. The Federal Government thinks they are, otherwise, the government would not issue them a license.

Is the club well-organized? Let me say this: I know that you could not possibly have seen a revised copy of our constitution. This is because there are only five copies in existence, and up until yesterday all five were in my personal possession. This constitution is based upon a constitution which is a base for almost 1000 radio clubs in the United States. The first of these clubs came into existence in 1906, (Columbia University). Can you possibly say that such a club as at Columbia is not well-organized? A part of our constitution is based directly upon Columbia's. More than 180 colleges and universites have amateur radio clubs, and, upon our present information, most of these have the same basic constitution.

Does "mature and responsible use of the equipment" include the obvious need for amateur stations to provide the "mature and responsibility" emergency communications which even Governor Hodges had to use to conduct business during hurricane "Hazel", which the U.S. Post Office had to use during the same period, in which 225 N. C. amateurs spent more than 5000 manhours providing communication to otherwise completely isolated areas. Surely you do not think such government use of amateur radio communication is immature and irresponsible! Even though the State Legislature was grateful enough for the work of the hams that it passed a bill providing special auto licenses for amateurs. Quite an action for the legislature to give to people who are not "mature and responsible." I could go on for quite a while giving reasons and examples for showing that we are mature and responsible, and do respresent a need for the Carolina Campus.

"Do we have a large enough non-appropriated balance to take care of such a large sum?" This question, Mr. Jones, is quite surprising. I know for a fact that you are acquainted with the budget for the 1958-59 school year, and since you are acquainted with it you should know that there is an un-appropriated balance of $3,460.-80 for next year. Also, I feel sure that you are aware of the General Surplus Fund which contains approximately $15,000. Surely your math is good enough to see that $3,700 can be taken from this sum without endangering the budget for the next year.

You made no mention of the conditions with which we would get the money. If you read the bill (BF-25-12) of which I know you received a copy, you will find that the Student Government will own the equipment and that the club will, among other things, be required to "remit $50.00 per year for use of the equipment." Unlike some organizations on campus (for example, the University Club) we will not actually receive money from the Legislature, but will act only as an agent to negotiate the purchase of the equipment.

How can you say that there "doesn't seem to be sufficiently strong answer of "yes" to either question" when you could not have possibly have heard all the evidence? I do hope that our 25th Legislature will live up to your implied suggestion that they first consider all the evidence before they make a decision on how to vote and do their best to rid themselves of the prejudice which is all too common.

Last Friday at the Alpha Kappa Psi pledge banquet at the Washington Duke Hotel, President Friday was installed as an honorary member of the fraternity.

Introducing him before he spoke to the group was Rush Jordan, past president of the local chapter and now employed at Dook University (West Durham Finishing School). Now Jordan is inclined to be skeptical of the affections of the brothers now that he is employed at the Durham degree factory. To waylay any fears he might have and in an attempt to put him more at ease President Friday decided to say something nice about Dook, and indeed, he said the nicest thing that could be said:

"The one distinction, the one unique privilege that Duke can lay claim to that no other school can is the fact that it is the only university in the world that is situated 12 miles from Chapel Hill." How nice can a guy get?

We admire the persons in charge of the grounds on campus for their optimism.

They are going to considerable expense to put up very attractive but very useless chains around the campus, knowing full well that the only thing that will keep the people off the grass are barbed wires a la Stalag 17 or brick walls 20 feet high, and then these are not foolproof. Remember William Holden? We have thousands of HIM here.

Nice-Guys of the Year Award go to the members of the RAM and Ewe staff.

On the editorial page (we think its the edit page, or at any rate, it is definitely a page) is this remark, "Any and all suggestions and ideas (exclusive of those belonging to the DAILY TAR HEEL staff) will be appreciated by the editors." We don't know what prompted this remark, but after checking it thoroughly for new ideas and new jokes, we conclude that it could have used more help from somewhere—anywhere, regardless of the prejudices of the editors. (Yes, "editors." It came out that way on the first draft, and Freud would say that because it is similar to "idiots" it would mean something about our subconscious.)

On the same page the Tar Heel staff are noted as "scoffers and infidels." BUT, along with the Tar Heel staff were several thousands of others who wondered when, if ever, the RAM & EWE would reach the public. At least they know when to expect the Tar Heel. It may not be funny or in bad taste, but at least it's regular (R-E-G-U-L-A-R)

The Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia Music Fraternity is sponsoring a Contemporary Music Concert in Hill Hall tonight at eight o'clock. This event, which will probably go unnoticed by a very great majority of the student body, is one of interest and importance.

The Concert will consist of seven compositions, written by young and talented musicians. Among these will be Eddie Bass' "Suite of Brass and Percussion," Joel Chadabe's "Two Preludes for Piano," Yvonne Williams' "Three Inventions for Piano" and "Diptych," and John K. Tice's "Fugue for Organ." Those of you who think the last name is familiar are right—this is the selfsame Pepper Tice who has become noted for his portrayals of disillusioned young men in the Sound and Fury and was recently appointed Editor of the Quarterly.

Phi Mu Alpha, by promoting this concert, is doing American serious music a great favor. The fraternity was founded at the New England Conservatory of Music on October 6, 1898, and the local chapter was established on February 24, 1926. This concert, which was given its premier last year, is a stellar example of the conscientious work being done by this small group to further serious music on the University of North Carolina.

America is only now beginning to be considered a land worthy of high esteem in the field of serious music. For many years Europeans, basking in the light of its Beethovens, Haydns, and Bachs, tended to regard our simple efforts at composition and performance as mere child's play.

At about the turn of the century America began to make a sudden, swift rise in serious music. Now we are well represented in the field by men such as Aaron Copeland, Virgil Copeland, Roy Harris—who is, incidentally, a Phi Mu Alpha brother—and, to some extent, George Gershwin. And America, opulent and spendthrifty, has brought the greatest of Europeans to her shores; Bela Bartok wrote his great' 'Concerto for Orchestra" for the Koussevitzky Foundation to be performed in Boston, and Arturo Toscanini conducted the New York Philharmonic and NBC Symphony for many years.

The present generation of collegians will soon be taking part in home town concerts, donating to local symphonies, and buying classical and modern serious music in recordings by the droves. Some of these people who are writing for the Phi Mu Alpha Concert may be writing larger works for performance and recording some day. We can help them a great deal by supporting them now.

While we are on the subject of music, let us pause a moment to say a silent prayer for Mr. Elvis Presley. Mr. Presley is in the army, and is having a very rough time of it. The poor man—not a moment of privacy. Newspapermen on his heels as he lithely slithers under a barrage of bullets, photographers exploding bulbs in his face as he stands in his full glory on a scale.

Mr. Presley is having a terrible time. To add to his woes the army isn't letting him sing. This raises my opinion of army intelligence considerably. But I hope that the rumor I heard about "Old Shop" being substituted for "Taps" isn't substantiated.

Of course he probably doesn't realize it, but Mr. Presley may have done the greatest thing for coiffures since men put away their white wigs. After all, the countless thousands of upstanding young men who have been following his hairy-hair-hair style may change. "Go army!" may become a hair dresser's dream motto. The G.I. Cut may come back; enrollment in the army may increase; I may not be drafted; you may not be drafted; the army may be manned by the people who always should have manned it.

Mr. Presley should be thanked by every American for the selflessness he has shown. Not a grumble from him, not a groan. He marches on, shoulder to shoulder with his comrades in arms, a true and diligent soldier of our great army. He has sacrificed his budding career to serve his country. Mr. Presley is a great man.

Not a grumble, not a groan . . . just an occasional grunt.

Rule's Roost

I was standing in the hallway at Graham Dorm the other day meditating upon a fire hook which was bolted to the wall. After inquiry I learned that at one time it had supported a fire extinguisher. The question which comes to my mind is this: Why does it no longer serve the purpose for which it was intended?

It seems to be the exception rather than the rule for buildings, dormitories in particular, on the UNC campus to contain extinguishers.

If the powers-that-be are going on the assumption that our dormitories are fireproof, they may someday be in for a rather rude awakening. The Winecoff Hotel in Atlanta was (and I emphasize the was) fireproof. The histories of "fireproof" buildings are filled with neat piles of ashes where proper minimum precautions were not taken.

Big blazes from little flipped butts grow, and an extinguisher on every hall might come in handy in the preservation of lives, personal property and our living quarters. After all, few of us have a burning desire to make ashes of ourselves.

This is an amazing climate here in Chapel Hill. One day the birds are singing their welcome to spring. The next day they're jumping up and down on the branches trying to keep warm.

It is rumored that a customer at one of the larger local dining halls revolted a few days ago. He was told to have slapped his hand on his tray, looked the woman server in the eye, and said, 'I refuse to drink your scrambled eggs!"

If Detroit continues its trend toward more and more chrome on autos, it will be only a matter of time before an accident results from a motorist being blinded by an oncoming car—in broad daylight!

You can sure tell final exams are coming. The members of the crowd in the reading room at the library are starting to get determined looks on their faces. In about a week these will turn to expressions of complete, utterly hopeless, dismay.

U.N.C. IN THE "SATURDAY REVIEW"

In an essay entitled "Victims of Success" in this week's Saturday Review, noted historian and educator Henry Steele Commager advances his own diagnosis of the current malaise which infects the American school system.

Part of the essay is devoted to an examination of the role of athletics in the schools. Commenting on the prevailing athletic system and its faults, Dr. Commager finds occasion to take a well-aimed poke at this university and Head Football Coach Jim Tatum. Unfortunately, both deserve the criticism they receive.

POST MORTEM ON THE DERBY

It seems that more filth than rain fell in Kenan Stadium on Tuesday afternoon. Perhaps some of the girls on this campus who feel that they are not treated with appropriate respect by the local males, and who resent the fact that many dates at Carolina develop late in the evening into a fight to retain what remains of their chastity, will attempt to reconcile those supposedly sincere sentiments with the implications of the exhibition which they put on at the Derby; it will take some nimble self-deception to balance those books.

It is also a shameful commentary on the state of things to note that some two thousand or more people turned out for this event, while about a dozen turned out for a recent dance, and only hundreds at most can summon the mental and physical energy to attend any event of intellectual interest.

E. E. CUMMINGS AT DUKE

Duke's Student Forum is playing host to poet E. E. Cummings at 8:15 on Thursday evening in the Women's College auditorium. The admission charge is one dollar, payable at the door. Although it's a shame that the money must go to Duke, the violation of competitive principle is more than justified by the occasion.

The Fine Things

Editor:

Too often we take Chapel Hill and its many advantages for granted. Aside from the University, there is much to be said for this choice spot in all Tar Heelia. While, as everywhere, there are some of the Chapel Hill business folks who see in the students' 'money in their coffers" only, there are many toward whom one can feel not only is here a merchant, druggist, or what have you, but here is a friend. There is Harry's where, be it for a cup of coffee, a full meal, or a momentary escape from a Chapel Hill shower, a friendly hello awaits you. Kemp's record shop where even a scratch on the hi-fi that we don't intend to buy brings forth only a low moan from the "Lord Buddha" himself. The Intimate Book Shop with its charge accounts that elsewhere would be dumped onto the lap of the credit bureau. And then there is Danziger's with Papa and Mama D and their "old world" friendliness, advice, or what have you—even to wrapping and mailing something that was bought down the street. To these and others may I say, "thanks for making Chapel Hill home." Yes, Chapel Hill is a wonderful place, thanks to the wonderful folks who live here.

J-SCHOOL WINS ACCREDITATION

Call It The Fourth Estate

"The gallery in which the reporters sit has become a fourth estate of the realm."

Thomas B. McCaulay, noted English author, is accredited with labeling of journalists as "the fourth estate in the September 1828 issue of Hallams Constitutional History. Since that time the term has liberally been used in referring to the gentlemen of the press.

McCaulay made the statement shortly after the English newspapers had won the right to cover sessions of parliament. Parliament had formerly conducted its proceedings in secret. His brief statement summed up the growing feeling of that time concerning the increasing power of the newspapers.

Since McCaulay's day technology has brought many changes in the operation and publication of newspapers, but journalists have continued in the their role as "the fourth estate" in their judgement of public officials and affairs.

Sigma Delta Chi Group Staffs Special Section

By BEN TAYLOR

This special edition of The Daily Tar Heel was the work of five members of a committee to form an Undergraduate Chapter of Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalism fraternity, on Carolina's campus.

Charlie Sloan is editor of this special edition and John Ashford is serving as business manager. Other members of the committee are: Tom Bolch, chairman; Ben Taylor, Stan Fisher, and Clark Jones, Paul Rule, Don Shaw, and Walt Shruntek also assisted.

Dean Norval Luxon of the Journalism School at Carolina has long been interested in organizing a chapter of Sigma Delta Chi on UNC's campus for the growing number of aspiring journalists who enroll every year at Chapel Hill.

A chapter was formed on the campus in the 1920's by the English Department. But, since then the chapter has disintegrated and interest in forming the chapter again has been lacking.

Early last fall, Dean Luxon spoke with Bolch, Taylor, and Sloan about attempting to revitalize interest in the fraternity and supplied them with necessary books, pamphlets, etc. on the fraternity's history and entrance requirements.

Since then the committee has worked intermittently to find methods of raising sufficient money for the project. This special edition is their primary goal. Proceeds from this issue will go towards paying the costs of formulating a chapter on the campus next year.

The purposes of Sigma Delta Chi, as quoted from the booklet, "Manual of Procedure and Information: Sigma Delta Chi" are: "1) to associate journalists of talent, energy, and truth into a more intimately organized unit of good fellowship; 2) to assist the members in acquiring the noblest principles of journalism and to cooperate with them in this field; and 3) to advance the standards of the press by fostering a higher ethical code, thus increasing its value as an uplifting social agency."

Dr. Luxon Has Great Interest

Sigma Delta Chi has managed to hold the interest of Dean Norval Luxon of the Journalism School for at least 35 years.

And it appears his dreams of a professional chapter of the nation's most respected journalism fraternity on this campus will soon turn into reality.

Dean Luxon has shown interest in Sigma Delta Chi since 1921 when he was a member at Ohio State. He was chapter advisor of the Ohio State chapter for fourteen years while a student there.

In 1939 he was awarded the Sigma Delta Chi Research Award for the most meritorious research in American journalism completed that year.

At present, Dean Luxon is the only advisor on a seven-man Sigma Delta Chi committee which is to make a recommendation on qualifications for membership in professional chapters.

UNC Press Club Is Organized As SDX Colony

The University of North Carolina Press Club has finally found its role in the School of Journalism in its plans to work toward a chapter of Sigma Delta Chi, professional Journalism fraternity.

After sporadic efforts at organization throughout the history of journalism education at UNC, the Press Club became permanently established in 1951 and has grown into its present position as a colony for a professional chapter.

Journalists, embryonic or actual, are gregarious by nature and tend to form in-groups, informal or formal, wherever they gather. Thus as UNC's department of journalism grew into an accredited school, the Press Club or some counterpart attempted to organize.

Its present structure came with adoption of a constitution and by-laws by a group of twenty charter members in the fall of 1951, headed by Leo J. Norhart, who served as president until May, 1953. He was succeeded in 1943-54 by Jerry Epps.

During these formative years, the Press Club was little more than a social organization dedicated, according to the informal minutes, to "general conversation . . . and the pleasant task of consuming beer at the 'celler' . . . . . "

Under Clinton Andrews of Hickory, and guided by new Dean Norval Neil Luxon, the club began more educative activities—though without neglecting the pleasant.

Practicing journalists were brought into monthly meetings to discuss problems of newspaper production and answer questions in bull sessions that often waxed hot.

An annual Awards Banquet was begun, and the Press Club became an integral part of Carolina education in Journalism.

Earl McGuire of Danville, Va., president in 1955-56, succeeded in the spring by Buzz Merritt of Hickory. In spring of 1956, the club's major work was turned toward establishing a chapter of Sigma Delta Chi, and the organization gave birth to the Matrix Society, a women's group pioneering a chapter of Theta Sigma Phi, Women's professional sorority. The Awards Banquet became the time for announcement of winners of

Announced Today After Approval

The School of Journalism has been accredited by the American Council on Education for Journalism. Approval was voted in New York April 20 and announcement of the accreditation was made today.

Chancellor William B. Aycock and Dean Norval Neil Luxon received word from the Council of the approval of the School's curriculum.

Forty-six schools and departments of journalism in the country have been accredited since the first accredited list was announced in 1948.

A visitation team of three educators, two newspapermen and the executive secretary of the Accrediting Committee of the ACEJ visited the campus February 19 and 20. Dean Burton W. Marvin, William Allen White School of Journalism, University of Kansas; Dean I. W. Cole, Medill School of Journalism, Northwestern University; Director Willis C. Tucker, School of Journalism, University of Tennessee; John H. Colburn, managing editor, Richmond Times-Dispatch; C. A. McKnight, editor, Charlotte Observer; and Walter C. Wilcox, executive secretary, made up the committee which made its recommendation to the Accrediting Committee, which in turn approved the recommendation and forwarded it for action to the ACEJ.

Journalism educators and representatives of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, American Newspaper Publishers Association, National Education Association, Southern Newspaper Publishers Association, Inland Daily Press Association, Magazine Publishers Association, and National Association of Radio and Television Broadcasters are on the Council.

"Accreditatiin is very pleasing to us at the School of Journalism," Dean Luxon said today. "We established that as one of our goals when we came to Carolina four years ago ad we are happy to have achieved it."

Dean Luxon was chairman of the ACEJ Accrediting Committee from its founding in 1946 until he came to Chapel Hill December 1, 1953.

"With the recognition that comes with accreditation and with the prospect of moving into adequate quarters with essential equipment in January 1960, we feel that progress in professional education for journalism has been and is being made," Dean Luxon said.

"The curriculum of the School has been completely revised. Courses have been dropped. Existing courses have been strengthened. Ten courses, all of them carrying graduate credit, have been added.

"Three students have been graduated with the master's degree in journalism and another is scheduled to receive his degree in June.

J-Foundation Contributions Boost School

By STAN FISHER

For the past nine years journalism education in North Carolina has been greatly boosted by the contributions of newspapers all over the state to the School of Journalism Foundation Inc.

The Foundation was incorporated in 1949 and lists as its purposes" . . . to sponsor, promote, encourage, support, and assist, financially and otherwise, the advancement of education in the field of journalism at the School of Journalism at the University of North Carolina."

A few of the things made possible by this vital foundation that might otherwise have to be curtailed, are journalism scholarships, extra newspaper subscriptions needed for teaching purposes, and travel by the faculty on "J" School business.

A large degree of the success of the foundation since its founding is accredited to Holt McPherson, of The High Point Enterprise. McPherson was instrumental in the founding of the organization and has served as president of the corporation since its founding.

Funds for the Foundation's activities are obtained through the contributions of daily and non-daily newspapers in North Carolina. Many of these newspapers contribute annually on the basis of 2½ cents per subscriber. Individuals are not asked to contribute, although gifts from individuals, particularly in the form of memorials to newspapermen, are acceptable.

UNC School of Journalism
On Achieving Accreditation

It is with interest and pride that we have watched the growth of journalism at the University of North Carolina . . . first taught in 1922 by the founder of our own newspaper . . . gaining departmental status in 1926 . . . being recognized as a School within the University in 1950 . . . and now reaching another milestone in growth with the accredation of the School of Journalism by the American Council on Education for Journalism.

The objective of the School of Journalism, training newspapermen and women to serve the people of North Carolina, is one to which we fully subscribe.

We wish to especially congratulate Dean Norval Luxon and his faculty who have worked hard to gain this honor.

FOUNDATION

Gifts Placed In Trusts

Contributions to the Foundation are income tax deductible, since the Foundation is a non-profit, non-stockholding organization.

All contributions since 1954 have been placed in a Common Trust. No principal funds are expended. Income from the Common Trust amounting to a little over 3 percent is placed at the discretion of the Dean of the School of Journalism for use in the advancement of professional education for journalism.

Reciepts from this interest to date have totaled $10,346.92. From this amount the Journalism School will offer scholarships next year totaling $2400.

"Through the Journalism Foundation the newspaper of the state support the School of Journalism as no other school in the country is supported. Income from their contributions enables us to do many worthwhile things we could not otherwise do. An example are the $1,500 research assistantship and the three $300 scholarships we are giving next year from Foundation income," Dean of the School of Journalism Norval Neil Luxon said.

Currently serving as officers of the Journalism Foundation are: President, Holt McPherson, High Point Enterprise; Vice-President, Leslie S. Thompson,, Whiteville News-Reporter; Secretary, William C. Lassiter, Attorney-at Law; and Treasurer, Don J. Chipman, Winston-Salem Journal-Sentinel.

Old Well Initiation

The Order of the Old Well will initiate today at the Old Well at 4 p.m. A ceremony in Gerrard Hall will follow the one at the Old Well.

School

"A research program has been inaugurated and several staff members have produced a good volume of scholarly publications."

The School of Journalism is unique, Dean Luxon said, in the support that it receives from the newspapers of the state. The School of Journalism Foundation of North Carolina Inc. is supported by large and small newspapers which have contributed $1,951.41 to it in the past eight years. The School has received for expenditure at the discretion of the Dean $10,344.92. "No other school of journalism in the country receives such substantial financial support from the newspapers, and we are most grateful for this indication of their approval," Dean Luxon said.

HOWELL HALL
Journalism Building in 1960

Luxon Looks To 1960; Howell Hall New Home

By CLARKE JONES

Now that accreditation has been accomplished, the next milestone for the School of Journalism will be the move into larger quarters.

The target date for this is January of 1960. The place will be Howell Hall, now the Pharmacy Building.

It will take until then, says Dean Norval Neil Luxon, because the Pharmacy School will occupy the building through June, 1959. Remodeling will take about six months, say the architects and UNC Director of Operations J. S. Bennett.

Luxon reported a sum of Approximately $222,000 will be spent in renovating their new home.

John S. Holloway and Ralph Reeves of the Holloway-Reeves firm in Raleigh, chosen by the Board of Trustees to draw the renovation plans, have submitted preliminary drawings to Luxon.

"They are very adequate and I'm very happy about it," he said earlier this week. He proudly showed them to a reporter.

The move will give the Journalism School about four times the space they now have in Bynum Hall. Luxon said they would have 22,000 square feet of space.

The new building will give them such features as their own photography rooms ("We now use the Photo Lab facilities in the Swain Hall basement"), an advertising laboratory with 21 easel type desks, two news writing laboratories, and a student assembly room.

The assembly room, to be located on the top floor, will be a place for students to meet between classes. "It's one of the nice things and is going to work out very well," Luxon said.

On the ground floor there will be a news editing laboratory with a special copy table. Wire service booths will be behind it next to the wall, he said.

Four separate small developing rooms and a chemical mixing room for photography classes will be made available. A typography laboratory where students can learn to set type will also be on the ground floor..

The main floor will have:

1. An auditorium seating 250 persons. This will have new seats, Luxon said.
2. The main Journalism office and the dean's office.
3. A reading room.
4. Two news writing laboratories with 20 desks each.
5. Three faculty offices that will permit also the holding of small seminar classes.

On the top floor will be the advertising laboratory, a large classroom seating about 60 persons, three seminar offices, a research center with cubicles for research assistants ("the assistants will have lots of work space") and the Assembly Room.

Luxon was asked if he planned to have a laboratory newspaper. He appeared doubtful on this question.

But he said "I would like to have a closer relationship with the two local papers and The Daily Tar Heel even though we have students working on them now."

Luxon said he didn't want to take over The Daily Tar Heel. "I never said I wanted it although I've been charged with saying that," he said.

Luxon showed some concern over getting the water pipes repaired in the building. He reported Howell Hall has been in use since 1905, by the Chemistry Dept. until 1925 and the Pharmacy Dept. until now.

Both the architects are registered and hold Bachelor of Architectural Engineering degrees from North Carolina State College.

Luxon said last fall "We are extremely fortunate in the selection of architects. These young men have designed the new building on Health Affairs Hill for the School of Pharmacy and, more important to us, did an unusual job in remodeling the Alumni Memorial Building at State College.

Other jobs done by the firm include the Seymour Johnson Air Force Base in Goldsboro, the North Carolina Motor Vehicles Building, the Edwards and Broughton Manufacturing Plant, and the Prisons Office Building in Raleigh.

News Bureau Helps Carolina And Students

The University has a propaganda agency—truth propaganda that is—which tells the story of UNC and Chapel Hill all over North Carolina.

For 40 years the News Bureau has been sending out information to national magazines, newspapers, television and wire services, as well as sometimes to people in all parts of the world.

Although the News Bureau is not connected with the School of Journalism, it offers the school a great service by providing self-help students with interesting work. Part-time jobs are not restricted to J-Schoolers, though, and students from other areas sometimes find themselves injected with addicting printer's ink after getting a taste of newspaper work.

Alfred Guy (Pete) Ivey has been director of the office since 1955. He graduated from Carolina in 1935 and took part in boxing, debating, publications and dramatics and was a member of the fleece during his undergraduate days.

SPECTACULAR GROWTH

The spectacular growth of hospital, surgical, and regular medical expense protection continued in 1956. Since 1940, the number of persons with hospital expense insurance has increased from 12,312,000 to 115,949,000. The number of persons with surgical expense protection rose from 5,350,000 to 101,325,000 over the same period. The number of people protected by regular medical expense insurance increased from 3,000,000 at the end of 1940 to 64,891,000 at the end of 1956. —Health Insurance Council

Degrees Have Gone To 950

Nine hundred fifty persons have received degrees since a separate department of journalism was established on the campus. Of these graduates, 629 were men and 321 women.

Louis Graves, contributing editor of the Chapel Hill Weekly, headed the first journalism instruction starting in 1922. Gerald W. Johnson, for many years editorial writer on the Baltimore Sun, followed Mr. Graves. Mr. Johnson was on campus from 1924 to 1926.

O. J. Coffin came to the campus in 1926 from the Raleigh Times and headed the journalism program until his resignation in August 1953. He continued to teach through the academic year 1955-56, when he decided to retire. Known as "The Skipper" by hundreds of students, Professor Coffin trained many who later gained national recognition in newspaper, advertising, radio, and public relations work. Norval Neil Luxon took over as Dean on December 1, 1953.

Among the list of graduates of the School of Journalism are a Fellows, and one Sigma Delta Chi Pulitzer Prize winner, six Nieman Editorial Award winner.

four tuition scholarships for journalism students.

Charles Mack Johnson of Lenoir was 1956-57 president and his work contributed greatly toward the drive for the professional chapters.

In 1957-58 a Sigma Delta Chi committee headed by Tom Bolch, Hickory sophmore was named to take the final steps towards the professional group.

Monthly meetings continue, with active journalists from throughout the state offering their experience and advice, and giving students an opportunity to meet these men with an eye toward future jobs.

Linksmen Play Duke

Ready to rebound from a setback in the hands of Maryland last Saturday, the Carolina golfers will meet once beaten Duke in a match here this afternoon.

The Maryland loss is the only black mark on the Tar Heels record. They had gone six straight before that fatal day. Duke, has also suffered only one defeat. Virginia holds that honor.

Today's match should help to clear up the fog covering the outcome of the ACC tournament. Before their loss, the Tar Heels were favored. Duke feels the same way about their club, but the Tar Heels defeated Virginia.

The Tar Heels will use the same six that has carried the ball most of the season. Billy Thornton and Tom Langley will meet Duke's top two. Gene Lookabill and Joe Callicott will play in the second foursome. John McKee and Charles Erdman wil round out the squad.

and then call for the students who were in the dorms.

One of the main things that Graham Memorial lacks is a snack bar. Where there are eating places on the university campus, there are going to be people to take advantage of them.

At present, Graham Memorial is so crowded for space that almost every available room either has an office or is used for meetings. This need for more meeting space

Perhaps the question of how the would be met by the new Union. union would serve the students could best be answered as it was by a Daily Tar Heel article of 1952. The article gave the following provisions:

1. A rich variety of recreational and social activities.
2. A campus center around which students activities can focus;
3. Opportunities to participate in organizational work which will be useful in home community leadership;
4. Student self-discovery through development of skills;
5. An informal "at home" atmosphere, thus assuring more continuity and satisfaction in the life of the University community;
6. Full expression of the University's traditional hospitality to its many friends through a building which is dignified and beautiful, friendly and functions;
7. Profitable utilization of the students' leisure time so that it will be unnecessary to leave the campus on weekends;
8. An atmosphere conductive to the development of student responsibility towards the University and the campus community.

Deacons Halt Tar Heels 4-1; Loss Drops Carolina To 2nd

WINSTON-SALEM, — UP — Ben Tench, Wake Forest senior right-hander, held Carolina to two hits and fanned 19 batters as Wake Forest stopped the Atlantic Coast Conference leaders, 4-1, here last night.

The Deacons dropped the Tar Heels to second place in the conference behind Clemson, halted an eight-game winning streak by Carolina and handed lefty Ben Harding his first setback of the season after five victories.

Tench was wild in the first inning and after two men were out he walked Alton Pons. John Burgwyn then singled to center field and Tench walked Vaughn Bryson and Tommy Saintsing to force in a run.

After that rocky start he settled down and was never in trobule. Only two Tar Heel base runners reached second and none advanced to third after the first inning.

Harding, who started for Carolina, was also bothered by wildness. With one down in the second inning he walked Rex McCillan and then his defense collapsed as an infield single by Frank Skinner, a stolen base and three errors let two Deacon runners across the plate.

McMillan, who led the Wake Forest eight-hit assault with three safeties, homered over the right-center field fence to open the seventh. An error and McMillan's single with two out in the eighth accounted for the final Wake Forest run.

Tench retired the side in the second, third, eighth and ninth innings by strikeouts.

Frank McGuire Refuses Offer From St. Louis

ST. LOUIS (AP)-St Louis University failed yesterday to land Carolina's Frank McGuire as its basketball coach.

The Rev. Charles L. Sanderson, a faculty member in charge of the search for a new coach to replace Eddie Hickey, said the possibility of McGuire accepting the job was "dead."

Father Sanderson said the deadline set by St. Louis for McGuire to accept he job had passed.

McGuire, who coached Carolina to an N.C.A.A. national championship with an undefeated team in 1956-57, has signed a new contract with the Tar Heels.

McGuire topped the list of big-name coaches approached by St. Louis since Hickey resigned recently to coach the Marquette University basketball team.

Freshmen Top Oak Ridge 3-0

Carolina's freshman baseball team shutout Oak Ridge Military Academy 3-0 here yesterday on Jerry McNeil's two-hit pitching.

It was the 11th win against two losses for the Tar Babies, coached by Pat Earey.

Russ Hollers collected two of Carolina's four hits, a pair of singles. John Wilson and Tommy Camp got a double apiece for UNC.

The Tar Babies meet Wilmington Junior College here Thursday at 2:30 and play host to Wake Forest Saturday after a varsity game between Virginia and North Carolina. The varsity game starts at 2 p.m.

Netters Drop First Match To Havard 8-1

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP)-Harvard won five of six singles events and swept the doubles yesterday to defeat Carolina 8-1 in a tennis match.

Capt. Dal Junta returned to action after a back injury and whipped Tar Heel Capt. Bob Bortner in straight sets in the top singles match.

Singles:

Dale Junta, Harvard, defeated Bob Bortner, 6-4, 6-4.

Larry Sears, Harvard, defeated Steve Bank, 6-1, 3-6, 6-3.

Tim Gallwey, Harvard, defeated Geoff Black, 6-2, 8-10, 6-1.

Ned Weld, Harvard, defeated Mal Clark, 6-1, 6-4.

Ben Keys, Carolina, defeated Allen Goldman, 10-8, 6-0.

Fred Vinton, Harvard, defeated Dick Makepeace, 1-6, 6-3, 6-1.

Mural Track Results

The Annual Intramural Track and Field day came to a close last night with Cobb winning the dormitory division, Zeta Psi the fraternity, and Med School the graduate.

Yesterday's action saw the finals in all the track events. Tuesday, the field event winners were decided. Most of the entries discovered the truth in track training rules, especially in the ¾-mile run. One runner did a swan dive into the grass after a lap and a half in that 3 lap race.

In the dormitory division, the scoring went as follows: Cobb 41, Lewis 36, Winston 15 and Alexander 5.

Zeta Psi won the fraternity division with 25.51 points, Kappa Sig was second with 19.14, PiKA third with 15, and SAE forth with 13.5.

In the Graduate division Med School won with 32.5, Dental School was second with 21. Law School was with 13.5, and Peacocks forth with 10.

Charles Coley Named Leader Of University Dance Group

President Student Body Don Furtado has announced the officers for the 1958-59 University Dance Committee.

They are Chairman, Charles Coley; chairman of the Dance Committee Court, Charlie Younce, secretary, Bob Cromley and members of the Court: Bill Taylor, John Ragland, Whit Moose, and Rudy Edwards.

There is a popular misconception among many students of the University that the University Dance Committee sponsors dances. They do not sponsor them.

When the University was in its younger stages there had to be at least one faculty member at every dance sponsored by a dormitory, fraternity or other University organization.

As the university grew, and the student body enlarged, there began to be resentment among groups on the campus because of this rule. The University Dance Committee came into existence.

It functions as a supervising body for all University sponsored dances. Members attend, or at least some of them attend each of these dances. Their duty at these dances is to see that those students present conduct themselves as ladies and gentlemen.

They are a governing body, and so set up principles by which the dances are conducted. They have the right to try any student who does not conduct himself in a proper manner at these dances.

If any campus organization or group would like to have a dance they have been asked to contact the Chairman of the University Dance Committee. Charles Coley at the ATO House, or Ray Jefferies whose office is in South Building, at least one week ahead of time.

Billiard Tournament

Graham Memorial will sponsor a billiard tournament Thursday, May 8, in the Graham Memorial billiard room.

Three jointed cue sticks will be offered as prizes.

Interested students have been asked to sign up for the tournament in the GM billiard room.

UNC Men's Glee Club Elects New Officers

Rising Senior Don Gray from Washington, D. C. has been chosen to head next year's slate of officers for the Men's Glee Club.

In elections held Monday, Glee Club members selected a total of seven officers to succeed the present executive committee.

Gray, a member of Delta Upsilon Fraternity, succeeds President Charles Shoe of Charleston, S. C. who served as Business Manager last year in addition to his executive capacity this year. Gray will officially take office today at the club's regularly Thursday practice.

Kenneth James, a Delta Sigma Pi and rising junior from Mayodan, was elected vice-president. Other officers are: secretary - Herman Jones, rising junior from Reidsville; business manager-Nick Ellison, rising sophomore from Ft. Thomas, Ky. and a Delta U; publicity manager-Ben Taylor, rising Senior from Williamston; and librarians-Donald McFadyen, rising sophomore from Sanford and Stanley Black, a sophomore from Charlotte and a member of Delta Upsilon fraternity.

ORIENTAL NOTE
Sound and Fury takes to the Far East

'No Squares Allowed' Has Siamese Surprise

By MARY MOORE MASON

Leo, the agent, glanced out the door into his outer office.

"Nothing unusually today," he yawned. "Just a talking ape, a mother with a child prodigy, and a Siamese dancer and singer."

Suddenly, the people spotted the agent and rushed madly for his door, all but the little Siamese girl who sat quietly in the corner.

Turning to her, he growled kindly, "Come on in, girly, and let me see your act."

Gracefully she moved across his office, bowing and turning, constantly moving her expressive hands, as she sang a little Siamese song.

Entranced, Lee watched her, and then said, "That's wonderful honey, but what else can you do?"

Then Sodsai had a surprise for him, a surprise that Cecil Hartsoe, director of Sound and Fury, will not reveal. "But," he says, "it should bring down the house."

For Sodsai Vanij Vodhana will be a surprise in herself when she appears this Friday and Saturday nights in "No Squares Allowed." The Sound and Fury production from which the above scene was taken.

For not too many years ago this little graduate student here at Carolina on a Fulbright scholarship was the official entertainer for the King of Siam.

However, unlike many foreign students who come to this country, she has not discarded her heritage after coming to the United States. Very proud to be Siamese, she is not only doing graduate work in dramatics so she can go back to her own country and teach, but she has also appeared in several dramatic productions about the Far East since coming to The Univer-

Legislature Approves Bill For Trash Cans On Campus

By DAVE JONES

Last night, the Student Legislature approved Rep. Rudy Edwards' (SP) bill asking for trash cans on campus. This action was taken on a non-partisan basis. Edwards' UP counterpart, Rep. Dave Biren, also spoke in favor of the bill and stated that there was no "animosity between the Student Party and the University Party now," as there was last year when this bill was defeated for the second time.

Representatives Graham Claytor (UP) and Roger Foushee (SP) cointroduced a bill which would permit both the public and the press to be permitted entrance to the meetings of the Women's Residence Council. At present, the Women's Residence Council meets behind closed doors. This bill will be acted upon next week.

The Legislature speedily approved the constitution and bylaws of the Amateur Radio Club, clearing the way for debate on the question of their appropriation.

However, a motion by the appropriation's author, Rep. Roger Foushee (SP), to increase the 1500 dollars approved by the finance committee to 2000 dollars, bogged down debate on the bill for over an hour. To end the impasse, Rep. Dave Biren (UP) moved that the bill be tabled for a week. The club advisor, Professor Victor A. Masket (K4CAU), agreed to speak to the body at that time and express his opinion on the amount of money needed.

Representative Bill Porter's (SP) bill to have a permanent bulletin board in Y-court for Student Legislature business was approved.

Standard travel allowance for students traveling on Student Government business was increased from six cents, to seven cents a mile effective with the beginning of the new fiscal year.

The bill temporarily suspending the Election Law and setting up a committee to rewrite it was passed. The committee must have a report for the body by the seventh meeting of the 25th assembly.

Ed Levy, NSA Coordinator, spoke on behalf of the two bills concerning his group. They both passed, reimbursing the delegates to the regional convention and increasing the committee's membership from six to twelve.

Finally, under the heading of old business, the body passed a resolution affirming the Legislature's confidence in the organizations under its jurisdiction.

Order Of The Old Well Initiates New Members

The Order of the Old Well initiated 70 members into its honorary Thursday at 4 p.m.

A relative newcomer to campus honorary societies, the Order of the Old Well was established in 1949 with the help of a few interested students. The three men instrumental in its formation were Dean of Awards, Ernest Mackie; the late Dr. Samuel T. Emory; and professor of English, Dr. William S. Wells. The idea for this honorary originated from the feeling that "too much service is being done in the University and too little recognition forthcoming."

Membership is based on an equitable point system representing tangible accomplishments of student leaders.

Pre-initiation ceremonies were held at the historic Old Well with the group later moving to Gerrard Hall for the actual initiation.

Those initiated yesterday were Charles Hall Ashford, Jr., New Bern; Neil Carmichael Bender, Pollocksville; David Robert Biren, Arlington, Va.; Wayne Staton Bishop, Greenville; Girard Edgar Boudreau, Jr., N. Augusta, S. C.; John Charles Brooks, Greenville; Robert Wilson Carter, Selma; Joseph Mark Clapp, Greensboro;

Katherine Keith Coe, Washington, D. C.; Wilson Reid Cooper, Jr., Signal Mountain, Tenn.; Robert Jenkins Cowan, Greensboro; Julia Ann Crater, Raleigh; Rudolph Lee Edwards, Rutherfordton; Donald Frederick Evans, Myrtle Beach, S. C.; Mary Jane Fisher, Bristol, Va., Charles Zorah Flack, Forest City;

Burton Allan Horwitz, Raleigh; Betty Carolyn Huffman, Catawba; James Lewis Inabinet, Winston-Salem; James Morris Kimzey, Brevard; Hannah Boone Kirby, Louisville, Ky.; Phyllis Elliot Krafft, River Forest, Ill.; John Michael Lazarus, Sanford; Wade Hampton Lefler, Jr., Newton;

Thomas Veach Long, II, Thomasville; Barbara Ward Madison, Washington, D. C.; Mary Moore Mason, Roanoke, Va.; Charles Raysor May, III, Bennettsville, S. C.; Jennie Margaret Meador, Charlotte; Elizabeth Parrish McCord, Spartanburg, S. C.; Donald Wofford Millen, Charlotte; Patricia Marie Miller, Kinston;

REV. A. L. KERSHAW
. . . for last year's Y-Nite

Witchcraft, Jazz, Eats Highlite Annual Y-Nite

The annual Y-Nite all-campus picnic will be held under Davie Poplar next Monday at 5:30 p.m.

The special feature of the picnic will be a talk on "WITCHCRAFT" by Dr. Rossell Robbins. During the BAR-B-Q supper, Les Sutorius and his combo will play jazz.

Dr. Rossell Robbins, visiting professor from Colombia University, is teaching in the English department at Carolina for six months. He is one of the foremost authorities on "WITCHCRAFT" and has done extensive research on this subject from its beginnings in the Medieval Period as religious heresy, continuing through the early Colonial witch trials up to its present-day manifestations.

To set the scene for Dr. Robbins, Les Sutorius and his jazz combo will cast their spell over the audience playing their own brand of "WITCHCRAFT." This combo has made numerous campus appearances, and during the basketball intermissions.

Since three is a magic number, three special features are to be presented at the picnic. The first two have been mentioned and the third is a very special Bar-B-Q supper for 50c.

All seven sororities and so far eight fraternities have agreed to forego dinners at their respective houses to attend the picnic. The Y-Nite committee expressed hope that this early indication of enthusiasm and co-operation will encourage as many people as possible to attend, adding that "it is the purpose of Y-Nite to draw all segments of the campus together to share a common experience, as was seen at the Talent Show last fall."

Four Public Officials Comment On Situation

By DAVIS YOUNG
And KEN FRIEDMAN

(This is the fourth in a series of articles concerning the sewage situation in the Isley St.-Stinson St.-N. Columbia St. Extension area.)

Several local government officials and the Director of University Housing have commented on the sewage problems of the neighborhood. The District Health Office, the Chapel Hill Building Inspector, the Director of University Housing and an official in the County Building Inspector's Office in Hillsboro have made statements in response to questions put to them recently.

The District Health Commissioner stated in his office last week that "the chief cause of this trouble has been the soil in that area. It will not absorb water properly.

"The city has no municipal responsibility for this area because it is outside the city limits. We have tried to help them solve this problem, but we have no legal right or say-so.

"The mechanical breakdown of a pump in that area causes a great deal of the trouble. The man who owns that was the most serious offender.

"People also don't control their water usage properly. They may own washing machines and the septic tanks can't handle that excess of water properly. When the area was developed it was before that area came under the zoning laws and many of the houses are built on lots that are too small and close together.

"It is generally a problem area for septic tanks. It is a problem of fringe areas where public services can't be provided and they must resort to their own means. As I said, the worst offender has been corrected. Two or three others remain.

"The Health Department has tried to get a satisfactory solution. Finally Mr. Eddie Fields Jr. of Chapel Hill, has visualized what can be done here and has consented to construct a sewage line to that area."

Chapel Hill Building Inspector Howard Stewart was heard to say recently that "the area under discussion is out of the city limits of Chapel Hill and therefore we have no real jurisdiction. The realtors have a free hand in this area to do about what they want.

"As far as I know, nobody has any jurisdiction to check that neighborhood. There is nothing that I can do and I definitely feel that the county should have the jurisdiction."

Stewart went on to indicate that in his opinion, the entire neighbor-

Two Chancellors Speak On Importance Of Union

By AL RESCH

This is the final article in a series designed to show a need for a Student Union on the UNC campus. Contrary to plans, this article, the third, will be the last since the last two topics have been combined: what the student leaders think about a new union and what part the student will play in getting a new union.

"The need for a new Student Union is there; the real question is money," said Chancellor W. B. Aycock when asked about the possibility of a new union.

According to the Chancellor the University has a long way to go before there can be built a new union which would serve the students.

The steps for the direct action for a new Union are outlined as follows: The Cancellor must first put the union on the list of needed permanent improvements for the University; It must then be put on a similar list for the Consolidated University; Next it goes to the Advisory Budget Commission who submits it to the legislature for consideration; then, it has to be passed by the legislature and the money appropriated for a new union.

"Even if we had money now, it would still take two year for a new union to be built," said Chancellor Aycock. He added that at the present time no money had been received for the project; so at the minimum it would take three years.

Once money has been appropriated or raised in various ways, there are several steps which will limit the beginning of construction by at least one year.

There has to be conference with the architect, approval of the final plans, bids, giving of the bids, and finally actual construction.

"All this takes time," said Chancellor Aycock, "and all we can do is let the people know what is happening toward the construction plans."

Band Opens Activities For Annual Parents' Day

By JULIUS BUDACZ

The UNC Concert Band, directed by Herbert W. Fred, will present the first of a series of lawn concerts Sunday afternoon as a part of the annual Parents' Day Program on campus.

The concert will be given near the Davie Poplar at 4:30 p.m. In the event of rain, the program will be presented in Hill Hall.

Guest conductors will be Eddie Bass, a senior music major, and Jerry Sullivan, who will conduct his own composition, Hanover Cadets. Featured soloists will be Marvin Eargle, Bob Wilkinson, and Jo Ann Goulson, who will perform Paul Yoder's drum trio, Haskell's Rascals.

Included in the program will be Strauss' Emperor Waltz and My Hero. Romberg's Student Prince and Anderson's Belle of the Ball.

A full day of activities has been scheduled for the eighth annual Parents' Day. Activities include church at 11 a.m.; lunch at 12 noon; dormitory open house at 2 p.m.; demonstration and exhibits, Air Force Drum and Bugle Corps at Fetzer Field, exhibits at museums and Consolidated University offices and Morehead Building open for inspection from 2-4 p.m.

From 3:30-4:30 a faculty reception will be held at Polk Place. At 4:30, Chancellor Emeritus Robert Burton House will give an address and supper will be served at Student Supper Forums at the various churches at 6 p.m.

Many interesting book exhibits will be on display in the library, and the Rare Book Room will be open from 2-5 p.m.

Eight cases of Selected Gifts from Friends of the Library will be shown. Among them are a leaf from the Mainz Bible printed in 1462, presented by E. G. Robbins; a Latin Bible printed 1494, presented by Dr. Lawrence F. London; the famous two-volume work on Mushrooms by Wasson presented by Gordon Gray and "The Life of St. Jerome" printed in 1475, presented by Dannie N. Heineman.

One case holds a small selection of the great number of recent additions to the Hoyt Collection of French History, donated by the late William Henry Hoyt, and a second is given over to finely-printed Limited Editions Club books presented this past year by Dr. William P. Jacobs.

Equal Regulations Bill Passes In Di-Phi Debate

The Di and The Phi meeting Tuesday night at Phi Hall in joint session, passed on a vote of 13 to 6 a bill calling for equal rules for all women enrolled in the University or any of its divisions.

The bill resolved that "there should be no social regulations which do not apply equally to all women enrolled at the University of North Carolina, regardless of class or division of the University in which a women is enrolled."

Senator Gary Greer of the Dialectic Literary Society introduced the bill which he said would remedy "a basic incongruity between rules for freshmen and nurses and rules for other women students. The question is really one of whether student freedom is or is not a function of student responsibility." Greer added that he is "against rules based on pseudo-distinctions between personalities."

Senator Carl Barrington stated that "discipline brings responsibility," and that therefore rules should be in force. Henry Gould of the Phi pointed out that "freedom has its responsibilities," and that these responsibilities are often neglected. It was added by Don Gray of the Phi that freshman girls need the restrictions. "It is a privilege to be an upperclassman, and there should be freedoms for those who attain that standing."

Representative Don Jacobs of the Phi wanted to know "who can maintain that women eighteen years old, who can vote for the president of the United States in some states, are not able to make rules for themselves."

Rep. David Matthews stated that "the degree should represent knowledge and maturity, and rules allow little opportunity for maturity to develop."

Curtis Gans of the Di, who was declared Speaker of the Evening noted that "self-discipline is better than forced discipline from above. There is no disciplinary or scholastic reason for the rules, so why discriminate between freshman and others?"

The vote of Senators of the Di and Representatives of the Phi was 13 for the bill and 6 against.

Graham Memorial Day Planned For Tuesday

Graham Memorial Activities Board has announced its first Graham Memorial Day for May 6 at 5:30 p.m. at Camp New Hope.

The purpose of the day is for student leaders and students who are interested in working with the student union next year to get to know each other and discuss campus activities and problems constructively.

However, according to Eleanor Brawel, assistant director of Graham Memorial, there will also be a picnic, swimming in the new pool at the camp, and entertainment presented by the cast of Sound and Fury, one of the organizations under GMAB.

"Next year will be one of the most important years in the history of GMAB because of the arrival of the new full time director, because of the plans for the new student union, and because of the excellent progress made this year," said Mrs. Brawley, "consequently GMAB is searching for excellent leadership on its activities board next year, and it hopes that all interested students will attend this Graham Memorial Day and get to know the role of GMAB on campus."

The theme of the day will be "The Student's Sense of Values", and it will be discussed with reference to the following topics: "College As Preparation For Vocation," "The Role of the Fine Arts in Our Education," "The Role of the Campus Religious Organizatons in Student Life," "Social Life: Ideas for Improvement," "The Role of Extra-Curriculars in Education."

Students from the student government, legislature, residence councils, Pan-Hellenic, IFC, religious groups, and many other organizations have been invited to the picnic and discussion.

However, Betty Carolyn Huffman of the planning committee has urged all other students, especially those interested in working with the student union, to come. "This should help us get a realistic picture of some of the needs student's and the role these groups can play in meeting those needs."

The other members of the planning committee are Bob Boden, Janet Hobbs, Pete Austin, Tom Rand, and advisor Eleanor Brawley.

Phi Eta Sigma Pictures

Dean of Student Awards Ernest L. Mackie has asked all newly initiated members of Phi Eta Sigma to pick up the pictures which were made at the initiation the pictures are at Mackie's office in 312 South Building.

GM SLATE

The following activities have been scheduled for today at Graham Memorial:

Fencing, 6:30-11 p.m., Roland Parker Lounges I and II; Honor Council, 2-4 p.m., Woodhouse Conference Room.

IN THE INFIRMARY

Students in the infirmary yesterday included:

Misses Patricia Gregory and Leila Ibrahim, and Curtis Fields, Larry Harris, John Lillelson, Robert Murray, Harold Richman, Edward River, George Sasser, Kenneth White, Fredrick Wolfer, and Robert Zimmerman.

The Quigg Case

The Atlantic Coast Conference meets today, and one of the orders of business is a decision on the case of Joe Quigg.

Recently conference commissioner Jim Weaver ruled that Quigg could only play the first semester of the coming year due to the eligibility rules of the conference.

At that time Weaver did not have the authority to make that ruling, and it would be indeed an unfortunate result if his announcement tipped the scales against Quigg.

The decision belongs to the entire conference, which should consider the factor that the reason Quigg could not play during the past year was an injury, and that if he had the choice he would have been playing, which, in turn would have brought in all probability a championship team to Carolina for the second year in a row.

Quigg could not play, but it was not a scholastic deficiency that placed him in this capacity, the physical liability should not bar him from another year's participation.

The conference can act wisely today, by allowing Quigg to play for the entirety of the coming year.

The Sewage Problem

On the pages of this paper during the past few days have appeared a series of articles dealing with a problem which affects students and townspeople living in an area of Chapel Hill.

The problem is a serious one, for it is a problem of neglect.

The ultimate blame for the poor living conditions and the open sewage must be placed on the county health authorities, for if they are not responsible for this area themselves, they have the responsibility to see that the local government clears up the problem.

It is obvious that the problem has not been solved, and the means for alleviation of the problem are extremely slow.

It is further shown that those helping in alleviating the problem, are not doing the most competent job. This can be seen by the open manhole case, whereby a lady fell into a manhole, which was not blocked off nor completed.

There seems to be a general lack of authority and responsibility in handling this situation, and it should be obvious to all those who have anything at all to say about the area, that the situation needs action now.

It may take revision of zoning laws, reconstruction of some of the houses, a more adequate waste disposal system, and removal of tons of earth. This is a lot to do, but the welfare of hundreds is at stake.

For the simple cause of humanity, if not for the cause of responsible government, the county should act and soon.

The present situation is a disgrace to the community.

Pay Phones

Sometime, not long ago, someone slipped a fast one on the student body by putting pay telephones in the library. They were placed there and very few sounds have been made since.

The issue ought to be raised.

The entire question of why are there University owned utilities can be raised with the placing of pay phones in the library.

The only answer to that question would be "to provide students with free service."

This answer and principle have been violated by the pay phones.

Steps should be taken soon to see that the phones are again put on a free local call basis.

The Daily Tar Heel

The official student publication of the Publication Board of the University of North Carolina, where it is published daily except Monday and examination and vacation periods and summer terms. Entered as second class matter in the post office in Chapel Hill, N. C., under the Act of March 8, 1870. Subscription rates: mailed, $4 per year, $2.50 a semester; delivered, $6 a year, $3.50 a semester.

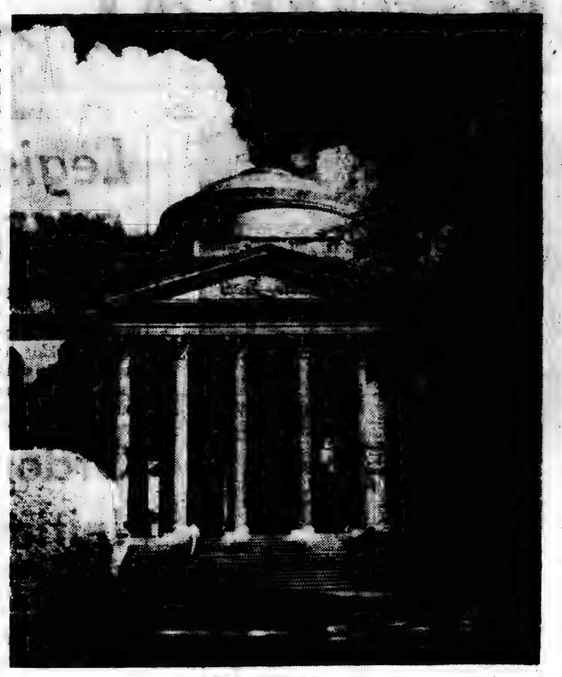
Readers Want Open Stacks

Editor:

I am glad to see that someone has taken the time to write on your library system. Many of the rules of your library are as old and dusty as some of the books on the stack shelves. These rules certainly need to be brought out into the strong light of reason and I am sure many would have to be changed.



The logic behind the present rules of no undergraduates in the stacks is difficult for me to grasp. One would think that these rules are based upon the assumption that an undergraduate never has the desire to read one extra page from a book that isn't assigned reading. The present rules encourage this regardless of the reason behind them.

Anyone who says that undergraduates can use the card catalogs to choose their books has either never tried to use the card catalogs or is deliberately circumventing the issue. Only a fool would argue that a student having difficulty with say differential equations can run to the card catalog and find just the book in which the author explains that is clearest to the student. The only way is to go down and browse through the books and pick out the author who explains certain point in the manner in which the student finds clearest.

The argument that students would carry of the books without checking them out in not only ludicrous but insulting to the Carolina student body. Anyone who really wants to steal a book merely has to write "Joe Blow" or some other suitable alias on the check-out card and go merrily on his way with the book. This is certainly the easiest thing to effect because no one has to show an identfication card when checking out books.

If the library administration is dogmatic and continues to keep this view of not trusting the student then it will be simple enough to place a "guard" on the door leading to the stack. IIf the staff wants a "fool proof system", a lock which buzzes when the door opens can be installed very cheaply. However, as I said, this whole concept of not trusting the students is insulting.

The belief that chaos will prevail if undergraduates are given access to the stacks is groundless. Before coming here, I studied at Sandford University. The undergraduates were given access to the fabulously large and expensive collection of books in Stanford's libraries and I found the traffic among the stacks quite light. As for misplacing books within the stack, I am sure the students would be no worse than the proverbial absent minded professor.

LOUIS ROUND WILSON LIBRARY
Are Students Given A Chance

It is my belief that there would be no mass traffic jam in the stacks if everyone could have access to them Most of the times when I have visited our stacks they have been more like an Egyptian tomb than Grand Central Station. Let's face it many students have little or no desire to visit the stacks even if they were permitted to do so. Indeed, I hear that some of our students, bless their hearts, never even go in the library—much less in the stacks. However, it is very unjust to deprive any student— access to the stacks if he really has a desire to study on his own.

If the library administration will not change its rules and permit the undergraduates to go to the stacks I suggest that the students make the library staff "bring the stacks to them." So the next one of you wants to find information on a particular subject you should fill out 10 or 20 call cards (it won't take long) and merely make your choice at the desk when the books are brought to you.

Jim Merrell

Editor:

Arthur Herring brought up an interesting point in his letter which appeared in the Daily Tar Heel today: it is certainly something which those in charge of library rules and regulations should think about.

I was extremely lucky this year, in that those participating in the Advanced Courses for Freshmen were issued stack permits shortly after the last fall semester began. The stacks are places of great interest, and it has been quite convenient and enjoyable to be able to go there at any time. This is a privilege which should not be limited to Graduate students and only a few undergraduates, for our great library belongs to the entire student body and not to only part of it. Of course, opening the stacks to everyone all the time probably would be impractical, but some system should be considered which would enable all students to have the privilege part of the time. Why not set definite hours every day in which the stacks would be open to everyone, and reserve part of the day for graduate students? The graduate students would probably prefer to have privacy from about six o'clock in the evening until closing hours; this would leave the stacks open for everyone's use and enjoyment up until that hour.

This is only a possibility, but some such system should be established. The stacks are too valuable to the education of everyone to make them "off limits" to all but a select few of our student body.

ACC Conference Meet: On Admission Of VPI

Whit Whitfield

Keep your eyes peeled on the Atlantic Coast Conference annual spring meeting in Greensboro today.

One of the most important items on the agenda is the possible admittance of Virginia Polytechnic Institute into the 8 team conference. That's just what the ACC needs—a polytechnic institute. Every conference needs a polytechnic institute, especially one as powerful and influential in athletic circles as VPI. How the ACC has survived these past five years without one we'll never know.

Virginia Tech's admittance will be good for the conference in many respects:

With more conference games scheduled with them by the other ACC schools, that will mean fewer games with Purdue, Notre Dame, Oklahoma, Texas, Southern Cal, and the like.

This will mean that the ACC will retain its southern provincialism—heavens, we wouldn't want to lose that. Keep it on the local level, so that the fans can understand each other.

The weak sisters of the conference will have someone in the conference at whose expense they might improve their lousy records, (i.e. Wake Forest and Virginia).

It may pave the way for the admittance of Woman's College, Sweet Briar, Randolph-Macon, Elon, Catawba, West Carolina, Pembroke, and East Carolina (they're comers) at a later date, in which event we can be assured of a well-rounded conference.

Taken to its ultimate conclusion the ACC would include every college able to field a team on the Atlantic Coast and would be truly representative.

With nine members in the conference there will be more incentive among the schools to qualify for the ACC basketball tournament, since every team will be scrambling to keep out of ninth position, or

In the event that all teams would play in the tournament, the last place team could receive three byes and play in the finals.

Jack Horner, in the Durham Herald has suggested that if Virginia Tech is admitted that Duke and North Carolina should withdraw and ultimately form, along with Southern Cal, UCLA, California, Miami, Pitt, and Notre Dame, an All-American Conference. This is a fine idea, but can those other teams play the caliber of ball that is evidenced in the ACC?

Now that Victor Bryant's son has long since passed through these hallowed halls, we wonder if the Board of Trustees might not condescend to let us revert to the quarter system and let us have our Saturdays back. Either that or take a day in the middle of the week in lieu of Saturdays if they are still determined to keep us "at home" on the week-ends.

Postscript

Jonathan Yardley

About twice a week I find it necessary to visit the locker room of Woollen Gymnasium in order to garb myself for physical education. Lately this venture has taken on new and exciting proportions.

For some unexplainable reason I have a great desire to leave my clothes and basket in locker number 345 . . . perhaps it is because that is an easy number to remember. Every Monday and Wednesday at ten o'clock I pick up my basket and rush down the aisle of lockers in order to beat the countless hundreds of other people who want to use locker number 345. And every Monday and Wednesday I find the same sight awaiting me—I open locker number 345 and discover a pair of dark gray flannel trousers, a white shirt, shoes, and so forth, along with a basket.

I am beginning to worry about locker number 345. I have yet to see it empty, yet the denizen never bothers to lock it. I wish he would either lock it or move his clothing, as I am getting quite tired of using locker number 343. But what really worries me is the whereabouts of the owner of the clothing contained in locker number 345.

All sorts of nasty things could have happened to him: perhaps he was in the middle of tag football class last November when the terrible news came—he had been expelled and must leave within ten minutes—and had rushed out of Chapel Hill without returning to the locker room to retrieve his clothing and turn in his basket. Woollen Gym must be very worried about that basket. If anyone should be away from Chapel Hill and notice a young man walking around in a gray basketball shirt, gray short shorts, and sneakers, I wish they would get in touch with me; I'm quite worried and besides, I want that locker.

He may have been enrolled in fall tennis, however, and hit a ball over the backboard. People who hit balls over the backboard are supposed to go behind it and find them. The instructors always give a lecture upon the importance of leaving the backboard with as many balls as were brought out, and he may be very conscientious. I was back there a few weeks ago trying to find one that I had hit over, but I saw no sign of this assiduous young man. I really wish he would find that ball.

Those of you who have been reading "Pogo" during the last few days will probably agree with me that Walt Kelly has said the last word on the Beat Generation. The strip has been superb . . . Have you ever tried to walk across Franklin Street by the Post Office when the light says "Walk?" I tried it a couple of days ago, and couldn't do it. I don't think Dave Sime could do it either.

I understand the ADPi skit at the Sigma Chi Derby was a scream. I'm really sorry that I didn't see it . . . What are these signs all over Chapel Hill that say, "You Auto Buy Now?" As Gab Gabfield pointed out a couple of columns ago, what do we have to buy with? And besides, if we buy more cars now, the nation won't be aided a bit, as everybody buys on the installment plan these days and all that would do would be to put the nation's creditors in a bigger hole than they are already.

I might discourage everyone who wants to become a playwright. I've just been through two months of agony with the Sound and Fury, and am terribly glad to have it all over. It must be in my blood, tho—it's an awful lot of fun . . . While I'm thinking of the Sound and Fury, I want to make some sort of public statement about the cast—they've been absolutely wonderful, as people and actors, and I couldn't have found a group of people more congenial. I hope all of them will be back next year.

One more public plea—will the person who creaps along the roof under my window at night and rattles the venetian blinds please stop? It scares me to death and I can't sleep.

Dark Of The Moon

Eric Severied

This, thank goodness, is the first warm and balmy night of the year in these parts; the first frogs are singing. Altogether this is hardly the night for whispering sweet sentiments about the reciprocal trade act, the extension thereof. But since we are confined, by tradition, to the contemplation of public themes and issues, let us contemplate the moon. The lovely and luminous moon has become a public issue. For quite a few thousand years it was a private issue; it figured in purely bilateral negotiations between lovers, in the incantations of jungle witch doctors and Indian corn planters. Poets from attic windows issued the statements about the moon, and they made better reading than the mimeographed handouts now being issued by assistant secretaries of defense.

The moon was always measured in terms of hope and reassurance and the heart pangs of youth on such a night as this; it is now measured in terms of mileage and footpounds of rocket thrust. Children sent sharp, sweet wishes to the moon; now they dream of blunt-nosed missiles.

There must come a time, in every generation when those who are older secretly get off the train of progress, willing to walk back to where they came from, if they can find the way. We're afraid we're getting off now. Cheer, if you wish, the first general or Ph.D. who splatters something on the kindly face of the moon. We shall grieve for him, for ourself, for the young lovers and poets and dreamers to come, because the ancient moon will never be the same again. Therefore, we suspect, the heart of man will never be the same.

We find it very easy to wait for the first photographs of the other side of the moon, for we have not yet seen the other side of Lake Louise or the Blue Ridge peak that shows through the cabin window.

We find ourself quite undisturbed about the front-page talk of "controlling the earth from the moon," because we do not believe it. If neither men nor gadgets nor both combined can control the earth from the earth, we fail to see how they will do so from the moon.

It is exciting talk, indeed, the talk of man's advances toward space. But one little step in man's advance toward man—that, we think, would be truly exciting! Let those who wish try to discover the composition of a lunar crater; we would settle for discovering the true mind of a Russian commissar or the inner heart of a delinquent child.

There is, after all, another side—a dark side—to the human spirit too. Men have hardly begun to explore these regions; and it is going to be a very great pity if we advance upon the bright side of the moon with the dark side of ourselves, if the cargo in the first rockets to reach there consists of fear and chauvinism and suspicion. Surely we ought to have our credentials in order, our hands very clean and perhaps a prayer for forgiveness on our lips as we promise to open the ancient vault of the shining moon.

POGO

For the benefit of those who missed Paul Smith's notices on behalf of the local bookshop, it should be announced that there is a new collection of Pogo on the stands. There are those who are content to await the next appearance of the less prolific but more sublime Peanuts and Co., but the new Pogo is as good a way to kill the time as any.

THE GRASS

It is a pleasure to reveal that the recent attempt to encourage trespassing on the Holy Grass is obviously a Communist plot, perpetrated by damn-yankees and the NAACP. Its aim is to reduce all

Carolina students, the last upholders of Nature, to the level of animals. Any fool knows that only animals and idiots tend to go directly from their point of departure to their destination. We human beings are more civilized than that, and it is a mark of our superiority that we have discovered the long way 'round.

Let it be known that any student seen walking on the grass is not only a foul NonConformist, but also a damned sinner, and he is automatically suspected of the same un-American directness in his thought and speech.

It is heartening to note that one of the more patriotic profs on campus has taken action to prevent the advance of this subversive movement. He has promised a Zero to any of his students whom he apprehends in the act of walking on the grass.

Such Big Brotherly Love is what we need more of around here. If everyone spent more of their time making sure that nobody stepped on their most cherished delusions, America would be a much more pleasant place to live.

This same enlightened proponent of the Paths of Self-Righteousness has taken even firmer measures to make sure that the young minds in his charge are led along the right track. He has announced a quiz to test the students' knowledge of the inviolability of the Grass as it has been revealed on this page.

It is to be hoped that this gentleman will see fit to include the present essay in the assigned text for the quiz. It is only fitting that this column should gain such recognition, for it is ever dedicated to warning its readers of the terrible fate in store for those people who go directly when they are going Nowhere.

Covering The Campus

BACKWARDS OR FORWARDS—IT'S STILL THE SAME
. . . John Sneden and Darwin Solomon as the servant twins in the "Comedy of Errors."

LAST PLAYMAKERS PRODUCTION

'Errors' Offers Farcical Action

Uncomplicated with sub-plots and filled with farcical action, Shakespeare's "The Comedy of Errors" furnishes The Carolina Playmakers a perfect vehicle for their outdoor theatre, the Playmakers publicity director said yesterday.

Scheduled for the Forest Theatre May 9-11 at 8:30 p.m., the play features Taylor Williams, John Whitty, Darwin Solomon and John Sneden as pairs of twins, mistaken for each other by the people of Ephesus.

Three of these actors were seen in this season's opener, "The Lark." Williams enacted the role of the Inquisitor; Sneden was the Dauphin; and Solomon played the brother of St. Joan. Whitty is best remembered for his role in last year's original play, "Stranger In The Land."

Others in the cast of "The Comedy of Errors" include Carl Hinrichs, Amanda Meiggs, Doris Berry, Megan Stuart, Margaret Starnes, Betty Rhodes, Jud Bender, Chuck Tomlinson, Bill Hannah, Harvey Knox, Jim Tyndall, Lore Schuller, Carolyn Myers, George Manasse, and Jack Jackson.

This production marks the end of the major theatrical season on the campus. Tickets will be available at The Forest Theatre Box Office on performance evenings. All tickets are $1.50. There are no reserved seats.

UNION

Commuters Need 'Home'

College have new college unions. According to Chancellor Carey Bostian of State College, the college union has more than served its purpose on the campus as a form of recreation, place for meetings, and also a faculty meeting place.

"Since it was first opened, it has been a great help to the campus and has been constantly used," said Bostain. He added that by time the union was opened, it was already too small.

"Not only has the union served as a recreation facility for the students but it has also served as the center of cultural evnts which take place on the State College campus," stated Bostian.

Bostian concluded that he couldn't over emphasize how much the student union and meant both to the students and to the college.

According to Roy Armstrong, Dean of Admission at UNC, with increases in enrollment will come more commuters. "They need a "home on the campus" which would be provided by the new union."

He stressed that for too many years the students had been forced away from campus and Chapel Hill to seek recreation and entertainment which would be made available by the new union.

"Parents will benefit from the union by having a place in which to visit when they come to the campus," concluded Armstrong.

Since the state legislature does not meet again until January 1959, the need for a union and the possibility of getting money seems a great way into the future; but as Student President Don Furtado points out, the students can help get the new union.

"Everyone who has ever had any connection with our present student union realizes the tremendous need that our campus has for a new, centrally located and adequately equipped student union," said Furtado.

He added that the present building could not provide sufficient meeting places and recreation facilities for the constant and ever growing student body.

He went on to say that obviously the new union could not be self-liquidating and that it was not realistic to expect that someone would donate the University the two million dollars needed.

"The funds then must and logically should be appropriated by the state legislature," said Furtado.

hood was in bad shape.

James Wadsworth, University Housing Director, stated: "I have heard that this neighborhood has a problem. I have called some of the realtors and they have told me that it will be cleared up.

"Of course we have to take into consideration that the weather has hurt this problem. It helped it get started and now is stopping it from being fixed.

"We have the utmost confidence in the landlords and owners and realize that they have been handicapped by the bad weather."

A building official in the County Courthouse in Hillsboro said Monday that the county has no jurisdiction over what he termed Chapel Hill sewage problems.

When informed that the area under discussion is a few hundred yards over the Chapel Hill line, he still disclaimed any responsibility, stating that as long as this area was tied in with the Chapel Hill lines, the county was powerless. The Chapel Hill Building Inspector had also claimed the same thing.

Just who is responsible for this area and why haven't they assumed their jobs?

Registrars, Admissions Officers Favor Federal Scholarships Aid

By WYNDHAM HEWITT

The American Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admission Officers wants federal aid for college scholarships, Roy Armstrong, UNC Dean of Admissions, said Monday.

Armstrong is the past president of the association and presided over this year's meeting. UNC delegates attending the meeting with Armstrong were Mrs. Armstrong, Raymond Strong, Assistant Director of Central Records Office, and Charles Bernard, Assistant Dean of Admissions.

It was resolved at the meeting that colleges accept federal aid for scholarships. The aid would be offered by the federal government to any state that would want it. The use of the federal funds would be left entirely to each separate state. That would give entire control to the participating states of the federal funds.

Utilization of available space in colleges and the problem of overcrowded schools was discussed at the meeting. It was found that the majority of colleges in the United States are not overcrowded. In fact, many of them are not even filled to capacity. For those that are overcrowded it was found that many of them are not using all available space.

It was deemed necessary by the convention that colleges and universities use all the available space in the years to come. There is going to be a great influx of students within the next few decades and all space will be needed.

In the years to come a great load is going to be placed on the junior college. There will be a definite need for more and more of these schools to handle the load. California now leads the nation in this field. The California junior colleges now have 60 per cent of all freshman and sophomore college students in the state.

The placement of high school graduates is another rising problem Armstrong said. The problem is placing the student in the kind of school that fits aptitude as well as his intelligence.

The new president of the association is Dr. Herman Spindt, Dean of Admissions, at the University of California, Berkely, California.

Tar Heels Seek Comeback Against Terps Here Today

By RUSTY HAMMOND

The Carolina Tar Heels seek to resume their winning ways here today against the last-place Maryland Terps, after having a 8-game winning streak brought to a sharp halt Wednesday night at the hands of Wake Forest.

The Deacons re-enacted their role as giant-killer in whipping the Tar Heels. Earlier in the season they knocked the Clemson Tigers right out of the league lead, and now have done the same to Carolina.

Carolina currently is in third place in the conference standings, and Clemson has regained her lead as top dog of the loop. Duke holds onto second place. Both Duke and Clemson moved ahead of Carolina althought they did not play, for the loss to Wake Forest dropped the Tar Heels from 6-1 to 6-2.

The conference standing as of yesterday are:

Team	W	L	Pct.
Clemson	8	2	.800
Carolina	6	2	.750
Duke	6	2	.750
State	5	5	.500
Virginia	4	4	.500
Wake Forest	3	4	.429
South Carolina	2	9	.182
Maryland	1	7	.125

The Heels started the week successfully against always-tough state, when they beat the Pack 7-0 with Wayne Young pitching the shutout. It was Carolina's second victory of the season over the Wolfpack, giving them a clean sweep of the series.

The loss to Wake Forest spoiled big Ben Harding's perfect 5-0 record from the mound, and dropped him to 5-1. It was the Deacs' Ben Tench who handcuffed Carolina Wednesday night, limiting them to two hits.

As shown by the standings, Maryland's squad has been having a long spring, but a win over Carolina today would make them feel better, and it is a well-known fact that any team in the ACC is tough on a given day.

Gametime is slated for 3:30 and Carolina's probable starter is Wayne Young.

State Wins Mural Rod And Gun Meet

Track star Clete Oakley's bass was the fish caught the whole day, only two teams showed up, and it was muddy, but the Big Four Rod and Gun Field Meet was still held Wednesday at the Durham Wildlife.

Carolina and State were the only teams to put in an appearance at the meet, and State came out on top 42.5-21.5 by sweeping the top four places in two events. About 150 people were present for the meet.

The Summaries:

Trap Shooting — Laugodon (S), Cowan (C), Amburn (S), and Street (C). State 10, Carolina 6

Archery — Thomas, McInlith, Wood, and Hunt all of State. State 16, Carolina 0

Bait Casting—Oakley (C), Rocco (C), Knox (C), and tie for fourth between Wilkins (C) and Hagler (S) Carolina 15.5, State 5.5

Riflery—Wood, Honson, Rummler, and Northcutt all of State. State 16, Carolina 0

Fishing—Oakley (C) (bass, only fish caught)

Final total—State 42.5, Carolina 21.5

Annual Individual Fencing Championships Begin Tonight

Tonight at seven in Graham Memorial the Men's Annual Individual Fencing Championships will take place in foil, co-sponsored this year by the tournaments committee of GMAB and the Intramurals Dept. of the Phys. Ed. Dept. The public is invited to watch the local fencers in this round-robin affair. Each fencer is in the course of the evening's bouts will meet every other, the first three places in the total bouts won standings will receive trophies provided by the Intramurals Dept.

Next Friday at the same time the competitions will be in sabre and the following week, also on Friday at seven, they will be held in duelling sword (epee). All registered men students are eligible to compete in this campus wide championship by signing up at least 24 hours in advance of the competition in the GM information office or at the Intramural Office at Woollen Gym.

A fencer may compete in one, two, or all three weapons regardless of previous fencing experience. Officials for the matches will be fencing coach Febley Barrow and David Evans, UNC law student.

The foil awards will be given out following the competitions which are anticipated to be over by eleven. Coach Barrow stated, "We expect even greater interest and participation than last year. Many of the fencers have been working out regularly at the gym in anticipation of this annual meet. We expect the competition to be keener than ever and promise that spectators will be welcome, and well entertained. I understand that some of the women fencers at WC in Greensboro plan to attend the meet.

"We wound up our team competitions for the season with a very gratifying 19-8 win over VML last Saturday and these individuals will wind up our season and give us a chance to look over the newer prospects for next year. The 24-hour deadline is necessary in order to enable us in view of the total number of entries to work out the bout order, determine how many strips to use, arrange for officials, decide whether to use time limit on bouts, etc." The sabre championships are scheduled for Friday, May 9th with the epee set for the following Friday, May 16th.

"I wish to thank the tournaments committee of Graham Memorial Activities Board for their assistance and cooperation in getting ready for this year's competitions," Barrow said. "Their help has been invaluable and as usual, we appreciate also, the trophies and other help from Intramurals."

She is best remembered for her beautiful rendition of the lead in "Tea House of the August Moon," but she also played a young Korean girl in a one act play presented by the Playmakers and written by a young Korean student on the campus.

Recently, Sodsai was a guest on the Jack Paar Show. Although she couldn't sing on the show because she was not in a union, she was interviewed.

When Paar questioned her, he discovered that she was in New York at the personal request of Oscar Hamerstein who wanted her to try out for one of the principal roles in his new musicial. "The Flower Drum Song." She had tried out, but would not know for several months whether she had won the part or not.

For the time being Sadsai will be busy with Sound and Fury's present production which has a special part written into the original script for her.

Tar Heels Challenge Blue Devils In Duel Track Meet Tomorrow

By DAVE WIBLE

Showdown time is approaching fast in the ACC as the conference squads move into their final week of practice before the championships which will be at Duke May 9th and 10th.

It's a safe bet that Maryland will again take the team title this year, as they did last; but the real question is who will take second place.

Last year, backed by Dave Scurlock's victories in the 440 and 880, the Tar Heels took second place without any trouble, but several ACC schools are fast becoming strong enough to make it real tough on the Tar Heels this season.

Clemson defeated Carolina in the opening meet this year-though Scurlock was out with a sprained ankle—and promise to be a threat. However, the real worry for head coach Dale Ranson and his crew will be the boys from west Durham who, headed by Dave Sime, have come into their own this season.

Duke and Carolina will meet in a duel meet at Durham tomorrow. This meet should decide who will get the second place conference trophy. The Dukes are undefeated in five meets this season. If they win tomorrow they will tie their undefeated record set in 1956.

Sime, who has been fighting off all challengers to his "fastest human" tag, will enter four events. On the track, he will run the go after the 100 and 220 yard dashes. In the field he will throw the javelin and shot.

Another Duke pride is shot putter and discus man Larry Speer. Speer has been undefeated in the shot this season.

Cary Weisiger and Tommy Razemore have done very well in the 880 and 440 respectively this season and should be a real threat to the present champ Scurlock. Weisiger is also a fine miler. He has bettered the old school 880 record.

The freshmen squads of the two schools will meet in a duel meet the same day. Duke overwhelmed the Tar Babies in a meet earlier this season.

Wilmington Jr. Col. Trim Frosh Baseballers 3-1

Wilmington Junior College turned back UNC Freshmen, 3-1 on the three-hit pitching of Billy DeBruhl and Joe Gibson here yesterday. DeBruhl notched the win, his second in three starts.

Carolina's Wayne Allen was tagged for seven hits, including a pair of singles by Larry Moore in four trips.

The loss gave the Tar Babies a 12-3 record for the season. The team meets Wake Forest at Emerson Field Saturday after a varsity game between North Carolina and Virginia which gets underway at 2 p.m.

ACC Opens Meetings At G'boro

GREENSBORO (AP) — The Atlantic Coast Conference cleared the decks yesterday for a busy spring meeting today with a series of closed preliminary committee meetings.

No official word stemmed from the many huddles that were scheduled far into the night. However, it appeared that the move to consider Virginia Tech of the Southern Conference for ACC membership lacked sufficient support.

Maryland, Virginia and Wake Forest have sponsored a proposal that the Blacksburg, Va., school be admitted to the eight-member ACC.

Under present rules six affirmative votes are required for such a change in the circuit's makeup.

New Attorney General Is Richard Robinson

The appointment of Richard H. Robinson, Jr., a rising junior from Greensboro, to the office of Attorney General for next year was announced Thursday night by Don Furtado, student body president. Robinson is the present Assistant Attorney General and has been active in many phases of campus life, including the Symposium Committee, the Honor Council Commission, the Student Legislature, and the Orientation program. He is a Morehead Scholar, and a member of the Order of the Grail and Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity.

In commenting on the appointment, Furtado said, "During the past two years Dick Robinson has illustrated in all of his endeavors his ability and dependability.

The job that he has done as Assistant Attorney General has made him the obvious successor to Sonny Hallford. His understanding and his ability to work as an administrator will aid him greatly during the coming year."

Robinson himself said that "since I have worked closely with the development of recently initiated innovations in the Honor System Courts, I feel that my knowledge of the procedures and philosophy of legislation concerning the present system" will help in the position.

Women's Dean Cannot Speak On New Rules

Katherine K. Carmichael, Dean of Women, issued a statement Thursday to The Daily Tar Heel concernign the new freshman women rules.

She said, "Since I received a copy of these rules very late Wednesday afternoon, I have been able to give them only a perfunctory reading, and have not yet had opportunity to go over the with thoroughness.

"By the middle of next week, after I have spoken with certain administrative oficials and with representatives of academic departments in which these freshmen women will be matriculated, I shall be able to give an official statement to The Daily Tar Heel.

However, I commend the diligence and thoughtfulness of the Women's Residence Council. I am honeful that the set rules, on which the council has spent much time and effort since mid-october, wli be workable."

Furtado Threatens Boycott If Meters Are Installed

By DAVIS YOUNG

"If the town Aldermen do not reconsider this parking meter proposal, and, at the same time consider the problems which fraternity and sorority residents have parking, we the students, will initiate and carry out the most complete boycott of the merchants, theaters and restaurants of Chapel Hill that this community has ever witnessed."

These were the words of Student Body President Don Furtado, when confronted yesterday with the possibility that the city of Chapel Hill may install parking meters on Franklin St. and on Columbia St. in front of Big Fraternity Court.

Furtado added, "I believe such a measure will definitely stamp on their minds that the students are, despite what anyone says, the life-blood of Chapel Hill."

Aside from the problem that parking meters would pose for fraternity, sorority and in general all students of the University, questions have been raised as to whether this wouldn't deface some of Chapel Hill's beauty.

Currently the town features angular parking in the areas which would be affected if the proposal goes through. Under the new plan, this would be changed to parallel parking.

The Town Council and some local citizens are under the opinion that meters might benefit the town by allowing police to patrol rather than chalk marks on tires.

The addition of parking meters would result in the loss of nearly a hundred parking spaces in the downtown area. However, the Aldermen contend that this shortage might be compensated by the fact that over $600 per day will come in as revenue from the new meters.

Furtado continued with his statement and went on to say, "In 1956, the Town Council reached a decision to initiate two (2) hour parking along Columbia St. in front of Big Fraternity Court. This was done despite the fact that a great many fraternities were almost

Magill Gets New Title; Now 'Assistant Dean'

It was announced yesterday by Fred H. Weaver, Dean of Students, that Samuel H. Magill has been made Assistant Dean of Student Affairs. Magill was orginally Director of Student Activities.

In connection with this announcement Dean Weaver said Mrs. Martha Decker DeBerry has been made Assistant to the Dean of Women. Mrs. DeBerry has been Assistant Director of Student Activities since 1955.

These appointments have been approved by Chancellor William C. Aycock and Consolidated University President William B. Friday.

Dean Weaver said, "Mr. Magill will continue to be the University's administrative officer immediately concerned with Student Government and the student activity program as a whole."

In a statement from Dean Weaver he gave several reasons for the change in Magill's title. "In the first place," he said, "the title, 'Director of Student Activities' is inappropriate to this University because of the long tradition of student self-government and our idea of student-administration relations, with student activities largely in the hands of and under the direction of the students themselves."

"In the second place," Dean Weaver stated, "the recent action

Last Petite Musicale To Feature Dr. Hopper

The last Petite Musicale program of the spring semester is scheduled for Sunday at 8 p.m. in Hill Hall. Featured performer will be Dr. Francis Hopper of the University of Louisville.

Les Petites Musicales are sponsored by Graham Memorial Activities Board.

Dr. Hopper, who is professor of music and head of the organ department at the University of Louisville, presented a harpsichord recital sponsored by Petites Musicales last fall.

Dr. Hopper has studied at the Union Theological Seminary in New York, where he earned his master's ad doctor's degrees in music, and at the School of English Church Music in Chistlehurst, England.

While Dr. Hopper was studying in England he gave frequent Sunday afternoon recitals in both Oxford and Cambridge. While he was studying in New York he was organist for Sunday morning services at Carnegie Hall.

Admission is free and the public has been invited.

Interim Group Jobs Available For Symposium

A call for interested people to apply for the Interim Committee of the Carolina Symposium on Public Affairs has been issued by the new chairman of that group, Al Goldsmith.

The job confronting this organization during the "off year" will be that of evaluating and setting straight the records of the past Symposium.

In addition it will be their job to lay the plans for the next Symposium, to be held in March of 1960.

Goldsmith stated yesterday, "I want to urge those interested in the work of the Carolina Symposium to apply for the Interim Committee.

"The students and faculty members selected for the committee will work closely with me in the months that lie ahead. Membership on this committee will provide students with a chance to help plan for the 1960 Carolina Symposium and to work closely with faculty members and important people throughout the United Stats.

"Let me urge all those interested to apply to me at the Symposium office in Graham Memorial by calling 9460 or at the Chi Phi House at 8-9073."

UNC Officials Made Colonels By Air ROTC

The Tar Heel Air Force awards were Presented to Consolidated University president William C. Friday and University Chancellor William B. Aycock here Thursday. The Tar Heel Air Force is the honorary organization of the UNC Air Force ROTC unit at the universitly.

The certificates awarded them read: "The recipient having demonstrated noteworthy understanding of and appreciation for the United States Air Force Reserve Officer Training Corps program by his continued support of their activities is hereby appointed Honorary Colonel in the Tar Heel Air Force."

The presentations were made at a full dress combination parade and review conducted by the AFROTC Cadet Corps in the officials' honor. President Friday and Chancellor Aycock are the fifth and sixth to receive TAF certificates. The others were Gen. F. C. Shepard, Coach Jim Tatum, General College Dean Cecil Johnson, and Capt. Mike Pennella, USOF (RET.).

Senior Women Get Late Grant On Senior Day

Wednesday, May 7, will be Senior Day, with excused cuts from classes and a party for all seniors.

Senior Day activities will begin Tuesday, when the seniors will be given free admission to the Carolina Theatre upon presentation of their identification cards.

Senior women have been granted two o'clock permission Tuesday and twelve o'clock permission Wednesday, in a joint decision by Women's Residence Council and the Dean of Women.

On Wednesday, the senior class will meet at 10 a. m. in Memorial Hall. George Ragsdale, president of the class, will preside over the meeting where Mr. Alumnus and Miss Alumna will be elected.

From 3:30-12 p.m. seniors will celebrate the occasion with a party at the Patio. The activities of the afternoon and evening will include games and entertainment, followed by a barbecue dinner and dancing to the music of Nick Keadns Combo.

Recorder's Court

The following UNC students were tried yesterday in Chapel Hill Recorder's Court:

Charles D. Gray, III, Gastonia, speeding, costs—$13.30.

Joyce W. Outten, Portsmouth, Va., parking violations—to include $1.00 each for 6 tickets, costs—$13.80.

George H. Gwinn, 19, Alderson, W. Va., speeding, costs—$18.30.

Michael C. McGucklin, 18, Carrollton, Va., discharging pyrotecnics, costs—$10.40.

Israeli Folk Dancers Perform Wednesday

By RAYMOND GRAY

UNC students and Chapel Hill residents will have the opportunity to see an evening's performance by Israeli folk dancers, singers and musicians for the third successive year Wednesday, May 7.

Appearing at Hillel House at 8 p.m., under the sponsorship of the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation at UNC, the Ron Troupe will present a program which illustrates Israel's finest artistry.

Before coming to the United States to complete their education, the artists had extensive training and experience in Israel.

The two dancers are, at present, studying with Martha Graham, noted American exponent of the dance.

Dancer Oshra Elkayam, native-born Israeli, studied interpretive and folk dancing with eminent Israeli teachers. She has made numerous stage appearances.

Dancer Daniel Dassa has participated in folk dancing since early youth. He studied dancing in Israel where he became a dance instructor. In the United States he has been studying with Martha Graham. In addition to various personal appearances, he organized a dance troupe in the U. S. which performed at Hunter's College Dance Festival.

Singer Dvorah Ekhajzer has sung over the Israel Broadcasting System and has made several appearances in the U. S. including the Aspen Music Festival in Aspen Colorado.

Gil Alma, accordianist, studied with Paul Ben-Haim and at the Jerusalem Conservatory. He has written several cantatas and folk songs which are popular in Israel.

His works include personal appearances and recordings as accompanist.

There will be no charge for admission and the public has been invited.

Naval ROTC Co. 'A' Takes Drill Competition

Captan Alex M. Patterson, Commandign Oficer of the Naval ROTC Unit at UNC, has announced the wnners of the annual drill competition for this chool year:

In the company competition, Company "A" under command of Midn'Lt Donald C: Kerby, of Charleston Heights, S: C., was judged the winner. In the platoon competition the First Platoon of Alfa Company was judged the winner. Midn' E.I.C. Robert W. Eaves, of Washignton, D. C., is platoon leader.

The judges for this event were: Brigadier General F. C. Shepard, North Carolina National Guard (Retired), Brigadier General Allen F. Kingman, United States Army (Retired) and Lieutenant Colonel Frank W. Swann, United States Air Force.

TRASH CANS

At the door of Director of Operations J. S. Bennett's office this morning were five trash cans placed by irate members of the student legislature.

According to one member, the cans were returned because Bennett reneged on a promise to provide green trash cans with swinging doors. The type returned were silver garbage cans, according to the legislator.

Legislative Roundup; Suspend Election Law

By DAVE JONES

The current Election Law was suspended, and a committee to write a new one was established, Thursday night by the Student Legislature.

In speaking for passage of the election law bill, Rep. John Brooks (SP) Co-sponsor, along with Dave Biren (UP), cited the history of the existing law, dating back to the early days of Student Government. There have been only two minor changes since that time.

He also cited administrative tangles caused by this law's failure to cover certain cases. The most recent of these was when there were 51 members of the 50 member legislature.

There will be seven persons on the rewriting committee. Those provided for by the bill now include Rep. Rudy Edwards, SP Floor Leader; Rep. Dave Biren, UP Floor Leader; Rep. John Brooks, Parliamentarian and Bob Furtado, ex-chairman of the Elections board.

In addition, the new Chairman of the elections board, as yet unappointed, will serve on this committee, as well as two legislators tobe appointed by the Speaker.

Representative Roger Foushee's SP bill to appropriate $3700 to buy Amateur radio equipment, was reported out of committee. In com-

University String Quartet Opens Concert Series

The University String Quartet will present its first program of the 1957-58 season in Hill Music Hall Tuesday at 8 p.m., playing works of Beethoven, Barber, Schubert and Haydn.

The quartet members, violinists Edgar Alden and Jean Heard, violist Dorothy Alden, and cellist Mary Cray Clarke, have played together since 1950.

Dr. Alden is a member of the faculty in the Department of Music at the University where he teaches violin, harmony and graduate courses in musicology, and is also associate conductor of the University Symposuim Orchestra.

Both he and Mrs. Alden have held first chair position in the North Carolina Symphony and have performed throughout North Carolina as soloists and in various chmaber groups.

Mrs. Heard is a graduate of the Julliard School of Music and has studied with Mischa Mischakoff.

Miss Clarke, first cellist with the University Symphony, is a graduate asistant in the Music Department and hlods a master's degree from the Manhatten School of Music.

The concert is Number 18 of the current Tuesday Evening Series sponsored by the UNC Department of Music, and is open to the public at no admission charge.

YM-YWCA Faculty Drive Plans Now Being Made

Plans are now being made for the YMCA-YWCA faculty drive for next fall. This drive is a necessary part of the financial program of the Y.

A temporary goal has been set at $1600, but this is a minimum figure.

Co-chairmen Jane Walker and Frank Elkins met with the Y finance committee Thursday and discussed plans for the drive.

The plans already made call for eight students-four boys and four girls—working with the chairmen. Coverage of the University will be divided among four groups with a boy and a girl, aided by a faculty advisor, responsible for each division. The boy and girl at the head of each division will choose team leaders, each of which will choose a team.

This three-day drive will make use of the co-operation of at least 130 students and as many more as are willing to help.

Students who are interested in helping in this drive have been urged to call Jane Walker or Frank Elkins or the Y office.

It is the hope of the chairmen that the organizational plans be completed and an organizational get-together be held before the pre-exam study rush.

Debate Squad Officers

Clay Simpson, sophomore member of the Kappa Alpha fraternity, was elected president of the UNC Debate Squad at a meeting of the debators Tuesday afternoon.

Elected to serve with Simpson are Tom Long, vice president and Taylor McMillan, secretary.

Clay Simpson, John Brooks, David Evans and Tom Long were elected to the Forensic Council.

FIRST GM DAY

Discussion Mixed With Recreation

The first Graham Memorial Day will be held Tuesday, May 6 at 5:30 p.m. at Camp New Hope under the sponsorship of Graham Memorial Activities Board.

The purpose of the day is for student leaders and students who are interested in working with the student union next year to get to know each other and discuss campus activities and problems constructively.

The theme of the day will be "The Student's Sense of Values", and it will be discussed with reference to the following topics: "College as Preparation For Vocation," "The Role of Fine Arts in Our Education," "The Role of the Campus Religious Organizations in Student Life," "Social Life; Ideas for Improvement," and "The Role of Extracurriculars in Education."

According to Eleanor Brawley, assistant director of Graham memorial, there will be a picnic, swimming in the new pool at the camp, and entertainment presented by the cast of Sound and Fury, one of the organizations under GMAB.

Students from the student government, legislature, residence councils, Pan-Hellenic, IFC, religious groups, and many other organizations have been invited to the picnic and discussion.

Betty Carolyn Huffman of the planning committee has urged all other students, especially those interested in working with the student union to come.

Other members of the planning committee are Bob Boden, Janet Hobbs, Pete Austin, Tom Rand and advisor Eleanor Brawley.

IN THE INFIRMARY

Students in the infirmary yesterday included:

Misses Patricia Gregory, Martha Parshley and Josie Ward, and Clifton Moore, Fredrick Weiler and Worth Younts.

UNC Geologists Attending Meet

Professors Roy L. Ingram, William A. White and Virgil I. Mann, of the UNC Department of Geology and Geography, will attend the annual meeting of the Southeastern Section of the Geological Society of America in Tuscaloosa on May 1-3.

Ingram, chairman-elect of the Section for 1958-59, will give a paper on "X-Ray Properties of the Clay Minerals in Some Carolina Bay Sediments."

White will give a paper on "Cape Canaveral and the Cross-Peninsular Divide."

PanHel Council Hears Fashion Show Reports

The Panhellenic Council, at its meeting Wednesday afternoon, heard a report from the Carolina delegates to the Panhellenic Fashion Show held last week in Raleigh. Women from Carolina, Duke, and other North Carolina schools with sororities attended the show. Sororities in general were discussed in the report. It was decided that the local Council would send delegates to next year's Fashion Show.

Various aspects of the formal rush compact for next fall were discussed in the meeting.

The Council voted to establish a commitee to make up a form letter to be sent to the parents of entering freshmen women next fall explaining sororities on the UNC campus.

A Student Union

There is obviously a need for a new student union on the University campus, and it is even more obvious that long range planning is necessary in order to provide a union which is not outdated when it opens.

It is hard to measure what a new student union, adequate in all respects, will mean to the University, but one has a few guides.

To a student government, which is known throughout the nation for its independence and responsibility, it will mean adequate working space and needed equipment.

To one of the few independent college dailies on the campus, it will mean elbow room in order to put out a satisfactory paper and maintain a staff.

To the activities of the University, it will mean a place to meet, and a meeting room tailored to that activity's need.

To the social life on this campus, it will mean a chance at holding a successful dance, without spending over a thousand dollars.

To the academic life of the campus, it will provide a place for study, which is currently unavailable in dormitories, and library, it might go a long way to further an academic atmosphere, that has been lacking, perhaps since the the last war.

To the individual it will provide a place for wholesome recreation and relaxation, currently unavailable on the campus or in the town of Chapel Hill.

To people in general, it will provide a place for recreation, entertainment, rest, and relaxation after the hours of midnight, when opportunities for these things are almost nil.

To the visitors of this University, it will provide a meeting place, and a building for which the students, parents, alumni, faculty, and administration can be truly proud.

This building can be a long way in the offing, as can the solution of the general problem of lack of academic atmosphere and student apathy, which has been so much in evidence in recent years. The entire problem of providing the tools for an active student life is wrapped up in the question of a new union.

A new union can take twenty years or it can come to the campus, when it is necessary —soon. It is dependent upon the determined drive of both students and administration in pushing forward the proposal.

It is dependent on the education of the state legislators in Raleigh of the need for such a building.

It is up to the students and the administration to supply the impetus.

A union can be on the campus, and all its blessings of recreation, government, and activity will come with it.

The time for preparation is now. The result of this preparation will be known next fall, when the General Assembly convenes to study the biennial budget.

The List

The Attorney General's list of "subversive" organizations has undergone some deserved criticism during the past years. The list itself is in violation of the principle of free assembly, and is subject to question alone on those grounds, as well as several others.

However, the Attorney General selected at least one organization that might be deserving of the honor of being placed on this list.

The organization's name—the Ku Klux Klan.

Crisis in Education? Read this.

We can't say for certain how critical the situation is here, but what with professors leaving every year for better paying jobs with smaller workloads at other schools, it does seem at first glance to be rather bad.

For what it might be worth, just the other morning we saw a sociology professor walking into the Alumni Building, but this is not what caused us to pause, for this is a regular occurrence we assume.

He was carrying his brief case (as industrious profs are wont to do) in one hand, but in the other was a BROOM—the long-handled-janitor-type broom. Now, we didn't think it proper to inquire about his children's footwear or whether he needed spare cash for cigarettes, who knows? This educational crisis, combined with the recession may be more real than we think.

Recently a friend of ours suggested that our columns would be better if we would pause to think before we wrote. We concluded that this was a good idea, but that there were two distinct drawbacks: first that thinking is a difficult, oftimes impossible, process for us; and secondly, that we don't want to lose the few regular readers we have now at the expense of the strain on our mental capacities . . . Another friend, almost as intelligent, went to the druggist last week and inquired, "What can you recommend for the flue?" To which the druggist replied curtly, "I'd recommend a doctor." . . . We have often wondered where the occupants of the GM pool room, and residents at the tennis courts and Finley Golf Course eventually wind up in comparison with the bookworms who never have time for such diversions. It might be interesting to note 20 years from now how far a good backswing or drive will take you.

We have concluded that college is a place for expert training in how to get by without really trying. Whether this is a truism remains for the social scientists to discover by means of elaborate studies at the expense of many millions in valuable grants, but for our purposes, and we have tried both ways with no significant difference as far as the records in South are concerned, it's not so much how you play the game but whether you win or lose.

"Nah — Wrong Kind Of Summit"

Man And The Law

Malcom B. Seawell

(This is the first part of Attorney General Seawell's address to the University of North Carolina Law School on Law Day, May 1, 1958)

The observance of May Day dates back to the Roman Empire. Robert Owen, in 1833, appointed May 1 as the day for the commencement of the millenium. In 1889 the First Congress of the Second Socialist International selected May 1 as the date for international celebration. The aim of the Second International was abolition of capitalism. Now, through executive proclamation, May 1 takes on a new significance.

It is rather appropriate that while peoples of the Communist countries are commemorating the overthrow of personal liberties and re-asserting (in directed chorus) that the States is supreme and that the individual is a chattel of the States - that we, here in the United States, should observe this day as Law Day.

We are a free people because we live the law; love the law because it gives us the assurance of a better tomorrow - a free tomorrow for all of us.

Wat is LAW?

The dictionary defines "law as being "rules of conduct enforced by a controlling authority." That definition sounds frighteningly precise to me. Rather, I would accept the definition of Dillard Gardner, whose simple and singing word may be heard by the ear the the heart: "Law is the footpath beat by countless hosts of men across the wilderness in their never ending struggle to reach God . . . It is the age old search for the Philosopher's Stone which, in due season, will answer not only the baffled minds of men, but the longing of hungry hearts as well."

Law is the alternative to chaos. Genesis gives us the picture of the very beginnings: there was God and there was chaos. God stretched forth his creative hand and chaos turned into order. The stars were fixed. The planets revolved about the Sun. Winter and Spring and Summer and Autumn followed the other in fixed design; a design so perfect that calendars for all eternity may be printed.

Then God created man. And while the stars were fixed and the planets still traveled their ordered courses, man early displayed that he could bring chaos back into the picture!

(You must understand that the word "man" is used in its generic sense. Our Court said that "man" means "male" and it took a bit of constitution amending on the part of of the people to bring North Carolina back into the fold of those who accept the words of the Book of Genesis: "God created man in His own image, in the image of God created He him; male and female created He them.")

The Constitution of the United States begins with three words which should never be forgotten: "We the people . . . ." Law has developed not because the law needed people, but because people needed the law - needed order. Slowly, slowly, the law evolves through processes which are evolutionary, not revolutionary.

Man will change his automobile with each new model, - his clothing with the season, - but he will not accept quick changes in the law nor in the Courts. That is understandable: mankind has had a rather severe buffeting in his search for freedom, and the barriers which he has erected in self defense may not be torn down over his protest for man is both animal enough and god-like enough to be afraid of that which changes his customary, orderly way of life.

It is not that man is satisfied with the law nor with the courts, - far from it. He has the blessed right (which he uses at every opportunity) to criticize, deplore and curse the law and all of those who take part in the administration of justice. (He is eternally grateful for the privilege of living in a land where that right exists, rather than in a country where free speech purchases a free ticket to the salt mines.)

When man expresses his personal opinion as to the law and the courts, it does not thereby follow that he is expressing a desire to rewrite constitutions, statutes and decisions, nor to abandon his "say so" in our judicial system.

Man is no fool. He knows, with uncanny insight, when he is well off. He understands, without any particular mental process, that when he locks his door at night the law will protect him and his. He knows that the plate-glass window in his store will shatter when hit by a thrown brick, - but that the law will not. He knows that his savings may be stolen, but that the law protects his bank account. He knows that he has the right to face his neighbor in an open forum and say, "Brother, prove what you say." He knows, even if he be naked, that, under law, he has a cloak of innocence. He knows that he doesn't have to satisfy the State that he is innocent, but that the State has to prove his guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. Man knows that twelve of his neighbors must say that he has violated the law, before he may be punished. He knows, too, that he may not be convicted on heresay nor by his own statements, when such statements come as the result of force, - actual or implied, - physical or mental, - or from reward or hope of reward. In short: man is no fool.

But man has been fooled, to his great chagrin and deep embarassment. Occasionally, under the stress of supposed great emergency, he has allowed his representatives to "get by with murder,"—the law being the victim to even a greater extent than man. But, eventually, he remembers the rights which are his; then he bounces back from such gambles a wiser and better citizen.

It is comparatively easy for man to read the newspapers, listen to the radio, observe a television program or engage in a discusion of international affairs with the hometown "experts' and from those realize that his counterpart in other countries have few, if any, of the safeguards which are his. Slave camps, salt mines, Siberian wastes, the dungeon and tortures are "over yonder" and not "over here." But it is hard for man to grasp the terrifying fact that "over yonder" is now just a few minutes from "over here" and that it will take more than a "cloak of innocence" to save him.

The Creator ordained an orderly universe. Throuugh law people must put this Earth-house in order.

The comparatively easy job of evaluating conditions "over there" is off-set by man's difficulty in evaluating conditions "over here." Ordinarily, man doesn't wear bi-focal glasses.

Commentary On Sewage Problem

Davis Young And Ken Friedman

After working on and observing the sewage situation in the Isley St.-Stinson St.—N. Columbia St. Extension area for two weeks, we now offer this final report to the readers of this paper.

This is the conclusion of what we hope has been a most informative and enlightening investigation. We came, we saw and we hope that this problem will be conquered.

We were originally tipped off on April 13th by an irate married student from that area. He informed us that the neighborhood which has been under discussion had and is still facing a serious sanitation problem, brought about by the failure of an outdated pump and the negligence of some supposedly responsible individuals.

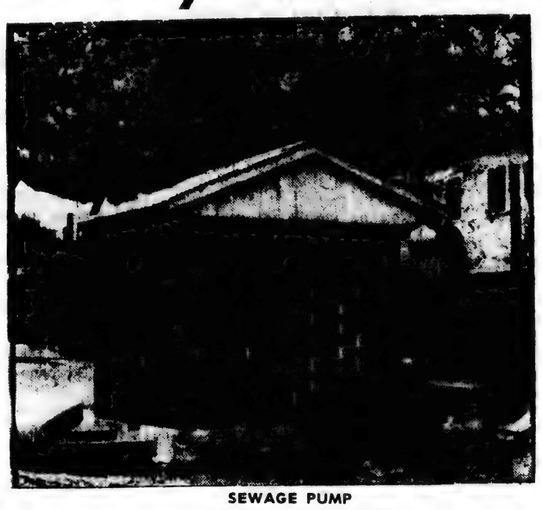
Who is to blame?

After an intense survey of this appalling situation, we have drawn some very definite conclusions and compiled a list of suggestions for the rectification of the problem.

1. The houses in this neighborhood should never have been built in a valley. It is a well known fact that sewage, or any other matter, cannot be pushed over a hill by an obviously inadequate pump.

2. These houses are built on lots that are entirely too small. Chapel Hill zoning laws, which came into effect in 1955 (after the construction of most of this neighborhood), call for 6,000 sq. feet of land for the first unit and 4,000 sq. feet for each additional unit. Howard Stewart, Chapel Hill Building Inspector, has told us that these lots do not meet the new specifications and that the houses are too close together. He further went on to indicate that the entire neighborhood is in bad shape.

3. We found, after talking with several of the local realtors, a prevailing attitude of "who me?" Several told us that the problem had been completely alleviated. We thought about this as we sloshed around the neighborhood several days later. Some of the women who have to keep their children under close observation to prevent them from approaching the contaminated area, must have wondered too.



4. We found that a contractor, who had done work in the area, and who is currently building some new houses in the Stinson St. area, has been "officially warned" by the Office of the Building Inspector in Durham. His name—Robert Roberts. Some of his latest endeavors in this area might also be open for criticism.

5. We found that an unidentified woman living in the neighborhood was the victim of an unfortunate and unnecessary accident. She fell into a ditch dug by the University Construction Co. of Chapel Hill. Eddie Fields of this organization stated: "I told that woman that she had no business being near that ditch.' Really Mr. Fields! He claimed the ditch was on private property and that he was not required to have it lighted or roped off. Local Building Inspector, Howard Stewart, told us he thought it might have been a good idea if it had been.

6. We found, after making two trips to the county seat in Hillsboro and after extensive interviews with local government officials, that nobody seems to have any control over the sewage problems in this neighborhood. The town has no jurisdiction in this area because it is a few yards over the Chapel Hill line. Any help that it has given has been out of the goodness of its heart. The county also claims that it has no responsibility. So, just who do the residents appeal to—the United Nations?

7. We would like to commend the District Health Department for an admirable job in attempting to correct a problem that is not actually theirs. O. David Garvin, District Health Director, has said of his contemporary H. Dobson: "He has been out in that neighborhood literally day and night trying to help the residents." Thank you, Mr. Dobson, for a job well done. It's one of the few that falls into that category.

We feel that this entire situation could have been avoided with responsible leadership and sufficient planning at its outset. Our wish was not to write an expose, but rather to bring into the open a problem that needs immediate solution.

. . . The Source of the Trouble?

Editor:

In view of your recent interest in the sewage and garbage situation in Chapel Hill, we would like to offer our observation and concern with the conditions of garbage disposal in the alley between Franklin and East Rosemary Streets.

As residents of 146 E. Rosemary, our particular concern is with the facilities for garbage disposal at this address. For the six dwelling units at this address there are only garbage cans. We have repeatedly asked the landlord (Mr. Dale Ranson) to supply adequate garbage disposal facilities. Finally he has given us two more cans, raising the total from 2 to 4.

The condition of the alley directly behind 146 E. Rosemary is disgraceful by any alley standards. Many of the business establishments on Franklin Street which use this alley for garbage disposal show little concern for the health and welfare of the people who use the passageway between E. Rosemary and Franklin Street (presumpably the very people who are patronizing the inconsiderate merchants).

It is interesting to note that in the past few days some special attention has been paid to the conditions in this alley, for we find that the alley has been cleaned to the point of sweeping and scrubbing. We wonder if this sudden interest in the alley will continue, for we appreciate this display of community spirit and hope that we can look forward to our landlord's joining in.

I'd like to offer my two cents on the Stinson St. Isley St. sanitation story.

My famliy (with three small children) lived on Stinson St. from July through January. Our rent was $70 per month, which the Carolina Construction Co. said was a real deal. Along with this, the utilities brought the cost to over $100 per month during the winter.

This was bad, but to top it off the entire area had sewage problems. Many times we sat town to eat and the bathroom would overflow. My youngsters only had about twenty (20) feet between the houses to play in, and often I found them playing in the sewage holes further up the street.

Although we're not living there at present, I'd like to see more don for those families. So far, I've seen too many in the financial shape that I am in, paying outrageous prices for homes and living in unsanitary areas through necessity.

I read with interest A. W.'s column of late in which his readers were exhorted to rally round and continue to exert their collective might upon the Grass.

His cry was made in the name of Practicality, Functionality, and above all, Efficiency. The assumption made is that the campus resembles a modern business-like community—a city in minature, and therefore must be ordered in a business-like way. And because of "times's winged chariot hurrying near" and because of great distances between classrooms, Practicality demands direct access to University buildings (especially Lenior Hall and the Pine Room). The facts, which are evident to anyone who has worked in a city and is familiar with other campuses, are that we have time in abundance and are still one of the smaller state universities in the country.

Now assuredly, the Grass is not sacred, and the highways and byways of the campus are not sacred, and the Administration is not sacred, nor even is Mr. Wolff sacred. It is not strange that the Arts editor should write about the Grass, for landscaping is a matter of esthetic importance. It is strange, though, that he should advocate here that the shortest distance betwen two classrooms is a straight line. All critics of those things which give us esthetic pleasure know that it is an artistic blunder for the artist to directly present his point. The enjoyment of the work of art is heightened by a deliberate prevarication and indirectness. Therefore, in matters of Art the shortest distance between two points is not always a straight line, and in the esthetics of landscaping the shortest distance is not always through the Grass. Apparently, Wolff is the Frank Lloyd Wright of landscaping.

Editor:

I should have begun this letter by saying: "Dear, dear Anthony Wolff," because this is the person I am really addressing. The professor you slurred in your clever little piece: "The Grass," has been active in the affairs of this university far longer than you have been, and has not seen fit to resort to vitriolic garbage in his attempts to improve the university as you evidently have decided to do. I am not above this sort of thing, however, so I think I shall slur you in return. I am not impressed when I see someone who is so afraid that he is not an individual that he has to try to prove that he is. Neither am I impressed by pseudo-demagogic glops of muddy prose that masquerade as intelligent criticism. There is not a single student (or, should I say normal student) here who is not proud of the beauty of our campus, and I have yet to see anyone who has no aesthetic sense. If you are not willing to do your part to preserve the looks of this campus so that succeeding generations can likewise enjoy it, then no one is begging you to stay here. You can just put on your boots (or tennis shoes) and leave.

Holland McSwain, Jr.

I have been much informed by Mr. Yardley's and Mr. Wolff's articles on the Beat Generation, and I have come to the conclusion that this Beat Generation is responsible for the recession. Should something be done?

UNC SOCIAL STUFF

JOAN BROCK, Coed Editor

The last big weekend of the year —Spring Germans—has come and gone, but there are many memories and parties that will linger long in the minds of UNC coeds. Last weekend the music of Les Brown and Woody Herman invaded the campus, as a number of the most popular dance tunes ever recorded rang out and were heard from the Forest Theatre to the nurses's dorm.

A number of lovely and charming coeds and imports emerged from rooms jam packed with formals, high heels, crinolines, and cosmetics. It was also rewarding to see a number of Carolina's "Gentlemen" relaxing in the parlors—dressed in their formal attire—waiting for their "special one" to appear. This weekend probably marks the last appearance of evening gowns and tuxedoes for the year. From now on, the scene will be dominated by bermudas and informal sports wear.

A number of last weekend's parties are still the main topics of conversation in the girl's dorms—at bridge parties, midnight snacks, and during coke breaks. Among them are the events that occurred over at the SAE house last weekend. A premier party was held on the new patio of the SAE house to celebrate the completion of the structure. Later in the evening the group retired to the basement of the house for informal dancing.

Saturday afternoon the SAE's and their dates partied on the lawn following the concert and then traveled to Jack Maultsby's Lodge to continue the weekend's festivities. Frank McClenagan's combo from Durham provided music for the party and Al Baletto, a member of Woody Herman's group, was a special entertainer for the affair.

A brunch was also held at the SAE house Sunday. Thursday, six SAEs left UNC for Louisville, Ky. where they will attend the Kentucky Derby. The group included Don Cooke, Jay Walker, Mike Tanner, Charlie Tompkins, Jack Jones, and Walter Sturdivant. The boys will be the guests of Don Cooke who lives in Louisville and who has a box reserved on the finish line for the group.

Dinner parties held at the KA house on Friday and Saturday nights are also memorable events. A number of girls recalled an informal party at the KA house Friday afternoon and a combo party held Saturday night when Nick Kearns provided the "rock and roll" hits.

Last Friday night the Betas threw a real blast at the Sigma Nu Cabin, following the formal dance. The Big Axe Combo from Danville was the featured entertainment for the evening. Saturday the Betas continued their festive mood with a lawn party. Music was provided by Doug Clark's combo from Chapel Hill. Later in the evening, the group held an old fashion hay ride in a moving van. Following a trip to Umstead Park, the Betas and their dates ended the evening with a dance at the house with Sam Atwater serving as guest entertainer

Another event recalled, was the lawn party, followed by dinner, held at the DKE house last Friday. Especially noted was the combined party the DKE's held with the Zetes at Bill Maultsby's. The Gladiolas, a Negro instrumental-vocalist group—one ofthe main features of Winter Germans—entertained the two fraternities and their dates.

Saturday the DKE's and their dates attended the concert and then returned to the house for dinner. That night Doug Clark's combo livened up the evening at an informal, bermuda party at the house.

Social events were also the weekend's agenda at the Delta Psi house last week. Friday night the brothers entertained their dates at a steak dinner, followed by an old fashion get-together-featuring singing and dancing. On Saturday night Harrison Register's combo from Durham provided dancing music for a bermuda party held at the house.

This weekend is Tau Epsilon Phi's big spring weekend. The theme this year is TEPHOUSE of the August Moon, and the house is decorated in a chinese motif. The brothers and their dates will all be wearing kimonos in keeping with the oriental setting.

Yesterday afternoon, May 2, there was a social hour followed by a formal dinner-dance at the Washington-Duke Hotel in Durham. Music was supplied by Jack Victor and his orchestra.

mittee, it had been cut from $3700 to $500 and then subsequently increased to $1500.

Rep. Foushee took the floor to discuss his bill, and immediately sttaed that in a brief discussion with the UNC Amateur Radio Club's president, Jim Scott, since the Finance committee's meeting that afternoon, he had decided that the club actually needed $2000 as a "rock bottom" figure, and moved that the bill be amended to read $2000.

Over an hour of discussion ensued, resulting in questions and statements from more than half of the body. The discussion was brought to halt by Rep. Dave Biren (UP) when he moved that the entire measure be tabled until next week. This motion was non-debatable, and carried with only light opposition.

For the second straight week, the members of the legislature introduced ten new bills under "New Business." They include a bill (introduced through the Finance Committee) to give $100 to the two Iranian Lecturers; a bill to purchase photographic equipment for the Daily Tar Heel; an oversight to approve the bylaws of the Student Council and a bill to establish an emergency committee to combat rising dorm rents.

Others include a bill to amend the by laws of the WRC to open their meetings to the public and the press; a bill to appropriate money for permanent Student Leislature bulletin boards in Lenoir Hall, Graham Memorial, and the Seattlebutt; a bill to suspend the residence requirements of the Legislature by-laws; and a bill to reimburse the members of the High School Honor Council committee for their traveling expenses.

"Delegations from Student Government and the IFC went before the Council, but to no avail. It became necessary for several fraternities to sacrifice that little yard and recreational space they had to accomodate cars.

"Again we went before the Town Council recently when the question of the parking meters arose. This is all of the acknowledgement that we received. It is time that the townspeople, the merchants and the Aldermen of Chapel Hill realized that the students of the University of North Carolina are not pawns to be pushed around for their own personnal comfort and aggrandizement."

Farrell And Alexander Receive ROTC Awards

Tom Farrell of Durham and John Alexander of Lake Wales, Fla. were recipients of the annual Scabbard and Blade Outstanding members Awards by the local company Thursday night.

This award is given annually to the member of the AFROTC and NROTC who contributes the most to the Scabbard and Blade during the school year. Alexander was Captain of the local, L Co., 8th Regt.

New officers for next year were also elected at the meeting in the AFROTC Tiger's Den. Dave Ellis of Gamboa, Canal Zone was elected Captain. Walt Fitts of Lexington, Ky. was selected First Lieutenant. Phil Williams of Charlotte was elected Second Lieutenant and Clifton Metcalfe of Brevard, First Sergeant.

Alexander reviewed the year for his officers and recognized them for their efforts. They were Dwight Brown of Asheboro, First Lieutenant; Canie Smith of Asheville, Second Lieutenant; and Gerry Mayo of Falkland, First Sergeant.

John Brooks Re-Elected By Council

John Brooks has been re-elected president of the Forensic Council for the coming year. Clay Simpson has been elected to succeed vice-president Warren Coolidge. Richard P. Douthit was retained as executive secretary for another year.

On Tuesday the Forensic Council presented five debaters and the 1958 Debate Squad gold keys for distinguished service to the squad during the past year.

Receiving keys were Carl Barington, Clay Simpson, Bill Willis, Tom Long and John Brooks, debators, and Mr. R. P. Douthit, debate coach.

This year the squad participated in nine tournaments in which they accumulated a better than even record for one of the best seasons in several years.

Tar Heels Edge Terps 7-6; Virginia Here Today At 2:00

By RUSTY HAMMOND

Carolina's Tar Heels got back onto the winning side of the tracks here yesterday as they edged the last-place Maryland Terps 7-6 on a muddy field and typical Chapel Hill weather.

The feature play of the ballgame was a grand slam home run by catcher Al Baldwin in the first inning of a contest which changed complexions more than a chameleon on a Scotch plaid.

Maryland jumped off to a 2-0 lead in the initial inning on a walk, an error, and a single.

Carolina captured the advantage in their half of the first when Bryson's mighty clout to right field cleared the bases before him. Both teams scored again in the third to make it 5-3.

The Terps pulled within one with a single counter in the sixth, then pitcher Dick Reitz almost won his own game with a double to center that scored two men ahead of him giving Maryland a one-run lead at 6-5.

The Har Heels came through in true storybook style in the bottom of the eighth. Al Pons reached first on a walk, and John Burgwyn got on an errror. Pons then stole third with a perfect hook slide. Tommy Sainting worked the squeeze bunt to perfection, scoring Pons from third. Then Captain Roger Honneycutt lashed a booming triple to score Burgwyn and put the Heels ahead to stay.

Carolina got a firmer grip on second place with the win giving them a 7-3 record, bested only by Clemsons' 9-2. Duke is third with a 6-3. Clemson whipped the Devils yesterday to provide the margin.

Today, if the dikes hold long enough, Carolina meets fifth place Virginia here n Emerson Stadium at 2:00. The Tar Heels are likely to have to face the slants of big Herb Busch, more widely known as a center on the Cavalier cage suad, is one of the most highly sought players in the ACC by the big league. In fact, his basketball coach is afraid the lure of the big money will get to him and he won't be around for next year's basketball season.

Carolina will counter with Wayne Young who shutout State 7-0 in his last start.

Civil Defense Plans Workout

RALEIGH, — (AP) — North Carolina's Civil Defense machinery will get a thorough-going workout on May 6 and 7 designed to improve its readiness for coping with an emeny attack.

More than 200 persons attended a briefing sesion at state Civil Defense Headquarters Friday and heard plans for the practice session outlined. They included representatives of about 50 country, city and town Civil Defense setups plus oficials of some 30 state and federal agencies.

Brig. Gen. Edwards F. Griffin, State Civil Defense Director, explained that for the purposes of the exercise it would be assumed that the state had come under the heaviest attack pattern of any previous practice alerts.

Sealed envelopes are to be delivered to Civil Defense Directors of "Target and likely target areas to be opened at a specified time on May 6." These will contain information as to the time of the make-believe attack, ground zero, size of weapon, type of burst and yield of weapon.

He said maximum use would be made of North Carolina survival plans which are now in the final stages of preparation. For purposes of the test, it will be assumed, still make believe, that state government has moved to a re-location site at Wilson.

Griffin said nine types of resources are to be studied in particular: food, communications, transportation, manpower, health and medical supplies, and equipment, light, power and fuel, wearing apparel, construction supplies and equipment, emergency housing and loding.

The operation is to be conduct-ed during two 12 hour periods. The first period will start with receipt of an attack warning sometime on the morning of May 6 and will continue 12 hours. The second phase will start at 9 a.m. on May 7.

Kai Jurgensen Gets Fulbright To Denmark

Professor Kai Jurgensen of the Carolina Playmakers has won a Fulbright Fellowship to study dramatic art in Denmark next year.

Jurgensen who came to America after graduating from High School in Copenhagen, will return to his home town to direct plays in the Royal Theater.

He has been with the Department of Dramatic Arts at Chapel Hill since 1941 and has directed plays, written plays and acted in them. He has also directed the outdoor pageant-drama "Horn in the West."

In Copenhagen during 1958-59 he will direct American plays in Danish and will lecture on the Danish state radio on "The American Educational Theater System." He will also teach the history of the theater at the University of Copenhagen.

THINKING THINGS OUT—Tar Heel distance men Cowles Llipfert and Wayne Bishop get their heads together to plan for today's meet at Duke. Both will run in the mile, and Bishop will double in the 2-mile.

After Varsity Contest

Tar Babies To Host Wake Frosh Today

Carolina's freshmen will complete a full day of baseball for Tar Heel fans today when they meet the Wake Forest yearlings after the Virginia-Carolina varsity clash.

The Tar Babies are presently in a two-game losing slump. In their last outing they were trimmed by Wilmington Junior College, and time before, the State Wolflets caused some bad news for the home folks. The Tar Babies season record is 12-3, the other loss was in the hands of Presbyterian Junior College-the second game of the season.

The Tar Babies have shown promise to be of great help to the varsity next year, especially in the hitting department. Freshman football players Bud Ellerbe and Russ Hollers along with Ferg Norton and Carroll Bolick have seldom walked back to dugout from the plate.

The Tar Babies next contest will be with the Duke Blue Imps here Monday. The freshmen defeated Duke earlier in the season.

Track Team Meets Duke In Meet At Durham Today

By DAVE WIBLE

Duke Stadium will be the scene of a battle royal on its hard cinder track this afternoon when the Duke and Carolina varsity and freshman track teams clash in dual meets.

Winning this meet will mean a lot to the Blue Devils. Now, they are undefeated in five meets-one more victory will tie their undefeated record set in 1956. The Tar Heels aren't anxious to lose. They have dropped two dual meets this season and they figure that's plenty.

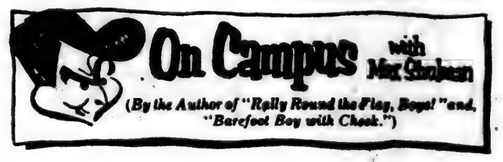
Going down the list of squads, you find nationally known names poppling up everywhere—the main attraction, of course, being Duke's big redhead Dave Sime of whom enough has been written. Carolina's Dave Scurlock will be the man to watch when the action switches from the dashes to the middle distances. When its time for the distance races and stamina boys, heads will be nodding towards the Tar Heel's Wayne Bishop.

Sime's competition from Carolina is doubtful. Jim Varnum, the Tar Heels dash man, pulled a leg muscle last Saturday against State and Wake Forest, and it is not known whether he will run or not.

Scurlock, a sure bet to lower the ACC 440 and 880 marks a week from today on this same track, will enter these races plus the anchor leg of the mile relay. He will get another look at Duke's up-and-coming sophomore Tom Bazemore who pushed him hard in the ACC indoor 440 and 880.

Bishop, along with Tar Heel captain Everett Whatley and Cowles Llipfert will find most of their trouble coming from Duke's junior miler Cary Weisiger. Bishop will also run in the 2-mile.

There will be plenty more close battles as the squads face each other. Tar Heel hurdler Lyndon DeBorde and Duke's Jack Linden promise to give some action. Ray Stanley and Clete Oakley will be facing Jerry Strickland for top honors in the javelin. Don Kemper will meet Duke's fine Larry Speer in the shot put. Both have been throwing around 46'.



The Tar Babies will be challenging the Duke freshmen for the second time this season. Duke has a strong frosh squad, and overwhelmed the Tar Babies in the first outing.

The Tar Babies have done well with Fred Wood and Bob Eubanks in the dashes. Worth Sweet, Bob Foxworth and Harry Miller have been gathering in the points in the longer races along with Benjy Seagle in the 440. The freshmen meet will parallel the varsity contest.

TODAY AND MONDAY

VARSITY Theatre

THE ENGINEERS HAVE HAIRY EARS

Today in this age of technology when engineering graduates are wooed and courted by all of America's great industries, how do you account for the fact that Rimbaud Sigafoos, who finished at the very top of his class at M.I.T., turned down hundreds of attractive job offers to accept employment as a machinery wiper at the Acme Ice Company at a salary of $20 a week with a twelve-hour day, a seven-day week, and only fifteen minutes for lunch?

...Engineering Grads are Wooed and Courted...

I know what you are thinking: "Cherchez la femme!" You are thinking that Mr. Acme, head of the Acme Ice Company, has a beautiful daughter with whom Rimbaud is madly in love and he took the job only to be near her.

Friends, you are wrong. It is true that Mr. Acme does have a daughter, a large, torpid lass named Clavdia who spends all her waking hours scooping marzipan out of a bucket and staring at a television set which has not worked in some years. Rimbaud has not the slightest interest in Clavdia; nor, indeed, does any other man, excepting possibly John Ringling North.

So how come Rimbaud keeps working for the Acme Ice Company? Can it be that they provide him with free Marlboro Cigarettes, and all day long he enjoys that filter, that flavor, that flip-top box?

No, friends, no. Rimbaud is not allowed to smoke on the job, and when he finishes his long, miserable day, he has to buy his own Marlboros, even as you and I, in order to enjoy that estimable filter, that incomparable flavor, that crasy flip-top box.

Well, friends, you might as well give up because you'll never in a million years guess why Rimbaud works for the Acme Ice Company. The reason is simply this: Rimbaud is a seal!

He started as a performing seal in vaudeville. One night on the way to the Ed Sullivan show, he took the wrong subway. All night the poor mammal rode the B.M.T., seeking a helping hand. Finally a kindly brakeman named Ernest Thompson Sigafoos rescued the hapless Rimbaud.

He took Rimbaud home and raised him as his own, and Rimbaud, to show his appreciation, studied hard and got excellent marks and finished a distinguished academic career as valedictorian of M.I.T.

Rimbaud never complained to his kindly foster father, but through all those years of grammar school and high school and college, he darn near died of the heat! A seal, you must remember, is by nature a denizen of the Aretic, so you can imagine how poor Rimbaud must have suffered in subtropical New York and Boston, especially in those tight Ivy League suits.

But today at the Acme Ice Company, Rimbaud has finally found a temperature to his liking. He is very happy and sends greetings to his many friends.

PARENTS' DAY FEATURE—The U. S. Drum and Bugle Corps, shown performing in front of the Capitol in Washington, D. C., will appear in connection with the annual Parents' Day program at 2 this afternoon on Fetzer Field. The group is under the sponsorship of the UNC Air Force ROTC unit. Since its beginning in 1949 the Corps has achieved international fame and has made appearances in four continents. It is the first group to use certain custom-built instruments.

Welcome To Chapel Hill.... UNC Celebrates Parents' Day

Parents of students from everywhere will be on the campus today to engage in Parents' Day activities sponsored by the Alpha Phi Omega service fraternity.

A full day's program has been scheduled for the visitors, and clear, sunny weather has been forecast.

Chancellor Emeritus Robert B. House will be featured speaker during the band concert on the lawn at Davie Poplar. The concert and speech have been moved from the location near South Building announced previously.

No activities have been scheduled during the morning in order that parents may attend regular worship services in Chapel Hill with their sons and daughters. They have also been invited to attend the Sunday evening suppers at the churches in the community.

Parents have been invited to men's and women's dorms between noon and 2 p.m. to look over the rooms. Students are asked to maintain maximum decorum during the day by the APO.

Parents may picnic lunch on the campus if they wish.

During the afternoon's activities at Davie Poplar the Glee Club will sing, the University Band will perform and the faculty reception will be held.

The Glee Club has scheduled: "Oh, Chapel Hill," "Ingerwetide," "Hark the Sound," "Gaudeamus Igitur," "Man Without A Country," and "To Thee We Sing."

Also during the afternoon the United States Air Force Drum and Bugle Corps of Washington, D. C. will present a formal drill at Fetzer Field.

Parents' Day Schedule

Following is a complete schedule for Parents' Day today:

11 a.m. Church if you wish at any of Chapel Hill's churches.

Action On Parking Meters Expected At May 3 Meeting

Members of the Chapel Hill Board of Aldermen said Saturday nothing had been done on the parking meter situation since last meeting of the Board, but definite action might be taken at the next meeting May 13.

One member stated that there were two methods of controlling the current traffic problem in Chapel Hill—policing and parking meters.

He added, "I think its pretty definite they will be installed. We haven't taken action, but I think that's the sentiment of the Board."

If meters are installed, parallel parking will be initiated on Columbia Street. This would result in some 80 fewer parking spaces unless parking will be allowed on Rosemary Street. Rosemary Street parking would add some 40 parking spaces, thus cutting the total of available spaces by approximately 40.

One alderman stated that the installation of meters "looks like a necesary intermediate step. We're hoping that what we lose in parking spaces will be made up for in a better flow of traffic."

When asked why they would shift to parallel parking on Columbia Street, an Alderman stated that this would widen the area available for driving. He said parallel parking would keep the cars from taking up so much space in the middle of the street as the present angle parking system does.

These words came the day after Student Body President Don Furtado threatened Chapel Hill merchants, theaters and restaurants with a complete boycott by UNC students, if the parking meter idea is not killed.

Furtado said, "It is time that the townspeople, the merchants and the Aldermen of Chapel Hill realize that the students of the University of North Carolina are not pawns to be pushed around for their own personal comfort and aggrandizement."

Andrews Tried For Third Time

A former University of North Carolina student, charged over a year ago with stealing examination papers from UNC, will be tried for the third time in August.

Solicitor W. H. Murdock said Friday he planned to try Herbert G. Andrews of Durham in Orange Superior Court in Hillsboro for the alleged larceny.

Andrews' second trial resulted Thursday in a mistrial when a Superior Court jury at Hillsboro reported itself hopelessly deadlocked.

Andrews was charged with stealing examination papers from the University more than a year ago. He was a senior here at the time.

Ugliest Senior?

Who's the ugliest senior on campus?

Members of this class will know Wednesday night at the Senior Day Party. The voting—each vote costs a penny a piece—will start tomorrow and run through Wednesday.

Election proceeds will go toward Senior Day.

The Senior Day Class Committee announced that a final slate of ten ugly seniors has been selected for the title.

Three Students Given French Scholarships

Three UNC students have been awarded scholarships set up with money granted the UNC Department of Romance Languages by the Cultural Services of the French Embassy.

Dr. Jacques Hardre, professor of French at the University and chairman of the Scholarship Selection Committee, announced that George Edward Craddock Jr. of Cary, Joseph L. Ewing of Chapel Hill and Irvine Reid Stirling Haig of Asheville are winners of the scholarships.

According to Dr. Hardre, the money from the annual grant of the French Government to the UNC Department of Romance Languages is being used to encourage and reward outstanding students in French. Regulations for the scholarships stated that preference was given to students who intended to continue their studies in graduate school.

Before coming to UNC, Ewing attended Peeples School in Atlanta, Ga.; Georgia Military Academy, College Park, Ga.; and Central in Memphis, Tenn. His major fields of interest are medieval, renaissance and 20th century French literature.

Haig, who was educated at David Millard junior high school in Asheville and Lycee Chateaubriand, Rome, Italy, is interested in continuing his study of 19th and 20th century French literature.

Dr. Hardre stated that all the scholarship winners plan to pursue their studies of French in graduate school and that all three indicated a desire to continue at UNC.

He added that these are the first students to be awarded the French Government Scholarships which are valued at $300 each.

The Scholarship Selection Committee was composed of the following staff members of the UNC Department of Romance Languages in addition to Dr. Hardre: Alfred G. Engstrom, J. C. Lyons and W. L. Wiley.

Cleaveland Named To Succeed Robson As Political Science Head

Frederic N. Cleaveland, 42, professor of political science at UNC has been named chairman of the Department of Political Science.

Cleaveland succeeds Professor C. B. Robson, who will take a leave of absence from the University to study in Germany on a Fulbright Scholarship. The new appointment will be effective September 1, 1958.

Professor Cleaveland, born in Phoenix, Arizona, was graduated from Duke University in 1937 and received his M.A. degree from Duke in 1942.

He received his Ph.D. degree at Princeton University in 1951 and joined the UNC faculty in September of the same year. At the University he is also a research professor connected with the Institute of Research in Social Science.

During the past year Professor Cleaveland has been a member of the special Committee on Extension which has made a study for long-range planning at the University.

He is on the administrative board of the College of Arts and Sciences, the Graduate School, the School of Social Work, and Student Affairs.

Before coming to UNC, Cleaveland was an assistant professor in the Department of Government at New York University in 1950-51.

During this time he was a consultant to the personnel Division of the U.S. Department of the Interior and was a member of a research team at Princeton which was hired by the Department of the Interior to make a survey and analysis of field serives in the Department.

Dr. Cleaveland is currently engaged in a study of Metropolitan Community Leadership in Atlanta, Georgia, for the Governmental Affairs Institute.

He is also director of a study for the National Science Foundation on science and state government.

Since coming to Chapel Hill, Cleaveland has been a member of the Planning Board for the town and a member of the Board of Officers in the Community Church.

He is married to the former Miss Barbara Ann Henry of Atlanta, Georgia, and they have three children, Marilyn, Ann and Kenneth.

SP Plans Investigation Into Sewage Problems

The Student Party has announced it plans to look into the sewage problem facing residents in the Isley St.—Stinson St.—Columbia St. Extension area.

DUTY

Student Party Chairman Leon Holt said he feels "it is the duty of student government to look into this situation and to urge the Board of Health to seek a solution to this problem."

The investigation of the problem started over two weeks ago and was publicized this past week with statements from area residents, local realtors, town businessmen and local and county government officials.

It was announced there was some possibility that Housing Officer James Wadsworth, a resident of the area under investigation, would also be at the meeting.

"LIVELY' TALK

Young said he hoped there would be a "large turnout at this meeting. Although this area is now being worked on, there is much to be learned from a discussion of this problem."

He said "We must concern ourselves with the problem of off-campus housing for students, as they are as much a part of this University as you or I.

"With pressure and constructive leadership, we can pave the way for better living conditions in Chapel Hill. I promise you a lively discussion," he said.

Judge Parker Memorial To Be Established Here

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A memorial to the late Federal Judge John J. Parker will be established at the University of North Carolina, a group of his long-time friends announced here Friday.

W. S. O'B. Robinson Jr., of Charlotte, temporary chairman of the project, said a committee is being appointed to present a formal portrait of the famed jurist to the university, and to obtain funds in Judge Parker's name for scholastic awards.

Judge Parker, who died in Washington March 17, was chief judge of the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals. A native of Union County and a graduate of the university, he was first appointed to the federal bench in 1925 by President Coolidge.

Y-Nite Picnic

The annual Y-Nite all-campus picnic will be held under Davie Poplar Monday at 5:30 p.m.

Special feature of the picnic will be a talk on "Witchcraft" by Dr. Rossell Robbins.

Dr. Robbins, visiting professor from Columbia University, is teaching in the English Department at Carolina for six months. One of the foremost authorities on Witchcraft, he has done extensive research on this subject.

Les Sutorius and his jazz combo will set the scene for Dr. Robbins by playing their version of "Witchcraft."

Also featured on the program will be a Bar-B-Q supper for 50 cents.

All seven sororities and several fraternities have agreed to forego dinners at their respective houses to attend the picnic. The Y-Nite committee expressed hope that this early indication of enthusiasm and co-operation will encourage as many people as possible to attend.

Everett Hall Gets Fulbright In Kyoto, Japan

Kenan professor and chairman of the UNC Philosophy Department, Everett W. Hall, has been notified that he is the recipient of a Fulbright grant which will enable him to teach in Japan next year.

Some time ago Professor Hall was invited by Matao Noda, Dean of the Faculty of Letters at Kyoto University in Kyoto, Janpan, to teach there. Dr. Hall was able to accept the invitation with the Fulbright grant.

He will be accompained by Mrs. Hall, and they will leave from San Francisco in August for Dr. Hall's teaching duties in Japan. He plans to teach during the 1958 summer session at the University of Southern California in Los Angeles before leaving for Kyoto University.

Dr. Hall will lecture at Kyoto University from September, 1958, through March, 1959. The Halls will return to the states next summer when Dr. Hall will resume

DR. ROBBINS AND FRIEND
. . . is there a witch in the house?

Robbins On Witchcraft Tomorrow For Y-Night

Dr. Rossell Robbins will speak on "Witchcraft" at the annual Y-Nite picnic tomorrow evening at 5:30.

Dr. Robbins, a resident of Saugerties, N. Y., is a native of England. He took his B.A. degree with First Class Honors in English Language and Literature at Liverpool University in 1933.

After studying with the celebrated medievalist Dr. G. G. Coulton he received his doctor's degree in 1937 and came to America as a Commonwealth fellow studying at New York University.

The following year Dr. Robbins held the Noble Fellowship in English Literature which is the highest award in English studies offered by any British University.

For seven years Dr. Robbins was a student at the Matthay School Of Music and in 1934 he received a special post-graduate diploma in music from the School of Education, Liverpool University. In 1955 Dr. Robbins was awarded a Guggenheim Fellowship for studies of the development of lyric poetry in England: 1200-1500.

Dr. Robbins, noted historian and outstanding author on fifteenth century English Literature, is the author of "Secular Lyrics of XIV and XV Centuries" and co-author of "The Index of Middle English Verse. He edited Marlowe's "Dr. Faustus" and wrote the controversial "The T. S. Eliot Myth" in 1951 which received over 230 reviews in academic and popular journals.

Parking & Town

For a long time, the town of Chapel Hill has ignored the interests of the student body in relation to its own pocket book.

Occasionally, the merchants run sales, hold dances, and lure freshmen, but these are also profitable endeavors. Over the long period of time, the town gains a profit, and the students and the University ends up to be the loser.

Judging by the stores that are open in the summer, one would gather that the student body is the meal ticket of the town. Yet, the town consistently disregards the interests of the student body in its legal system, in its prices, and in its policy.

Currently there is a movement on to install parking meters, as well as to cut out 100 parking spaces in town by instituting a system of parellel parking. Moreover after setting up a two hour limti on parking on Columbia St., after again not considering the interests of the students living in those areas, the town wants to institute meters on these streets.

There are several things wrong with this proposal.

First, one may ask the question why is this being done.

If it is to alleviate the parking problem, the solution is not a solution, since it will only create a greater probem by cutting out 100 parking spaces.

If it is to relieve congestion, a car backing into a parking space can cause as much trouble as a series of cars angular parked with easy access to the parking space.

If it is to provide extra revenue, then one must question the town on the grounds that it is currently deriving more than enough revenue from the students.

As the situation is presently, the town gets all the money from parking tickets whether on the campus or off, and the University is still responsible to hire a campus police force to ticket cars on the campus. In other words, the University has to handle enforcement of parking restrictions without deriving the benefit of the proceeds.

Secondly, it is incomprehensible to further cut into the parking space on Columbia St., since the fraternities in that area have very little space to park as it is.

It might have seemed rash to hear the President of the Student body threatening boycott yesterday, and yet, every time the students have tried to negotiate with the town, the town has ignored the students.

It may well be that this is a time for action rather than words. It is hoped that friction can be averted.

Parents Day

It is nice every now and then to have a day dedicate dto those who put the majority of students through school. Moreover, it is nice to invite them to enjoy the campus and to have activities specially planned for their entertainment.

It would even be more nice if there were a place close to campus which could house a substantial number, and not make them take a long day's drive for a few hours' stay.

Nevertheless, the limited welcome mat is out, and it is hoped that they enjoy their stay.

Senior Day

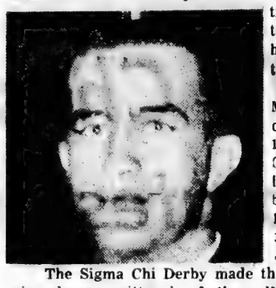
It was not once upon a time, when there was a senior week: it was only two years ago.

It was not a long time ago when the tradition of having a "Barefoot Day" was broken: it was only last year.

It might have been, however, a long time ago since their was any semblance of unity among students in general, and the senior class in particular.

It is sad to see this little bit of wholesome sentimentality and spirit lose out, and we hope that the senior day of this year is such a success that it will lead to senior weeks in the future.

The Daily Tar Heel



The official student publication of the Publication Board of the University of North Carolina, where it is published daily except Monday and examination and vacation periods and summer terms. Entered as second class matter in the post office in Chapel Hill, N. C., under the Act of March 8, 1870. Subscription rates: mailed, $4 per year, $2.50 a semester; delivered, $6 a year, $3.50 a semester.

They Made The News

Davis Young

The Carolina Symposium on Public Affairs selected a new Chairman this week in the person of Al Goldsmith, former Symposium treasurer. Goldsmith will head up the Interim Committee and began his job immediately upon notification that he had been chosen.

His group will function until March of 1959, at which time new officers will be elected for the 1960 Symposium. The job facing Goldsmith & Co. will be most challenging as they will be responsible for evaluating all phases of the 1958 program and will also be charged with laying the groundwork for the next symposium.

The Sigma Chi Derby made the news more than once this week via columns written by Anthony Wolff. Overcoming his rave (?) reviews, Derby co-chairman Denny McCoy and Jerry Long lead the way for what many observers termed the "most successful Derby."

One of the highlights of the program this year was selection of Miss Modern Venus for 1958 — Gail Willingham. Miss Willingham found stiff competition, but in the long run came out victorious over her two closest opponents, Ruth Huffman and Martha Fortune.

Carolina's baseball team continued on or near the top of the hot ACC baseball race this week. Part of this was due to a brilliant 7-0 shutout by Wayne Young in Tuesday's game with State.

Carl Barrington, senior member of the Kappa Alpha fraternity, won the coveted Willie Mangum Medal for public speaking on Wednesday night.

The Order of the Grail held their annual elections this week and selected well known campus personality, Herman Godwin as Delegata. Other officers selected were Paul Woodard as Scribe, Bob Carter as Exchequer and Danny Lotz as Vice Exchequer.

Sound and Fury went on the stage as scheduled on Friday and presented to the campus and town their annual production. This is a subsidiary organization of Graham Memorial Activities Board and features completely student written shows. Playing leading roles were Hannah Kirby and Hoke Simpson.

President William C. Friday of the Consolidated University of North Carolina added to his already swelling list of honors this week by being initiated as an honorary member of the Alpha Kappa Psi professional fraternity.

Speaking of fraternities, how bout that blast at the TEP house this weekend. Centered around an Oriental theme — TEP House of the August Moon — the boys went continental and showed real initiative and originality in their decorations.

Bob Carter, Jack Mitchell and Betty Zeh assumed the three highest positions in GMAB this week. Going out of a year's term as president of the group was Benny Thomas, who has done a tremendous job.

For Carter it was another honor for a person who has had many. A former Treasurer of the Student Body, IDC vice president and member of the Student Legislature, Carter showed his willingness to branch out into new fields.

Miss Zeh is a member of the Alpha Gamma Delta sorority and the Student Legislature. She has been active throughout the year with GMAB and is the new secretary.

Mitchell deserves special mention. Being only a freshman, he has demonstrated a tremendous knowledge of the group's purpose and desire to see it function well. The first year man, who is a Phi Delt, looks like a real comer.

For the third week in a row, Lillian Shannonhouse was once again providing The Daily Tar Heel with good front page copy. This time the determined and often mis-interpreted head of the Women's Residence Council made public a list of compromise measures dealing with the new rules for Freshman Coeds.

IKE AND THE RUSSIANS

The headlines recently reported that President Eisenhower has called the Russians "silly." If this is the best we can do to counter the Russian propaganda offensive, then we might as well give up. It is obvious to all but the most oblivious that the Russian's are anything but "silly," and the quicker the American administration recognizes this, and the sooner Ike and Co. become responsible enough to give the people facts and reasons instead of childish epithets, the sooner we will be able to make progress against Russia. Right now, those silly Russians are making us look sick.

ALABAMA POLITICS IN LIFE MAGAZINE

One college professor is reported to have said that Life Magazine is for people who can't read, and Time is for people who can't think.

This is probably occasionally true, but more often than not both of these magazines rise above their reputations and their more inane moments and publish something truly valuable.

There is a case in point in the current issue of Life, in a pictorial feature on the current political campaign in the modern and progressive state of Alabama. The photographs and text illustrate the force which the democratic process engenders, and, although Life draws no conclusions about the state of affairs, the lesson is obvious.

THE WOMEN'S RESIDENCE COUNCIL

The WRC provided object lesson in another of democracy' ills. It is now obvious that democracy is slowest to act in its own behalf, whatever its snail's pace in other areas.

TELEVISION

4 P.M. — Channel 5 — Omnibus

Part of this afternoon's show is devoted to a repeat of the now-famous "Bernstein on Bach" show, originally presented last fall. The show, which won an Emmy for Mr. Bernstein, features an extended excerpt from the "St. Matthew Passion," performed by full choir and orchestra with Bernstein conducting.

The rest of the show is devoted to a film report on the recently opened Brussels World's Fair.

4:30 P.M. — Channel 2 — Twentieth Century

"War In China" is the subject of today's report, which is a pictorial account of the Chinese battleground in the Japanese invasion in 1933 to the Communist uprising in 1949.

Man And The Law

Malcolm B. Seawell

(The following is the second part of an address given by Attorney General Seawell at Law Day May 1. 1958.)

Man is fooled by the Joe McCarthys of this world. When he panics and forgets the law, the McCarthys have a field day. But the McCarthys are smart. They know that man may be frightened and that, through fear, he will put up with anything short of a striped back, a broken foot, a mangled body. The McCarthys go to work in a different field; they attack man's character and his spirit.

Law has evolved not so much for man's body as for his spirit. A broken spirit is by no means as apparent as a foot or a leg or an arm encased in a cast. But the hurt is deeper, more permanent. Although, heaven forbid, there is no bloodshed!

To the demagogues, the Attorney General's list takes the place of the criminal code; reasonable doubt is resolved in favor of the government; guilt through association negates an overt act; a committee subpoena or an administrative letter replaces the bill of indictment; the accused must prove his innocence; the right to confront an accusor is denied because the government's information is "secret;" and man's job is taken away from him with the quotation: "Man has the right of free speech, but he doesn't have the right to be a member of the Boston Police Department," which statement will someday be catalogued as the weakest thought of a magnificent brain.

Man must understand that there can be no approximation of perfect justice unless there be a perfect justice towards which man reaches. Those who seek to enslave man first seek to destroy man's God. They remove God and in His stead place the State; then the State becomes one man and the people become his servants. If the servants step out of line (or protest such treatment) they become "enemies of the State" — the only real crime, a hanging offense!

With us the STATE is many people. We elect representatives: Legislators, Commissioners, Judges who, under the law, represent us. They may remain in office, if they serve us according to law.

The one hundred courthouses in North Carolina are much the same. Some are magnificent and others are humble; but there is the bench, the jury-box, the rail, the seats for spectators. The spectator in Manteo would be equally at home in the courthouse of Murphy. The barber, the cobbler, the merchant, the farmer, the insurance salesman, the meek and the mighty serve on the jury of twelve to find the truth. Rarely is there criticism of what the twelve decide because they are "us" sitting in the box.

They are "the people" and the law is theirs. The great crisis in the changeless drama is not to be found in sharp cross-examination nor in impassioned speech, but in the verdict of the twelve.

Perhaps the drama is not changeless. Perhaps someday the "lie-detector" will replace the twelve — the mechanical brain may someday answer the issues. But that isn't likely!

The people will not turn over their courts, their justice, their law to clever devices. The law student may rest assured that no revolutionary process will destroy his profession. We are going to keep on having lawyers.

The law is a living thing because those who carved most breathed the breath of life into it. The law has grown from one rule (which Adam promptly broke) into a great and often confusing conglomeration of books, statutes, customs, decisions and rules. The layman cannot hope to find his way through the maze. Happily, he doesn't have to. He just stands up and proclaims, "I've got my rights!" Then, even more happily for the lawyer, he gets himself an attorney.

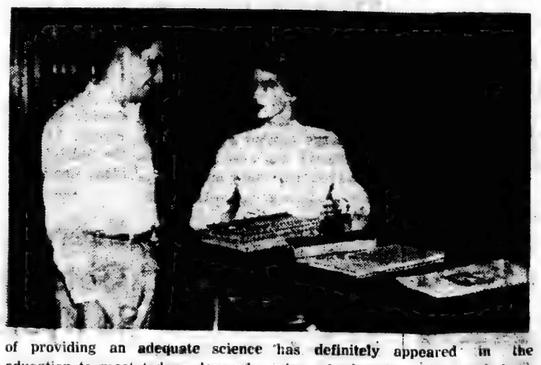
What kind of person is the attorney who, for a fee, will seek to prove that his client has his rights? For the most part he is similar to his client. He differs in education; he knows a jargon peculiarly that of those who follow the law; he appreciates both the humility with which he should approach the bench and, at the same time, the aggressiveness with which he must address the jury.

"Nowhere so busy a man there was.

And yet he seemed busier than he was."

Slowly, slowly, the lawyer is changing. He is changing because man is becoming better educated through the radio, the television, the press, the schools. The loud voice of a few years ago no longer takes the place of brains and ability, neither with the client nor the jury. He is changing, also, because he is the end product of the sacrificial dedication of his professors; — any one of whom could shake the academic dust from his heels and start making "real money" were it not for the fact that his desire to produce some worthwhile lawyer forecloses personal considerations. The law teacher knows that the law is not to be bought. Therefore he teacher "mortgages" and, in due course, pays off the mortgage on his own roof. And that is the answer to the law student's often thought question when evaluating his teacher: "If you are so darn smart, why aren't you rich?"

Since the law is not static, there are always new frontiers. Women are still seeking equality and gaining it. The relations of race, creed with creed, ideologies with ideologies are ever before us. Under law we must answer and answer again the many questions which man's relations with his fellowman evoke.



As lawyers, you will become members of the only profession which requires that, before entering practice, you appear before a Justice of the Supreme Court or before a Judge of the Superior Court, in open court, and take an oath that you will maintain and support the Constitution of the United States, the Constitution of North Carolina not inconsistent with the Constitution of the United States, and that you will well and truly demean yourselves as attorneys at law.

You see, you will have become oath-bound to preserve the law whatever "we the people," speaking through their representatives in our legislative halls and on our Supreme Courts, say that the law is.

Is Knowledge For Utility ?

James C. Miller

There is no doubt that one of our most pressing national problems is that of education. Our own Daily Tar Heel reflected and national concern in its presentation of a series of articles expressing one man's interpretation of the problem which undoubtedly expressed in some degree the sentiments of others.

It is the AIM of education that is being ultimately challenged in our pointed concern. What we teach certainly reflects an aim, however aimless it may be. Our educational aims in turn endeavor to answer the question so often posed—"education for what?" Is it knowledge for the sake of knowledge? Is it knowledge for utility? or Is it eclectic in that it endeavors to combine the two?.

Certainly in our American society we can find examples for all three. It may be argued that perhaps the demands of the society at its particular time in history ultimately determines which of the three predominates. Again, on a lower level, different training programs or careers emphasize one or another in degree.

An important point of consideration in 1958 America is that most of us have to work to survive the demands imposed upon up by our particular environments. This demands that education include in its aim or aims a utilitarian curriculum.

Thus, in this age of Sputnik, if we have not already outworn the term, much of the attack upon current or past educational aims is directed at our apparent lack of providing an adequate science education to meet todays demands. We have failed in utility as defined by the needs for today.

In looking around America, vocation-wise, scientists in certain fields are lacking more than in others. Engineers, physicists, mathematicians and the like are needed in research at large and in the national interest. Therefore, if needed in the field so desperately, the same degree of desperation is felt by the schools for teachers and professors in these fields.

There is one similarity of complaint that appears in recent literature demanding that essentially the three R's be taught and physical scientists and mathematicians be turned out in greater abundance. The complaint has been against the "cult" of adjustment emphasis. The claim has been made that adjustment has been overemphasized to the detriment of the three R's and learning expansion therefrom.

Perhaps an overemphasis has sake we can admit that adjustment has definitely appeared in the aims of education. It is hard, however, to ascertain the extent to which individual schools or educational institutions have been concerned with the problem. It is certain that degree of concern has varied; therefore, overemphasis in individual schools may not have been a problem. In fact, underemphasis may very well be the order of the day for very many individual schools.

What is this problem of adjustment that is being thrown about as a convicted criminal? Why has it cropped up at all in education? Is an emphasis (rather than an over or de-emphasis) of it as an aim in education justified?

been applied here. For argument's

For the last two hundred years or so, man has steadily turned to the study of man. Darwin couldn't quit until he brought his theory of evolution to include the psychology of organisms terminating in man. Early scientists concerned with the human senses found themselves confronted with perception. Doctors dealing with physical infirmities found themselves confronted with the personal equation. They concluded that the problem of mental disease was a province of theirs, medical. Businesses, industries, governments, schools found themselves confronted with problems concerning efficiency, in-put/out-put, ability to do an assigned task, ability to complete school, ability to help fight a war.

Adjustment in one way or another concerns the student of man. It cannot be brushed aside. Adjustment is concerned with the individual and a special kind of relationship he establishes with whatever is environmental and perhaps himself. That relationship desired is one that is satisfactory, that allows for harmony.

When a position is open for the employment of a person, the employer is interested not only in what the prospective employee knows about his field, but also in how well he can get along with his fellow workers and how well he can make himself a place - happily - in the organization. Needless to say, it works both ways. The employee wants to be happy with his working associates and the organization as a whole. All this desire to want for harmony and satisfaction would be fine if there weren't human problems obstructing the goal. These problems often demand professional help. What is better, however, is not to have the problem created in the first place if it can be helped. Thus prediction of early symptoms or knowledge of conditions creating the various problems can lead to preventive measures where possible.

There seems to be a tendency on the part of the "anti-adjusters" to want to throw out adjustment as an aim of education altogether. Mental testing, counseling, vocational guidance, training and treatment of the emotionally and mentally handicapped, and mental hygiene have contributed too much to throw out the window. This is not to say that the maximum has been accomplished. Perhaps the optimum has not been done. We might ask whether any science has contributed the maximum, if we must speak in absolutist terms.

Certainly science education and the three Rs are needed to meet the demands of modern America. But these demands cannot be met without consideration of individual assessment for the job . . . and this involves adjustment.

The problem is one of interdependence between technique or know-how and adjustment. Perhaps the problem is a problem because the proponents of the two aims have considered their individual aim as ends in themselves when they are means.

This article does not mean to ascertain the real nature of our problem in education. This is a big order and is apparent from the many views of many eminent men. It demands more than prejudicial opinions and whims. What I have endeavored to do, however incompletely, is to give the adjustment matter some perspective of importance in the light of the part it plays in the total situation of man and environment.

Dance Group Appointments Due This Week

Student Body President Don Furtado will appoint the members of the Dance Committee next week. Serving as chairman will be Charles Coley. Secretary will be Bob Cromley, and chairman of the Dance Committee Court will be Charlie Younce.

New members of the court will be Bill Taylor, John Ragland, Whit Moose, and Rudy Edwards.

If any campus organization or group would like to have a dance they have been asked to contact Coley at the Kappa Sigma house, or Ray Jefferies whose ofifce is in South Building, at least one week ahead of time.

UNC String Quartet To Perform Tuesday

The UNC String Quartet will present its first program of the current season in Hill Music Hall at 8 p.m. playing works of Beethoven, Barber, Schubert and Haydn.

This is the 18th concert in this year's Tuesday Evening Series sponsored by the UNC music department. The programs are open to the public at no charge.

The quartet members, violinists Edgar Alden and Jean Heard, violist Dorothy Alden and 'cellist Mary Gray Clarke, have played together since 1950.

Dr. Alden, a member of the faculty of the UNC Department of Music where he teaches violin, harmony and graduate courses in musicology, is also associate conductor of the University Symphony Orchestra.

Both he and Mrs. Alden have held first chair positions in the North Carolina Symphony and have performed throughout North Carolina as soloists and in various chamber groups.

A graduate of the Juilliard School of Music, Mrs. Heard has studied with Mischa Mischakoff. Miss Clarke, first 'cellist with the University Symphony, is a graduate assistant in the music department and holds a master's degree from the Manhatten School of Music.

The Tuesday evening recital will begin with the Beethoven Quartet in F Major, Op. 135, the last of Beethoven's quartets. The second work on the program will be the String Quartet, Op. 11, of Samuel Barber.

The composer, whose opera Vanessa was premiered at the Metropolitan Opera House in January of this year, wrote the quartet in 1936. The middle movement, an orchestral arrangement labeled 'Adagio for Strings," has been played by many symphony orchestras throughout the world.

WITCHCRAFT

Dr. Robbins has published 70 articles on various medieval studies, appearing in periodicals both here and in six countries overseas.

Dr. Robbins has taught at New York University, Columbia University, Brooklyn College and Polytechnic Institute. He is well-known as a verse speaker having conducted his own choirs in Liverpool, London and New York.

At present Dr. Robbins is Honorary Associate of the University Seminar in Medieval Studies at Columbia University.

Here at the University he is a visiting professor of English for the spring term, teaching Chaucer on both graduate and undergraduate levels.

"Witchcraft," the topic on which Dr. Robbins will speak, is an out growth of the Medieval Period and is identified with religious heresy. This is an anti-intellectual movement which arose out of a period of fear and general lack of confidence in people—a time of illusions, dogma and distorted beliefs the effects of which people refused to recognize.

It began around 1484 in Europe during the time of Pope Innocent VIII and lasted through 1692 when the Salem witch trials ceased; the peak of this movement was in 1600.

Since religious heresy was dealing with ideas, it was very easy to prove. A witch was a person in contact with the devil, working to overthrow Christianity. The degradation and moral depravity of the period is obvious in the many accusations and horrors which occurred at that time.

Old women were often accused of being "witches particiularly if they owned an animal. Having a cat would be a means of communicating with the devil. Dr. Robbins says that today's juvenile delinquency problem and the "killing-for-fun" enthusiasts are nothing compared to the children of the witchcraft era who were considered agents of the devil. He says that there are many manifestations of witchcraft today and it is important not to be caught in this type of movement again.

Speedy Return After Fire Is A High Point Of WUNC-TV

Not even a $60,000 fire last fall could bring Carolina's efficient television station, WUNC-TV to more than a temporary standstill. Despite considerable smoke and water damage to the production facilities, Chapel Hill programs were back on the air within an hour.

This broadcasting consistency, coupled with an equal degree of continuity in the quality of the programming, has distinguished the local branch of WUNC-TV since

Good Training

The studio is located in the Communication Center in Swain Hall, and operates under the direction of Professor Earl Wynn. At the same time the studios provide an excellent practical training ground for students enrolled in the academic Department of Radio, Television and Motion Pictures.

Wynn came to Chapel Hill in 1938 to teach speech, dramatic literature and radio and was instrumental in the development of the radio department in 1940. Following five years of military service he returned to UNC and was appointed to his present position as Director of the Communication Center, bringing together all of the various media: movies, film strips, radio and television.

Run By Young

The studios at Chapel Hill are run by John Young, Assistant director of TV, who has been here for ten years and has occupied his present spot since 1956. There is one large TV studio in Swain Hall in addition to a shooting stage for films and two radio studios, all of which are adaptable for television when needed.

Programming here includes a series of in-school presentations. For the elementary grades there are half-hour weekly shows such as "Play Period," while high school students are offered weekly vocational guidance programs such as "Careers for You," and morning courses in United States and world history, mathematics and general science. Courses in german, religion, political science, art and psychology have been offered for credit to University students. Plans are also afoot for inservice programs to be taught by master instructors, in such subjects as physics, science and speech—to teach the teachers.

Ine of Wynn's outstanding accomplishments was the radio series, "American Adventure," which featured such notable figures as the great poet and author, Carl Sandburg, and was broadcast roast-to-roast by NBC from July, 1956, to July, 1957. Sandburg is presently under contract to do four half-hour TV shows of a similar nature and these will be completed as soon as he can return to Chapel Hill.

"Broadvision," a device whereby WUNC broadcasts the picture part of basketball games while local radio announcers provide commentary is another worthy innovation.

It was at Chapel Hill that the idea of a college TV station was initiated under the leadership of Dr. Frank Porter Graham, then President of the Consolidated University, and William D. Carmichael Jr., Vice President and Finance Officer, with Earl Wynn providing the needed technical assistance.

The budget has been set at approximately $145,000, an amount which substantially supports the operations here, at Woman's College in Greensboro, and at North Carolina State. Although the three studios are each autonomous, the fine cooperation between them has provided an attractive array of programs which would not be possible otherwise.

Sime Leads Duke Blue Devils To Win Over The Tar Heels

By DAVE WIBLE

Durham — Carolina's Dave Scurlock set a new school record in the 440-yard dash but Duke's Dave Sime won four of the five events he entered and led his team to a 78 5/6 to 52 1/6 track victory over the Tar Heels yesterday.

Scurlock poured it on in the home stretch to clock 48.2 and break his old school record of 48.4 set last year. Sime didn't set any new records but won the 100, 220, low hurdles and javelin to gather 20 points for his squad. He also threw the discus but didn't place.

Sime's times were: 100-:09.5 (He has tied the World's mark of :09.3 three times); 220-:21.0 (He holds the World's record at :20.0); Low hurdles-:23.5 (He set the World's mark of 22.2 at this same meet in 1956). He won the javelin with a throw of 201'10".

The names "Sime" and "Scurlock" drew a crowd of almost a thousand to the meet which proved to be one of the most exciting seen in these parts in a long time. All down the line the Tar Heels and Blue Devils fought it out with the winner usually decided in the last few yards.

Carolina's captain Everett Whatley entered the 880 for the first time and was edged out of second place by inches by Duke's Tommy Bazemore. Bazemore and Whatley ran down the stretch side by side. Scurlock won the event in 1:54.5, the third best time in his career, and far under the existing conference record of 1:54.1.

Duke's Cary Weisiger set a new school record in the mile clocking 4:10.7. Tar Heel Wayne Bishop faded in the final 220 but still clocked a very good 4:13.8 for second place.

Other Carolina winners were Ward Sims in the pole vault (12 feet), Ray Stanley in the broad jump (22'5½"), Cowles Liipfert in the 2-mile (10:00) and Lyndon De Borde in the high hurdles (:14.9).

In the freshmen meet, the Blue Imps took charge of the situation and won 104-27. Bob Eubanks was the Tar Babies lone victor with a win in the broad jump.

No Basketball Champ For ACC In '59 According To Bylaws

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The Atlantic Coast Conference never has had a basketball champion.

Surprised? So were most ACC coaches and officials when informed that the bylaws make no provision for recognition of an official champion.

Article III, Section 1 reads: "The winning of (horrible grammar) the Conference Basketball tournament shall be nominated for the NCAA tournament, if this is possible."

That's all. Nowhere does it say that the conference tournament winner is the champion or the regular season winner is.

Clemson College had proposed a bylaws change for consideration at Friday's ACC meeting at Greensboro to cover the apparent oversight.

The Clemson proposal read, in part:

"The winner of the basketball tournament shall be declared the conference champion."

But the measure never got to the floor. It was withdrawn by Clemson. So, unless something is done at the December meeting to spell out the manner of crowning a champion, the ACC will not have an official cage champion next year, either.

Press Maravich, Clemson coach, professed complete ignorance of his school's proposal, let alone having any idea of the reason for advancing it and then withdrawing it.

Commissioner Jim Weaver also was in the dark.

Some observers sought to attach a special significance to the maneuver. They pointed out that with wide open football bowl participation now permitted, the basketball coaches might feel free to try again to get ACC approval of the NIT tournament at New York in March. Only the NCAA tourney, which gets the Raleigh tournament winner, is sanctioned by the ACC.

Golf Match Monday

Monday afternoon the varsity golf team travels to Wake Forest to play its last conference match before the ACC championships which begin at Wake Forest this coming Thursday.

Last Thursday the golfers were to have met Duke, but rain halted the action. Due to the limited time between now and the tournament the match with the Blue Devils will not be rescheduled.

A year ago coach Bones McKinney and his Deacon golfers won the conference championship with a seasonal record of 11-2. This year's Deac team is built around lettermen Tommy Helms, Ralph James, and Red Sapp.

Tar Heel mentor Chuck Erickson will counter the Deacon lineup with his usual starting six of Billy Thornton, John McKee, Gene Lookabill, Tommy Langley, Joe Callicott, and Charlie Erdman.

Frosh Beat Deacs

The Carolina Tar Babies whipped Big Four foe Wake Forest yesterday 1-0 on the 1-hit pitching of big Bob Deaton. Deaton went all seven innings and gained credit for the win.

The Tar Babies scored only one run, in the fourth inning, but with Deaton's shutout effort from the mound it proved to be enough. The run came when Russ Hollers singled, stole second, went to third on a past ball. Then Dee Frady walked, and when he stole second safely, Hollers scored on the throw to second base.

The win brings the Tar Babies' season record to 9 wins and 3 losses. They play Duke here Monday. The frosh beat the Blue Imps last time.

Quigg Appeal For Extension Turned Down

(AP) — Joe Quigg, the Carolina's 6-9 center from Brooklyn who had to sit out the past basketball season because of a broken leg, has only one more semester of eligibility remaining.

Dr. O. K. Cornwell, the university's faculty chairman, said yesterday that an appeal to have Quigg's eligibility extended for the complete season was turned down by the other faculty chairmen in an executive session at Greensboro this week.

"The five-year rule has caught Quigg," Cornwell said. "I was authorized by the university's faculty committee to put before the conference an appeal to have an exception made because Quigg had the hard luck of breaking his leg. It was what we call a hardship case."

The faculty chairman, Cornwell said, pointed out there had been several such appeals in the past but none has ever been allowed.

Thus, Quigg will be eligible next season only during the first semester. He entered the university in February four and one-half years ago.

Quigg starred on Carolina's national championship team of 1956-57, making free throws in overtime to give the Tar Heels the title.

He broke his leg in a practice scrimmage before the 1957-58 season opened.

Tim Tam Didn't Wait For Silky

LOUISVILLE, Ky (AP) — "I didn't want to wait for Silky," was the way jockey Ismael Valenzuela told the story of his convincing Kentucky Derby victory at Churchill Downs yesterday.

Valenzuela won the Derby in his first try in the American classic with Calumet Farms Tim Tam.

Silky Sullivan, the West Coast sensation who likes to lag behind the early part of the race, was one of the favorites along with Tam Tam and Jewel's Reward.

But Silky lagged too far and too long and beat only two horses.

Valenzuela said he was thinking about Silky when he was coming down the stretch. "I looked back for Silky but he wasn't there. I kept going," said the 23-year-old Texas-born but Mexican - raised jockey.

Willie Shoemaker had no excuses for Silky's disappointing failure to turn it on in the stretch.

"I knew he wasn't running good the first few strides," Shoemaker said. "He just wasn't running as smooth as he usually does."

"The whole story," Shoemaker continued, "was he didn't like the track." The track was muddy for the mile and a quarter race.

Young Pitches Carolina To 7-1 Victory Over Cavaliers

By RUSTY HAMMOND

The Carolina Tar Heels swept their 9th victory in 10 starts and upped their conference record to 8-2 as Wayne Young pitched a beautiful 2-hitter to set down Virginia 7-1 here yesterday.

It was the 5th win of the season for Young against 2 defeats and the soph sensation fanned 11 batters along the nine inning route.

Carolina unleashed a 12-hit attack to give Young all the support he needed, failing to hit safely in but one inning.

In the first, Carson Oldham scored on a balk. In the fourth the Heels got two runs on pitcher Young's single. They added another in the 5th on a hit-and-run between Honeycutt and Pons, Pons doing the scoring, and another in the ixth. Two more crossed in the 8th on another hit-and-run, with Pons doing the hitting this time.

The win more firmly entrenched Carolina in second place behind front-running Clemson who beat State 15-11 yesterday. Clemson is now 10-2 and the Tar Heels are 8-2. Carolina has only four more games remaining this season, 2 next week. Duke is here Wednesday and the Tar Heels play at Virginia Saturday.

Frosh Netters Win

Thursday afternoon the freshman tennis team scored its third victory in four starts this season by downing the State College 8-1 on the home courts. For the Wolflets it was the second time this year that they had met defeat at the hands of the Tar Babies.

Despite the loss of number two man Spencer Gray, the Tar Babies won all six of the singles matches to insure victory even before the start of the doubles. In the singles only Dee Heather and Buzzy Cowart needed three sets to pick up their win.

The State frosh took their only win of the day in the number-one doubles match when Phil Jacobs and Jim Spence defeated Heather and Bruce Sylvia in straight sets.

Sticklers!

WHAT HAPPENS WHEN A BANK OFFICIAL IS DEPRIVED OF HIS LUCKIES? (SEE PARAGRAPH AT RIGHT)

BANK ROBBERS often try to get rich through no vault of their own. So often, in fact, that bank officials rarely get rattled by ordinary hold-ups. But sometimes the gangsters go too far. Sometimes (Curses!) they lift the officials' Luckies! That dastardly act is bound to cause real Banker Rancor! Why? Simple. Every Lucky (You can bank on this!) tastes like a million bucks. Every Lucky is made of fine tobacco . . . naturally light, good-tasting tobacco, toasted to taste even better. But don't accept our account—check it yourself. Get Luckies right now!

TIME'S RUNNING OUT! Better get your Sticklers in fast! (You haven't lived if you haven't Stickled!) Sticklers are simple riddles with two-word rhyming answers. Both words must have the same number of syllables. (Don't do drawings.) Send stacks of 'em with your name, address, college and class to Happy-Joe-Lucky, Box 67A, Mt. Vernon, N. Y.

Arkansas Crisis Gains Three Pulitzer Prizes

NEW YORK, (AP)-Coverage of the explosive integration crisis at Little Rock's Central High School won three separate 1958 Pulitzer prizes in Journalism yesterday.

They went to the Little Rock, Ark., Gazette for meritorious public service; the newspaper's executive editor, Harry S. Ashmore, for editorial writing; and Associated Press Correspondent Relman (Pat) Morin for his eyewitness account of mob violence outside the school Sept. 23.

Morin, a Pulitzer Prize Winner in 1951, was one of two winners this year for national reporting. The other was Clark Mollenhoff of The Des Moines Register and Tribune, who was cited for his investigation of labor racketeering.

In the case of The Arkansas Gazette, it marked the first time a newspaper captured the public service award while one of its editors was winning the editorial prize for the same news event. Separate citations lauded the newspaper and its editor for objectivity in the face of mounting public tension.

The 1958 fiction award went to James Agee's Novel, "A Death in the Family." It deals with a southern family's reaction to the death of a beloved father. It was completed by Agee before his death in 1955.

The annual drama award went to "Look Homeward, Angel." Ketti Frings' adaption of the late Thomas Wolfe's autobiographical novel of the same name. It has been a Broadway hit since its opening last Nov 28.

It was the 41st annual award of prizes established by the late publisher Joseph Pulitzer. They are made annually by the trustees of Columbia University on recommdation of the advisory board on the Pulitzer Prizes.

Dental School Must Expand, States Dean

PINEHURST, N. C. (AP) — Expansion of the UNC School of Dentistry by at least 50 per cent of the present enrollment must be accomplished if the state is to begin to solve its shortage of dentists.

So stated Dr. John C. Brauer, dean of the University Dental School who discussed dental manpower in North Carolina at Monday's session of the North Carolina Dental Society convention.

Brauer said that 25 additional dental students mut be admitted to the freshman class yearly and the dental hygiene program should be expanded by 60 students per class.

Should the General Assembly appropriate expansion funds in 1959, it still would be 1962 before the first increase in enrollment could be accomplished, said Brauer. It would be 1966, he said, before any of the new students would graduate.

"If the dentist-population ratio were to be based on need for dental service the state would require eight times more dentists than now practicing," said Brauer.

"The picture is not so critical when based on "effective demands", neverthless a real shortage of dentists exists within the state," he added.

The state's 1,096 practicing dentists in mid-1956 constituted a ratio of one dentist to every 3,952 persons. The national ratio was one for every 1,900.

Legal Group Finishes Up Activities

Battle Senate of Delta Theta Phi legal fraternity completed its business and social calendar last week.

On Thursday, April 24, the fraternity initiated C. K. Brown, Bruce Johnson, Harold Waters, Bob Hayes, Ed Murray and Billy Tucker. The new members were then honored at a barbecue supper.

To complete the week, the Senate celebrated ts 34th birthday at its annual Founders Day banquet at the Saddle Club in Durham. New officers for the coming year were installed.

Sudden Squall Wets Y-Niters

By CHARLIE SLOAN

A sudden rain squall scattered Y-Niters yesterday just as Dr. Rossell Robbins turned into the home stretch of his comments on witchcraft.

The mischievous elements abated as suddenly as they descended, and Dr. Robbins lost only a few listeners for his concludsion.

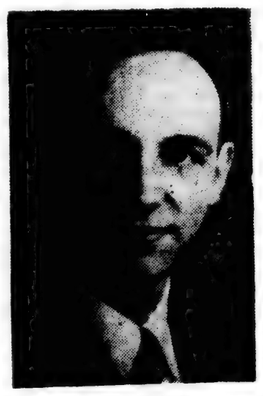
Starting slightly before 5:30 in spite of threatening skies, students taking part in the annual picnic queued up in two long lines for a barbecue dinner. Then they jockeyed for position on the benches with the swinging strains of Les Sutorius' brand of jazz for background music.

Daryl Farrington told the group, which grew in numbers to more than 700, that the program would be moved to Memorial Hall if and when the rains came. When Dr. Robbins, a siamese cat with a blue ribbon around its neck curled in his arm, got up to speak he commented that the weather was proof of the fiction of witchearft—said he'd been working a long time for a nice day.

But the rains did come, or at least a capricious—little squall that could be seen advancing across the campus toward the bermuda and sportshirt clad crowd.

Before the heavens dropped in on the affair Dr. Robbins was outlining the development of belief in witches from a long-ago Papal Bull setting up the standards for broomriders of all time.

Apologizing for bringing up such things in an after dinner speech, he described the treatment of witches in the middle ages in several unhappy instances, naming three educated men from different periods and places whose persecution of witches place them in his own "Hall of shame."



He was just wrapping up the case of a nymphomaniac nun when the shower struck.

And when the rains came the reporters went. Wonder what they did with that nun.

UNC Receives Grant For Chemical Research

The National Science Foundation has announced the awarding of a $17,200 research grant to UNC for a three-year study to be headed by Dr. J. Charles Morrow III, associate professor of chemistry.

The study aims at discovering more about the structure of metal compounds, with attention focused on rhenium and osmium compounds. "Magnetichemical and Crystallographic Studies of Transition Mental Compounds" is the projects formal title.

. . . to head study

Dr. Morrow explained that little is known about the rhenium compound structure so the study is exploratory in nature. It has no direct practical application, he said, and is in the category of "pure" research.

The three-year study will be an elaboration of earlier research carried out by Dr. Morrow during the past two years, made possible by grants from the UNC Research Council.

Magnetochemistry is one of Dr. Morrow's main research fields, which also include x-ray crystallography and cryogenics, which is low temperature investigation. His studies have been supported also by a Research Corporation Grant.

A native of Hendersonville, he attended Mars Hill College and received his B.S. degree in chemistry at UNC. He completed his Ph. D. degree at Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1949, and has been on the faculty at Chapel Hill since that time.

Dr. Morrow is a member of the American Chemical Society, American Physical Society, Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society, Phi Beta Kappa and Sigma Xi. His publications include those in Physical Review, Journal of Chemical Physics, Journal of the American Chemical Society and Journal of Physical Chemistry.

Canterburians Select Easley Leader Pro Tem

The steering committee of the Episcopal Student Congregation elected Robert Easley to preside over Canterbury Club in pace of William Agner who resigned as president.

Easley, from Murphy, is a member of Alpha Phi Omega, the U.N.C. Cardboard, pledge of Delta Upsilon fraternity, and current head of the Student Acolytes' Guild of the Episcopal Student Congregation. He also an official Lay Reader and head of St. Dunstons Guild at the Chapel of the Cross.

The steering committee is restructuring Canterbury Club for more effective resudlts for the students in the fall. In November new Canterbury Club officiers will be elected and the steering committee will then be abolished.

Soviet Student Editors Plan June Visit In Area

Six Soviet student editors will be in the Raleigh-Durham-Chapel Hill area from approximaely June 3-6.

Their stay here will be part of a visit to the United States from May 15 to June 14. It will be sponsored by the United States National Student Association.

Negotiations late in 1957 between the United States and Russia led to an agreement to exchange delegations of student editors from the two countries.

The USNSA group visited Russia and completed negotiations with the Committee of Youth Oranizations there regarding the Soviet editors who will visit the United States.

The program for the editors is designed to stress contacts with the student side of American culture, with visits to clases, lectures, receptions, and press and radio tours included.

National Studuent Association officials also urged local NSA groups to introduce the Russian editors to more general aspects of United States life. These would include local government, local industry, picnics, theatres and other local points of interest. Nbt only will the Soviets be able to observe the workings of the local press, radio and TV, but arangements will probably be made for them to express their views through these facilities.

University Party To Elect Officers

The University Party will meet tonight at 7:15 in Roland Parker Lounges I and II.

Election of officers and a discussion of the Chapel Hill traffic problem are slated for the meeting.

Syd Shuford, UP chairman, has urged all UP members to attend the meeting.

String Concert Tonight Opens '57-58 Season

The University String Quartet wil present its first program of the 1957-58 season in Hill Music Hall on tonight at 8 o'clock, playing works of Beethoven, Barber, Schubert and Haydn.

The quartet members, violinists Edgar Alden and Jean Heard, violist Dorothy Alden, and 'cellist Mary Gray Clarke, have played together since 1950.

Dr. Alden is a member of the faculty in the Department of Music at the University where he teaches violin, harmony and graduate courses in musicology, and is also associate conductor of the University Symphony Orchestra. Both he and Mrs. Alden have held first chair positions in the North Carolina Symphony and have performed throughout North Carolina assolo-ists and in various chamber groups.

Mrs. Heard is a graduate of the Julliard School of Music and has studied with Mischa Mischakoff.

Miss Clarke, first 'cellist with the University Symphony, is a graduate assistant in the Music Department and holds a master's degree from the Manhatten School of Music.

The Tuesday evening recital will begin with Beethoven's quartets, it is shorter and lighter than the great quartets just preceding it.

The second work of the evening wil be the "String Quartet," Op. 11, of Samuel Barber. The composer, whose opera "Vanessa" was premiered at the Metropolitan Opera House in January of this year, wrote the quartet in 1936. The middle movement, in an orchestral arrangement labelad "Adagio for Strings," has been played by many symphony orchestras throughout the world.

Following intermission the quartet will perform the single complete movement of an unfinished Schubert quartet in C Minor. It is not known why the work was not completed, for it is neither the last quartet composition of Schubert nor is it inferior to the three quartets which came after it. The program wil be concluded with the playing of Haydn's "Quartet in G Major," Op. 54, No. 1. This work is typical of the composer's quartets, being a charming and humorous work with many surprises for the listener.

The concert is Number 18 of the current Tuesday Evening Series sponsored by the UNC Department of Music, and is open to the public at no admission charge.

Tomorrow Is Big Day For Entire Senior Class

A variety show, Ugly Man Contest and selection of Mr. Alumnus and Miss Alumna will be featured tomorrow when UNC seniors celebrate Senior Day.

Senior Day activities will begin today when seniors are given free admission to the Carolina Theatre from 6-11 p.m. when "Majorie Morningstar" will be playing.

The only late permission coeds will get for Senior Day this year is midnight tomorrow.

Originally the Dean of Women's office and the Senior Day committee had arranged for two late nights, but when the late free flick fell through, so did the extra hours of freedom.

Seniors will be excused from all classes tomorrow. The day's activities will begin with a senior class meeting at 10 a.m. in Memorial Hall.

Candidates for Mr. Alumnus and Miss Alumna, to be chosen at this meeting, are Sonny Evans, George Ragsdale, Jerry Oppenheimer, Bill Redding and John Kerr, and Kit Whitehurst, Mary Jane Fisher, Julia Ann Crater and Dot Pressley.

These two awards are given each year to the senior man and women most representative of the class. The winners will be presented their awards at the picnic later that afternoon.

From 3:30-12 p. m. the seniors will have a picnic at the Patio. In case of rain the picnic will be held Thursday.

Activities will include a softball game, a casino run by Gordon Darnell and Faye Smith, a chipping contest, entertainment by Nick Kearn's Combo and a variety show.

Aldermen To Discuss Meters At Regular May 12 Meeting

By PRINGLE PIPKIN

The question of parking meters for Chapel Hill will come before the Board of Aldermen at their regular meeting in the Town Hall at 7:30 p.m., May 12.

This meeting will be open, and it is probable that some action on the situation may be taken after some discussion. One open hearing has already been held April 30.

The Board will also discuss the re-arrangement of the parking spaces on Columbia Street. The proposed change calls for parallel parking and would result in some 80 fewer parking spaces.

Speaking on the proposed alterations in the parking situation, Student Body President Don Furtado said, "On May twelfth the town Aldermen will reach a final decision on this proposal to eliminate angular parking along Columbia Street and initiate parking meters along Columbia and Franklin Streets."

'It is rather shocking for us to realize that this planning which influences students so directly was done without consulting a single student concerned with the problem."

He said that the charge had been made that the students should have been at two recent open hearings; however, these meetings were announced only in the Chapel Hill Weekly and the News Leader.

Furtado explained, "Someone has forgotten that very few students have access to either of these papers, and it is very strange that The Daily Tar Heel, the largest newspaper in Chapel Hill, was not also notified.

"However, the problem is now upon us and the questions arises as to what can be done.

Library Science School Adopts Honor Society

The UNC School of Library Science adopted the international library science honor society, Beta Phi Mu, Saturday.

Forty-five members were initiated into the Epsilon Chapter. These included 14 students and 31 alumni.

A group of leading librarians and library educators founded the Beta Phi Mu at the University of Illinois in 1948.

The Carolina Chapter is the fraternity's fifth. Others are at the University of Illinois, UCLA, Florida State University, and the College of Science and Technology in Manchester, England.

The two-fold purpose of the fraternity is to recognize the academic achievement in library science and to sponsor the professional and scholarly projects which encourage high scholastic attainment, the improvement of teaching, and the development of better educational institutions for professional training.

New members who are currently working for a master's degree in library science are Kathleen H. Cheape, Greensboro, Ala.; Aylene E. Cooke, Durham; Mildred H. Farrow, Guilford College; Walter Gray, Wilson; Jeanne P. Helstrom, Salem, Va.; Evelyn M. Kocher, Radford, Va.; Elaine Landsdell, Elberon, N.J.

Mary Frances Morris, Durham; Adriana P. Orr, Chapel Hill; Dewey F. Pruett, Jr., Birmingham, Ala.; Bobbie Newman Redding, Greensboro; Philip D. Shore, Pilot Mountain; Frances V. Thackston, Durham and Audrey B. Zablocki, Chapel Hill.

New alumni members are Margaret Allman, Chapel Hill; Edith E. Averitt, Chapel Hill; Anne E. Andrews, Burlington; Jane C. Bahnsen, Chapel Hill; Hazel Baity, Raleigh; Olin V. Cook, Chapel Hill; Audrey J. Cushman, Durham; Mary E. Darst, Durham.

Grace B. Farrior, Greensboro; Josephine B. Floyd, Chapel Hill; Jean Freeman, Chapel Hill; Eleanor S. Godfrey, Chapel Hill; Mildred C. Herring, Greensboro; Charles C. Hopkins, Chapel Hill; William H. Johnson, Chapel Hill Marjorie W. Lindsay, Raleigh.

R. McGalliard, Raleigh; Pattie B. McIntrye, Chapel Hill; Robert A. Miller, Chapel Hill; Gay B. Moore, Chapel Hill; Katherine B. Mouzon, Chapel Hill; Davora E. Neilsen, Raleigh; Emma W. Phol, Raleigh; Gay H. Spivey, Guilford College.

Margaret S. Tillett, Durham; Virginia Y. Wells, Chapel Hill; Tera B. White, Chapel Hill; Lena Mae Williams, Chapel Hill and Mary Jane Wing, Atlanta, Ga.

Pogo Creator To Be Presented This Thursday

Walt Kelly, creator of the Pogo comic strip, will speak at the Carolina Forum Thursday at 8 p.m. in Hill Hall.

Kelly will base his talk on a recent 90-day, round-the-world trip in which he visited some of the world's troubled spots, addressed cultural groups, talked with the man-in-the street and gathered material for a new book.

Theme of his lecture will be an exploration of the title of his forthcoming book, "Not So Square a World"—a phrase that occurred to him as the result of his findings during Fogo's G. S. Fizzickle Year.

An alternate theme of his speech is "80 Days Around the Corner."

Kelly's world-girdling trip, his second in two years, included visits to England, France, Germany, Austria, Italy, Lebanon, Iran, India, Hong Kong, the Philippines, Australia, Tasmania, New Zealand and the Fiji and Hawaiian Islands. In previous trips he had visited Ireland, Scotland and Syria.

Kelly has made over 200 speeches on college campuses. He is a former two-term president of the National Cartoonists Society and a winner of the coveted "Cartoonist of the Year" award.

Playmakers Pondering: And If There Be Rain?

"Rain, rain, go away . . . " is the constant chant of The Carolina Playmakers at this season of the year as they prepare for their final production.

Each year The Playmakers move out-of-doors for a show in their Forest Theatre. Turning to the classics, this year's outdoor production is Shakespeare's "The Comedy of Errors," scheduled for May 9-11 at 8:30 p. m.

Interpreting the show as a tale to be told by a band of strolling players, the actors take their cues from the Harlequinade of the 16th Century. Clad in raincoats and sporting umbrellas for rainy rehearsal periods, the players will don modifications of early Harlequin costumes during the run of the show.

Richard Newdick, graduate assistant in costuming with The Playmakers, has done extensive research into the period in order to costume the production. The execution of his designs will form a part of his Master's Thesis in dramatic art.

Settings for the play are also being done by a graduate student, Albert C. Gordon, of Greensboro. Lighting for Gordon's unit set is being designed by Ed Madden.

Outdoor drama is a familiar medium for most of the Playmakers cast. John Whitty, who plays Antipholus of Syracuse; Taylor Williams, Antipholus of Ephesus; Amanda Meiggs, Adriana; Doris Berry, Aemilia; Jack Jackson, Solinus and Harvey Knox, the merchant, have all been seen in the summer show, "Unto These Hills," at Cherokee.

John Sneden, who plays Dromio of Ephesus, and Chuck Tomlinson, Balthazar, are former members of the cast of "The Lost Colony" at Manteo.

Darwin Solomon, cast as Dromio of Syracuse, has appeared in "Horn In The West" in Boone.

There will be no reserved seats for this production. Tickets, at $1.50, will be on sale at The Forest Theatre on performance evenings only. This is a season ticket attraction.

Summer Positions Open In Student Government

Student Body President Don Furtado announced Monday that 23 openings are available for summer school student government officials.

The list includes acting president, acting secretary-treasurer, seven members to the summer school government board, seven women to the Women's Council and seven men to the Men's Council.

Grail Ring Sale

The Order of the Grail will sponsor a class ring sale Thursday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. in Y-Court.

Lee Blackwell, Balfour Company representatives, will be there to take orders for rings.

Alumni Drive Co-Chairmen Are Announced

Frank Black and Jerry Oppenheimer have been appointed chairmen of the Alumni Drive.

George Ragsdale, senior class president made the announcement Monday.

Ragsdale said, "It is with pleasure that I am able to announce the appointment of Frank Black and Jerry Oppenheimer as chairmen of the Alumni Drive. They are both exremely capable persons and were are fortunate to have them give their efforts to this most important work."

Assisting the co-chairmen are Sandy, Sanders Ann Morgan, Punkin Coe and Tom Walters who will work in the dorms, sororities and fraterities.

The purpose of the drive is to enroll every senior as a member of the Alumni Association. The University depends upon its alumni and grows largely through alumni efforts.

Ragsdale concluded with "I urge all senior men and women to join the Alumni Association and to thereby retain his connection with Chapel Hill and with the University."

The drive will begin tomorrow and last one week.

O Lost!

Why is this generation different from any other generation?

Why is the delinquency rate higher now than before? Why do some people apply the appelation "Beat" to a large segment of the population or the United States?

Why are things reputedly so much worse in this generation, when the motivating cause of this deterioration is the same as the cause for any human thing in previous generations — people?

What has happened? What has gone wrong? And how are people now different from people then?

Perhaps the answer can be put in one word. — security.

There is no age in history when security was so much prized as it is today, and there is no age in history when security was so unacessable as it is today.

In times past there were many avenues to security.

Isolation was one of those avenues. An individual could be a hermit, find himself a cave, and isolate himself from the worries of organized or disorganized society.

A nation might pursue a policy of isolation, and not be involved in the troubles of other nations.

An atomic bomb can reduce the hermit's cave to rubble from many miles away, and the lines of communication and the ambitions of men and nations have made isolationism a policy of the past.

Even an idea such as Laissez-Faire, which is a relatively modern notion, has no credence with national economies so inextricably bound up and dependent on one another.

Numbers used to mean security to many people. It used to be true, that if you had more than the other guy, you were safer than the other guy, for your numbers would shield you.

It now takes one man pushing one button to destroy one city. The value of numbers is little in the modern age.

Money used to bring security. In another era, a person could accumulate wealth, sit back, relax, be free from the cares of society, and maintain a certain amount of control of society. A person could be wealthy and derive pleasures which would relieve any feeling of insecurity that he might harbor.

The possession of wealth no longer brings such satisfaction. A person can be wealthy and be vulnerable. Pleasures that used to take one's mind away from trouble only serve to reinforce the fegling of insecurity after the pleasureable period has gone. Money is no longer a protection from warfare or even from debt, for in this age financial fluctuations are common and the world has seen at least one hair-raising depression. Moreover, earned wealth is not wholly kept by the earner, and an ever-increasing percentage of this wealth goes to government, which in turn holds the fate of many, including the earner, in its hands.

Religion was once, not long ago, a panacea for insecurity.

One could clutch religious tenets with a grip of iron, and God would protect one from troubles. One could go into servitude to God, and governments listed these as financial and legal untouchables. One could search the scriptures and find meaning to life. One could have faith and not worry.

But the annihilation of six million Jews in World War II led many to ponder the value of holding to religious principles or of having a religion at all. The actions of many "Christians," who were wont to kill and maim, in the course of the war brought more than a few to wonder whether Christianity was good or not. There are also many individuals in the world who can go to church every Sunday and be faithful in form and deed, and still be insecure as to the here and now. To many the after life is a long way off, and these same individuals want to keep it that way. Moreover, there is today more doubt than ever before as to the existence of such an afterlife, and if it does not exist, what purpose has life. These people look to others to give them that answer, and the others are still asking the question.

Furthermore religion has tied itself into the secular further and further, until now the problems of the world are today's sermon and tomorrow's "get out the vote" campaign. No longer can a man find sanctity in the church, and no longer is man able to rely on the Bible in the face of the hydrogen bomb.

There have been other avenues to security. Many have led through the road of unreality. Liquor and other carnal pleasures have been roads out of insecurity. Yet, the result of a good evening of alcohol at the present time is a hangover and reinforcement of the difficulties that have been worrying the individual.

There has been an escape to the simple, but there always comes the realization that the new society — today's society — is complex.

At one time success was security, but in this complex society, success can only be measured relatively and success is not secruity.

A successful man is today dependent on the party in power, the government in general, the financial stability of the world, and that one man who could push the button and annihilate him and a million of his brethren in a matter of minutes. Achieved ambition is not sedative from the insomnia of world troubles.

Thus, the traditional avenues are closed. Isolation is a thing of the past, and religion in the sense that it is known today is broken down. Escape, which never really worked, does not satisfy now.

What is significant about these avenues is that they are all external to the individual, and the individual is even now turning to sources outside for help. But the sources offer no help, for they too are looking for help, and the individual ends up unsatisfied. He ends up only more confused of others, whom he expected to lead him to that mythical world of security.

It is here that modern man distinguishes himself. He looks to outside sources and comes up wanting. In this he should see at least a partial answer — to consult himself — to look within his own resources to find answers.

The art of self-government and self determination has been lost for a long time, but faith in one's self, perhaps is the key to emotional, if not physical, security in the future.

On Parking

To Whom It May Concern:

The administration of a college community is unique in many respects. The student body, though the most important contributor toward the prosperity of the town, has no official voice in its government. It must acknowledge such regulations as the town may wish to impose upon it, but it can not have any voice in the enactment or promulgation of such regulations.

The situation in Chapel Hill is even more unique in that the University Administration has granted a tremendous amount of self-government concerning University matters to the students. With this tradition of student freedom in a community entirely dependent upon the University, the municipal authorities have been fit to cooperate so long as responsible government emanates from Graham Memorial and South Building. With such cooperation, we have become one happy family, living in an atmosphere of mutual respect and administration which only our interdependent governments could achieve.

In the past few years, however, several genuine and serious problems concerning town government have strained this friendly relationship to the limit, and only last week, the Town Council neglected the normal courtesy of notifying the students before considering a matter vitally important to some of us, and ultimately important to all of us.

There is a proposed rule before the Town Council now which would place parking meters in a residental section of Chapel Hill, namely, N. Columbia St. and the 200 and 300 blocks of E. Franklin St These are basicly student used areas; but no one thought to notify us that such a proposal was to be discussed a the meeting last week. Fortunately, Don Furado heard through the grapevine, and student government was represented. Our voice was heard at the meeting for a moment, but the council didn't see fit to be particular courteous—as a matter of fact, they were almost rude. They told us, in effect, to mind our own business, for we don't pay taxes and the Council would do pretty as it pleased.

The Town Council, with Mayor Cornwell at its helm, must consider Carolina men and women to be completely selfish and irresponsible snobs who are out to bleed the town of everything they can without offering anything in return. To the contrary, Student Government is more aware of the problems facing the town, and particularly the traffic problem, then anyone would imagine. After all, we drive 3000 automobiles through the congested areas, we pay a dollar everytime we park wrong, and many of us would know Judge Stewart anywhere.

Furthermore, we are most anxious to help relieve traffic congestion; but we cannot help unless are given the consideration any courtesy normally granted interested and affected parties.

Mayor Cornwell, you and your council will not solve the traffic problem by arbitrarily restricting our parking and by zoning the town so that fraternities and sororities are virtually pushed onto the streets. Sir, you may love political power, and you may feed on the authority to push other people around — your benefactors, no less — to suit your own ends; but you will shrivel into nothingness if you attempt to exercise your authority against the will of those who live under your rule. A spirit of cooperation can never be achieved in this community by unilateral action on the part of one segment of the inhabitants who happen to control the political machinery at the moment. The student body, the University Administration, the merchants, the indigenous townspeople, all of us have been indoctrinated with a spirit of democracy and mutual respect that defies any sort of political debauchery such as you are practicing at this time.

We all challenge you, sir, to form some sort of democratic organization, composed of all interested parties, and to tackle the problem of parking and traffic congestion in a positive manner and with the idea of effecting a long range and permanent solution. We promise to help you day by day; but we will not be intimidated day after day.

The Natives Are Getting Restless

(The following is expected from The New York Times of Sunday April 20, 1957.)

(The following is from the minutes of the hearings on radiation, from a subcommittee report to the Joint Committee on Energy of the Congress of the United States. The following represents the instructions of the U.S. government to the Marshall Islanders.)

Thousands of Micronesians in the Marshall and Caroline Islands are waiting with resigned apprehension the beginning of the United States nuclear tests scheduled for this month at Eniwetok Atoll in the Marshalls.

Reassurances by United States officials have far from abated fears of the islanders that something may go wrong and drench them with radioactive fall-out. They remember that it happened in 1954 in the tiny Marshall Atolls of Utirik and Rongelap, where more than 200 islanders suffered varying degrees of radiation.

Since it happened once, apparently nothing will convince all the islanders that it cannot happen again. In recent days the forthcoming nuclear tests have been the main topic of conversation among the numerous Micronesians in touch with Americans. Efforts by United States officials in the inlands to explain against fall-out have often had the effect of intensifying the fears that the officials had hoped to soothe.

Last night twenty Micronesians from Truk and near-by islands listened attentively while a local leader asked question afterquestion about atomic fall-out as if it were something that might happen any day. The group met at the home of Ray Gallemore of Bartow, Florida, who is administrator of the Truk district of the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands.

Chief Ring, elected municipal head of Lukunor Island, southeast of Truk, first asked how people in remote outer islands wthout radios were supposed to know when any fall-out had accured. He also asked how radioactive dust would affect coconuts, how to prevent contamination of drinking water, how long fall-out would last and so on.

Chief Ring reported that the people of Tol, one of the larger islands in the Truk Atoll, were said to be slaughtering and eating their pigs in the belief that the animals would soon be made inedible by fall-out conversation with any Micronesians in the Caroline Marshall Islands is likely to come around to the nuclear tests sooner or later.

One thing is clear from numerous talks in the last ten days with islanders from many parts of the trust territory in Truk and Ponape of the Caroline group and Majuro Atoll in the Marshalls. This is that the Micronesians are unanimously concerned about and often resentful of the fact that the islands belonging to their people have been singled out for the testing of dreadful weapons.

"Why doesn't the United States test bombs in Nevada?" one Trukese leader demanded last night.

Anything Goes

Peter B. Young

We are all familiar with the TV commercial which begins: "Five New York doctors now have proved that YOU can break th laxative habit." This is all well and good for Television Land where the doctors always agree. But in the real world, what's a struggling politician supposed to do when the doctors don't agree?

The politician, like the rest of us, has been so conditioned to idolize the scientist that when scientists disagree, as they often do, the politician loses his bearings asd slips into chaos and pandemonium. In essence, this is the story of the great scientific debate over nuclear tests.

Last week, Senator Hubert Humphrey's subcommittee for disarmament heard conflicting testimony from three distinguished scientists; two of these scientists are presently working for the government, while the third is employed privately. Pointing up the politician's dilemna, Missouri's Stu Symington commented: "I'm pretty well mixed up."

The same sort of plea was uttered last year by Senator Clinton Anderson during hearings on the menace of radioactive fallout conducted by our own Carl Durham. Said Senator Anderson: "You can get one group of scientists together, and they say one thing, and you get another group together, and they say another thing. What does a man who is not a scientist have that he can tie to?"

There is general scientific agreement, developed in astonishing detail throughout almost 2500 pages of transcript from the Durham hearings, that any amount of radioactivity, no matter how inconsequential, is harmful to the human organism. This goes for chest X-rays, luminous watch dials, natural background radiation, and fallout.

One scientist estimated that Soviet and American tests were responsible for approximately 100 additional deaths, due to leukemia, in Japan each year. Approximately 70 of these deaths are due to Soviet tests while "only" 30 deaths are due to our own program.

Another scientist estimated that there would be 50,000 additional cases of bone cancer and leukemia, spread over the world in the next generation, due to tests conducted through 1956.

Still a third scientist estimated that between one and ten additional leukemia cases per year could be expected in the United States as a result of nuclear tests .This figure is, of course, infinitesimal, as are the other figures. But this particular scientist quickly qualified his estimate by admitting that even if it were only one additional leukemia case, that would still be "somebody." Precisely. And now we can see the moral and spiritual issue posed in all its toughness.

As Walter Selove, chairman of the radiation hazards committee of the Federation of American Scientists, put it "How much should one be concerned about fallout effects of this magnitude? This is not a question which can be answered on scientific grounds."

The scientists abdicate; the politicians flounder; and the people retreat to Television Land where the five New York doctors always, but always, agree. So let's just see whether it's possible to throw a monkey wrench into this psychotic idyll.

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

You will note on this editorial page two reprints concerning the happy natives of the Pacific islands. The natives are restless indeed these days. They do not relish the testing of theromonuclear weapons on their doorstep; they remember the cloud from a previous test that so inconsiderately failed to uphold the scientific predictions as to where it was going. And they are not exactly reassured by our elaborate arangements to evacuate them if emergency conditions should develop.

Our first question then, as we move away from the scientific aspects of the issue, is this: By what right does the government of the United States "seal off" 390,000 square miles of Pacific blue water for atomic tests? Answer: By the primitive right of conquest. Our UN "trusteeship" oevr these islands is due, solely, to gallant operations conducted by the US Navy in these waters in World War II.

If our testing program continues, it is entirely possible that some of these restless natives, dressed in loin cloths, may show up at UN Headquarters in New York to demand a different kind of "trusteeship." If anythjng is capable of embarassing the present Administration, this should be it.

Our second (and last) question: By what right does the government of the United States take a single life anywhere in pursuance of its preparedness goals? Answer: Only by assuming that a de facto state of war exists, and has existed, between the United States and the U.S.S.R. Now if only American lives were being sacrificed to the testing program, it could be argued that this unpleasant necessity was a strictly American concern, and the moral issue here would evaporate. But this is not the case.

a). The Marshallese magistrate and irou if on hand and the Marshallese health aid and council on each atoll or island should be assured that every precaution has been taken to prevent exposure of the natives to radiation hazards resulting from fallout.

b). The represenatives will consult with the local magistrate to insure that a method exists whereby all residents of an atoll may be summoned to a central location and evacuated by air or water transportation if a fallout emergency exists. A fallout emergency will be determined by the commander, JTF-7; however, the local representative will assume that a fallout emergency exists at such time as radiological servay instruments, when held at a position 3 feet above the ground, indicate a rate of Ir./hr.

c). Should evacuation by aid be neccessary, baggage will be limited to that which each individual can carry or approximately 50 pounds . Whether evacuation is achieved by sea or air, no animals will be evacuated. A tabulation of animals left behind should be made as soon as possible to insure the accuracy of claims against the Government.

d.) The local magistrate should be informed that in event of an unforeseen emergency, doctors will be flown from the United States by special airlift to care for local inhabitants who will be evacuated to Kwajalein Atoll and that eva cuation plans are in existence to permit the task force to cope with any emergency.

e). Fallout of a dangerous nature can be suspected by the presence of a saltlike precipitate or unexpected mist. Should such an event take place, it should be confirmed by monitoring.

The representative will arrange through the local magistrate and native health aid to inform the Marshallese of the basic health measures that they may take to protect themselves from danger in case fallout is suspected or confirmed. These measures are:

a). Remain indoors or under cover to protect themselves from the falling or settling radioactive particles.

b). If particles settle on clothing, dust and shake off clothing.

c). Bathe and keep clean. Particular attention should be given to washing under the arms, the groin, face, and hair.

d). Keep food covered to prevent ingestion of fallout particles.

e). Should the readings exceed 5r./hr. it is recommended that the natives be advised to stand out in the water (ocean) and immerse themselves as often as practicable or keep themselves under water. This recommendation is based on the fact that water does extremely well in attenuating radiation.

Open Stacks: Library View

Editor:

The Library staff appreciates the interest of any student in reading books outside of regular class work as evidenced by the industry of Mr. Herring. However, the function of the Library is to serve the best interests of the entire student body and faculty both in class work and research. We are attempting to do this within the limits of the present building and the funds available.

The Student Library Committee serves as a direct channel from the student body to the Librarian. This year there have been several conferences to discuss various problems and to consider suggestions made by individual members of the Committee. As a result, solutions to some of these problems have been reached and will become apparent by the beginning of the fall semester. Any student interested in making suggestions for the improvement of the Library should be encouraged to do so through his own Committee.

Sound & Fury

Mary Moore Mason

A blonde gun moll with a bra gun holster and a petite Siamese girl stole the show in Sound and Fury's annual production, "No Squares Allowed," which was given Friday and Saturday nights in Memorial Hall.

Starting with a inch worm crawl, the show immediately picked up and began to show that there were "no squares allowed" when Hope Sparger, a strapping and hilarious blonde first flounced before the footlights in the second scene of the first act.

However even more of a favorite with the audience was Sodsai Vanij Vodhana, a native of Thailand, who charmed the audience as she moved gracefully across the stage, singing first a Siamese folk song and then a peppy little number called "The Little Black Bug." In fact, she charmed the audience so much that an encore was called for in the middle of the show.

With a few bright exceptions, the rest of the show was mediocre. As one faculty member who has been a fan of Sound and Fury productions for many years said during the show, "There is a little bit of the sound left in it. But where is the fury?"

For, the show, which had good possibilities, overplayed some of its weakest points such as the weak singing of its two leads and underplayed some of its stronger points such as the dance numbers. This might be partly due to the script written by Jonathan Yardley and Michael Dunn which has an excellent story and is interesting and amusing in parts but which leaves the audience after many scenes with the feeling that the actor's didn't have anything else to say so they had to close the curtain.

The show has as its central plot the love affair between a charming young dilettante and a dependable Joe type of young jazz musician who is always around to serve as a welcome handkerchief, even when the heroine, whose father is a prominant lawyer and politician, gets mixed up with mobsters and is chosen their leader.

Hannah Kirby, the heroine, obviously has stage presence and humor. Although she did her role very nicely for the most part, she overplayed too much in places. Her singing was definitely hampered by a severe sore throat.

Hoke Simpson, the jazz musician, played his role with a natural and relaxed poise, skillfully enjecting irony in many a line that brought chuckles of enjoyment throughout the house. However, his sporadic singing left much to be desired.

Larry Anderson played the lawyer father convincingly and with control in spite of some rather unconvincing lines that he had to say.

Perhaps the most delightful scene in the whole production was scene four when Ulysses Muffa, mobster supreme, stands on Grant's tomb and in a colorful Damon Runyonesque scene takes leave of his faithful gang before he leaves the country on a deportation charge.

Two of the most amusing incidents in the show take place here. Hope Sparger reads the minutes of the last meeting the gang had which took place on the Staten Island Ferry, and boistrous little Muffa, played by Oliver Bloomer, appoints the young society girl for his successor as the gang mastermind. There is also a colorful dance in this scene and good singing by the chorus. If more of the scenes had been like this one, the show would have been much better.

Oliver Bloomer is humorous as the loud, cocky little gang mastermind. However, he could have been better if he had gotten some of his lines across to the audience more clearly and with more variation of emotion.

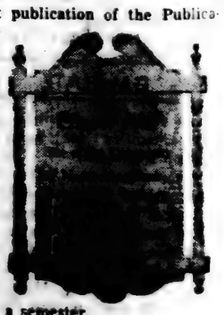
Gary Nichols as Shekels, treasurer of the mobsters, did a delightful job with a small part; and Pete Flahive, the agent, did a nice job although he looked apologetic and uncomfortable throughout his whole solo number.

The smaller parts such as the three gangsters—Pat Dooley, Eddie Brown, and Bill Anderson—and the mother, Fran Bell, were done well and added flavor to the show.

One of the most impressive things about the production was the beautiful sets, particularly in Act one, scene two, where the whole effect was gained by the use of flame colored curtains, draped gracefully around the stage. Credit goes to Ed Crow and Frank Wallace and the others working on set construction for this.

The lighting in most of the scenes was extremely subtle and well-done however, in two of the interior scences it was so subtle that there were huge shadows over the actor's faces most of the time.

Credit also goes to Anne Riggins and Anne Ruffin for the vibrant use of color in their well-chosen costumes.



Cecil Hartsoe and G. C. Pridgen deserve praise for their fine efforts and for a very pleasant student written and produced show. Several of Hartsoe' songs are quite good and will probably be heard again.

All in all "No Squares Allowed" was an entertaining produetion with its high points of humor which could have been intensified with a beter written script, better singing, and more dancing.

Folk Festival Set For Saturday

Over 500 persons are expected to attend the tenth Carolina Folk Festival in Chapel Hill Saturday, May 10. The program with a total of 10 groups and individuals appearing will begin at 8 p.m. in Memorial Hall.

Opening Saturday night's program will be the Glenn School Dancers of Durham County trained by Mrs. Catherine Wynne. Dr. A. P. Hudson, chairman of the North Carolina Folklore Council which is sponsoring the festival, will welcome participants and members of the audience in a brief speech.

Johnny Dee, well-known television and radio star in Richmond, and Forrest Covington, singer and guitarist from Burlington, are featured performers. Herb Shellans, UNC graduate student in music from Brooklyn, N. Y., will also present several folk songs and ballads.

Miss Katherine Smith of Chapel Hill and Teddy Williams of Durham students at the University coached by Miss Ruth Brice of the UNC Physical Education Department, will give their version of dances from four foreign countries.

Scottish country dances will be done by the Charlotte Scots with Miss Sally Southerland acting as director. The White Cross dance team and band with Frank Ward, director, will also participate on the program.

Presenting songs and dances of Scotland will be Miss Nancy Lineberger and Miss Vivian Morrison of Charlotte. Also appearing at the festival will be the Chapel Hill dance team under the direction of Mrs. Daniel Okum. A Greensboro resident, Margaret Underwood, is scheduled to present a number of folk songs and ballads.

Norman Cordon is is serving as program chairman; assisting him as master of ceremonies will be Dr. I. G. Greer and Donald MacDonald.

"When we appear before the Town Aldermen on the twelfth we must take with us complete figures of the number of spaces being lost, the number of student cars in the area, and the amount of space available for the building of lots by fraternities and sororities."

Resolutions from the Student Legislature, the Inter-Fraternity Council, the Inter-Dormitory Council, and "we hope" the merchants of Chapel Hill are other things Furtado listed as necessary for the May 12th meeting.

"I believe that the Administration will give us their aid if we can present them with the facts of the situation. Most of all, however, it is going to require the aid of individual students who through their letters and personal contacts can make their weight felt among the merchants and Aldermen," he said.

He continued, "If we are not all willing to work against the proposal to alter the present parking arrangements in residential areas, then we will close this battle.

"We are meeting later this week with the Board of Directors of the Merchants Association to request that they recommend to the Aldermen that the present status be maintained."

Pressure On Tar Heels For Four More Games

By RUSTY HAMOND
Asst. Sports Editor

With the 1958 ACC baseball season rapidly drawing to a close, the standings show two teams all alone at the top of the heap. Clemson, now in first place with a 10-2 record, and Carolina, number two in the loop with an 8-2 mark, will fight it out from now until the end of the season. Duke, in third place with a 6-4 mark, has only a percentage chance of winning, and the rest of the teams are out-of-it, so to speak.

Clemson has only one game remaining, and that is with weak sister South Carolina who has taken only 3 ACC decisions all year. The Gamebirds are, however, the team that put Duke out of contention last week with a win over the Devils. Another factor is the well known rivalry between the two South Carolina schools, similar to that of Carolina and Duke. Clemson had one game rained out, with Duke, last week. In the event that Carolina won all of her remaining games, this game would be replayed because it would directly reflect upon the conference standings.

Pressure On Carolina

The pressure is once again upon Carolina. The Tar Heels are faced with the fact that they must win all four of their remaining games in order to contend for the pennant. The schedule: Duke is here Wednesday, the Tar Heels journey to Virgina Saturday, and Maryland and Wake Forest are on tap for next week.

For Carolina fans who haven't realized how much their presence at a baseball game can help, we offer this bit of info: The Tar Heels have yet to lose a home game to anyone. They have won eight games and lost none in Emerson stadium, while they have dropped six on the road. The Heels have a 16-6 record in all games.

True Tar Heels

On the origin of the species—Other schools may rant and rave to their hearts' content about members of Carolina teams being predominately from out of state, but this situation just ain't so when it comes to baseball. Of the team that usually takes the field for the Tar Heels, all nine are native North Carolinians.

Quigg Case Decided Fairly

Joe Quigg, towering center on the Tar Heels' National Championship basketball team was turned down last week by the ACC in his appeal for two more semesters of play. Quigg entered school four and a half years ago, and played basketball three and a half of these. Last fall, an unfortunate accident in a scrimmage game forced him to lose an entire year of eligibility. So Quigg has but one semester remaining in his career as a Tar Heel, and it must be the first semester of next year. The conference allows an athlete five full years in which to complete his four years of eligibility, and the clock runs out on Quigg next fall.

It is an unfortunate case, unfortunate enough to give Dr. O. K. Cornwell sufficient reason to appeal the conference. Cornwell is faculty chairman of the Athletic Department and was authoriezd to make the appeal by the faculty committee on athletics. The committee meets again this month, and should they decide to authorize Cornwell for another appeal to the ACC in their fall meeting of next year, which is highly unlikely. Quigg would have a chance. But it would be a very slim one, for most feel that it would only be a replay of this year's decision.

Conference Must Draw Line

The Quigg case is one to cause sympathy and it is a shame that such a fine athlete and gentleman cannot wear the blue and white but one more semester. At the same time, it must be recognized that the conference had no choice in their impartial ruling, that there is nothing dirty or under the table about the decision. The case is an exception, certainly, but when the conference begans to make exceptions, where can the next line be drawn?

The rule remains from the old Southern Conference from which Carolina withdrew with seven other schools to form the ACC. The rule, however, is neither strict or antiquated, as it is used in the same form by most of the leading conferences in the nation, such as the Southwest Conference. The Big Ten allows only eight semesters.

ACC Doesn't Need VPI

It is our opinion that the ACC acted wisely in refusing to admit VPI as the ninth team in the conference. The Gobblers are nut especially noted for strong athletic teams, and the ACC stands now as one of the strongest conferences in the nation. A ninth team would also create a hazard in the round-robin rules in football, and make the basketball tournament unwieldy.

Langley And Helms Ranking Players In ACC Tournament

WINSTON-SALEM.—Wake Forest puts its ACC golf championship on the line here Friday and Saturday when firing in the two-day event is staged over the Old Town club links.

The tournament, being staged at Old Town for the fifth consecutive year, is expected to draw entries from all eight members of the conference.

As in past years, team and individual championships will be determined over 36 holes of play with 18 holes slated each day. The team championship is decided on the 36-hole score of the four low individual players from each school.

A new individual champion will be crowned since John Gerring of Wake Forest, who pocketed the title with a one-under 141 score last year, has completed his college eligibility. Gerring was the second Demon Deacon golfer to cop the individaul title. Arnold Palmer, recent winner of the Masters, won in 1954. The Deacons have captured the team crown twice, getting their first victory in the 1936 event.

The three top finishers, including Gerring, from last year's meet will not be back this year. Sonny George, also of Wake Forest, and Joe McCarley of South Carolina finished in a two-way tie for runner-up honors with a 143 total.

Tommy Helms, currently playing the No. 1 position for Wake Forest, and Tommy Langley of Carolina thus become the ranking players from the 1957 meet returning this year. They finished in a tie for fourth place with 145's.

Tennis Trophy Established To Honor Kenfield

—AP—The John F. Kenfield Memorial Award which has been set up and donated by the Atlantic Coast Conference tennis coaches will be awarded for the first time this year at the conclusion of the tournament which opens here Thursday at 9 a.m.

The trophy was established in memory of the long- time Carolina coach who died this year.

Coach Whit Cobb of Duke University, who is chairman of the conference's tennis committee, said the trophy will be awarded to the team which accumulates the highest number of points in the tournament, based on the one point for each singles and each doubles victory.

In the past singles and doubles champions have been crowned in the tournament. The team winner is determined by the seasonal record. Carolina is team champion for 1958 with six wins and no defeats.

The annual conference tourney will last three days, with the finals scheduled Saturday.

Northern Swing Wind-Up

Harvard And Yale Mar Netters Perfect Record

By ELLIOTT COOPER

Rain and Harvard and Yale prevented the varsity tennis team from having a perfect northern trip.

Rain, the first factor, caused cancellation of three of the six scheduled matches which were to have been played while the team was on the trip. After beating Maryland 9-0 two Saturday's ago the Tar Heels traveled to Williamstown, Mass. to meet the rain. Although the Carolina netters had pasted Williams 13-0 in a match at Chapel Hill, the descending waters saved the Ephmen from having to try to even the score.

Tuesday the Carolina team traveled over to Amherst to try again, but the second day in a row the rains beat the Tar Heels. Still undefeated, but quiet wet, coach Vladimir Cernik's netters prepared themselves for their third match in Massachusetts the next day.

Havard Wins

At Cambride the weather cleared but as things turned out it would have been just as well for the Heels if the rain had continued. Determined not to be beaten by Carolina twice this season the Harvard netters hung an 8-1 loss on the Tar Heels and dropped them from the ranks of the unbetaten. For the Crimson it made up for the 8-7 match they had lost in Chapel Hill. Only Ben Key's singles victory prevented a shutout.

The next day at Yale it was the same story but a different score; this time 6-3. On this day the Carolinians played much better tennis and with a couple of brakes could have taken the Bulldogs. Five of the six singles matches went sets, but only Steve Bank and Dick Makepeace could pull out a win.

In the number one singles Tar Heel captain Bob Bortner took the first set from Donald Dell- 6-0 but lost the next two and the match. The other win of the day same in the number one doubles where Bortner and Bank came through for the victory.

The last match on the road trip was to have been in Washington Saturday against the Colonials of George Washington, but for the third time in a week the rain came down and the match had to be called.

Rollins Next

With the possible exception of the Geore Washington match the Tar Heels were rained out of their matches against easiest opponents. Harvard and Yale were supposed to give the varsity more trouble than anyone else on the schedule, and they lived up to expectations.

Although the Heels have only one more regularly scheduled match, the season will not end until after the ACC tournament. This tourney will be played here in Chapel Hill this year beginning Thursday. The best players in the conference will compete in the three day event and anyone who likes to watch good tennis will have plenty to see.

Frosh Batmen Edge Blue Imps

Carolina's freshman baseball team held off a last inning threat and edged Duke's Blue Imps 5-4 in a game here yesterday.

Tar Babies Jerry McNeil pitched the Carolina frosh through eight innings but ran into trouble in the ninth and had to be releived by John Stott, McNeil was given credit for the win which now gives him a 4-0 record.

McNeil walked two in the ninth before being releived. Stott came in, loaded up the bases and saw two runs cross the plate before he could bear down and retire the side.

The victory brings the Tar Babies record to 14 wins against 3 losses. The two teams have met twice before. The Tar Babies won the first one, but the second ended in a tie. The same squad will meet Wednesday at Duke.

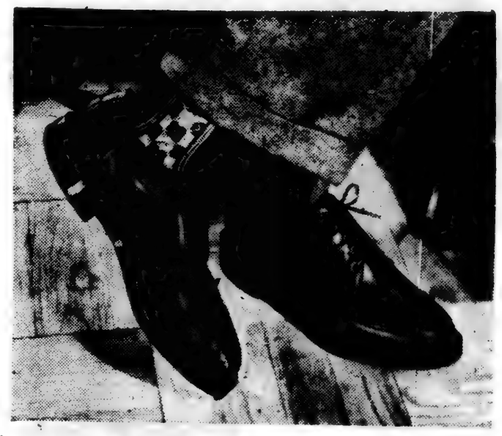
WAA To Hold Picnic And Watershow

The Women's Athletic association will sponsor two activities today, the annual WAA picnic, and the annual "splash" club water show.

The picnic will be held this afternoon at 5:30 beside the outdoor swimming pool at Woollen Gym. All of the individual awards that are won during the year are presented. Awards are also given to the outstanding seniors, and the outstanding representatives from the dorms and sororities. The highlight of the picnic will be the presentation to the dormitory and sorority that have compiled the most points in WAA this year.



The "Splash" club will present its annual show beginning at 8 p. m. in the indoor pool. The theme of the show is, "WPOOL TV presents splash, splash, splash - the slogan show".

"WPOOL TV" will carry the program live from hotel Bowman Grey. The club has 25 members and is headed by president Ka Smith. No admission will be charged.

An example of what's in store can be seen by the titles of some of the skits. "She ain't sharpe enough", "Play it cool", Jackie swims good like a coed should", and the "The ham what am."

IFC Establishes New Regulation Abolishing All Loud Sunday Parties

Carolina fraternities have had their last loud Sunday parties.

At its regular meeting Monday night the Interfraternity Council voted almost unanimously to abolish Sunday parties in fraternity houses.

Only one representative voted against the motion but IFC President Tucker Yates declined to name the house. He explained that the representative favored the motion, but thought his fraternity would be against it.

The motion defines the type if party being abolished as "any fraternity function held on Sunday in the Chapel Hill area which includes live music or any music or noises which can be heard beyond fraternity property."

Houses violating the new regulation will be subject to trial by the IFC court.

This action was taken by the IFC as a self-regulatory measure. Tucker Yates, president of the body, commented yesterday that "the IFC felt that such parties were getting out of hand and that some major step should be taken to prevent further disturbance.

"I am pleased that the IFC has taken the initiative to correct an element which affected not only its own members, but the public as well."

A great deal of deliberation went into the proposal, according to Yates, and he emphasized the fact that it was passed almost unanimously.

A second motion that was passed Monday night dealt with the penalties imposed by the IFC Court in hazing offenses. Previously the Court was hampered by a system of graduated penalties set forth in the by-laws. Since it was felt that these penalties restricted the Court too much in dealing with such an important offense, the by-laws were revised to provide for a minimum penalty of a $100 fine, thus allowing the Court more discretion in penalties imposed.

Anyone Can Get In Stacks— With Aid Of Faculty Advisor

By DAVE JONES

"At present, the library administration has a policy on Stack Permits which is as liberal as possible, and which is based on past expressed desires of faculty and students." So stated Miss Mary Lou Lucy, head of the Circulation Department of the UNC Library, when asked about the current Stack Permit question.

According to Miss Lucy, any student, not just those in special categories or upper division colleges, may obtain a permit to use the stacks upon recommendation of his faculty advisor. All that is needed is reasonable justification for such use. Many students have availed themselves of this privilege.

During this year the Student Library Committee, under the Chairmanship of Mike Simpson, has met upon various occasions with Jerrold Orne, UNC Librarian, to discuss different problems arising from student use of library facilities.

However of all the problems brought by interested students before their representatives, the Student Library committee, nothing has been said about the stacks.

The library is aware of the problems and difficulties connected with the stacks and their use. However, it feels, according to Orne, that it must consider the needs of all of the users rather than any few or small group, and that if any students believe that the stacks should be open to all, the matter should be brought to the Student Library Committee.

Student Library Committee Chairman Simpson said "some of the considerations which have led to the adoption of the present policy include the difficulty of keeping books in order on shelves so that they can be found when needed by other students, additional costs for collecting and shelving books in all parts of the stacks, and even more important the matter of noise.

"Carrels in the stacks are traditionally regarded as the last refuge of peace and quiet where the serious student can reasonably hope to engage in research or special projects. One of the complaints discussed by the members of the Student Library Committee with the Librarian is the matter of noise.

"There are many students who would be unwilling to open the stacks wide because they would lose any possibility of working peacefully and quietly anywhere in the Library."

When asked about future plans for library service to the students, the Librarian made the following statement: "A good many of the recommendations of the Student Library Committee which have been discussed this year will be acted upon during the summer to effect a considerable improvement in library facilities beginning with next year's class.

Students Named For Interim Committee

Al Goldsmith, Carolina Symposium Interim Chairman, listed the new members of the Symposium Interim Committee yesterday.

Serving on the commitee will be Herman Godwin, Dunn; Lucy Forsyth, Birmingham, Ala.; Cynthia Thompson, Durham; Dick Robinson, Greensboro; Jack Lawing, Marion; Jack Spain, Greenville; Dave Parker, Raleigh; Mark Wilson, Chattanooga, Tenn.; Jim Smalley, Augusta, Ga.; Jack Raper, Raleigh; Davis Young, Lawrenceville, N. J. and Ed Levy, New Orleans, La.

"It gives me great pleasure to announce such an outstanding Carolina Symposium interim committee," Goldsmith said. "All twelve of these students are those who in the past have proven themselves in either work on the 1958 Carolina Symposium or in other campus activities.

"It was a most difficult task narrowing the large list of applicants down to twelve. All who applied were quite capable students and although we could selected only a few of them for the interim committee there will be opportunity for them to work on the Symposium when the 1960 committee is formed."

In addition to the students who have been selected there will be an equal number of faculty members selected for the committee. Goldsmith expressed a hope to have the faculty half of the committee selected before school is out.

Senior Leaders To Be Selected This Morning

A feature of this morning's meeting of the Senior Class will be the selection by ballot of "Miss Alumna" and "Mr. Alumnus" of this year's graduating class. Class Vice President Frank Black will be in charge of balloting.

The University's General Alumni Association annually presents award certificates to the two members of the senior class who in the course of their campus careers best represented "those qualities which symbolize loyalties of the 'good alumna' and the 'good alumnus'."

Although the names of those selected for the honor will be announced at the class picnic at the Patio this afternoon, the winners will be formally presented with their awards at the annual alumni luncheon on June 2 which will be attended by many alumni, seniors and their parents.

Cartoonist Walt (Pogo) Kelly Has Followed Varied Career

By BEN TAYLOR

A 33-year old cartoonist, equipped with spectacles, ink pen, and a possum named Pogo will appear in Memorial Hall Thursday night at 8 o'clock and all people with solutions to the problems of the "G. O. Fizzickle Year" have been invited to attend.

Walt Kelly, a clear-eyed cartoonist of possum fame, will speak on his recent trip around the world as guest speaker of the Carolina Forum. Theme of his lecture will be an exploration of his forthcoming book, "Not So Square a World"—a subject to which his brand of humor should attest.

According to a biographical sketch released by the cartoonist, his youth was spent in Bridgeport, Conn., where he moved from Philadelphia, Pa. "complete with father, mother, sister and sixteen teeth, all his own."

He survived ten years of fire (fell into the coal scuttle with a jack-o-lantern in 1919), drowning (home-made boat struck a swimming dock and splintered, 1923), starvation (lost the lunch on a fishing expedition with father, 1924) savage beasts (rabid rabbit shot to death on other side of town, 1924) and education (6 years grammar school).

From there his escapades took him in 1930 from Warren Harding High School in Bridgeport to a factory that made ladies' underwear where he got a job sweeping floors. After a few weeks at this occupation, he decided that money wasn't everything and went into the world of journalism and took a job as a newspaper reporter.

Not being fully prepared for such an arduous task as confronted him, he soon wound up in Hollywood drawing mice for a fellow who thought Snow White's facial expressions were more important than money . . . Walt Disney by name. While there Kelly spent his days turning out "Fantasia," "Pinocchio," "Dumbo", "The Reluctant Dragon", "Baby Weems" and "Snow White."

In his next normal move, he went from the depths of the art table to the Mojave Desert.

Comic books drew his talents after returning from the desert, there he made numerous friends in the newspaper and publishing business. In 1948, he took a job with the New York Star.

There, on the staff of the ill-fated newspaper, the comics-starved populace of this nation was able to see a comic character previously seen only in comic books—Pogo, the possum. Political cartoons occupied the major portion of his time, but he conviced Star editor to give new life to Pogo in their paper. Then the newspaper folded. Grabbing up his possum and his bottle of ink, Kelly left.

Glee Club Finishes Year At Pinehurst Convention

The UNC Men's Glee Club will end its concert-crammed year on a high note Friday night when it performs before the North Carolina Bankers Association Convention in Pinehurst.

The evening concert will be the termination point in a short tour the club will make Friday. A Trailways bus will transport the 55 members to Sanford, where they will sing before the students of Sanford High School at 2:15 p.m. From there they will journey to Pinehurst where they will be feted at a dinner. They will present their concert following the banquet.

It will be the final trip of the semester for the Glee Club and number 41 on its list of performances for the present academic year.

Under the direction of Dr. Joel Carter, the Glee Club will present a program of secular folk, and Negro spiritual music. Included on the program will be such numbers as "Man Without A Country," and "Whale of a Tale!" Religious numbers will include the traditional "Ave Maria" and Randall Thompson's "Last Words of David."

One of the Glee Club's favorite numbers "Climbin' Up De Mountain," as well as "Aint-a That Good News" will be among those Negro spirituals to be sung before the high school students and the audience of bankers.

Having been recognized throughout the state and here on campus as a qualified vocal group, the Glee Club wil perform before one of its largest audiences of the year on Friday night. An estimated 1,000 persons are expected to attend the banquet.

Open Hearing Planned On Parking Restrictions

An open hearing to discuss the proposed parking restrictions and meters will be held by the Board of Directors of the Merchants' Association in Chapel Hill Town Hall at 7:30 Thursday night.

This announcement came from Student Body President Don Furtado, who said yesterday, "I hope to have a representative of the Administration with us at this meeting to help us present our case.

"Any students or faculty members who may be interested or who would like to express an opinion are urged to attend.

"I hoped that the Board of Directors of the Merchants Association will see fit to recommend to the Town Aldermen that the present parking arrangement be continued."

A few weeks ago this organization decided to take no official stand on the question of parking meters.

Furtado continued, "It is my hope that they (the Board of Directors of the Merchants Association) will alter this view and thus show that they are concerned with a problem which so tremendously affects those who patronize them.

"I urge all students to do everything they can to make their feelings known to the Mayor, Town Aldermen and merchants."

Furtado also revealed that the fraternities and sororities pay about $13,000 in tax to the Town of Chapel Hill, whose tax rate of $.95 on 23 millions dollars worth of property yields approximately $215,000 of taxes a year.

Chapel Hill Town Manager Thomas D. Rose said that if the meters were installed, he expected them to yield about $25.000 each year.

Of this amount about $9.000 would be used to pay the policemen who would check the meter and to pay other expenses connected with traffic. The remainder of the money would be put into a fund, the use of which would be decided later.

YMCA TV Show Has Openings For Next Year

The Faith and Fine Arts TV Committee is holding interviews for positions for next year.

Positions open include overall chairman, talent chairman, arrangements chairman (should have had courses in TV), publicity chairman and two writers.

Interviews will be concluded today. The committee will be announced Thursday or Friday. Persons interested in these positions should contact James Carse in the YMCA Building.

This program seeks to explain the religious dimensions of culture. Programs this year have featured athletics as an art, "The Stranger" by Camus, modern poetry, religion and jazz, readings from Thomas Wolfe, Biblical poetry and modern sculpture.

Next Tuesday's program at 9:30 p.m. (WUNC-TV) will be on Beethoven. On the two following Tuesdays' programs on comic strips will be shown.

Jury Interviews

Thursday will be the last day for Honor System Jury interviews.

Interviews are being held by the Honor Council Commission in the Council Room at second floor Graham Memorial from 4-5 p.m.

GM SLATE

The following activities have been scheduled for today at Graham Memorial:

Pan-Hellenic Council—5-6 p.m., Grail Room; Women's Orientation Council, 4-6 p.m., Roland Parker I; Kappa, 6:30-9 p.m., Roland Parker II; Carolina Forum, 4-5 p.m., Woodhouse Conference Room.

Dental Dames Elect Officers

Betty Rogers was elected president of the Dental Dames at their meeting last week at the Victory Village Nursery.

Elected to serve with her were Carol Talley and Martha Wilson, vice-presidents; Betty Wilson, secretary; Barbara Whitson, treasurer; Marlene Webster, publicity chairman; Barney Baker and Patsy Davis, social chairmen and Aileen Hamrick, refreshment hostess.

New Dormitory Named After Claude Teague

One of the new men's dorms built overlooking Navy Field has been named Claude E. Teague Dormitory, Chancellor Aycock announced yesterday.

He said the trustees approved the recommendation at their last meeting in April. Mr. Teague was business manager of the University before his retirement.

Chancellor Aycock said recommendations for names for the other two dorms have been submitted to the trustees, and action probably will be taken May 26. He said they would certainly be named by this fall when they are formally opened for occupancy.

The dorm named for Teague is the one nearest Kenan Stadium.

Correspondent Courses Open During Summer

This summer there will be more than 100 correspondence courses available to students who cannot attend summer school and who may wish to earn credit for an extra course.

The University offers correspondence courses in many departments for which credit is granted toward bachelor's degrees.

Complete information can be secured from the Bureau of Correspondence Instruction in Abernethy Hall. Office hours are 8:30-4:30 Monday through Friday and 8:30-12:30 on Saturdays.

Students unable to attend summer school and having deficiencies should be especially interested. Plane geometry is offered, and English R will remove a composition condition.

Interested students should make arrangements to enroll for courses before leaving Chapel Hill at the end of this semester.

Law Wives Group Meeting Tonight

The Law Wives Association meets tonight, May 7, at 8 p.m. in the Institute of Government Building. The program will consist of a tea. This notice is a correction of a notice appearing in yesterday's paper, stating that the meeting would be on May 6.

Grail Ring Sale

The Order of the Grail will sponsor a class ring sale Thursday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. in Y-Court.

Lee Blackwell, Balfour Company representatives, will be there to take orders for rings.

Student Party Hears Talks On Housing

"Problems concerning campus housing" was the topic of the discussion presented by James Wadsworth, UNC Housing Director, and Davis Young, of the Daily Tar Heel staff, to the members of the Student Party at their meeting Monday night.

"The problem of off-campus housing is not confined to UNC, nor was it the desire of The Daily Tar Heel to create an expose which might cause readers and interested parties to labor under the misconception that sewage is the only problem that a student living off campus would have to face," stated Young as he opened the discussion.

He went on to outline the recent sewage problem, as covered by the student newspaper, and to give the background on his research.

Wadsworth described off campus housing as simply inadequate. He stated that he works constantly to keep renters from taking unfair advantage of the situation. Victory Village, he said by way of illustration of the urgency of the problem, was built eleven years ago to be a temporary solution to a temporary problem. The buildings, intended to last seven years, are facing the prospect of serving the University for another ten years or longer.

These conditions lead naturally to a renters' market wherein abuses are possible. It is up to the student body to back up the Housing Office in its efforts to acquire money for new projects, concluded Wadsworth.

IN THE INFIRMARY

Students in the Infirmary yesterday included:

Misses Mary Dance, Jenny Graham, Nina Hopkins and Joyce Woodard and Ralph Brown, Alfred Brumley, Harry Doran, Theodore Edlick, Frank Slusser, Stephen Wilkerson, and William White.

Competition High

UNC Lagging In Fight For Instructors

By PRINGLE PIPKIN

Competition for able faculty members is rapidly becoming acute as colleges and universities across the nation develop expansion plans to accomodate the rapidly rising student population.

Educators expect college enrollments to double within the next ten years when the boys and girls born during prolific "baby boom" of the Second World War begin their careers in institutions of higher learning.

As the schools attempt to outbid each other, the faculty salaries and other compensations are spiraling upward, and the profession is becoming an employee's market.

While the University's Administration has made strenuous efforts to maintain the pace being set by the better colleges throughout the nation and in the South, much remains to be done if UNC is to keep its place as one of the leading universities in the country.

"In spite of modest increases provided for at the start of the present academic year we are now in worse shape than we were before. Surroundings state have quite generally provided amounts double and triple the amount of increase provided here."

This opinion was stated by Dean Maurice Lee of the School of Business of Administration in a pamphlet for the Business Foundation of North Carolina.

"Last year was one of the worst years (in regards to competition for faculty members that I have ever known, and I have been in this profession 32 years," commented Dean H. A. Perry of the School of Education.

When hunting for three new staff members Dean Perry built up a file of 100 prospective employees before choosing anyone.

"Things are slowly getting worse. It has been very difficult to fill the (vacant) positions with the caliber of men we want. We have been able to do it though it took a long time," Dr. E. D. Palmatier, head of the Physics Department commented.

Dr. S. A. Stoudemire, charman of Romance Languages Department, said, "The competition is very keen, and it is difficult to do it, but if you look around carefully you can still do it."

Dr. Kenneth Ness, acting departmental head of the Art Department, said that if the department lost anyone, the problem would be that of replacing the person with someone who would have the same extent of experience as the person who left.

Dr. E. W. Hall of the Philosophy Department said, "other good universities are paying more on the higher level. We can't hang on if this sort of financial situation continues."

"Competition is cutthroat (especially in the sciences," commented Dr. Lasley of the Mathematics Department.

"If we are going to maintain that position (of a nationally recognized department)," we are going to have to remain competitive," Dr. Holman, chairman of the English department said.

It is generally agreed among the deans of schools and the departmental heads interviewed that the salaries paid the associate and the full professors were not strongly competitive.

However, the salaries of the instructors and assistant professors, the two lower levels of teachers, have been raised throught the conscious efforts of the administration to a relatively competitive position.

The present Administration of the University is aware of these problems." I feel that the University Administration must make every effort to get additional funds for salary adjustments to meet what is

Knowledge

There is a bill currently before the student legislature, that by its very nature demands passage.

It is a bill to insure the public's right to knowledge, freedom of the press, and the right of the voting populace to have a check on the actions of its legislators.

The bill simply states that the meetings of the Women's Residence Council be open to public and press.

According to the constitution of the University of North Carolina, the Women's Residence Council stands in the same position in relation to the Student Legislature, as do state assemblies to Congress—a subordinate legislative group which governs a segment of the population.

One of the basic freedoms and responsibilities of the press is the privilege of being the public's eyes at legislative meetings and reporting to the public what goes on in these meetings, so that the public can keep a certain account of its legislators, and give its weight either for or against the legislators' undertakings.

This principle of freedom of the press, supposedly guaranteed in the Student Body Constitution, has been flouted by the closed doors of Women's Residence Council meetings.

Moreover, it is the right of the public to go to any meeting of Congress, state assemblies, the student legislature, and the Interdormitory Council, without fear of being kept out. It is a right to be cherished, for it gives the public a chance to keep a check on its elected representatives and to witness the procedures of legislative bodies.

It is further the right of the public to be aware of what is happening not six months after it has been in process but at the time it starts.

This bill is not prohibiting the Council from forming non-acting, investigating committees to study problems concerning individuals which are not properly the subject of public written material. These committees can issue reports which can be acted upon by the full body, but the public and the press has a right to hear the report as well as the discussion leading up to action on such report.

An informed public is the type of public that will cast a responsible ballot and demand responsible action. A public cannot be informed if it is not allowed access to the proceedings that concern them most.

Knowledge is a thing to revere, and not shut in a corner where no one can see it. Knowledge is a thing no man should be afraid of. Moreover, if the Council has knowledge that it is doing the right thing, then it should have nothing to fear. They should be the first to join in the battle to preserve freedom of the press and the rights of the individual in connection with his elected representatives. They should be the first to want to see the reasoning and the effort that goes into making a decision put before the public.

It is for the legislature of the students to take the initiative in preserving a free press and a democratic community on this campus.

The IFC

The IFC should be saluted.

After a long time of abdicating their responsibility of the conduct of their constituent fraternities, the IFC has finally taken a concrete action.

In prohibiting loud Sunday parties, the IFC has acknowledged its responsibility of the actions of its members, and has decided that the fraternities have a responsibility to the community.

It is hoped that the IFC will be as zealous in the enforcement of this regulation, as it is in the passage.

Education In Focus

James L. Godfrey

(The following is the first in a series of discussion topics that will be treated throughout the coming year. It is the opinion of the editor that the paper and the University can most benefit by drawing on the resources of the entire University in order to put forward many views on the problems that confront the world today.

In this connection, The Daily Tar Heel has asked several members of the University faculty to participate in a forum discussion of the current education crisis in the world.

The first of these faculty members to write is Dr. James Godfrey dean of the faculty and professor of history. His article will be followed by Dr. Samuel Holton. Dr. Arnold Nash and Dr. Everett Hall.

Ed Rowland, editorial assistant compiled this series for The Daily Tar Heel.)

Education at its various levels is one of the most complex of our institutions. It can be approached in a variety of ways and its problems discussed as though they were entities within themselves. At the moment there is great concern with the problem of securing a sufficient number of qualified members for use in colleges and universities during the next twelve to fifteen years.

This is a problem in two dimensions. It is problem in quality and one in quantity. It is a problem in quality because teaching has not kept pace with other professions in the sort of salary that it receives. Increasingly, therefore, young people of ability have been going into professions other than teaching. It is also a problem in quantity because our most reliably informed prophets estimate that the number of students in our colleges and universities will double between now and 1970. The means that by 1970 we shall need about wtice as many college and university tecahers as and university teachers as we now have. The problem, therefore, is quite serious. Where and how can we find an increasing number of young pepole of first rate ability to enter the teaching profession.

It seems clear that higher education will not begin to draw its share of people of first rate ability until, as a profession, it becomes as attractive as its several competitors. Central to this conclusion is the question of money and the anticipation of income. We are told that teaching has many attractions and that salaries are not necessarily the most important of these. All professions have attractions other than the possibility of gaining income and no one has yet demonstrated that education has more non-financial attractions than do competing professions. It is almost certain that the problem cannot be solved by leaving out the financial consideration. It would seem that the country must make up its mind either to pay first-rate professional salaries to the faculties of institutions of higher learinig or it must accept persons of second rate ability on these faculties. We simply do not have enough "dedicated" persons to go round. Competition for ability in this country is far too keen and those who have ability are far too aware of what they can expect in various professional opportunities to enable teaching to cure its problems without major expenditures. To put the matter in these terms is very largely to admit that we will not get over the next twelve years enough persons of first-rate ability to take the positions that come open in our colleges and universities.

Since we cannot expect to have a sufficient number of well-equalified teachers, what consequences may be anticipated. Several seem to be quite clear. In the first place, certain institutions will inevitably limit their enrollments to the size faculty they can recruit and maintain. They will use the crush of students to select better students for their entering classes and thus improve the quality of the student body. This means that institutions that undergo major expansion will be up against the critical task of finding sufficient staff and of protecting themselves against the excessive admission of students of doubtful qualifications who cannot find places in the more selective institutions. All schools are likely to administer admission tests of one sort or another. The only question then is the point at which admissions will be stopped. Students will be in a competition for admission with this competition being quite sereve at the better school. Those schools that are now good are quite likely to get better. Even those schools that are now less than good find the average ability and attainments of their studen's somewhat improved.

It is almost certain that any student in the future will find the difficulty of college work gradually mounting. More will be expected of him. Increasingly he will have to look after the job of educating himself through his own effort. Competition for admission and competition for continued residence will very largely see to this as a natural result. On the whole, this will be a good thing and can be put down to clear gain. In the past, faculties have worked too hard and students not hard enough at the job of higher education.

The situation, as it evolves, will have certain consequences for faculty as well as students. More and more college and university administrations must make the best possible use of their faculties.

The responsibility of the faculty falls into the two general areas of teaching and research. It is the responsibility of the administration to provide the circumstances under which these two duties may be most efficiently performed. In the future the teacher must be provided with every possbile assistance in helping him with his job. Teachers in the future must be given more and more assistance in doing the mechanical and routine work of the class. This will take the form of paper grading, roll-taking and all of the other time-consuming duties of teaching that can be adequately performed by graduate assistants. The same sort of assistance will be provided for those engaged in research. In addition, of course, every device that can increase the efficiency of the teacher be employed. Where any asset is in short supply and great demand it must be used with wise and critical economy.

The consequences mentioned do not occur because someone desired them. They arise from the necessities of the situation. There seems to be no escape from them. The important thing, therefore, will be to use most effectively the scarce resources of universities and colleges in carrying on the fundamental task of education those students best able to profit from the use of these resources.

Letters On Grading

Editor:

Grades have warped our idea of education so much that we no longer (maybe we never did) come to school simply for the sake of learning. We come to make the grade, whether it be C or A. I ask, why do we have grades? And I hear, to make for competition, to have something to shoot at—an incentive. As if simply to learn wasn't enough of an incentive. And this competition. Oh yes, don't we love to outdo our friends and neighbors? Aren't we delighted when we see that our friends made a 65 on a quiz? And aren't we proud when we pull a 95? That means something doesn't it? It means that we have worked hard and have crammed more in our heads than our friend has (or in class, our enemy). Take the same test 3 months later and we'll be lucky if we make a 20.

Athletic events, parties, and quizzes are about the only things that ever create any excitement in our schools. Of course this is alright, to a certain extent, but it is overdone. How often do we ever hear a group of students talking about the modern poets or international politics or even about the fascinating subject of space flights to the moon, etc. No, if it's about school work at all it is always about the grade they made or were given on a quiz.

I can count on one hand the students that I know who now and then take an interest in some field of knowledge outside their class assignments. With the rest any time spent with books is spent in studying for a quiz.

Who is to blame? I guess everybody is. We want to make good grades to please our parents and to make our girl and her parents proud, and in the end the whole neighborhood back home will know about our good grades. It will even be in the hometown newspaper if we make the Dean's List. Also, most professors don't give students any encouragement to go out and learn on their own. Indeed students don't have time. If they took time, they wouldn't make the all-important grades. This great emphasis on grades has put so much pressure on the student that he cannot help but dislike his studies, and when he finishes a course he sells his books, and never again does he crack a book on the subject. And in the end when he graduates from college he feels that he is free from the burden of studying. That burden was the pressure on him to make his grades. He has passed through four years of college and hasn't even learned the enjoyment of learning. Something has gone wrong back the road somewhere.

Most of the students on this campus and on other campuses across the nation attach great importance to two things in college, and these are the making of grades and their acceptance in society. One group thinks that their grades come first, and the other thinks that their social standing comes first. The grade group looks down at the party-makers and hell-rakers and at the same time worry about not being accepted by the crowd. The social group points their unsteady finger at the square grade-makers and at the same time worry about whether they are going to keep their C average. Both groups worry about their grades and their social standing. There is another smaller group who do their best to say the hell with grades and the set standards of the crowd. There is nothing weird about this group and they are not trying to be eccentric. They merely want to learn and at times wish to be left alone. When the time comes to kick up a shindig they can raise as much cain as the socialites and probably more, for they have more steam to let off since they don't raise hell every day.

Do I think that we should do away with grades in our colleges? No, I don't think that this would be the wise thing to do. A few of the grade men might spend their time in learning for the sake of learning but most of them wouldn't know what to do with themselves if the incentive was gone and would, in time, end up in the socialite camp, and the socialites would now spend all of their time basking in the sun and bathing in beer. Therefore, I guess we'll have to maintain the present system of grading and hope that the smaller group will get larger and that soon colleges will be built for those who have learning as their main interest, where these genuine students can get together and discuss interesting and contemplative matters without the curse of grades infringing upon the conversation, and where, when the proper time comes, they can all go out and hell around 'till the moon goes down.

Dear Mr. Wolff:

Hell, I don't agree with your opinion ('cepting on rare occasion), but I do enjoy your writings—thank goodness for a definite stand and words that have life. Only time I've been disappointed was a few issues back (relating to co-ed freshmen rules) which sounded as if you wrote with thesaureus in hand (myself--I need a spelling list).

Thank you for intelligent and stimulating thought.

Man And The Law

Malcolm B. Seawell

(This is the conclusion of the speech made by Attorney General Seawell at the Law Day ceremonies May 1, 1958.)

I do not wish to leave the impression that there are no changes needed in our courts and in the administration of justice. There are many needed changes, but the people of this State should not give up (and probably will not) their right to elect their judges. The right of the people to elect their judges, with two or more people seeking the same office, is a safeguard which the people have and which they should keep.

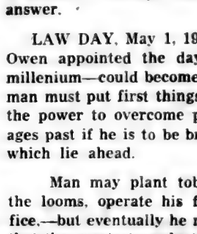
Lawyers should admit that they may, in a very practical way, contribute to improvement in the administration of justice. For example, it is high time that the practicing attorney realize that a simple pleading (complaint or answer) is far better than page after endless page of useless and confusing words. Since the courtroom is considered by some lawyers to be their personal stage, the lawyer has the responsibility sooner or later of taking pity on the jury of twelve who are too often required to listen to hour after hour of endless and meaningless oratory. The lawyers may contribute to improvement in our courts through abandoning their too frequently used custom of seeking continuation after continuation in the trial of a case.

Through dedication of teachers, lawyers, jurists, representatives, and the people,—law becomes great. Through education man understands man better and knows that he must soon find the answer to survival. Through education man will find that answer.

LAW DAY, May 1, 1958—125 years after Robert Owen appointed the day as the beginning of the millenium—could become "a day to remember." But man must put first things first. His brain must have the power to overcome prejudices and fears of the ages past if he is to be brought safely into the years which lie ahead.

Man may plant tobacco and cotton, may run the looms, operate his filling station, keep his office,—but eventually he must come to the realization that the greatest product of the State is not tobacco nor textiles, but is the children of all races and creeds who help to make up the State,—those who will become "we the people." Then he will know that the greatest, most hopeful, undertaking we now have as a people is, under law, to keep open our public schools.

The world of our time is a challenging world. There are new fields of peaceful conquest. The law reaches out, through those who truly love the law, and points to the pathway leading to the stars, fixed forever in their places.



Yes, to me the law is that foot-path beaten by countless hosts of people across the wilderness in their search for God. It is that path, I devoutly hope, which will lead us all,—sometime, somewhere, at long last,—to a world and into a society where man may live with his fellowman at peace and unafraid.

THOUGHTS ON RETURNING FROM THE BEACH

It is a basic need of modern man to "get away from it all": this is true despite the recent denunciation on this page and elsewhere of the Beat Generation, and the dissatisfaction with society and civilization which it implies. In support of this, witness the popularity of the Tempo Room, the ABC Stores, and the local houses of worship.

It is the desire to remain close to nature—the positive manifestation of the urge to "get away from it all"—which promotes the extensive and expensive pampering of grass and other foliage, and the preservation of symmetry on this campus.

There are times, however, when such various artificial re-creations of the natural state no longer suffice; and at such times it is most refreshing to spend a weekend at the beach.

Fortunately, the school year is conveniently arranged so that the time of greatest stress—the lull before exams—comes before the beach season is in full swing. Those students who take the opportunity of leaving a world they never made for the world which made them are virtually the sole possessors of the shore. Even the usual commercialization of the area, probably unbearable later in the season, is held to a minimum at this early date.

The particular pleasures of the beach, pleasures which are becoming almost unavailable due to the inroads of progress on nature, are among those essential commonplaces which are indescribable, and which come closest to description in poetry. Such essential commonplaces are "known" only in the innate reason of man—that part of his consciousness which is called the soul or spirit; and experience which touches on these commonplaces is by true definition non-verbal and religious.

Thus, the sensation of approaching complete atonement with the universe, God, Nature, or whatever, must be limited to the actual experience; any attempt to intellectualize and communicate such experience, as close as it may come to success, must fall far short. It is because of this that a poem must always be confined to "meaning," although it always strives to "be."

All that can be said is that the very special joy of experiencing life in its natural state—or as near to its natural state as it can exist in this age of citified man—is something completely removed and different from intellectual and physical satisfactions.

Such uniquely human pleasures are, indeed, substitute pleasures, eagerly desired when the quintessent joy of atonement is violated by the human condition.

A decision concerning a brand new idea or organization is much more difficult to make than one having to do with an established institution. This could be the reason behind the Student Legislature's inability to act on the UNC Amateur Radio Club Bill Thursday night.

Whatever the reason behind the tremendous waste of time and words that has gone on up to now, it is apparent no one, Thursday, knew just what the UNCARC needed, or knew how to explain the reasons for this need.

It appears obvious to this column that there is a bare minimum figure than can be expressed in Dollars and cents, below which the legislature cannot go and expect the UNCARC to perform any service to the student body.

There is another figure, slightly higher, which would enable the UNCARC to perform a substantially greater service and yet not be completely out of sight of the legislature's ability to provide.

It is up to the club to show the legislature what these figures are. Then the legislature must then decide to give them (a) nothing; (b) the first figure or; (c) the second figure; based on one of these three concepts of the problem.

1. The University doesn't need an operating Amateur radio club at this time.

2. The Club should be given an opportunity to begin operations right away on a very limited basis.

3. The UNCARC should be awarded a solid vote of confidence, both in the ability of its officers, and the need for its potential service, and given a chance to do a good job.

Two new bills, which will be acted on Thursday night are very important to the future atmosphere of two important groups of students.

The first is the Graham Claytor (UP), Roger Foushee (SP) bill, opening the now closed doors of the WRC to the public and to the press.

One of the basic necessities in the operation of a truly democratic legislative body is free and open debate. This means that there cannot be a "closed doors" policy or a secret ballot in the meetings of the WRC.

The health of the remaining freedom belonging to the women students needs a boost such as the one the passage of this bill would give it.

The second bill is Parliamentarian John Brooks (SP) bill suspending the residence requirement for legislators for the remaindor of the 25th Assembly. The effect that this action will have on the new residents of the new dormitories will be profound.

This act will encourage experienced student government leaders to move into these dorms. Thereby the job of orienting the residents of this "frontier" area of our campus into the realization of the meaning of "Student Government" and the "Honor System" would be simplified to a point where it would almost take care of itself by the process of osmosis.

Scientific Truths Aren't Always True

Scientific "truths," says A University of Columbia zoologist, often turn out not to be true.

This was the main point of a public talk given by Dr. John A. Moore Monday night. The address was sponsored by the National Science Foundation's Academic Year Institute.

He illustrated his point by questioning the often accepted statement that cell genes duplicate themselves.

He told of an experiment he has been carrying on at Columbia in which the whole nucleus including the gene was taken from it own environment, out into alien surroundings, and tested to see whether it reproduced itself exactly.

"Sometimes they don't," he said. In that case "the cells control the genes instead of the genes controlling the cells."

Dr. Moore, a specialist in organic evolution, is one of several noted scientists who have visited Chapel Hill this year to address the high school mathematics and science teachers enrolled in the NSF institute. Dr. E. C. Markham of the UNC Chemistry Dept. directs the institute.

Faculty

already a competitive situation and which will become more competitive in the next few years," Consolidated University President Friday commented.

UNC Chancellor Aycock said, "The last pay raise contributed a great deal of relative stabilization to our faculty. There must be another substantial increase in the next biennium.

"The situation is not critical at the present time, but it may very well be unless we are able to do more."

Including all of the departments and schools of UNC twenty-four faculty members of the rank of assistant professor or above have resigned since July 1, 1957; and the last of these men will leave UNC by September.

The names of those resigning since the last Trustees meeting will be announced at their meeting, May 12.

Several departments have vacancies which they have not be able to fill. In order departments the number of students majoring in that field has increased more rapidly than the overall enrollment in the University.

This factor is especially true of the English Department and the School of Education.

With 29 members of the faculty over 65 and nearing retirement, the University will be faced with the probem of producing qualified men to fill these positions.

The Law School will be especially hard hit by this factor. Within the next eight years six full professors of a teaching staff of 11 will retire.

Being 'The Only One' Has Its Advantages

The Morehead Planetarium's being the only planetarium in North Carolina has its advantages.

For instance, last week the planetarium here received a letter addressed:

"Morehead City Planetarium, a Branch of North Carolina College, Morenead City, N. C."

Postmarked 4:30 p.m., April 30, the letter had gone to Morehead City where alert postal workers routed it to Durham, because that's where NCC is. In Durham an equally alert post office crew put the letter in the Chapel Hill bag. It arrived at the Morehead Planetarium on the UNC campus early Saturday morning.

The letter had reached its intended destination in about 60 hours.

Records Expected To Fall At ACC Track Final

By DAVE WIBLE

The ACC's fifth annual track and field outdoor championships will be held Friday and Saturday at Duke Stadium with this year's field expected to re-write the record book almost all the way down the line.

No less than eleven of the fifteen conference records stand to fall if the competitors remain at their present pace. All around the conference the short pants boys have run, thrown, heaved or jumped better than the ACC marks which have to be broken at the conference meet.

The situation is almost identical to last year's meet which was held here, but rain and a muddy track kept the records safe for another year. Only records in the high hurdles and the javelin were broken.

This year, the experts predict records in the 100, 440, 880, two-mile, mile, high hurdles, high jump, shot put, pole vault, javelin, and mile relay.

These experts feel that Dave Simes' conference 220-yard dash record of 20.1 is safe for a while unless the big red-head has a good day and hits 20.0 again (the world's mark). Sime will not enter the 220-yard low hurdles so his mark of 22.4 should be safe. Sime holds the conference record in the 100 at 9.5. He has been under this several times this season.

Carolina's Dave Scurlock was ready to lower the conference 440 and 880 marks last year but the mud slowed him down. Ablely pushed by Duke's Tommy Bazemore and Cary Weisiger in both events, the lanky junior should be a double winner and record breaker.

Weisiger, also a miler, came into his own in Saturday's Carolina-Duke dual meet. He set a new school record at 4:10.2, one and two tenths of a second off of the conference mark held by Carolina's Jim Beatty. It's not a sure bet that Weisiger can lower Beatty's time, but he is worth watching.

Tar Heel Wayne Bishop and South Carolina's Billy Latham are co-favored to lower the 2-mile mark. When these two get together no one knows who will come out on top, but it is certain that a new record will be set.

Don Goodroe of South Carolina will be going after his own 14.4 record in the high hurdles. He will be getting a lot of trouble from Carolina's Lyndon DeBorde. The high jump mark of six feet two and three-quarter inches is expected to be broken by Duke's Jim Boocher.

Maryland's Ed Cooke and South Carolina's Dave Coates both have been bettering the conference shot put mark of 52 feet this year. Three vaulters from Virginia, Pat Whitaker, Clarence Roberts, and Henry Davenport along with Conway Snipes of South Carolina have all been soaring over the 13 feet, 7¼ inches vault mark.

Finally in the mile relay, the Duke team of Curt Cobb, Paul Bellman, Tom Bazemore and Tom Menaker has been clocking under the conference mark of 3:17.8 all through the season.

Freshman Track Team In Big-4 Meet Today

The Tar Baby track team will travel over to Durham today to participate in the annual Big-Four freshman track meet.

This meet is their answer to the conference championships. In duel meet competition this season, the Tar Babies have fallen to Duke and State but they defeated Wake Forest. The Duke squad is one of the strongest they have fielded in many years.

The outstanding boys thus far for the Tar Babies have been Tom White (Shot), Bob Eubanks (Broad Jump), Henry Clements (Discus), and Fred Wood (Broad Jump), in the field events.

In the running events, Worth Sweet has been a top notch distance man along with Harry Miller. Benjy Seagle and Bob Foxworth have done very well in the middle distance, and Fred Wood has looked good in the dashes.

The Tar Babies will leave this afternoon at 1:45 and the meet will start in Duke Stadium at 3.

Freshmen Netters Win

Carolina's freshman net club won its fourth match here yesterday when it defeated Goldsboro High School 5-0.

The Tar Babies have lost only one match this year, and that was a practice contest with the Chapel Hill Tennis Club.

All of the doubles and one of the singles match were rained out, but five wins made the match an official victory.

The Summary

Bruce Sylvia (C) defeated Dave Edgerton, 6-0, 6-2. Bob Mogull (C) vs. Richard Helms, rained out. Dee Heather (C) defeated Colton Carawan 6-2, 6-1. Tommy Ricks (C) defeated Hubert Ellison, 6-1, 6-1. Buzzy Cowart (C) defeated Clarence Ellison, 6-1, 6-0. Neil Dickman (C) defeated Lenery Hairr 6-2, 6-4. All doubles rained out.

Golf Squad Drops 2nd WF Match

The Tar Heel golf team fell deeper into a losing slump Monday when the Deacon golfers of Wake Forest defeated them 16½-10½.

The loss was the second straight for the Tar Heels who won their first six matches in a row. Marland turned back the Tar Heel tide two weeks ago. The Deacons now have a 7-5 season record.

The Deacons got the jump and built up a 14-4 advantage in the first two foursomes. The Tar Heels fifth man John McKee then halved with his opponent and Carolina's Charlie Erdman skunked his man 3-0 for the lone Carolina victory.

The Tar Heels will be looking for a break in the weather so that they can shake the slump in time to be ready for the ACC tournament coming up this weekend at the Old Town Country Club in Winston-Salem. They were the favorite to take the championship earlier in the season but now they will have to fight all of the way.

Maryland, Wake Forest and Duke all are fielding strong squads to be dealt with. The Tar Heels will get their first look at Clemson Thrusday when the teams meet in Winston-Salem to play a previously rained-out contest. Duke has the best record in the ACC with 13 wins against one loss.

The Summary

Sapp (WF) defeated Thornton 2½-½; Helms (WF) defeated Langley 2-1. Best ball, Wake Forest 3-0.

Thomas (WF) defated Lookabill 2½-½; James (WF) defeated Callicott 2½-½. Best ball, 1½-1½.

Eynon (WF) halved with McKee, 1½ - 1½; Erdman (C) defeated Green 3-0. Best Ball, Carolina 2-1.

Netters Meet Rollins In Final Match

This afternoon's match with Rollins College marks the end of the regular season for the varsity tennis team. The Carolina netters will take a 9-2 overall mark into today's final home contest against the Tars.

Rollins brings one of the top squads in the south to Chapel Hill to take on the Tar Heels. Monday Rollins duplicated the 9-0 whitewashing that the Tar Heels gave State when the two teams met in Raleigh.

Thursday the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament will begin here with over forty of the best players in the conference entered in the three day event. The Tar Heels, team champs for 1958, will be strong favorites to sweep the top spot in the annual post-season tourney.

The tournament will be an elimination contest where two members of the same team could very well meet each other in the finals. This situation occurred last year when Maryland's Dave Freishtat beat teammate Jackson Yang for the singles title.

Before the ACC, however, the Tar Heels have to worry about Roflins. In his attempt to take this last match, coach Vladimir Cernik will probably start the same lineup that he has used all year. Senior captain Bob Bortner will play number one followed by Steve Bank and Geoff Black. Malcolm Clark, Ben Keys, and Dick Makepeace will play the other six singles matches.

Sports Day On Tap For Today

The annual Big Four Sports Day is on tap today and the Carolina intramural department has made final preparations to field a team that can recapture the rotating trophy that was lost last year to State.

The affair started way back in 1947 when the Big Four schools decided to settle their differences on an intramural level. Only soft ball was played that year with Duke carrying off top honors. The following year seven more sports were added: handball, horseshoes, tennis, badminton, table tennis, volleyball, and golf to make the present eight sport slate.

Carolina teams had a five-year winning streak broken last year by State. This year the event will be held at Wake Forest.

In order to get ready for the big day, the intramural department has appointed supervisors in the eight sports to organize their respective teams. Yesterday was set aside for the teams to practice, with no other intramural game on tap. The Carolina team will leave from the Gym at 10 a.m. Excuses will be given to participants.

2nd Place Tar Heels Meet Duke Here Today At 3:30

By RUSTY HAMMOND

Today in Emerson Stadium begins a series of four games, the last four of the season for Carolina, which will decide the Atlantic Coast Conference pennant race for 1958.

Carolina meets arch-rival Duke here today at 3:30. The Tar Heels, holding onto second place with an 8-2 ACC record, will be out to sweep the series. They beat Duke earlier this season 8-2 at Durham as Wayne Young fanned fifteen Devils for the win.

Young is almost a sure starter today for the Tar Heels, as he beat the Dukes previously. Young boasts a remarkable 0.57 earned run average and has a 5-2 record. He was picked yesterday as Athlete of the Week by the Greensboro Daily News.

Duke is virtually out of the race with a 6-4 record after dropping a pair of decisions last week to league-leading Clemson and weak and keep pressure on the Tigers.

South Carolina, but it is certain that they would like nothing better than to put the Tar Heels out of the flag chase for good.

Carolina, after losing to Wake Forest, beat Maryland and Virginia last week to stay in contention Clemson has only one more game left to play and it is with the South Carolina club. The Tigers had a game with Duke rained out last week, but it will not be played unless it directly bears on the outcome of the pennant.

Two factors in the favor of the Tar Heels are: 1-They have not lost a game this year at home, and 2-They have won nine of their last ten games.

Freshmen Play At Duke

The Carolina Tar Babies, with a 9-3 season record, today take on the Duke Blue Imps in Durham to try for their second win against the Imps.

Carolina has beaten Duke once this year, and the last time they met the game was called because of rain with the score tied.

The probable starting line-up for the Tar Babies is: John Steet, 1b; Ferg Norton, 2b; Bud Ellerbe, ss; Tommy Camp, 3b; Carroll Bolick, catcher; Dee Frady, lf; Dick Hord, cf; and Swag Grimsley, rf. The probable starting pitcher is either Wayne Allen or Jerry O'Neal, with Allen more likely.

Sabre Fencing Friday In GM

The sabres take over this Friday night in the second stage of this year's individual fencing championships. The bouts begin at seven in Graham Memorial and the competitions are co-sponsored by the GMAB tournaments committee and Intramurals. All you would-be Cyranos, Zorros and Scaramouches may sign up by seven p.m. Thursday at the Intramurals office of Woollen Gym or at the Information desk of GM.

In last week's foil competition Bill Orr emerged the '58 foil champion by winning nine of ten bouts. Runnerup was Carroll Raver whose record of eight wins, two losses was good enough for second place foil. The third place award went to Guy Ellis with seven wins, three losses.

This week's sabre event will have as officials former team captain Bob Clay, UNC law student David Evans, Albert Deal and Coach Pebley Barrow.

The bouts this week promise to be even more action-packed and exciting than last week's foil bouts. Several fencers who were not entered in the foil will compete and due to the spectacular nature of sabre play plus the keen competitive spirit, an interesting and entertaining evening is promised spectators, who are invited to watch the bouts.

Largest of cats next to the lion, the male tiger may measure more than ten feet from nose to tail tip and weigh as much as 650 lbs.

Carolina Forum Will Sponsor Walt Kelly Tonight In Hill Hall

Walt Kelly will use his Pogo comic strip characters and their language to illustrate his ideas on the "G.O. Fizzickle Year" tonight in a Carolina Forum address.

The lecture will begin at 8 p.m. in Hill Hall.

Jim Holmes, Forum chairman, announced that Kelly's talk is open to the public without charge.

A reception will be given afterward in Graham Memorial Student Union.

Kelly recently made a trip around the world, talking with the average citizen in many lands. Material gathered in his travels will be included in his next book, "Not So Square a World."

A past president of the National Cartoonists Society, Kelly has won the "Cartoonist of the Year" award and the Heywood Broud Memorial Award for the best editorial cartoon program.

Born in Philadelphia, Pa., Kelly spent most of his youth in Bridgeport, Conn., where he attended Warren Harding High School.

Beginning as a newspaper reporter he soon found himself in Hollywood. There he worked with Walt Disney, turning out "Fantasia," "Pinocchio," "Dumbo," "The Reluctant Dragon," "Baby Weems," and "Snow White."

In 1948 he took a job with the New York Star. In that paper the public saw for the first time a comic character previously seen only in comic books — Pogo the Possum.

The Carolina Forum, the official speaker-sponsoring agency of the UNC student government, brings a number of prominent men to the campus each year, mainly experts on politics or economics.

Forum speakers this year have been Norman Thomas, civil liberties spokesman and socialist leader; Israeli diplomat Abba Eban; and Senator Hubert Humphrey (D-Minn.).

WRC Meetings Will Be Open To Reporters

Reporters from The Daily Tar Heel will be allowed at all future meetings of the Women's Residence Council, it was announced yesterday by Lillian Shannonhouse, chairman of the Council.

"Reporters will be welcome at any of our meetings," she said in a statement following Tuesday night's meeting of WRC. The new policy is a break from the former procedure of releasing only part of the minutes to The Daily Tar Heel after the meetings.

The council acted in clarification of its by-laws, in which there is no mention of the press.

The Council ruled that since the press was not specifically prohibited in the by-laws of the legislature group, that the press had a right of admission to any and all Council meetings.

The action came while there was a bill pending in the student legislature to make it mandatory that public and press be admitted to Council meetings.

In other action Tuesday night, Jean Sutherland, a rising junior nursing student from Greensboro, was elected chairman of the Women's Residence Council for the summer session.

Valkyries Tap 8 Members In Secret Pre-Dawn Rites

Five undergraduate women and three honorary members were tapped into the Order of the Valkyries, women's honorary organization, early this morning n a secret pre-dawn ceremony.

The Valkyries began their candle-light march at 1:30 a.m. in their customary black robes and hoods. As the march proceeded through the women's residence halls, the sound of the golden gong called forth those women who were recognized for the Valkyrie ideals of scholarship, leadership, character and service.

Those recognized were Mrs. Mary H. Davis, Chapel Hill, N. C.; Frs. Guion B. Johnson, Chapel Hill, N. C.; Miss Dorothy Douglas Kellam, Bel Haven, Va.; Miss Barbara Faye Miles, Burlington, N. C.; Miss Mary Susanne Mosteller, Hickory, N. C.; Miss Midori Sasaki, Hiroshima, Japan; Miss LuRuth Sutton, Raleigh, N. C.; and Miss Paddy Sue Wall, Winston-Salem, N. C.

Following the secret ceremonies, a special breakfast was served at 6 a.m. in honor of the new members. Former members of the Order were also present for this conclusion of the ceremonies.

The Order of the Valkyries was begun on the Carolina campus in 1942 so that outstanding women students might be given special recognition for their services. The name of the organization is taken from an ancient Norwegian legend centered around the warrior god Odin, who represents Thought and Memory and who was mankind's benefactor.

Odin had nine select maiden attendants, the Valkyries, who were daughters of the gods and yet were mortals as well. These attendent maidens waited on the tables in Asgard, but their chief task was to go to the battlefield and decide at Odin's bidding who should win and who should die, and then to carry the brave dead to Valhalla, the hall of fame. It was considered a great honor to belong to this chosen group because they shared the glorious companionship of departed heroes.

The purpose of the Order as stated in the Valkyrie creed is: "As a Valkyrie I will strive to accomplish gladly and quietly the tasks which lie before us, to be unaffected by success and undaunted by failure, ti have an active interest in the welfare of my fellow students; to act always with a spirit of helpfulness and to try to inspire co-operation in others; to be sincere and considerate on all occasions, to work toward a tolerant and sympathetic understanding of others, and yet to stand staunchly by my own convictions; to be above pettiness in all my dealings and to direct my thoughts and actions persistently toward the highest purposes; as a Valkyrie I will strive constantly toward those ideals of character, scholarship, leadership and service for which our organizaton stands.

The citations read to the tappees were:

MRS. DAVIS . . . "one who with a spirit of helpfulness has exemplified a sincere interest in each individual student As secretary in the Education Department her dedication to her work and to those with whom she comes in contact is marked by patience, understanding, and friendly cooperation. To her enthusiasm and cheerfulness is added a kindliness of manner which has influenced faculty and students not only in the Department of Education, but also in the University as a whole."

MRS. JOHNSON . . . "one whose sound ideals and sincere interest in others have made her a constant source of inspiration to many. Her untiring service and capable leadership have given meaning and strength to many areas in the Uni-

CU President Bill Friday Finishes First Full Year

Consolidated University President William C. Friday looked back yesterday on a full year's activity since his inauguration.

Although he had served as acting president for almost a year before his inauguration in Raleigh last May 8, he had been hampered in making many major decisions and changes by not having full status.

President Friday did not comment on any specific items during his first year, but offered several comments on his association with the University.

"It has been a happy privilege to work with the faculties of our three institutions, the administrative officers, and the students during these twelve months," he observed.

He complimented the work of everyone connected with the University from administrators to students for the "distinguished work . . . (and) dedicated service" which has brought about the knowledge "far and wide (of) the quality and excellence of our University."

When former President Gordon Gray went on leave to work with the Defense Department, James H. Purks was named acting president. Then Purks was named chairman of the State Board of Higher Education by Governor Hodges and Friday was elected to the acting president's chair.

Now, after a year in that position, Friday is "grateful for the opportunity I have to be a part of maintaining our University tradition of scholarship and her increasing service to all our people."

Press Club Banquet Set For Monday Night

Tuition scholarships will go to four journalism juniors at the fourth annual UNC Press Club Awards Banquet Monday night.

The awards, three of which are presented through the Journalism Foundation, are based on scholarship and need.

Also on the program is initiation of six new members to Kappa Tau Alpha, journalism scholastic honorary, and announcement of Press Club officers for 1958-59.

Chancellor William B. Aycock will speak to the group at the United Congregational Christian Church.

The scholarships, valued at $300, are named the O. J. Coffin Scholarship, the Quiney Sharpe Mills Scholarship, the Louis Graves Scholarship and the Gerald Johnson Scholarship. The Graves, Coffin and Johnson awards are through the Journalism Foundation. Last year's winners were John Ashford, Stan Brennan, Ray Smith and Tom Byrd. Byrd graduated in January and is now working for the Raleigh News and Observer.

Awards will be presented by Journalism School Dean Norval Neil Luxon. Press Club President Davis Merritt will be master of ceremonies.

The top ten per cent of the journalism school enrollment is eligible for Kappa Tau Alpha, a national fraternity. Initiates will be awarded certificates of membership and a year's subscription to the Journalism Quarterly.

A ham supper will be served by members of the Women's Fellowship of the church. Anyone interested may buy tickets, at $1.50 each, from the Journalism School office, Bynum Hall.

Senior Picnic Rescheduled For Today

George Ragsdale, senior class president, announced yesterday that the Senior Day Picnic will be held today. The picnic was originally scheduled for yesterday but was postponed because of rain.

The picnic will be held at the Patio from 3:30-12 p.m. Activities will include announcement of the winners of the Mr. Alumnus and Miss Alumna contest, entertainment by Nick Kearns' Combo, a softball game and a variety show.

Entrants in the variety show include Hoke Simpson, Jim Talley and the Blue Jays, Kak Anthony, Circle 9, Shields Flynn and Lawrence London, Oliver Bloomer, Carol Jean Suther and Charles Clement, Morrison Divine and Doug Murray.

Winner of the "Ugly Man" contest will be announced at the picnic. Voting was carried on this week at a penny-a-vote booth at Y-Court.

A free barbecue supper will be served at 6 o'clock.

Senior coeds will have 12 o'clock permission tonight.

GM SLATE

The following activities have been scheduled for today at Graham Memorial:

University Party, 6:15-7 p. m., Grail Room; Rules Committe, 4-5 p., Roland Parker Lounge I; Finance Committee, 4-6 p. m., Roland Parker Lounge II; Ways and Means Committee, 3-5 p.m., Woodhouse Conference Room; Women's Honor Council, 6:45-7:30 p.m., Council Room; Student Council, 7-11 p.m., Grail Room; Student Party Caucus, 6:15-7:30 p.m., Roland Parker Lounge I; University Party, 6:30-7:30 p.m., Woodhouse Conference Room; Chess Club, 6:30-11 p.m., Roland Parker Lounge II; Honor Council Commission, 4-5 p. m., Council Room; Dance Lessons, 7-8 p.m., Rendezvous Room.

Senior Class Begins To Enroll Special Alumni

The special on-campus enrollment of the Senior Class in the General Alumni Association got under way yesterday following the meeting of the class in Memorial Hall.

The period of active solicitation of seniors extends one week. During this time each senior will be visited in his place of residence and offered an opportunity to join the University's alumni association at a special rate of $1 for the first year of membership.

The solicitation is organized with more than 50 members of the class taking part in the drive, unuer the general direction of Co-Chairmen Frank Black and Jerry Oppenheimer. Responsible for major campus areas are Ann Morgan (women's dorms), Punkin Coe (sororities), Tom Walters (men's dorms), and Sandy Sanders (fraternities).

For those who take advantage of the reduced rate (regular dues are $5) their membership begins June 1 and extends 12 months from that date.

Among the direct benefits of membership is a subscription to The Alumni Review, the alumni magazine that is published 10 times during the calendar year as a magazine and each week during the football season as a special supplement.

All dues-paid members vote in Association elections, receive notices of class reunions and local alumni meetings. Members of the student body are represented on the Association's board of directors.

In announcing the drive Class President George Ragsdale urged all senior men and women to join the Association and thereby retain their connection with the University.

Jury Interviews

Today will be the last day for Honor System Jury interviews.

Interviews are being held by the Honor Council Commission in the Council Room at second floor Graham Memorial from 4-5 p.m.

Grail Ring Sale

The Order of the Grail will sponsor a class ring sale today from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. in Y-Court.

Lee Blackwell, Balfour Company representatives, will be there to take orders for rings.

Legislature To Consider Twelve Bills

Tonight at 7 o'clock, the student legislature will place under consideration the bill to amend the by-laws of the Women's residence council. The passage of this legislation would automatically open the doors of the WRC sessions to the public and to the press.

There are eleven other bills on the calendar at this time. Seven of these are money bills, including the Amateur Radio Club bill.

A complete slate of presidential appointments, including confirmation of Dick Robinson as Attorney General, will also be considered by the legislature tonight.

Lawing Elected Head Of University Party

Jack Lawing, rising junior from Marion, was elected president of the University Party Tuesday night.

Elected to serve with him were Morry Johnston, vice-president; Susan Saunders, re-elected secretary and David Green, treasurer.

FIGHT FOR FACULTY—PART II

UNC Losing Out In Salary Competition

By PRINGLE PIPKIN

A consideration of specific figures of the UNC faculty members' salaries will give credence to the general opinions expressed by University officials.

A rundown of the figures paid to faculty for approximately nine months of employment shows that the highest amount of state funds paid to a full professor is approximately $12,000 to $13,000, and the minimum salaries is $7,500. The median salary is $8,900.

There are, of course endowed chairs for full professors such as the Kenan Professorships which help to provide salaries ranging from $12,500 to $13,000.

Here an associate professor can receive up to $9,200 and down on the minimum salary of $6,500. The Median pay check for this group is $6,960.

The maximum salary of a UNC assistant professor is $7,200, the minimum $5,400, and the median $5,670. An instructor begins at $4,500 and his pay check can go as high as $5,500; the median salary is $4,800.

A recent report of the US Department of Education revealed that the average of the maximum salaries paid to full professors by the private universities and colleges in the northeast is $13,850.

Recently Princeton declared that the minimum salary of any full professor would be $10,000, or $2,500 greater than lowest rate paid by UNC for men of the same rank.

The associate professors at public institutions of higher learning in the northeast receive maximum salaries which average $9,450. These same schools pay the assistant professors maximum salaries which average $8,050.

The instructors in northeast public colleges get maximum salaries which average $6,550 or $1,050 greater than the figure paid by UNC.

The faculty members of the dental school and of the school of medicine are paid a yearly basic, and consequently they receive higher salaries than those employed nine months.

The salary scale of the school of medicine ranks in the lower part of the middle group of the salaries offered by medical schools across the nation.

The salaries of the dental school are in the range of the middle third of the dental schools.

In the disparties were confined to the northern salary scales, it might be possible to dismiss the matter as simply compensation for a higher cost of living.

However, a new doctor in a field of science was offered $6,700 to be an instructor at a southern school. His salary, incidentally, is greater than that being paid to some of the men who instructed him in his graduate work at UNC.

Another graduate student in the field of science will be getting $6,500 when he goes to be an instructor at another southern school.

One man left the school of education to go to the University of Virginia where he would get a 20 per cent incerase in salary.

A southern school of dentistry has offered positions which would provide a salary increase of $3,000 to two UNC faculty members.

Another southern university offered a member of the School of Business Administration a $2,000 increase.

During the spring, the most active period of faculty recruitment, many other offers such as these will be received by members of probably every school and department in the University.

However, the University does not compete against only the other members of the academic world. At present there are lucrative lures being offered by industry and the other professions both of which are enjoying a time of prosperity.

According to Dr. Ingram, head of the Department of Geology and Geography, a new Ph.D. in geology can earn $1,800 more per year by entering industry.

In ten years this same man would be earning $5,000 more each year if he was working for a company instead of teaching.

A man qualified to be a professor teaching advertising in the School of Journalism could probbaly make $25,000 if he was employed by a firm dealing in this field.

One industry offered a member of the physics department a salary of $10,500. Thus sum lacked only $300 of being double what this man was receiving at UNC.

Students Urged To Appear At Meter Meeting

Student Body President Don Furtado has urged all interested students to attend the Merchants Association's special meeting on the proposed installation of parking meters tonight.

The meeting will be held at 7:30 in Town Hall.

So far, the merchant group has taken no stand on the issue, but because of "unusual" interest, Merchants Assoc. President Whid C. Powell and the Planning Committee felt the matter needed further consideration.

The meeting is open to the public.

Pine Room Dance

The Three Deuces, a Raleigh combo, will play for a dance at the Pine Room Saturday from 8-12 p. m.

Graham Memorial Activities Board will sponsor the dance.

Graduation Invitations

Senior graduation invitation are being distributed on the second floor of the YMCA today through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Seniors have been urged to pick up their invitations on these three days.

IN THE INFIRMARY

Students in the Infirmary yesterday included:

Right Decision

The Women's Residence Council acted wisely Tuesday night, when they voted to admit press and public into the meetings of the Council.

In doing this, they protected the rights that are so carefully guarded by the first amendment to the Constitution of the United States. They made the current bill before the Student Legislature superfluous, and acted in the best interests of a democratic community.

The WRC is to be congratulated in establishing this principle for posterity.

Price of Building

Tonight a bill will appear before the Student Legislature to set up a committee to investigate the program of building dormitories, financed by self-liquidating bonds. There has always been a question as to why students must pay for improvements from which they will derive no benefit.

Moreover, there is a further question of how many qualified college students are being driven away from the University by the rising cost of living in the University community.

There would seem to be other alternatives to the self-liquidating program, in the form of state appropriation, direct aid from the federal government, and alumni contributions which are not earmarked for athletics.

A committee such as this will do no harm, and perhaps could do quite a bit of good in alleviating the financial burden which currently weighs heavily on the shoulders of the student.

The bill is being introduced by a legislator, who is doing something unique in the annals of student government at the University. He is actually trying to represent his constituents.

The legislator, Norman Smith, has instituted a system of suggestion boxes in each of the dormitories in his district, and uses these suggestions to bring legislation that his constituents want before the legislature. According to Smith, participation in the program has not been good, however his type of responsibility might well be an example for other legislators.

And the students ought, instead of giving vent to their gripes outside, place their gripes in these suggestion boxes. Students will always gripe, but at least, there is for once a method of clearing up some of the difficulties.

Friday

Thursday is Friday's Day. Or at least it is the first anniversary of the inauguration of Consolidated University President William Friday.

In actuality, Mr. Friday has been serving quite a bit longer than one year as president, and has been in several positions of responsibility in the University during the past several years.

However, the opportunity presents itself now, better than at any other single occasion to congratulate Mr. Friday for a job well done, and give him the best wishes for his future success.

Sometimes a columnist can't think of anything to write about, and other times he can't think of anything at all. This is one of those days.

You would think that what with the sewage flowing everywhere in the streets that we could come up with something, but no. We just politely watch our step and are not bothered by it. And how can a person write about something which does not affect him one way or another? A simple solution to the whole problem would be to wear your dirty bucks.

Now that Furtado has threatened the downtown merchants with economic boycott it seems that the campus is well on its way towards declaring its independence from the town of Chapel Hill. As you history majors will remember this is exactly what happened in the colonies prior to the Revolution and it worked for them well enough. . . .

According to NEWSWEEK, Ambassador to the Soviet Union Llewellyn Thompson will not demand equal television time on Soviet networks that his counterpart Mikhail Menshikov enjoyed in the United States. Why??? Thompson admits that his Russian is not so good, and that it would make a bad impression. The American people can suffer the effects of bad propaganda but the truth hurts. . . . When all of our other reading matter is exhausted, we sometimes read one of those "advice to anyone in trouble" columns in one of the local papers, and more often than not, we find a gem such as this one: (from DEAR ABBY by Abigail Van Buren)

Dear Abby:

I am a protestant and my husband is a Catholic. When we were married we agreed that he should keep his faith and I should keep mine, but I had to sign a pledge saying our children would be raised in the Catholic faith. Frankly, I'm sorry now, and think we should compromise and raise all the boys in his faith and the girls in mine. What do you think of this idea?

A Protestant

Dear Protestant:

I think all children in the family should be raised in the same faith. The family that prays together, stays together.

This is a heartwarming appeal. What will the poor woman do? Seek further advice? Who from? Walter Winchell? Drew Pearson? Take your pick. They're all well qualified to resolve deep-seated religious and emotional family problems.

Education In Focus

Samuel M. Holton

(The following is the second of a four part series on education, written by members of the faculty of the University of North Carolina.

Dr. Holton is associate professor in the School of Education.

Ed Rowland compiled the series especially for The Daily Tar Heel.

Following Dr. Holton's article will be articles by Dr. Arnold Nash and Dr. Everett W. Hall.)

Much has been written in popular magazines and newspapers in recent months suggesting that there is a special crisis in public education. The real crisis is to be found in the nature of the articles themselves. Careful analysis of some of this material reveals at best a careless perusal of research in the fields of education and psychology. At its worst, it approaches the status of libel. The burden of the criticism of the public schools has revolved around three charges. Charge number one is that the program of the public school has become "anti-intellectual." Charge number two is that the training of teachers is "being monopolized by courses in education taught by disciples of John Dewey and that intellectual values are being sacrificed" Charge number three is that the program of the public school is being taken away from the people and turned over to the "Experts."

What has been written has been filled with propaganda techniques easily identified by those who care to look. The most obvious of these is that of the straw man. A caricature has been drawn of the worst imaginable school, its obvious flaws have been pointed out, and then the inference has been drawn that what was true of the caricature was also true of most schools. The technique of name calling is also prominent. Dewey, Kilpatrick, Bode, Brameld or others who have been identified as educational philosophers are loooely classified as "progressives", "anti-intellectuals," "liberals", or worse. Little effort is made to give time to the analysis of their beliefs. (Still less attention is given to any serious study of the effect of their point of view on actual school programs.)

There is something seriously wrong in America when such an unwarranted attack on a public institution is being made by people who have formerly prided themselves on their scholarliness and objectivity. The tendency of some from among the community of scholars to lend their name and prestige to the work of such organizations as the "Council for Basic Education" is a case in point. This organization seems to disregard all of the rules of scholarly inquiry and thus helps to create a crisis where there was none before. Similarly, the tendency of at least three of our national news magazines to present but one side of an attack on an important public institution represents a threat to the democratic structure which we have labored to build.

Attacks on the public school are to be expected. Attacks on the fabric of public education by those associated with two of the most influential of our public institutions —the university and the press— is quite another matter.

With regard to the charge that the public school has become "anti-intellectual", there may be several observations. The evidence of those who have carefully studied the program of the public school is to the contrary. Even if the measure of intellectualism is to be found in the number of students studying such subjects as Latin and the modern foreign languages, the charge remains false. To say that the school has become anti-intellectual merely because it has attempted to meet its responsibilities to the population of high school age youth is not fair either to our democratic ideals or to a hard working staff of teachers. For the critic to say that the school is anti-intellectual because some of the leaders of educational philosophy have questioned the value of a classical approach to intellectual excellence is for him to reveal a narrowness of outlook as to the nature and purpose of American education.

To make the charge that the training of teachers is monopolized by courses in education, reveals gross ignorance of state certification standards as well as the nature of course work in the field of education. The typical certification requirements for beginning teachers involves from fifteen to twenty-four semester hours of work in the field of education. Of this, approximately one third is likely to be devoted to a study of the school as a social institution, both historically and in its present relationships. One third will be devoted to the study of psychology and child growth and development. The remaining third (generally two courses) will be devoted to the methodology of teaching, including an internship in a school situation. Thus the graduate of the four year college will have devoted less than a sixth and sometimes as little as a seventh or eighth of his four year program to work in the professional field of education. In almost every instance he will have considerably more course work in the subjects which he is going to teach than in the field of education. Most of the people in the field of teacher education are convinced that the day will soon come when competent teachers in both elementary and secondary schools will have at least one year of training beyond the four year bachelor's program.)

With rgeard to the influence of John Dewey and like-minded educational philosophers on the actual practice of the school; there seems to be paradox. The critics are suggesting an influence which those working in the education of teachers find hard to discover. The principal contribution of modern educational philosophy has been to help the teacher to reconcile his practice and his philosophy. Modern philosophy has said that in a democratic society the school should attempt to meet the needs of all the children. This is sometime upsetting to the man in the ivory tower. He frequently considers his subject matter sacred and the real needs of the student and society as secondary.

With regard to the notion that the "experts" have tried to steal the schools from the people, the record might be set straight. It is the critics who would make the American public high school a school for the selected few. It is the contention of those who are serious students of the school system that it is both possible and desirable to provide a comprehensive program of training appropriate to all. Indeed the decision to favor the comprehensive approach to education rather than the more selective European pattern has been made by the American people themselves. Phenomenal growth in the availability of secondary education seems to be a testimony to the wisdom of this decision. Almost alone among the learned professions, the leaders of the public school have tried to involve the public in the formulation of policy. It is lay boards of education which have the final say. It is the Parent Teacher Association which is the forum for testing new ideas. It is the legislature sided by a popularly elected state superintendent which sets the professional standards. While the schools concerned with education of teachers have sometimes been in a position to suggest ways of improving the schools, the decisions have been made by the representatives of the people.

Those of us who are in a university community can ill afford to be hastily critical of the public school. We, too, are a part of a great system of public education. We, too, share the responsibility for offering through constructive channels the suggestions which can lean to more effectiveness in that system. Irresponsible criticism is likely to betray us as lacking in scholarly discipline rather than to increase our influence for the good. Problems are solved not by name calling and careless criticism but by the whole-hearted effort of the American people to provide the best that we know how to provide. For us as teachers to disassociate ourselves from the effort to dignify the status of teachers and teaching is to leave ourselves defenseless when there are others equally irresponsible attacking us.

Rule's Roost

The last time we discussed parking meters it was in the form of a joke. However, it appears the city fathers of Chapel Hill are really serious about planting these nickel-eating, glass-petaled, metal shrubs along local business streets.

The issues of fraternity parking and reduction in the number of spaces to place a car have been covered pro and con in the Tar Heel, but perhaps a new angle can be injected into the discussion.

This one should be of particular interest to the merchants because it hits them where it hurts the most—right square in the middle of the cash register.

My hometown is in a position similar to Chapel Hill. Having about the same size business district, it is close enough to larger cities (such as Durham and Raleigh) to have a certain portion of its trade drawn away to its sizable neighbors.

Two summers ago the city government decided to install about 80 meters in the older section of the business area. Proponents argued that not only would congestion be relieved but the city would have a new source of revenue as well.

Last January the meters were removed. They had proved a dismal failure. Whereas the business area had offered free parking before, the meters took away part of the incentive to shop at home, and more folks started to journey to neighboring towns.

The meters did relieve congestion on the main business streets. In fact they did such a good job that the metered areas were left deserted while shoppers flocked with their cars to park along residential streets nearby, causing even more congestion there.

As far as revenue is concerned, it was found that the 80 meters brought in about $16 a day. Half of this went to the meter company the first year to pay for their installation. It was necessary to pay a policeman about 16 a day to empty the coin boxes and give tickets to parking offenders. In addition the machines had to be serviced and maintained.

The result was a daily loss in excess of eight dollars. This is not counting the large losses by local merchants who were unfortunate enough to have meters in front of their establishments.

The city is now back on the one hour parking system. While it is now necessary to pay a policeman to make periodic tire markings for enforcement, this loss is more than made up for by increased business by local merchants and the return of vitality to the central business district.

For further information contact city officials at South Norfolk, Va. They will be more than happy to supply the gory details.

It is hoped that Chapel Hill will not install meters in the false hope that they will improve local business and increase city revenue.

Letter On Sewage Problem

Editor:

In all fairness to the landlords and contractor working in the Stinson Street-Isley Street area I want to point out that a sewer line is now well under construction and that when finished the sewage problem will be corrected. Once this is taken care of and the roads paved I believe my neighbors will join me in saying that this will be an excellent place to live. The houses themselves are very nice and roomy.

I want to criticize most strongly the system that has allowed conditions such as those mentioned in the previous articles to come into existence. I believe that the town should assume authority to enforce proper subdivision and sanitary codes in areas such as this.

The University is also at fault for not providing adequate housing for married students, causing the demand for good housing to be much greater than the supply.

Mrs. Mary E. Van Huyck

A Vigor Of Mind

J. Robert Oppenheimer

It is now a widely held view that the United States has not developed an understanding of its purposes, its interests, its alternatives and plans for the future in any way adequate to the gravity of the problems that the country faces. There is a wide-spread impression that we live from astonishment to surprise, and from surprise to astonishment, never adequately forewarned or forearmed, and more often than not choosing between evils when forethought and foreaction might have provided happier alternatives. Why should this state of affairs exist in a country rich with wealth and leisure, dedicated to education, with a larger part of its citizenry involved in education than in any other land at any other time . . .?

The problems of our country and our age have hardly in historical times arisen in anything like their present form; certainly they have never been resolved. If our adversary appears to have solved them better than we, it may be healthy for us to note that; it can hardly be healthy for us to adopt his means. He knows what he wants, because he has a simple theory of the meaning of human life and of his place in it. With the strength of that confidence, he has a government prepared to take, at vast human cost, all necessary steps to reach his ends. That there is only a small, fragmentary, largely obsolete taint of truth to his theory, that it excludes the greater part of truth, and the deeper, should give us some confidence that he will not succeed. That his failure may be marked by a vast if not universal human involvement, and an unparalleled devastation and horror, should temper our pleasure in this prospect and return us to the solution of our problems on our own terms, in our own way, in our own good time.

What we here need is a vastly greater intellectual vigor and discipline; a more habitual and widespread open-mindedness; and a kind of indefatigability, which is not inconsistent with fatigue but is inconsistent with surrender. It is not that our land is poor in curiosity, in true learning, in the habit of smelling out one's own self-delusion, the dedication and search for order and law among novelty, variety and contingency. There is respect for learning and for expertness, and a proper recognition of the role of ignorance, and of our limits, both as men and as man; but of none of these is there enough. . . .

Parent's Day

Editor:

Yesterday was a perfect day for Parents Day. I wanted to get away from my room and typewriter, so I went out and spent the whole day and evening. First, I went to church, then to lunch. Then to see and hear the crack United States Air Force Band from Washington play and perform at Fetzer Field. It was the best in its line I have ever seen. It was really tops. They all moved as one man, arms, legs, instruments, everything was perfect. This band travels everywhere to perform, and will perform at the Brussels World Fair. There has been much criticism of the United States exhibit at Brussels, but there will be nothing but praise for the Air Force Band.

I went from Fetzer Field to open house at the N.R.O.T.C. headquarters, where I met some of the officers, who asked about David and how he was getting along in Flight School. The Commanding Officer, I didn't get his name, said his mother's name was Connor, from South Carolina, and he wondered if it was the same Connor as ours. I told him that I didn't know but that I hoped it was.

From there I went to the Glee Club and Band Concert on the lawn in front of the Old Well. It was lovely out under the trees and I enjoyed it. I didn't get away until five thirty, ordinarily, I don't like long things. I sat by some woman from New England who has moved here recently because her son teaches at the University. She had fallen in love with Chapel Hill, so of course we were kindred spirits. Ex-Chancellor House made a speech, then sat down besides me. He said that he never read the Daily Tar Heel because it made him so mad, but that if I wrote for it, he would read it. Last night I went to Hill Hall to an organ concert. I really made a day of it. I missed not having my children on Parent's Day, but had a very fine day in spite of that discrepancy.

e e cummings AT DUKE

Those who made the pilgrimage to Duke last Thursday to hear e e cummings found a simpler way to escape from the complexities of civilization than going all the way to the beach.

Mr. cummings was born, evidently, quite against his will, with his eyes wide open, and his nerve endings quite unprotected by a very thin skin.

In this condition, he is obviously vulnerable to all the injuries which the civilized world engenders, and with his "unsophisticated" insight into the uses of this world, Mr. cummings is a sharp commentator on the current state of affairs.

Mr. cummings is as "beat" as can be, and he has never been ashamed of the fact. His uninhabited dissatisfaction with the world, and his various imaginative escapes from it, may well explain his considerable effect on young audiences, for his sentiments express poetically the "growing pains" which are characteristic of every emergent individual who consciously or unconsciously recognizes himself as ". . . a stranger and afraid, in a world . . . (he) never made."

Mr. cummings' very particular genius, or lack thereof, has been the subject of much qualified and not-so-qualified debate for many years. Whatever the verdict, it is sure that if he is attended with both heart and mind, particularly as he reads aloud, he makes sad and beautiful music.

Phooey On Mrs. Whistler — Your Mom's A Lively Chick!

Year after year your old bookseller repeats this message, and year after year somebody's mom stops in to thank him.

Don't try to smother mother in moth balls, just because it's her day.

Mom's a lively chick, and she'd like to know that you know it. The old facade may be draped with a bit of embompoint these days, but the same dame that stepped a torrid Big Apple just yesterday is still behind it.

So . . . . .

When you look at our Mother's Day cards you'll find we've picked lively, impudent ones-cards that say "Keep off the shelf, kiddo. You're still our candidate for Mrs. North Carolina!" And if you can afford to buy a book, we try to lure you into buying something zippy - and we gift-wrap it tender as all get out.

Save your lavender and old lace for Confederate Memorial day. Mom's dish is firecrackers and fun!

Faculty

medicine or dentistry cannot match the finanical opportunities of private practice.

If the armed forces get the proposed salary increase now pending before Congress, Dr. Brauer, dean of the School of Dentistry, feels the increase will "create a further problem" in the difference of UNC's salaries and the salaries of the dentists in the armed forces.

The School of Business Administration must compete with opulent corporations and companies as well as some governmental agencies.

The University has met this threat with some success by offering to meet in part if not altogether the increases in salaries which other institutions have been willing to pay.

An increase in salary often makes a promotion necessary because of the narrow range between the minimum salaries of the various ranks, but this policy of promotion is not viewed as a good by one departmental head.

Some professors do not think it ethical to try to "bargain" with an institution and feel that it is the responsibility of the school to give them a competitive salary.

Dr. E.W. Hall pointed out that it was more economical for an institution to promote a man when he merits it rather that to wait until the man gets a concrete offer from another institution.

He said recognizing that a man showed promise would help to build up his loyalty and his morale, so when a "feeler" came from another institution, the faculty member would, "simply say no."

When hiring new men, it has been necessary in some instances to start a man higher in the salary scale than he would normally be in order that the salary will be competitive.

"One thing that you can count on is that all of them (those who leave UNC) got a more attractive offer," Faculty Dean Godfrey commented.

However, as the members of the faculty are individuals the various considerations which attract them to an institution may be extremely diverse.

Salary is by no means the only reason for changing schools, and in some instances it may not be the primary consideration, though an increase is certain to be an added inducement.

"No one worth his salt would go to another institution simply because of the pay," commented Dr. Berryhill, dean of the School of Medicine.

ACC Tennis Is Here Today; Tar Heels Top Contenders

JACKSON YANG
. . . Maryland's top player

By Elliott Cooper

The Atlantic Coast Conference's annual tennis tournament begins here at 9 o'clock this morning with North Carolina's regular season champs assuming the role of tourney favorite.

The Tar Heel netters posted a 6-0 conference mark to replace Maryland as the ACC champion. Carolina dominated ACC tennis this year by shutting out every opponent with the exception of Clemson whom they beat 8-1. Virginia was the only conference foe that the Tar Heels did not play since their match was cancelled by rain and could not be rescheduled.

Tournament chairman Vladimir Cernik expects between fifty and sixty entries for the three day event. All eight teams in the conference will enter between four and eight men in the contest. Six squads will follow with a fewer number of contestants.

Freishtat Wins Last Year

The tournament is an elimination event to establish a conference champion in singles and in doubles. The best players in the conference will fight it out for the championship, and regular season teammates will be pitted against each other. In last year's tourney held at Duke, Maryland's Dave Freishtat met teammate Jackson Yang in the singles finals. Although Freishtat beat Yang he graduated from school leaving the conference with no defending singles champ.

Half of last season's championship doubles team will again be in the tournament in the person of Duke's Don Romhilt. A year ago Romhilt teamed with Leif Beck to beat the Maryland twosome of Freishtat and Carl Bucks. This year Romhilt will be paired with Blue Devil sophomore Dick Katz, and this pair will be one of the favorites in the doubles.

Bortner Favored

On the basis of conference play this season Carolina's Bob Bortner is the heir apparent to Freishtat's singles crown. The Carolina captain has not lost an ACC match and has played in the number one position for the Tar Heels the entire year. After Bortner there will be a fight for the remaining seeded positions. All of the number one players in the conference will probably grab up the remaining spots which will be seeded.

Maryland's Yang will again be one of the favorites. The runner-up in the '57 tourney has lost only to Bortner in ACC play this year. Yang's teammate Carl Bucks, who has played in the number two spot for the Terrapins this season, will be the other major Maryland threat in the singles.

Sonny Summer and Mohammed Nasim will be the Clemson players to watch in the tournament. Both of these two sport winning records, and Nasim holds a win over Steve Bank, the only conference loss the Carolina senior has on his record. Although North Carolina State has lost most of its matches this year Mickey Solomon has won most of his, and the State star will bear watching as the tourney progresses. Of Wake Forest and South Carolina not much can be said since these two have been the doormats of the conference. Their top players must definitely be classified as dark horses.

In the doubles look for Carolina's Bortner and Bank to draw number one seeding. Close behind these two come Duke's Romhilt and Katz, Maryland's Yang and Bucks, and Clemson's Summer and Nasim.

Kenfield Award Established

In addition to a singles and doubles champion there will be a team champion for the tournament. This championship will be determined by a point score system based on one point for each singles or doubles victory a team wins. To the team with the most points at the end of the tourney will go the John F. Kenfield Memorial Award. This award was set up by the ACC tennis coaches in memory of the man who brought tennis at Carolina into the national spotlight. Kenfield was the Tar Heel coach for over twenty-five years and put such names as Bitsy Grant and Vic Sexias on the Carolina courts.

The admission price of the tournament is 50 cents per day. This charge will be standard for everyone and will be the same all three days.

Carolina Takes Rollins By 5-3

Carolina's varsity tennis team closed out its regular season yesterday by defeating Rollins 5-3 despite the fine mist which fell all afternoon and threatened to halt the contest at any time.

Yesterday's victory gives the Tar Heels a 10-2 overall season mark and greatly improves the 8-9 record established by last year's squad. Under coach Vladimir Cernik the Carolina team won the Atlantic Coast Conference team championship while losing only to Harvard and Yale.

The Tar Heels took four singles matches and one doubles match to assure themselves of victory.

THE SUMMARY

Singles: Ochoa (R) defeated Bortner 6-1, 12-10. Bank (C) defeated Henrickson 6-1, 6-1. Hutchinson (R) defeated Black 6-1, 6-1. Clark (C) defeated Dominguez 6-2, 4-6, 8-6. Keys (C) defeated Ludetkin 6-4, 6-3. Makepeace (C) defeated Mandel 6-3, 6-1.

Doubles: Ochoa-Henrickson (R) defeated Bortner-Bank 1-6, 6-1, 6-3. Clark-Makepeace (C) defeated Ludetkin-Mandel 6-4, 6-1. Black-Happer (C) and Hewitsen-Dominguez (R) called after two sets.

Golfers Tackle Clemson Today

The Carolina golfers will have a chance to warm-up on the Old Town Country Club golf course when they play the Clemson Tigers in a make up match this afternoon at Winston-Salem.

The match will give the Heels a chance to go over the same course that they will play in the ACC tournament which starts tomorrow.

So far this season, Carolina has compiled a 6-2 record with conference wins over Virginia and S. Carolina, and losses to Wake Forest and Maryland. The Tar Heels' matches with Duke and State were cancelled because of rain.

High Battle Expected For ACC Golf Title

open fight for both team and individual honors is expected in the fifth annual Atlantic Coast Conference golf tournament which opens on the Old Town Club links here Friday morning.

According to Chuck Erickson of Carolina, chairman of the ACC golf committee, this year's field shapes up as one of the toughest in the history of the event.

"In past years there has been at least one team which stood out over the field," Erickson said, "but that isn't the case this time. I would say there are six or seven schools capable of pocketing the team honors."

Erickson also predicted that the fight for the individual title would involve a dozen or so players.

Duke's Blue Devils, who haven't won the team championship since 1954, will bring a 13-1 dual match record into the event while Carolina with a 6-2 mark, Virginia with a 10-3 record, and Maryland are all highly rated. Clemson also rates consideration since it has defeated Virginia and Wake Forest in dual meets.

Wake Forest's defending champions have only a 7-5 record for the season, but will have the advantage of playing on its home course. The Demon Deacons have lost only once in six matches at home this year and that was an 18-9 setback at the hands of Duke.

Tommy Helms of Wake Forest and Tom Langley of Carolina are the two leading finishers from last year returning for a crack at the individual crown this tme. They finished in a tie for fourth place in the 1957 event with 145s.

Tar Heels Face Duke Here Today In First 'Must' Game

By RUSTY HAMMOND

After being rained out yesterday, today the Tar Heels of Carolina and the Blue Devils of Duke meet head-on in Emerson Stadium at 2:45.

The game is one of four "must" games for Carolina, who will probably need to win their last four games to stay in contention for the ACC pennant. The Tar Heels are now in second place and trail pace-setting Clemson by 1 full game. The Tigers are 10-2 and the Heels are 8-2.

Devils Hold 3rd

Duke is virtually out of the race with a mediocre 6-4 record good for third place in the standings. Clemson beat Duke once last week and one game was rained out. The game will be replayed in the event it counts in the final standings. It is up to Carolina to make it count.

Carolina took 2 out of three starts last week, beating Virginia and Maryland and losing to upstart Wake Forest in a night game. The Deacs are here for the last game of the season, and it could very well be the big one. The Tar Heels also must journey to Maryland and Virginia to complete the schedule.

Young Starting Hurler

The probable starter on the mound for the Heels today is soph Wayne Young on the strength of his earlier victory over the Devils. Young beat Duke 8-2 last time out, striking out 15.

Latest figures released, through the last game, show Gerald Griffin leading Tar Heel batsman with a .345 average, with Carson Oldham second at .333. These are the only two Tar Heels hitting above the .300 mark, but Al Pons is close at .296 and is second high in the league in runs batted in with 21.

Three Carolina pitchers, all reliefers have perfect slates for the season. Dave Floyd and Johnny Johnson each are 2-0, while Doug Stimson is 1-0. Of the regulars, Ben Harding is 5-1 with 31 strikeouts and Wayne Young is 5-2 and has fanned 60.

In today's game, the Tar Heels will be gunning for their 10th victory in 11 starts, and their 9th win at home. A win would boost their conference mark to 9-2. Clemson plays her last game of the season tomorrow with South Carolina.

STATISTICS

These statistics run through Carolina's last game, against Virginia. Not included are earned run averages, worth mentioning because Wayne Young's reads 0.57, 1 point under the conference record. Another thing not included is Gerald Griffin's 5 stolen bases.

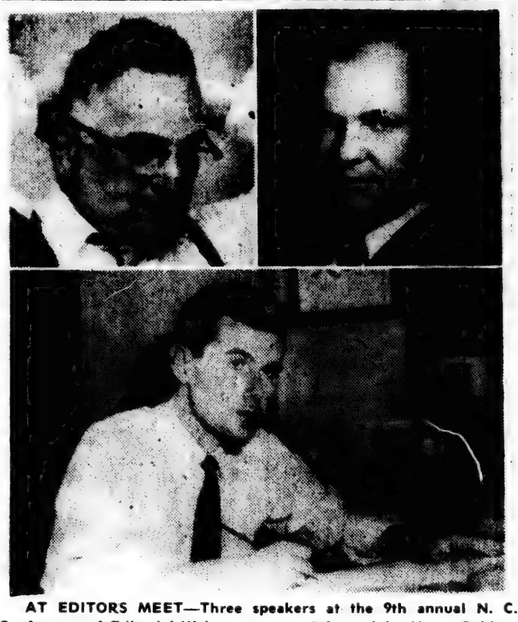
Lower Quad Advisers Plan Gets OK By IDC

The Interdormitory Council Wednesday night endorsed the dormitory advisor plan proposed by Dean of Student Affairs Fred Weaver The plan provides for paid graduate advisors on each floor of the five dormitories in the lower quad. They will serve in an advisory capacity to freshman and shopomore students in these dorms if the plan is adopted.

Rudy Edwards, president of the IDC, said that "The IDC decided to endorse Dean Weaver's plan because we feel that it is a step in the right direction to provide adequate counseling that has not previously been offered."

"Since there is no discrimination about where students can live, we think that the plan will be fair to all students," he declared. Edwards emphasized that the fact that students, regardless of class, will be allowed to reside where they wish, strongly influence the IDC in its decision.



The appointment of several committee chairmen was announced Wednesday night. New chairmen are Phil Edwards, social; Doug Bayliff, rules; Paul Woodard, blazer sales; Wade Markman, vending machines; Mike Childs, publicity; Jerry Chichester, dorm improvements and Tom Cordell, intramurals.

Two new members of the IDC Court were elected. Tom Mehl of Everett Dorm and Phil Edwards of Winston will serve on the court.

Bob Smith of Winston Dorm was appointed to the Foreign Exchange Student Committee as the IDC representative on the committee.

Doug Bayliff was appointed chairman of a special elections committee to help integrate the new dormitories into student government next fall.

It was announced that there will be an open meeting of the IDC Court revisions commitee in the Woodhouse Room at Graham Memorail on Tuesday, May 13. Otto Funderburk is chairman of the committee.

FIGHT FOR FACULTY — PART III

Research Plays Role In Instructor's Choice

By PRINGLE PIPKIN

Salary is not everything. Opportunities for research are often one of the biggest factors influencing a man in his choice of institutions.

"Young people like to be in a university where research of national importance is underway," Dean H. A. Perry explained.

One staff member of the School of Business Administration was being offered by another university an increase of approximately $1,000.

"The thing which was really making him give the offer his serious consideration was not the difference in salary but the fact that they were promising him a half teaching load so that he might have time and freedom to engage in productive research," Dean Maurice Lee said at a luncheon.

The teaching load of a professor at UNC ranges from nine to twelve hours. This amount is regarded as being higher than that of some of the better universities.

The English Department recently lost a staff member because another university offered him more time for research.

Time is not the only factor reg-

Alumni Drive For Members Proceeds Here

Alumni Secretary J. Maryon (Spike) Saunders yesterday invited all 1958 degree candidates to join the General Alumni Assocation at the special on-campus rate of $1. Regular dues are $5.

On Wednesday it had been announced that all seniors would be solicited for membership in the Association at the reduced rate of $1 by a campuswide committee of seniors, appointed by Class President George Ragsdale.

In extending an invitation to membership in the University's alumni association Mr. Saunders added, "May I take this opportunity to welcome new strength to the roster of UNC alumni. The enrollment in the Assocation of new members who are now completing their campus careers is regarded with pleasant anticipation by 'old students'."

The General Alumni Association engages in a program of support for the Unviersity in various ways. It sponsors general meetings of alumni in many parts of the world and each year organizes class reunions at commencement.

An Association magazine, The Alumni Review, is mailed 20 times (10 as a football supplement) during the year to some 8,300 dues-paying members throughout the United States and overseas.

MANGUM FOREST ECHOES TO CALL OF THE WILDEST

A room in Mangum dormitory recently sported some incongruous decorations, notably a small oak tree with Christmas lights and ornaments. The walls were festooned with ivy to add to the outdoor atmosphere, and a park bench for young lovers was placed appropriately underneath the oak.

Potted plants filled the corners of the room, while the walls were decorated with mementoes of the Old South. The gentle strains of Louis Prima's "Call of the Wildest" came over the hi-fi set in one corner of the "forest."

Editors Meet Features Haynie And Kilpatrick

The complete program for the 9th annual meeting of the North Carolina Conference of Editorial Writers was announced here today.

Speakers are Murray Kempton, N. Y. Post columnist; James Jackson Kilpatrick, editor of the Richmond News Leader; Hugh Haynie, editorial cartoonist for the Greensboro Daily News, Harry Golden, editor of the Carolina Israelite; General Capus M. Waynick, commander of the N. C. National Guard.

Editorial critiques will be executed by Robert H. Mason of the Norfolk Virginian Pilot and Prof. Kenneth Byerly of the UNC Department of Journalism.

Hal Tribble, associate editor of the Charlotte Observer, is chairman of the conference. Cecil Prince, editor of the Charlotte News, is program chairman.

The program opens Friday evening, May 16 at 8 p.m. at Carroll Hall small auditorium, with a debate entitled "Dixie's Destiny" between Editor Kilpatrick and Editor Golden.

Editorial critiques begin at 9:30 a. m. Saturday, May 17.

The luncheon at the Carolina Inn Ballroom is at 12:30. General Waynick and Haynie will be speakers.

A social hour will be held at 5 p. m. at the Ranch House, with dinner at 6 p. m., also at the Ranch House.

Phi Debating Society Picks John Brooks

John Brooks, junior from Greenville, was acclaimed president of the Philanthrophic Literary Society at the next-to-last meeting of the semester Tuesday. Brooks was unopposed.

Outgoing President Jess Stribling was congratulated by Brooks, who was elected for a semester, and all the outgoing officers were applauded by the society.

Don Jacobs defeated David Matthews in the night's most hotly contested race, that for president pro tem. Jacobs ran on a platform of presenting bills for debate as topics arose instead of a set schedule.

In other voting William Fachert was elected parliamentarian; Don Gray, critic, Bill Jackson, treasurer; and Judy Huntress, clerk.

Form Letter, House Closing Top Business

The Panhellenic Council, meeting Wednesday afternoon, closed all sorority houses to activities during the week preceding exams except for Friday, Saturday, and Sunday.

No activities which can be definded as sorority functions will be held during that time.

A form letter was presented to the Council to be mailed out to the parents of all girls entering school in the fall. The letter, which was prepared by a committee this week, explains to parents the conditions of sorority rush and the limited membership of sororities at UNC. This will be the first time that such a letter has been sent out, and it is hoped that it will serve to clarify rush conditions on campus.

It was announced that the Panhel Workshop for sorority officers will be held on May. 12.

Legislature Puts Dorm Rent Issue Under Study

By DAVE JONES

An emergency committee to place rising dorm rents under study was created by the studeat legislature last night.

In speaking for this bill, the author, Representative Norman Smith (SP) made the following statement:

"The room rent dilemma is a problem of such magnitude that we cannot overemphasize it in our consideration of this bill. Room rents are going up $20 beginning with the fall semester, approximately $15 of which is going into a self-liquidating plan for dormitory construction.

"This increase in itself is serious enough: it will impose hardship on students already in residence here, and it will encourage and perhaps deny an education to many young people throughout the state who have set their sights on the University of North Carolina.

"The most distressing facet of this room rent situation is that more increases are yet to come. It may be compared to an iceburg—one eleventh of which is visible above the surface.

"Construction of B. C and D dormitories and an addition to Spencer Hall has been completed, but already approved are a married couples' housing development, two more new men dorms, an addition to the Nursing School Dorm, and Pharmacy School housing project. Completion of these will mean more room rent soon."

An amendment to the bill to put the legislature on record as being against the principle of "Self Liquidation," was introduced. There was a great deal of debate, after which it was defeated as an amendment unanimously.

Professor Masket, of the UNC Dept. of Physics and advisor to the UNC Amateur Radio Club, spoke on behalf of the proposed appropriation. He gave a list of equipment needed by the club to begin effective operation, and cited examples of the need for that operation. A move to table the bill until next fall was defeated, and the appropriation set at $2,000 and passed.

War Centennial Group Invites James Patton

James W. Patton, professor of history and director of the Southern Historical Collection at UNC, has been invited to become a member of the Advisory Council of the Civil War Centennial Commission.

The invitation was extended to Dr. Patton and to other notable authorities on Southern history by General U. S. Grant, III, chairman of the Commission, which was established by a special Act of Congress on September 7, 1957.

The function of the Advisory Committee, which will be composed of outstanding historians and authors in the field of Southern history, will be to suggest and guide appropriate commemorative events and projects. Plans are already well under way for the nationwide commemoration of the great conflict between the North and South.

The years 1961-1965 have been set aside by Congressional Legislation as a time during which many special events will take place throughout the country, celebrating the war which established the fact that the United States would remain permanently one nation.

Some of the projects which the Civil War Centennial Commission experts to undertake are the establishment and maintenance of national Civil War military and battle field parks; the microfiling of Civil War Records now in the National Archieves in order to make these records easily available to libraries throughout the world; to encourage persons who have in their private possession family records and other Civil War items if historical value, to deposit such records, letters maps and pictures in historical depositories which will then make these materials available to teachers, authors, and all persons interested in the Civil War.

Other projects of the commission are the design of a mobile museum which will tour the country during the centennial years; and numerous other projects which will involve the work of local groups cooperating with the national Civil War Centennial Commission to make the memorial years of 1961-1965 an honorable commemoration of the supreme experience in our history as a nation.

Recital Here Will Feature Eddie Bass

Eddie Bass, UNC music major from Farmville, will present a trumpet recital in Hill Hall, today at 8 p.m.

Mr. Bass' Senior Recital will be accompanied by Hunter Tillman, a senior organ major at the University.

Bass is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, the Order of the Grail, and the Golden Fleece. He has been president of the UNC Band and Phi Mu Alpha music fraternity. He plays solo cornet in the band and first trumpet with the UNC Symphony.

Among his compositions are a prelude for brass choir and a suite for brass and percussion. Bass is a student of Calvin Huber, graduate asistant in the Music Dept.

The recital will open with Haydn's "Concerto for Trumpet," van Hoboken VIIe. No. 1. "A Pastorale" by Francis Baines will follow the Haydn Concerto. After intermission Mr. Bass will play Kent Kennan's "Sonata for Trumpet and Piano," a twentieth century composition in rather dissonant style.

The program will be concluded with two pieces by Purcell, "Voluntary in D Major" and "Voluntary in C Major," which will be accompanied on the organ.

The concert is Number 20 in the current series sponsored by the Dept. of Music and is open to the public at no charge.

Virus Causes Cancellation Of Kelly Talk

Walt Kelly's scheduled appearance in Chapel Hill at Memorial Hall Thursday night was cancelled at the last minute due to a virus infection contracted in Kansas City. The talk was to have dealt with "Pogo's" interpretation of the "G. O. Fizzicle" year.

Jim Holmes, chariman of the Carolina Forum, under whose auspices Kelly was to have appeared, made the announcement when it was learned that the cartoonist's doctor ordered him to bed for a week.

Tentative arrangements have been made for Kelly to come to Chapel Hill next fall, although the date has not been set. The tappearance at UNC was to have been the Kelly's last on current tour.

Yates And Raney Will Head ATO Next Year

Tucker Yates, a senior from Asheboro, has been elected president of Alpha Tau Omega Service fraternity for the coming year. Tom Kenan, a rising senior from Durham, will be vice president.

Bev Raney was elected secretary and Malcolm McLean was elected treasurer.

UGLY MAN

Stan Leggett was proclaimed the Ugly Man of the UNC senior class at the Senior Picnic held yesterday.

Leggett won a race against nine other contestants, by a money vote held last week at the YMCA.

Dot Pressly and Sonny Evans were elected Miss Alumna and Mr. Alumni respectively, in balloting held Tuesday in Memorial Hall.

The election climaxed a senior day postponed once due to rain.

THE COMEDY OF ERRORS—Megan Stuart, Amanda Meiggs and Carolyn Myers (top to bottom) will appear in the Carolina Playmakers' final production for this year, Shakespeare's "The Comedy of Errors," when it opens tonight at 8:30 in the Forest Theatre. Also in the cast are Jack Jackson, Carl Hinrichs, Taylor Williams, John Whitty, John Snoden, Darwin Solomon, Doris Berry, Margaret Starnes, Betty Rhodes, Judd Bender, Chuck Tomlinson, Bill Hannah, Harvey Knox, Jim Tyndall, George Manassee and Lore Schuller. Tickets for the production are available at the box office of the Forest Theatre. Admission is $1.50 or by season book. There are no reserved seats.

Dorm Rent Draws Fire From Solon

By ED ROWLAND and DAVIS YOUNG

"We've traditionally had low rent here at Carolina. We have usually been equal or slightly below most Southern schools in that respects." These were the words of Norman Smith, a member of the Student Legislature, as he talked Tuesday about bill being voted upon tonight.

Legislator Smith proposes to have President of the Student Body Don Furtado set up an emergency committee to investigate the rapid rise in room rent proposed for next year.

When queried as to what the students could do to change the present self-liquidation plan. Smith stated, "The best way to work is to have responsible students personally appeal to their representatives in the State General Assembly.

"When they become aware of the unjustified position we are in, they will have to take notice. We must also work through the Consolidated University Council and with Student Government at Western Carolina College, Appalachian State Teachers College and East Carolina College."

Smith went on to explain that the reason that he had not included State College in Raleigh and Women's College in Greensboro on his list was because as far as he knew, they were not facing the same situation. W. C., for example, has two vacant dorms this year according to Smith and is not faced with the problem of having to finance new dorms through a self-liquidation program.

Comment was also heard from the administration in South Building. Dean Fred Weaver had this to say: "It is the policy of the state of North Carolina and many other states to require that all residence halls be built on a self-liquidation basis.

"It costs approximately $15 per dorm resident to finance a loan of 1 will be use for future generations million dollars over a 40 year period. Some of this will have to go though, to pay for maintenance and and increased staff."

In a letter from Weaver to Chancellor William B. Aycock, it was made public that there is some possibility that 14,759 students will be enrolled at Carolina by 1970. This is in comparsion with the almost 7,500 currently studying here.

Weaver went on to cemment, "We do not consider that a self-liquidating plan for financing residence halls is satisfactory because it makes it necessary for the students to pay for the buildings which will be used for future generaions and it works against keeping the cost of education as low as possible, which should be the objective of a state university.

"We should be relieved of this burden by the State paying for the buildings or by the State taking over the cost of maintenance and operation in residence halls. The latter is preferable."

It is understood that the new dorms—Teague, C and D—have been paid for by previous hikes in rent. The new raise will cover the cost of two dorms for men, a division for Health Affairs and one half of a new wing in the Nurses's Dorms.

The other half of the nurse's addition will be covered under the provisions of the Hill-Burton Act, which provides a matching agreement between the federal government and universities in covering the cost of medical residence of the

Last night at a meeting of the Student Legislature, the Smith proposal was to be voted upon. (Tomorrow in the wind-up of this two part series. Chancellor Aycock and University Business Manager, J. A. Branch will have statements appearing.)

GM SLATE

The following activity has been scheduled for today at Graham Memorial:

Fencing, 6:30-11 p.m., Roland Parker I and II.

Pine Room Dance

The Three Deuces, a Raleigh combo, will play for a dance at the Pine Room Saturday from 8-12 p.m.

Graham Memorial Activities Board will sponsor the dance.

IN THE INFIRMARY

Students in the infirmary yesterday included:

Misses Margaret Wicker and Sue Harper Stanford and William Grady Cunningham, Harry Gordon Doran, Robert Furtado, William Gerraw Christian, Walter Monroe Keck, Joe Wingo Dillard and Theodore Julius Edlich III.

Parking Problem

It is a curious fact that the Board of Aldermen in Chapel Hill always picks the most convenient time to discuss problems that they are aware will bring a negative reaction on behalf of the student body.

It is always the case that right before the summer recess, the aldermen bring up these proposals, elicit the negative student reaction, and wait until the majority of students have left to finally pass on these measures. Hence, the student body is almost powerless to stop the proposal, and finds themselves in September with the fruits of the aldermen's labors already in fact.

The case is the same with the new proposal to meter Columbia and Franklin Streets. Unless the administration and the town merchants join wholeheartedly in opposing the meters, the students are left powerless, and next fall will find meters already constructed in areas which are to a large measure populated by University students, and who pay a large amount of money to the town in the form of taxes.

The net result of this is that, the administration of the University, the merchants, who derive a majority of their livelihood from students, and the students must unite and actively oppose the measure before the aldermen.

There is not a student who would quibble to any great degree with the placing of meters between the Post Office and the Carolina Theater; however, there are a great number who would have something to say about the metering of Columbia St. and then 200-300 blocks of Franklin St. in which there are only fraternity, sorority, and University buildings.

These students are being deprived of parking space in order to alleviate a problem which does not exist. In the name of easing a parking problem, the aldermen are creating an even greater problem, by depriving the students and the town of some 100 parking spaces.

Moreover, from a revenue point of view the town does not stand particularly to gain, but the students stand to lose.

It is further true that the merchants have something to complain about the metering of Franklin St. as well as the other areas, for it may well be true that metering will cut down on the trade channeled into Chapel Hill.

In the end no one gains, and the parking problem is more severe than it is presently.

Furthermore, it is not the University's place to take up the slack of parking spaces taken away by the aldermen, in building parking lots. It is the place of the aldermen to have parking lots already constructed before any such proposal such as the present one is consumated.

The aldermen have not done this, and are going on the bland assumption that the University will take up the slack and that the students can go to hell.

There are certain towns that can benefit by parallel parking, however, Chapel Hill is not such a town. It is too small, too compact, to make parallel parking worthwhile.

It behooves the alderman to reconsider their proposal, to consult the students, to consult the administration, to consult the merchants, to consult the facts, and to provide for adequate space elsewhere before they take this step which is of necessity ill-advised.

Maybe for once the town will give the students the benefit of the doubt. It is to be doubted, however.

Education In Focus

Arnold Nash

(This is the third in a series of articles by faculty members of the University on the present problem of education in the United States.

Dr. Arnold Nash is a professor in the UNC department of religion, and has recently returned from a tour of England. Dr. Nash here presents a comparative study of British and American concepts of higher education.

The series was compiled by editorial asistant Ed Rowland, and will be completed tomorrow by Dr. Everett Hall, chairman of the UNC department of philosophy)

The editorial invitation to contribute an article in which the two major university systems in the English speaking world are contrasted ,presents the present writer immediately with a task of considerable difficulty. The first is that the British system today is not what it was during the period before WorldWar II when I studied and worked in Liverpool, Oxford, and London. Britain, like its Empire, has passed through revolutionary changes, and although it has been my privilege to visit the British scene on six occasions since the end of World War II, I am still baffled in my attempt to understand at all adequately what has happened to the social system as a whole. Professors as a class are notoriously slow learners once they reach such a stage in the academic wheel of life. Even those who are living and working in the system find grave difficulty in interpreting such a rapid kaleidoscopic scene under the impact of two particular demands: the first is for more scientists and engineers, and the second for a more adequate program of what in America we call "general education." However, an American background helps us to interpret the present university scene in Britian in the sense that it is not too much to say that the British system of the future will be the result of the impact of the same kind of forces which have molded American universities, in a society virtually untroubled by feudalism, upon the British university system, based upon the remnants of a feudal social order.

Let me, therefore, begin by describing the essential ideas behind the British understanding of a university education, for, whatever might be the impact of the demand for technicians or of the egalitarian ideas of the welfare state, there seems to be a profound agreement that the traditional values of the British system must be conserved.

Initially one point must be made very clear. It is that the British university system, as it developed in the heyday of the free enterprise system during the nineteeth and early twentieth century, absorbed and passionately so (in so far as universities can be passionate) a profound concern about freedom. This attitude is difficult for the American to understand, for it produces in Britain's social life as a whole some bewildering ideas. For example, to my father, who was a Liberal of the "Gladstone" school, the American Republican Party, with its trust in tariffs, was "as bad as the Bolsheviks." In effect we can say that the Britisher traditionally believes far more in freedom then he does in equality; whereas in America we believe in equality (even if it means conformity) far more than in freedom. That is the only possible explanation of the fact that it would be just as ridiculous in a British university scene to expel a Communist just because he is a Communist as it would be in an American university to appoint a Communist to a position on its faculty just because he is a Communist. This—to American eyes—strange view of the matter is not because the British are unfamiliar with Communism. Karl Marx wrote his most famous book, Das Kapital, in the British Museum (whilst, incidentally, earning his living as a newspaper correspondent for an American daily, which was finally absorbed by what is now the New York Herald Tribune). To come nearer to our own day to find an illustration of my contention that the British mind does not misunderstand Communism, it was a British statesman, Winston Churchill, who shocked American public opinion a year or so after World War II by suggesting openly in his famous Westminister College speech that the Soviet Union was not as "peace-loving" as we had hopefully believed.

To return to my main argument: this British attitude towards life reflects itself in university education in a peculiar kind of individualism which encourages wide non-conformity so long as certain basic dogmas are never questioned. The most important of these is that the universities exist for an aristocracy of birth or intellect. This dogma operates within an educational scheme that takes education far more seriously than we do in the U. S.A. The typical British child goes to what we call grade school when he is five years old. Some, I was one of them, are sent to school when only four and begin to learn to read at that age. The school day, moreover, is slightly longer than it is in the United States, and the vacations are much shorter. If a child shows any promise, then he is treated as a privileged person to the point where as far back as 1922 a child's parents will receive a maintenance allowance during what we would call the last two years of high school. Moreover, the high school in the American scene is only just beginning to have its equivalent in the British scene since, up to a decade ago, the over-whelming majority of the boys and girls who entered a university had attended institutions which are geared entirely to preparation for the university. (Incidentally it is this theory which is being challenged by the British Labour Party, who are Socialists. They, oddly enough, seek to prove their case by pointing out the virtues of the typical American high school which is, of course, geared to a universal system of secondary education, and in the context of which future doctors, scientists, lawyers, and civil servants are only a minority.) This means that by the time the British student gets to the university he has completed not only the first two years of university work, but, so the British argue, all his "general education". From the time that he enters the university he will specialize in what we call his "major" and the necessary related fields untroubled, as is the typical upper classman at U.N.C., by the distractions of scattered electives at the sophomore level. To give a personal illustration: In my junior year I did nothing but physics and chemistry; in my senior year I did nothing but chemistry; whilst, in what the British call my "honours" year (the equivalent in the U.S.A. to the "Masters" program) I did nothing but physical chemistry. This was not, and is not, exceptional. The daughter of a friend of mine now on the faculty in Oxford began her career a few months ago, and she will do nothing but zoology!

The intensity of this system is perhaps even more vividly illustrated by the fact that there is nothing corresponding to grades and credits. Everything depends upon a final comphehensive examination or examinations. Oxford and Sheffield, for example, each have the important exams at the end of the first year and at the end of the third year; whereas Cambridge and Liverpool, on the other hand, hold them at the end of the second year and at the end of the third year. The result of this fierce competition is that a student receives a class, e. g. first class honours, second class honours, etc., and although I would not go so far as to say that first class honours B. A. or B.Sc. is equivalent to many Ph.D. degrees given by many reputable American universities a contention which was put forward a few years ago by a UNC professor who had been lecturing in England nevertheless, it does explain why a Ph.D. degree in Britain has so little prestige. It is not necessary! For example, the overwhelming majority of the professors at Oxford construe the possession of a Ph.D. degree as an indication of intellectual insecurity or the bad influence of Germany! Some years ago an Oxford professor at Chapel Hill was asked why he had never taken a Ph.D. degree, and he shocked his hearers by remarking that he had had no need to do so since he had taken a "first" at Oxford; the implication being that a Ph.D. degree, after that, was gilding the lily. The odd thing, of course, was that he was quite correct. That is why British professors of the calibre of H. J. Laski or Arnold Toynbee or R. H. Tawney never went beyond the Oxford degree of M.A. so far as any earned degree is concerned.

The big weakness in the system is that although it works very well with a boy who comes from a well-educated and leisured social background where he can receive his "general education" by casual contacts, wide reading, conversation with his parents and their friends, it is a calamitous system for the boy who either through inclination or home circumstance is not interested in anything outside his own special field. It means that natural scientists can be, and often are, completely ignorant of what we call the social sciences, whilst a classicist may not have taken any "science" whatever, whether in school or college. It is at this point that there is the most stirring of minds upon the British scene. Many prominent British educators, such as Professor R. H. Oliver of the University of Manchester, are urging pointedly that more provisions must be made for the British student for his education outside his special subject, and they point out quite correctly that American universities have seen this problem even if they have not solved it. Of course they are right. A student at U.N.C. has, in theory, a much better opportunity to receive a good general education here than he would in Oxford, for at Chapel Hill a student in one division must take a certain minimum of courses outside that division. But there are those who argue that it profits little to have such a system when - as last year - one student graduated having taken courses in 21 departments. What he had received was not a liberal education. It may have been broad, but it was broad to the point of being so shallow that it was worthless. We can admit, therefore, although American university education tends to make general education so shallow that it leaks, the British system makes the student dig so deep that he often chokes himself on the sand of his own intellectual excavations. Ideally the university of the future would embody the strong points of the two systems, British and American.

Postscript

Jonathan Yardley

The town of Chapel Hill seems about to adopt a resolution which would put parking meters along Franklin Street. Many cities and towns of America have adopted these machines, and it was of course only a matter of time until they should invade this town. There are reasons both pro and con on this resolution. Before the student body gets too riled up about it, it would be a very good idea for all of us to try to examine the facts.

Parking meters serve a number of purposes for the town. They are a moderately good means of getting a small amount of additional revenue—revenue which could be used for the repairing of streets or building of street facilities such as lights and signs. They are more effective as a means of limiting the time allowed each driver for parking, thus enabling more people to use the very limited facilities, and are of great aid to the police in enforcing whatever time limits they adopt.

They are also very inconvenient. The motorist who wants to stop for five minutes but only has a nickel is put to unnecessary expenditure for a service which ideally should be provided free. They are of considerably more trouble to the motorist who wishes to see a movie . . . but perhaps the theatre owners could run intermissions for the clients who have to dash into the street to put those additional pennies into the slot.

The student body is up in arms for a number of reasons, one being the pure fact that they do not wish to go to this extra expenditure and trouble, but the most important one being that they have not been consulted in the problem.

It is being merely obstinate and blind for the Aldermen of Chapel Hill to try to escape the fact that they are running a college town. This can be borne out in many ways. Perhaps the suggestion that all students cashing checks request two dollar bills, thus causing an influx of two dollar bills which would give the local merchants a better idea of the importance of student business, would show them the light.

The Aldermen meet on the twelfth to decide upon the problem. They still have a few days in which to change their mind. Whether or not they do should be influenced by good sense only, and this cannot be attained without consultation with the University and Student Government officials.

Many students, and many citizens of Chapel Hill, fail to recognize the greatest problem faced by a college town: there are two elements, and neither can exist beneficially without the other. The merchants must be prepared to understand the demands of the students, but so must the students understand the situation of the merchants. At the present moment the student body is being very trying and the town can only combat this by being trying itself.

The Merchant's Association has a very nice parking lot behind Sloan's Drug Store which is not used by very many people. This is partly due to the fact it is decidedly away from the center of things, but even more to the fact that there is a rather large fee for parking. If the Merchant's Association would get together with the Aldermen, they might discover that making this a free lot would alleviate the situation considerably.

The problem, then, is one which must be attacked by three organizations, and all must work together—the town Aldermen, the Merchant's Association, and the student body of the University. If these three units can work together they can solve the problem, and perhaps without going to the extreme of putting in parking meters.

There is very little sense, however, in one element becoming antagonistic to the other two. If, for instance, the student body decided to take the President's suggestion and boycott local merchants, hard feelings would be cultivated which would be slow in the dying. We must be prepared to make concessions, not merely to sit back on our thrones of supposed supremacy and demand that the others do the bowing. We are important, but, as we will discover later on in life, there are plenty of people who can live without us.

Graduation Talk

Editor:

So you have heard the jokes, the flatterings, the good wishes of the coming years. I will not joke, nor flatter, nor congratulate. I ask you now to imagine with me a person who would be considered among you as unusual. Somehow he received the information that this university, like our youth and our nation, had deteriorated into a sickening negativism, indifference, a mildness which softens the mind and soul into an object of disgust. He saw a university which used about 20% of the capacities of those that came here, inspired 30% to shallowness and superficiality, and infused into the rest of their capacity a laziness, fostered by a cult of sentimental materialism. This he saw, and in his disgust conceived of the idea of obliterating scholastic records with a minimum effort and an average amount of brain. And his sole purpose was to create a farce out of the whole place in such a way that his record could be construed as no compliment to himself, but an insult to the university. To insult it in such a way that others might realize too its farcical nature.

And if some people would say to him that the conception of such a plan was ridiculous, he would answer that these were the ones who little understood nor cared that this nation's youth was being soured, stiffled, and driven to the ranks of the mediocre. And if someone said that in exclaiming such a plan he was merely flattering his own modesty, he would say that his attitude from the beginning was neither humble nor modest. And if some said he was too arrogant, too harsh, too bitter, he would answer that one rarely smiles at a jelly fish that paralyzes and consumes its prey. And if someone said he exaggerated, he would say that the needles of exaggeration was one way to stir people into activity.

Such an individual would hope to stand before you now. The majority of you he would recognize by sloth, apathy, indifference. And though the university was not free from blame, you too are partly at fault. For you came here to get a degree which, unfortunately, took a period of four years. This degree you desired for the sole purpose of maintaining material interest dominated not by reason but by animalism. Any of the small effort you had to make to get that paper diploma, you considered as a gross and useless obstacle, contrary to the pleasures your fat soul was indulging in at the time. Anyone who showed signs of sincere effort for self-improvement you considered abnormal, and wanted no part of him in your circle of mental inactivity. In short, you have no true conception at all of happiness and what it entails, nor of freedom and what it requires. But he would say there were a few among you who, even in such an environment, had carried out their desire to learn, improve, and act. And he could see some among you who began with such a desire, made the attempt, but succumbed to the conditions that glorified stagnation of human reason.

And to the few he would urge them to carry on their efforts to think, to be concerned, to improve and harden it so it cannot be softened and liquified by the opinion of the mass. And to the lazy who make the ridiculous rationalization that they are inherently lazy and have no aptitude for reflection he would offer these comments:

"You want to be lazy, sluggish. You think you have a right to be inactive and indifferent. Look at the world today, and you will see that the enemies of this land, if they succeed, will destroy that right. Stand up, then be active, if for no other reason than to defend your right to be indolent. Otherwise your bones will have an especial glitter atop the ruins of this nation."

CRISIS IN THE UNIVERSITY

A recent check of the growth over the past five years of the English Department has brought to light a disturbing statistic: in that period, the enrollment of majors in that department has jumped from one hundred and forty-seven to three hundred and forty-eight. The current figure is about 2.3 times what it was five years ago.

This considerable growth is not peculiar to the English Department. In fact, the same five year period shows a relatively insignificant five per cent increase in the ratio of English majors to total students. The simple fact is that the university is growing, and growing faster than many people seem to realize.

The rapid growth of the university is not the major point either. The real crisis is forcefully illustrated by the fact that the English Department, during the period of this tremendous burgeoning, added no new facilities, had no increase in faculty, and instituted no radical change in programming.

It should be emphasized that this situation is not limited to the English Department. Without any investigation, it can be safely assumed that the same problem is manifesting itself in various degrees in every department of the University, and in every department of every university. The local English Department is used here mainly as a convenient example of the general situation, but also because such a situation in the field of literature can be more of a problem than it is in, say, some of the sciences.

One of the most harmful effects of the situation in terms of the English Department, is that many of its courses, if not most of them, are seriously devalued. The present size of the classes, and the indiscriminate mixing of able and not-so-able students has forced the class periods to be devoted to lecturing: and most of the lecture material is available to any interested student in the library. Particularly in English, classroom periods are of minimum value if all they do is spoon feed the student, or artificially force him to absorb material which is neither prepared nor willing to learn.

The moral: Let's have a little more segregation around here!

Auto Accident Involves UNC Student Here

University student Roland A. Lowder, 19, was involved in an auto accident early Tuesday night on South Columbia Street.

Lowder's car struck the back of a car driven by Nathaniel Eubanks, Chapel Hill. Damage was estimated at $300 for Lowder's car and $100 for Eubank's car.

Chapel Hill Police said the accident was largely due to the bad weather and that no charges would be pressed.

Graduate Club

The Graduate Club will hold its final meeting of the year Monday, May, 12 at 6 p. m., in the upstairs dining room of Lenoir Hall.

Dr. David Duncan, research associate in the Department of Biostatistics, will speak on "The Role of Statistics in Scientific Research."

This will be an elementary introduction into what modern statistical thinking is and how it operates.

Delta Sigma Pi Elects White To Top Post

Norm White has been elected headmaster of the Alpha Lambda chapter of the international business fraternity, Delta Sigma Pi.

Other new officers are Tony Norungolo, first vicepresident; Ted Bolick, second vicepresident; Charlie Sowers, treasurer; David Veasey, secretary; Charlie Helms, chancellor and Al Brooks, historian.

UNC SOCIAL STUFF

JOAN BROCK, Coed Editor

Kappa

This weekend is Kappa Pledge Weekend! A series of parties and outings will celebrate the initiation of 25 UNC coeds into the Epsilon Gamma chapter of Kappa Kappa Gamma. These 25 coeds are the colonizing members of the national sorority on the UNC campus.

A formal dance at the Washington Duke Hotel in Durham will begin the Kappa festivities. Each pledge will be presented in a figure during the evening and Les Sutorius' band from Chapel Hill will provide appropriate music for the formal affair.

Special guests for the occasion will be the Delta Beta chapter of Kappa Gamma from Duke.

Sunday, the Kappas and their dates will leave Chapel Hill and travel to Buggs Island for an all day outing. Swimming, water skiing, and picnicing will be the main features of the day. Good luck on the weather, girls!

KAs

This weekend will serve as a type of orientation period for a number of next year's freshmen boys when they attend a rush party and spend several days with the KAs. The Kappa Alphas have invited a group of boys up for the weekend to introduce them to the "Carolina way of life" and the Kappa Alpha fraternity. The boys will be entertained at a dinner Saturday evening, followed by a combo party.

Sunday, the KAs will again play host at a luncheon. They are then planning to show the new boys around the campus and indoctrinate them with the true Carolina spirit in the hopes that they will be loyal Tar Heels (and possibly KAs too) next year.

Phi Gamma Delta

The Davidson chapter of Phi Gamma Delta has invited the local chapter down to attend its annual Fiji Island Weekend. The UNC Phi Gams will don their sarongs and head for Davidson sometime Saturday.

The weekend will feature a South Sea Island party—complete with sarongs and tropical flowers. A number of the local Phi Gams are planning to attend the tropical affair.

Phi Kaps

Last weekend the Phi Kaps threw a final blast before exams and headed for the beach. Approximately 46 brothers and their dates left UNC Friday afternoon for Crescent Beach where they spent several days sunning, dancing, and just plain partying. Fortunately, there was no rain and the group took advantage of the sun. Four chaperones accompanied the boys and their dates.

Spring

Some of the biggest social events held last weekend were the bridge games held at Cobb Beach, UNC, in the afternoons. A number of Carolina "Gentlemen" were seen sprawled on the front lawn of Cobb Dorm, displaying their manly physiques and baking in the sun. Loud music and cokes were special features of these masculine get-togethers.

Have you noticed the endless variety of knees that have been appearing since the male members of our campus have joined in the bermuda season? Some of the stronger sex look most becoming in their sawed-off pants, but the first thing that strikes the eye is those inevitable KNEES.

There are round knees and square knees—knotty knees and triangular knees—and knees that say one to the other: "If you'll let me by this time, I'll let you by next time."

This is bound to sound like sour grapes—and it is. As long as UNC coeds are forbidden to display their knees, they can feel free to compare and comment on boys' knees. There can be no come back!

It's hard to agree with T. S. Eliot. April is not "the cruellest month . . . stirring dull roots with spring rain." Almost anyone would agree that May, thus far, has been the "cruellest month," since it has rained six out of seven days since the month came in. One gradually grows tired of swimming to class every day—especially when you only know one stroke.

It might also be possible to contradict Hemmingway. Sure, "The Sun Also Rises"—but never in Chapel Hill!

N. C. Delta of Sigma Phi Epsilon will be host chapter to Sig Eps from Duke University, Davidson College and High Point College Saturday for the 10th annual Charlie's Day. Held each spring by the UNC chapter, the occasion is in honor of Dr. Charlie Henderson of the Classics Dept., who was instrumental in getting the local chapter re established after the war.

Saturday's activities will include a softball round-robin tournament and picnic at Hogan's Lake in the afternoon, and a party at the house that night. Davidson is defending champion in the softball tournament, but each of the other chapters this year has designs on the trophy.

Activities Chairmen Gordie Lindsey and Ned Todd said the event, held for all chapters in the Carolinas, promises to be one of the biggest ever.

Luesing Heads List Of New DKE Officers

William H. Luesing Jr., Huntington, W. Va., has been elected president of Delta Kappa Epsilon social fraternity.

Other new officers iclude William L. Palmer, Valdese, vicepresident and Harley F. Shuford Jr., Hickory, secretary.

Sigma Chi Chooses Lacy For Executive

Sonny Lacy, from Winston-Salem, has been elected president of Sigma Chi fraternity.

Other new officers include Wil-Lineweaver, vicepresident; Johnny Lomax, secretary; Bob Knox, treasurer; David Goode, house manager and Buzzy Miller social chairman.

Research

ulating research work. Dr. Berryhill reports that the School of Medicine is in an "unfavorable position" to compete with the other schools because of the crowded facilities for research and teaching.

Shortage

A shortage of equipment and research space puts the geology and geography department at a competitive disadvantage.

There is also the problem of financing research. Special equipment and materials are often necessary. Often a research assistant is needed.

The Institute for Research in Social Science has helped to provide funds and time for men at the university.

During the fiscal year of 1957 this organization spent $328,000. Of this amount only $88,000 came from state funds; a large amount of the state's money was used for administrative purposes.

The other money came from foundation and other private support as well as from contractual or grant arrangements with federal agencies. The Institute functions in the disbursement of this money.

The Institute also helps faculty members to find grants and keeps them informed of the opportunities of new grants to do special projects.

There are 45 senior staff members drawn from a total of 15 different departments. When a man becomes a member of the Institute, the department to which he is attached agrees to lower his teaching load.

The benefits received from the Institute have been a definite factor, according to several departmental heads, in retaining men at UNC.

During the past two years institutes for research in the humanities and in the natural sciences were set up, but they do not yet have the financial support of the IRSS, which was organized in 1924 and is the oldest type of this organization in the nation.

Giving Fund

The Alumni Annual Giving Fund has also come to the aid of faculty research. During the past five years the Alumni have given $55,500 to be disbursed according to the judgment of the University Research Council.

Over 100 members of the faculty in various fields have benefitted from these grants ranging from $100 to $1,000.

Director of Alumni Annual Giving Tom Bost said that many faculty members felt that these grants had been influential in getting the state to give more support to research.

Various departments also handle money directly from the various foundations and governmental agencies. The chemistry department is handling funds upward of $125,000.

The state gives $20,000 directly to be used for research. This money is under the jurisdiction of the Graduate Research Council and can be used for research in any field of study.

The state also supports research indirectly by providing equipment and research space.

It is necessary for a staff member who is giving instruction to graduate students in research to be doing research himself. The products of research are important in establishing both a man's reputation as well as a university's.

Superficial

According to Dean Maurice Lee, "a faculty which is not active on the research front is a superficial faculty prone to the platitudes of the day but not destined to produce much of original thought in the classroom or elsewhere."

In some areas industry is offering more competition for men interested in research. Recently the oil companies have set up laboratories which can offer the advantages of a university.

In physics industry can offer the researcher a work week of 37-40 hours while the same person might have to work a 50-60 hour week at a university.

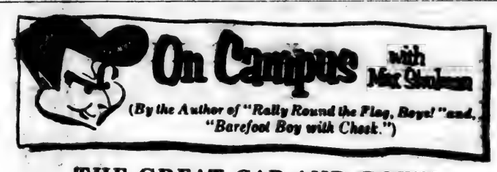
In short, the funds for research and availability of time are two factors which can not be neglected in the consideration of the University's competitive position.

Another factor closely related to research is the chance for publication of the fruits of research after its completion.

The departments in the field of science do not have as great a problem along these lines as do the departments in the field of humanities.

Much of the scientific work can be published in the various national journals. However, work in the humanities often requires the publication of a book.

Two years ago one member of the history department had to put up $1,800 before the publisher would print his manuscript though the book received good reviews after its publication.



Graduation Invitations

Senior graduation invitations are being distributed on the second floor of the YMCA today and Saturday from 9 a.m. to 3 p. m.

Seniors have been urged to pick up their invitations on these three days.

THE GREAT CAP AND GOWN CONTROVERSY

It will soon be cap and gown time again, so let us, without delay, take up the vexing question: which side of the cap should the tassel hang on?

For many years the practice was to hang the tassel over the front of the cap. This practice was abandoned in 1948 when the entire graduating class of Northwestern University, blinded by tassels hanging in their eyes, made a wrong turn during commencement exercises and ended up at the Great Lakes Naval Training Center where, all unwitting, they were inducted into the submarine service for five-year hitches.

Let us take up the Vexing Question:

There is a growing body of opinion which holds that the tassel should be worn on the same side you keep your Marlboro Cigarettes on. Thus a quick glance will show you where your Marlboros are and save much time and fumbling.

This makes a good deal of sense because when one wants a Marlboro, one wants one with a minimum of delay. One does not relish being kept, even for a second, from the heaps of joy, the barrels of pleasure, the seads of content, the loads of glee, the lumps of ecstasy, that one gets from that filter, that flavor, that flip-top box.

There is another group, small but vocal, which insists the tassel should hang over the back of the cap. The tassel, they say, is a symbol like the bullfighter's pigtail, signifying honor and courage.

They are wrong. Bullfighters wear pigtails for only one reason: to keep the backs of their necks warm. Do you have any idea what a draft a bull makes when he rushes past you? A plenty big one, you may be sure.

In fact, upper respiratory infections, contracted in the wake of passing bulls, is the largest single cause of bull-ring fatalities. I have this interesting statistic from the Bullfighters Mutual Insurance Company of Hartford, Connecticut. Incidentally, Hartford, the insurance capital of America, is a delightful city and well worth a visit if you are ever in New England, as northeastern United States is laughingly called. Try to make your visit in spring when the actuaries are in bloom.

But I digress. We were talking about what side to wear the tassel on. An ingenious solution to this problem was proposed not long ago by Humboldt Sigafoos, perhaps better known as "The Quoit King of Delaware." An early forbear of Mr. Sigafoos was granted a monopoly by King George III, on all quoits manufactured in Delaware. Somehow this royal patent was never rescinded and from that day to this, every quoit made in Delaware has been a Sigafoos Quoit.

Well sir, Mr. Sigafoos suggested that the way to solve the great tassel controversy was to starch the tassel so it stood upright and hang on no side of the cap at all. But I'm afraid that sly Mr. Sigafoos was only seeking to broaden his market because after graduation, what can you do with an upright tassel except hurl quoits at it?

The makers of Marlboro have no opinion about what side to hang your tassel on. But with cigarettes, they say firmly: Stay on the light, mild, tasty side . . . with Marlboro, of course!

Carolina Beats Duke 2-1 On Young's Single In Ninth

By RUSTY HAMMOND

Sophomore pitcher Wayne Young won his own ball game here yesterday when he singled across the winning run in the bottom of the ninth inning to give Carolina a 2-1 victory over arch-rival Duke.

The hit, a sharp drive through the infield, scored Harold Workman from second base. Workman was inserted for Vaughn Bryson after Bryson had walked to begin the inning.

The game moved the Tar Heels to within one-half game of pace-setting Clemson who goes against South Carolina today in one of the most important games of the season. Carolina is now 9-2, while Clemson has 10-2.

The loss was a bitter one for the Blue Devils as it gave Carolina a season sweep of the series. Young earlier beat Duke at Durham. The defeat was equally bitter for big Bert Lattimore, Duke fireballer, who allowed only six hits while fanning 10.

Young gave up only three hits over the route and struck out seven. The win gives Young a 6-2 record for the season, including five straight.

Duke started off the limited scoring in the top of the seventh when Lon Bonczec doubled, advanced on a sacrifice, and scored on Butch Allie's single.

Carolina came right back in the home half of the seventh as John Burgwyn walked, went to second on a passed ball, and crossed with the tying run when Lattimore threw wild at first on Young's infield single. Then Young's' blow in the ninth clinched it for the Heels.

The game was Carolina's 10th win in their last 11 starts and their ninth against no losses at home. The Tar Heels have three more conference games left. They are at Virginia Saturday, at Maryland the 12th and Wake Forest is at Chapel Hill the 15th in the final game of the year.

Roberts Gets Pole

DARLINGTON, S. C. (AP) — Veteran Fireball Roberts whipped around the huge Darlington International Raceway oval at an average speed of 116.299 miles per hour Thursday to set a new qualifying record and win the coveted pole position for Saturday's $22,000 Rebel 300 mile Convertible race.

Roberts, driving a Chevrolet, broke the record of 115.317 miles per hour set last year by Paul Goldsmith of St. Claire Shores, Mich.

The veteran Fireball, of Daytona Beach, Fla., set the pace among other qualifiers who blistered the mile and three-eighths paved track at dazzling speeds.

Earlier, Marvin Panch of Charlotte had shattered the previous qualifying mark with a speed of 116.204 m.p.h.

Cotton Owens, favored to win the pole in a 1958 Pontiac, came close to making the experts look good. He broke the lap record of 116.690 m.p.h., and finished the four-lap qualifying heat with an average of 116.040 to win the outside position in the starting row. Panch will be in between Roberts and Owens.

Lee Petty of Randleman, N. C., one of the first to make his qualifying run, had cracked the previous one-lap record and was well on his way to the pole position when he ran out of gas on he last lap. Petty drove a 1957 Olds.

The field will be limited to 36 cars.

With good weather forecast, a crowd of 20,000 is expected.

Golfers Top State And Clemson: ACC Tourney Starts Today

WINSTON-SALEM — The Tar Heel golfers, making up rained-out matches defeated Clemson and State in a three way match at the Old Town Country Club here yesterday.

The Tar Heels downed State 11½-9½ and Clemson 14½-6½. The wins now bring the Tar Heels season record to 8-2. The matches were played at the Old Town Country Club where the ACC tournament will get underway this afternoon.

The conference tournament will decide team and individual champions. Each player will cover 36 holes, 18 today, and the final 18 tomorrow. Carolina's Tommy Langley is considered the ranking player along with Wake Forest's Tommy Helms. Wake Forest is the defending champion.

THE SUMMARIES:

DEFENDS TITLES—Carolina's sterling middle-distance runner Dave Scurlock will start defending his conference titles in the 440 and 880 this afternoon at Duke. Scurlock will be out to qualify in these events for tomorrow's finals.

Conference Track Meet Opens At Duke Today

By DAVE WIBLE

The Fifth Annual ACC Outdoor Track Championships get underway this afternoon at 3 p.m. when the eight conference track squads meet in Duke Stadium to battle for positions to qualify for tomorrow's finals.

Agreement comes from every corner of the conference that this will be the best ACC outdoor meet ever run, with 11 records predicted to be broken and talent running deep all the way up and down the line.

Carolina's track coach Dale Ranson feels that today's performances will be the most important as far as UNC's final outcome is concerned. "It's hard to tell how we will do until after the trials," said Ranson. "The majority of the entries will be eliminated 'sudden like' so our boys will have to be at their peak today if they want to get into the finals."

Maryland Too Strong

Ranson went on to comment on the likely team champion. "I believe that Maryland's overall strength should prevail," he said, "and that no one should challenge them for the top honors, but the fight for the runner up spot will be the one to watch. It will be tough for us to stay with Duke, with South Carolina and Clemson close behind us. Duke is stronger than they were last year with Sime devoting all his time to track now."

Today the Tar Heels will be shooting for the top six positions in the shot, javelin, broad jump, discus, 100, 220, 440, 880, and high and low hurdles. There will be no trials in the pole vault, high jump, mile, 2-mile and mile relay.

The best races are expected in the 440, 880, mile and 2-mile. Any one of the top entries in these events might come out on top. The 440 has a terrific field with four entries running close to the conference mark of 48 seconds. Carolina's Dave Scurlock, last year's champion, of course leads the list, but he will have to push hard to defeat Duke's Tommy Bazemore, South Carolina's Buddy Mayfield and Clemson's John Dunkleberg.

The 880 will again see Scurlock a defending champion threatened by Cary Weisiger of Duke, and his own teammate, Tar Heel captain Everett Whatley.

Although the old Burr Grim Jim Beatty mile duals are past history, tomorrow's mile will probably be one of the finest with five top entries. Carolina's Wayne Bishop along with Duke's Cary Weisiger, Maryland's John Claggett and Clemson's Dale Finsley will be out after South Carolina's great distance man Billy Latham who has not been defeated this year.

The Heart-Rending Tale Of The Ant —

Once upon a time, an ant was stumbling along with his mandibles loaded with books and stuff. Coming around a bend he ran smack into a grasshopper, all hot up and fiddling "Lucky Love" for all he was worth.

"Dullard!" cried the ant, picking up his scattered books," can't you look where I'm goings?

"Hey, Hey!" said the grasshopper, rolling on his back and clapping away with his whole darn set of feet. "Hey hey, to you my industrious friend. A large guffah in fact."

"You may laugh now" snarled the ant, "but you wait. Foresight pays, and tomorrow —"

Unfortunately he never finished his sentence, as just then the farmer started his DDT duster, and the both of them hurried off to what we trust was a Better Place.

THE MORAL — We're sorry this thing didn't work out the way we planned it. What we wanted to point out was that when vacation comes, and you find yourself stranded in Nag's Head or Las Vegas or somewhere, you'll find books hard to come by. If you don't want your head to rust off during the summer, a visit to the undersigned right now is indicated.

Seeded Players Advance Into Quarter Finals Of ACC Tennis

Atlantic Coast Conference tennis players battled for over nine hours yesterday under clear blue akies and when evening came both the singles and the doubles had gone according to schedule with almost all of the seeded players advancing into today's action.

In the singles, seven of the eight seeded players will advance the quarter-final round which gets gets underway at 9 o'clock this morning. The only major upset of the day was Dick Makepeace's 3 set victory over Clemson's Mohammed Nasim. Makepeace, who played number six for Carolina during the regular season, was down 4-2 in the third set but rallied to take four straight games and the match from his sixth seeded opponent.

Three Tar Heels In Quarters

In the upper bracket of the singles Makepeace will meet Maryland's second seeded Jackson Yang and Duke's Don Romhilt will go against Sunny Sumner from Clemson. The matches in the lower half find top seeded Bob Bortner meeting eighth seeded Ray York and Mickey Solomon taking on Carolina's Steve Bank.

The doubles competition is in varying stages of completion since some first round matches have not yet been played. Four twosomes have already advanced into the quarter-finals with Maryland having two of the teams and Clemson and Carolina having one apiece.

First round victories have almost assured North Carolina's conference champions of possession of the newly created John F. Kenfield Memorial Award. This award will go to the team which accumulates the greatest number of wins during the entire tournament.

There will be no charge for the morning rounds of the tournament but a charge of 50 cents will be made for admission to the semi-final round beginning at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

$6 Million In Federal Loans To Finance Student Housing

By ED ROWLAND
and
DAVIS YOUNG

(This is the conclusion of a two-part series concerning the financing of University dormitories.)

The University of North Carolina has borrowed and is planning to borrow $6 million from the federal government to pay for new student housing.

This entire amount will be repaid over the next 40 years by self-liquidation—a process which lets the residents pay for their own housing as they use it.

University Business Manager J. A. Branch said this week that $2 million of this total already has been received from the Home and Housing Finance Agency to pay for the three men's dorms constructed on the hill overlooking Navy Field and the addition to Spencer Hall for women.

Rent is being increased $40 per year for men students, from $130 to $170.

Unwise

Chancellor William Aycock said the University is "rapidly approaching the point beyond which it would be unwise to go in borrowing to finance the construction of student housing." He added, however, that there is no alternative at this time.

The Visiting Committe of the Consolidated University reported to the UNC Trustees in March, 1958, "that careful consideration be given to the planning and construction of residence halls, and that the present policy of construction on a self-liquidating basis be thoroughly re-examined."

The rent increase will be used to repay the loans over the next

Legislature Considers Iranians And Cameras

By DAVE JONES

The two Iranian lecturers Issa and Abdullah Ommidvar who brought their exhibits to UNC were recognized for their service to world peace by the Student Legislature Thursday night.

Rep Bob Turner (UP), whose committee (finance) introduced the bill, explained the purposes of the trip, and said that these speakers had received only small honorariums for their visit to UNC.

Unanimous approval was granted the bill, and the sum of $100, plus a letter of commendation will be sent to the two Iranian visitors.

Student legislators are permitted and encouraged to move into the new dorms by the provisions of John Brooks' (SP) bill temporarily lifting their residence requirement. A similar action was taken several years ago when Cobb Dormitory was opened. The body in passing the bill, felt that Teague, Whitehead C and D dorms should be integrated into Student Government by the same means.

The Daily Tar Heel will now have its own photography equipment, and a photographic editor as a result of a $150 appropriation Thursday night. In speaking on behalf of this bill, the author, Rudy Edwards (SP), explained that currently the paper has no equipment of its own and must pay two dollars for each picture. In addition the two photographers, who own their own cameras, are sometimes not available to cover important stories. With the purchase of this equipment, any staff member with a knowledge of photography can cover any event.

Methods whereby legislation can be brought up for consideration without a full week's delay were enacted under the provisions of a bill by Irwin Fuller (SP). The changed by-laws now allow immediate consideration for bills which have been made available to all the legislators for at least 24 hours, and acted on by a committee.

Recession Makes Job Search Hard On Grads

The current economic recession is definitely making it harder for the June graduate to find a job, according to Joe M. Galloway, director of the UNC Placement Service.

Galloway estimates that employment is down 20 per cent from last year, primarily because there are fewer openings per company.

The Placement director stated however that his figures were necessarily incomplete at this time since students are still in the process of being interviewed and have not been able to give his office a final report.

Through April 30, the UNC Placement office has been notified of 300 hirings as compared to 336 hirings at the same time last year.

The Placement Service has noted an increase in student registration with the office during the last year and attributes this increase to the stiffer competition in finding jobs.

"We have had fine response from the students," Galloway said. The office has arranged more company interviews for seniors, alumni and undergraduates seeking summer employment. Interviews this year have totaled 3,723 as compared to last year's total of 3,365.

Acceptance of company job offers is higher at the present than in previous years, according to the Placement director. Graduates are accepting offers with less deliberation now that competition has increased.

For example, Galloway mentioned one company which reported in February of this year that their acceptance ratio had gone to 85 per cent. Last year's ration was only 40 per cent.

Speaking of military service, Galloway said he expects more male graduates to enter the service immediately after college this year. In his opinion men will decide to get their military training behind them in the hope that the job situation will improve in the coming months.

Salary figures have remained roughly the same as last year's, Galloway said. Figures for a sample of 100 A.B. and B.S. graduates seeking their first jobs average about $5 less than last year, although they have gone up slightly in North Carolina.

The Placement director's outlook on employment is basically optimistic, however. He has advised many business concerns, "This is a good year to hire college graduates, because of less competition for employees among the various companies.

"There is still a good demand on the part of business for capable, intelligent individuals," Galloway concluded.

President Furtado Names 125 To Student Positions

The names of the students who will compose every phase of student government next year was submitted Thursday night to the Student Legislature by President Don Furtado.

The list of names, comprising 125 students, was compiled by Furtado during the past two weeks. During that time he held interviews daily.

The Student Body President devoted about 60 hours time, and saw nearly 300 people, in connection with filling the posts.

In formally submitting the list of appointments, Furtado accompanied it with the following statement:

"The caliber of students who have applied for student government positions in the coming year indicates to me that students fully realize that in self-government lies our greatest hope for maintaining those standards of student responsibility and student freedom which serve as the nucleus of the Carolina way of life."

These appointments will be acted upon by the student legislature in special session Tuesday night at 7:30. They are:

Campus Chest Chairman, Doug Kellam;

Graham Memorial Board of Directors, 3 year seat—Frank Elkins, 1 year seat—Joel Fleishman;

Consolidated University Student Council, Tom Long, Pat Hamer;

University Traffic and Safety Committee, Bob Covington, chairman; Mike Lanham; Bell Tower Parking Lot Committee, Bob Covington, David Brooks; Student Council (Woman's seat), Toy Johnson;

Clerks, Women's Honor Council, Jan Cobbs, Sue Donisthorpe, Jane White; Clerks, Men's Honor Council, Jack Raper, Mike Kezziah;

President's Cabinet, Rudy Edward, Al Goldsmith, Bob Carter,

Carolina Men Address Merchants On Meters

A group of students received the chance to give their views on the proposed plan to install parking meters and parallel parking on Chapel Hill streets and did so at a meeting of two committees of the Merchants Assn. Thursday night.

Student Body President Don Furtado spoke for the student body when he said that he felt the student body had not been asked, and that the student body was willing to compromise on meters on Franklin St.

Gordon Street, a sophomore, pointed out that parallel parking would hurt, but not quite so much as the meters. He cited figures which showed that already there were a hyperabundance of cars to fill the parking spaces that now exist, and that it was unrealistic to demand a student to walk from Kenan Woods to Columbia St., if adequate space was available without causing a traffic hazard.

Sonny Kimsey, a senior, pointed out a plan that would alleviate the traffic problem over a period of years. Kimsey showed that parking recesses could be created around the trees that are on Columbia St. without marring the beauty of the street, and at the same time providing a place for more cars than under a parallel system.

Merchants Assn. Chairman Whid Powell suggested that in the future, there should be something worked out so that a member of the student body can be a member of the Planning Board which submits proposals to the Board of Aldermen.

Furtado closed the meeting with a plea for individual action on the part of the merchants assembled, in order that the students' case can be presented to the aldermen, and the decision be postponed until the fall, when students had the opportunity to work on their plan.

THE COMEDY OF ERRORS—John Whitty (left) and Taylor Williams view each other with disdain in Shakespeare's "The Comedy of Errors" which is slated for its second performance by the Carolina Playmakers tonight at 8:30 in the Forest Theatre. Tickets are $1.50 at the Forest Theatre box office.

Dr. Teller Addresses High School Meeting

Dr. Edward Teller, Professor of Physics and Director of the Radiation Laboratory at the University of California, spoke in Memorial Hall Thursday to about 1000 high school students and teachers. Dr. Teller's address, entitled "Puzzles In Science," was part of the Junior Science Symposium being held at Duke, N. C. State, and UNC.

Dr. Teller explained that science is a series of puzzles, each a part of the whole of scientific knowledge; each puzzle depends for its solution on the less complex problems which have been previously dealt with.

In the course of his lecture, Dr. Teller illustrated the fundamental simplicity and beauty of scientific thought by describing the evolution of such concepts as Pythagoras' Theorem and Einstein's Theory of Relativity.

The difficulty ascribed to science is due, according to Dr. Teller, to the lack of familiarity of most students with its fundamental concepts, and to the fact that much seemingly complex scientific thought involves simply the reorientation of traditional abstract concepts such as time and space.

Dr. Teller, given a standing ovation both before and after his lecture, is one of the worlds foremost scientists, and one of the most articulate partisan scientists in favor of the continuation of nuclear testing by the United States.

Alumni Drive Meeting With Success Locally

Seniors engaged in enrolling members of the graduating class in the General Alumni Association are meeting with success in their campus-wide effort, according to Jerry Oppenheimer, co-chairman of the '58 alumni drive committee.

"To date we are greatly encouraged by the response of seniors to the invitations of committeemen to join the Alumni Association. Several of the solicitors have already indicated 100% enrollment of those seniors assigned them," Oppenheimer said.

The Alumni Office states that Jimmy Garrell who solicited the seniors of Chi Phi, men's social fraternity, was the first solicitor to report 100% enrollment to the Association's headquarters in the Carolina Inn.

The week-long solicitation of seniors began last Wednesday and extends throuhg Wednesday, May 14, deadline for solicitors to report results of their solicitations.

No quota of memberships has been set by the committee. The drive's objective, according to Oppenheimer, is to make sure every senior knows about the work of the Association and is personally invited to join.

He pointed out that to join now at the special $1 rate implies no obligation to continue membership after the first year. He added, however, that many recent graduates have already become "life-long members" of the Association.

Summer Council

Student Body president Don Furtado has urged all people who are interested in serving on the summer school Honor Council to see him in the Student Government office Monday or Tuesday from 2-6 p.m.

Honor Council Makes Public Eight Actions

The Women's Honor Council yesterday made public the violations which have come before the Council for the period of April 11-May 8.

Two cases were handled by the Council in which a careless error was made in signing out, resulting with the students involved returning a day late. In this case the girls involved were each given four nights campus.

The Council handed out a one night campus decision in three cases where students were unavoidably one hour late and did not notify the dormitory administration.

The accumulation of eight house council offenses resulted in one girl being given an official reprimand to be recorded on her permanent record and three weeks campus.

Another case involved the accumulation of six house council offenses. The student concerned was given a council reprimand and two weeks campus.

The final case concerned a student absent from her dormitory without permission for one night. In this case the Honor Council sentenced her to three and one-half months campus, general probation for one semester and an official reprimand.

FIGHT FOR FACULTY — PART IV

The Wage Of Stipends Marks Struggle For Top Graduates

By PRINGLE PIPKIN

(This is the fourth in a series concerning the prospective faculty member's choice of an institution.)

The graduate school and the quality of its members is often important to a professor when he considers the institution whose offer he will accept.

One member of the physics department commented that research in that field was not just what a man can accomplish by himself but depends also on the quality of the graduate assistants and the equipment. The graduate students are research assistants in many other fields.

"The opportunity to teach, supervise and develop good graduate students is one of the principal nonmonetary rewards of a good faculty member," Dean Lee of the School of Business Administration stated.

In some of the survey courses of the humanities departments the graduate students aid the professors in grading the papers. In the field of science they conduct laboratories. Some are employed as part-time instructors.

Third of Faculty

However, the most important aspect of the graduate program is that, according to Dr. Godfrey, dean of the faculty, one third of the University's faculty comes from its graduate students.

It is, therefore, a necessity to get and keep the highest quality of graduate students. As universities across the nation realize this fact, competition for the best graduate students is often as intense as that for the best professors.

Dr. Kuntsmann, chairman of the Department of Germanic Languages, explained that formerly graduate stipends (a form of scholarship) were awarded mostly as an honor and were not expected to finance the living costs of a student.

He went on to say that now it had become necessary to think in higher terms because if a school did not have the stipends it would not be able to get the (best) students.

Speaking of the School of Business Administration, Dean Lee stated, "Mature persons of prospective faculty caliber are also apt to be those most in demand by industry and government.

"They are also even more apt than the M.B.A. candidates to have family responsibilities which pose additional and severe financial problems.

Increasing

"With these thoughts in mind all universities which are seriously facing their responsibility to train doctoral candidates are increasing materially their programs of assistance to graduate students."

The University of North Carolina offers teaching assistantships at approximately $1,320 for nine months plus tuition. The total time required in teaching is 12 hours per week.

Part-time instructors get $1,800 for nine months plus tuition. Their teaching load is 15 hours per week.

Research assistants of the Institute for Research in Social Science get $1,500 for nine months if they are a first year graduate student or if they are more advanced, they get $1,800 for nine months.

There are also approximately 50 non-service fellowships provided by funds given by organizations or endowments other than the state. A non-service fellowship is one which does not involve any teaching obligations.

Examples of such fellowships are three of an annual stipend each of $1,200 plus tuition offered by the Professor A. Whitehill Takes Business Methods To Japan

By PETE IVEY

Modern American "human relations techniques" in business enterprise are finding avid learners in Japanese schools and in management groups in Japan — largely through the efforts of Professor Arthur J. Whitehill, on leave from UNC.

Teaching in Japan under a Fulbright Exchange arrangement, Dr. Whitehill who is the R. J. Reynolds Professor of Human Relations in the UNC School of Business Administration is devoting his chief attention to two classes at Keio University, "the Harvard of Japan."

Dr. Whitehill is mainly concerned with a course in personnel management for undergraduates, and a course for graduate students in human relations in industry.

He is pardonably proud of the fact that all 60 students who began the course with him in personel management have remained. Usually about half the class drops out, according to past records for foreign instructors lecturing here.

Dr. Whitehill has an interpreter, because his knowledge of Japanese is sketchy, and Japanese undergraduates usually have only a halting knowledge of conversational English.

Two Years?

Whitehill says he thinks it would be good to extend the Fulbright program so that one year could be spent learning Japanese, and the next in teaching.

Besides his university duties, he has traveled all over Japan, lecturing to civic clubs, to industrial organizations, to business groups—most of them sponsored by local chambers of commerce.

"There is a tremendous interest among businessmen in the case method" states Dr. Whitehill. "The case method is especially effective in presenting information to their seminars and conferences. I feel a real contribution could be made at this point to management development in Japan if a half year were available to work with Japanese translators on selected case studies, to conduct training meetings dealing with case discussion leadership and case writing, and to conduct demonstration case method meetings with Japanese management groups."

Personal

Dr. Whitehill also discussed the social life of Japan of which he and his family have been a part.

"At least of equal importance with my professional work has been the experiences we have had as a family in Japan. Our two children, Murray and Barbara, are 12 and 9 years old. These are wonderful ages for travel with a maximum absorption rate as far as language and customs are concerned.

"In spite of Japanese realtors who insisted we wanted a 'nice western-style bungalow,' we found a spacious Japanese-style house with mat floors (tatami), sliding paper glass doors (shoji), and the typical alcove (tokonoma) with hanging scroll (kakemono) used for displaying flower arrangements.

"Our children have many Japanese friends and, to them, the language barrier seems rather unimportant.

"Douglas (Mrs. Whitehill) has kept very busy with many activities in addition to household management. She was a visiting professor at Aoyama University during the fall semester with a class in English conversation. In addition she is tutoring a professor and his wife who expect to visit the United States in the near future.

"She has many Japanese friends, and perhaps her biggest problem is to remain cordial and still not get involved in the foreign colony's cocktail circuit and coffee clubs to which military and diplomatic personnel men as well as women, attach such very profound importance."

IN THE INFIRMARY

Students in the infirmary yesterday included:

Misses Pat Gregory and Margaret Wicker and Frank Burgess, Harry Doran, Robert Furtado, Bill Charitian and Ted Edick.

A Suggestion

When Whid Powell, chairman of the Merchants Assn., told a group of students that he would try to get a student representative on the Planning Board of the Town of Chapel Hill, he was presenting the first concrete step toward student representation in town government.

It was a particular good suggestion of Mr. Powell, and should be acted upon soon. A good deal less friction between town and gown could be the result.

A further result would be that plans such as the parking meter proposal would not be sprung behind the back of students. Students make up at least a third of the town. They, by their very number, demand representation.

Recession

There obviously is a dearth of ideas in dealing with economic problems.

The crisis in Detroit shows no sign of letting up, and yet, no solution has been found, nor has anyone gotten to first base in trying to reach such a solution.

The Democrats taking the initiative in an election year have called for one massive cut in taxes, that probably will breed a few votes, but will produce deficit spending on a low budget without much hope of curing the recession.

The Republicans not to be caught accepting a Democratic proposal have started a massive "buy" campaign, that has seen to date more workers laid off the Detroit lines, but perhaps a few votes from the employers that they expected to get anyway.

Neither of these proposals has advanced any out of the era of the New Deal, which handled an adverse economic situation with a good deal more skill.

The problem is that the country needs to spend more towards education and foreign aid. At the same time the country needs to pull up from a nosedive which is healthy in terms of breeding a solid dollar, but distinctly unhealthy in terms of the world market and internal security.

There needs for a change to have some creative, non-political thinking done on the subject of the recession. It also had better come soon, before the national economy is seriously crippled.

Traffic Light

There is a problem concerning the "Walk-Wait" light in front of the Post Office.

Apparently the people who constructed the light have failed to time the speed of an average walker across Franklin St. At the present time, it would tak a person faster than Dave Sime to cross the street while the "walk" light is still on.

Those who contruct these modern inventions with the pedestrian in mind, had better keep their mind on the pedestrian when they time their lights.

Alumni Review

In line with the current series in The Daily Tar Heel on education, the Alumni Review has come out with a composite study of education purpose, resources, and method in its current issue.

It was compiled from data and contributions from schools throughout the nation and is well worth the time spent reading.

The Daily Tar Heel

The official student publication of the Publication Board of the University of North Carolina, where it is published daily except Monday and examination and vacation periods and summer terms. Entered as second class matter in the post office in Chapel Hill, N. C., under the Act of March 8, 1870. Subscription rates: mailed, $4 per year, $2.50 a semester; delivered, $6 a year, $3.50 a semester.

"All I Got Was One Station In Florida"

Education In Focus

Everett W. Hall

(The following is the conclusion of a four-part series on the current problem of education, written by faculty members of the University of North Carolina. Dr. Hall is Kenan Professor of Philosophy and head of the philosophy department. The series was compiled by Ed Rowland, editorial assistant.)

I want to set down six theses directed to my colleagues in higher education in America, particularly in state universities. I shall begin with the most sweeping and least controversial and proceed in the general direction of the more specific and less widely acceptable. I have little space for developing or defending these propositions; a few hints of how my thinking goes must suffice. I therefore beg indulgence for a certain unavoidable tone of dogmatism.

1. We have a duty to educate both the more and the less able student. This is to be intercepted as not incompatible with some raising of entrance requirements and some tightening of rules concerning continuance in school, but elevation of standards by itself is no simple solution of our historically unique set of problems. We cannot close our doors to the average and not too serious student; we should not shunt the highly endowed youth to the private college (which, save in the exceptional case, cannot afford the staff nor the facilities to offer him adequate educational opportunities).

2. We should classify students on the basis of their abilities and offer them opportunity and stimulus commensurate therewith. Some opposition to this rests on the fallacy, 'you-can't-draw-the-line.' This fallacy has the form, 'since any place you draw the line is arbitrary, it is irrational to make any cut at all.' All one needs to do to see the mistake is to compare directly two instances far removed in opposite directions from the point of division (say, a genius and a barely admissible college student); to claim that these cannot rationally be disjoined simply because other cases fall between them is to abandon logic. There is, however, a very real danger in separating students on the basis of their abilities, namely, that we may misplace them, making a mistake about their capacities or their motivations or the handicap or special privilege they have had in the accident of family or community environment or earlier schooling. Hence the present proposition should be linked with the desideratum of a periodic reassessment of the division and a reassignment of students in the light of their achievements. Another error may be designated 'false democracy.' It rests on the assumption either that people are not very different in intelligence or that if they are it is not proper to recognize and take advantage of this fact. Against such attitudes I claim that democracy as a political institution and a way of life is on the way to extinction if it does not successfully discover and rigorously train its best brains, or, on the other hand, if it does not liberalize, in an educational sense, its average citizen, making him aware of the world's artistic, scientific and philosophical riches.

3. We must offer greater inducements than heretofore, in the form of financial help, prestige symbols, promise of future status, et cetera, to the gifted student to enter college and to rise to his appropriate level while there. We have subsidized the athlete, offered social graces to the "well-born" given aid to the strikingly needy; it is time we put more effort, money and thought to alluring the intellectually capable to college (and particularly to the state university). I assume that we cannot in the immediate future subsidize all who meet our minimum standards of entrance, that we must make choices.

4. We should distinguish at least three groups of students and set three different educational goals for them.

(a) There is the genius or near genius, the young man or woman of exceptional, creative talent, intellectual or artistic. He should be marked for a life set apart, with all the "leisure" and the necessary facilities conducive to the highest contributions to theoretical science, philosophical speculation or artistic creation. We must be willing to take risks in the direction of overestimating potentialities in order to maximize our chances (within the limits of our economic resources and our duties to the other groups) of discovering and developing this rare type of person.

(b) There is the able, conscientious student, good at learning, at following specified or traditional lines of investigation, at accumulating and organizing data, transmitting information to others. This group would embrace the future teachers; professional men, ordinary researchers in science and the humanities.

(3) There is what might be called the average young person, who will never form part of the "intelligentsia" but who should become a good citizen, living a life not merely well adjusted but rich in appreciation and full of wide human understanding. I assume that individuals below this level should not be given a college education of any sort.

5. The kinds of education offered these three groups should differ qualitatively not merely quantitatively (that is, not merely in the rates of learning and the distances of penetration of subject fields).

(a) Of the potential genius we should demand independent thought and rigorous defense of it from the earliest moment; he should be encouraged to rebel but held responsible for it; he should be badgered, pressed, spurred to be creative but always with a grasp of relevant data and previous theory (parallel statements about the training of the artistic genius must be furnished by the reader).

(b) The able, conscientious student should be required to master the facts and methods of his own field of interest, but never to become a narrow specialist without perspective on his own profession nor common interest in humans of all types and cultures.

(c) The average young person who wants a college education should not be offered vocational training combined with the social emoluments of campus life as a substitute; he should be given vitalizing insights into, and samplings of, the chief trends of his and other cultures; his ideological and artistic and social appreciations should be widened and deepened, by acquaintance with "great books" where these do not demand technical or intellictual competence outstripping his capacity, through secondary sources offering interesting yet essentially sound popularization of great works beyond his immediate grasp. He should be provided some overall sense of the main fields of human accomplishment and their historical roots. In all cases he should be given not so much information supplemental to his own walk of life, but understanding and the ability to see and feel things from the standpoint of others.

6. These differences in goals and kinds of college education imply corresponding differences in methods and instructional personnel.

(a) The genius or near genius must be supplied individual, tutorial instruction by the most creative, original minds on our staffs. Even at the undergraduate level he should have daily comradeship with the men in his field with world reputations for the originality and importance of their ideas.

(b) We cannot give the same concentrated attention to the high-level, hard-working student. In some fields he perhaps can be adequately served by large lecture classes, but on the whole, his train-

Several days ago, before the monsoon season had set in, we had occasion to see our SSICA Ltd. agent and review some of the clauses in our policy.

In the event that you are wondering what SSICA Ltd. stands for, it is the Storm Stick Insurance Company of America, Limited, a comparatively new company set up for the benefit of Ivy Leaguers who are interested in the welfare of their umbrellas and/or parasols.

We have a very liberal and comprehensive policy that we would like to mention in case there are others who might be interested in one of the same type!

A head-on collision, one of the most prevalent accidents to umbrellas, resulting in the total destruction of one or both machines pays upwards to double the cost of both, depending upon the circumstances. There is one restriction on this clause however. Drunken or reckless walking will result in cancellation of the entire policy.

An inversion of the machine caused by over-zealousness or high winds pays damages.

Rips and tears resulting from all causes other than duels pays damages plus 10 per cent. Dueling is strictly prohibited under the policy, and a breach thereof will result in cancellation of the policy plus prosecution in a criminal court by local authorities.

Loss of one or both eyes as a result of rapid opening pays the policyholder $10,000. For a partial loss of eyesight a proportionate amount of the former figure will be paid. Partial blindness resulting from drinking while carrying the machine is not covered, except by a special rider that costs $500.

Injury to another person other than the policy holder will result in the payment of all hospitalization and physicians fees.

Indiscriminate poking and other such embarrassing occurrences are not covered by the policy, and the policy holder is urged to maintain his usual high moral standards and refrain from such practices.

Accidental poking, on the other hand, will result in the provision of counsel by SSICA to handle the court affairs for the client.

Loss of the machine due to theft, fire, or plain stupidity will result in the replacement by the company of the lost machine. Throwing old umbrellas in an abandoned well in order to get a new machine is frowned upon by the company. Several late policy holders have been found at the bottom of these same wells.

Any other accidents resulting from the daily use of an insured machine will be properly investigated by the SSICA, and a prompt settlement is assured the policy holder.

One thing to keep in mind is that SSICA, Ltd. is as near as your nearest telephone, and in some cases, quite a bit nearer.

All this protection costs only one dollar per year—the cheapest insurance you can buy for your umbrella and/or parasol. Your nearest SSICA, Ltd. agent? We are. Send your dollars to the Tar Heel office c/o us. We need the money.

Policies will be mailed out at an undetermined date after applications arrive.

Letters On IFC, Freedom, & WRC

Editor:

I always do hate to hear somebody stand up and say, "I wish I had said that," but I do wish I had said "After a long time of abdicating their responsibility . . . the IFC has finally taken a concrete action." I join you in saluting the IFC for a little positive action at last.

I think that while I'm in such a mood of agreement, I shall help you send up a rocket for the WRC. Why not repeat Wednesday's editorial about the IFC and change it only by substituting the initials WRC instead of IFC: "After a long time of abdicating their responsibility (or at least misinterpreting it) the WRC has finally taken a concrete (positive) action."

Frank C. Elkins

P. S. Congratulations and thanks for the fine articles on the present problems and shortcomings of higher education.

Editor:

The I. F. C. has just passed a bill for which I can see no justification or necessity. By outlawing live music in fraternity houses on Sunday the I. F. C. has served to encumber an art form that is just beginning to achieve recognition.

Jazz, the art form, holds a very important place in American society and culture. Although the I. F. C. did not have such an objective in mind, by banning all live music they have denied budding musicians important opportunities to express themselves. I hope that the members of the I. F. C. will realize that a mistake has been made.

Editor:

A member of the Tar Heel staff talking to me today on the campus said rather sarcastically, "I can step right over that wire fence." Of course he can, I thought it a very childish remark. Yet if I read the Daily Tar Heel correctly the staff has been in the forefront of those yelling their heads off for less rules and for more freedom for freshmen co-eds entering the University next Fall in order that they might develop self control and learn how to use freedom.

The fundamental question involved in making co-ed rules is not whether we have compulsory study periods and a lightsout deadline. It is immaterial whether a student sits up and studies all night, or doesn't study at all.

The important thing is that she does not disturb other people who want to study, or who may want to go to sleep at a reasonable hour. Loud voices, boistrous laughter, slamming doors, moving furniture, dropping heavy articles, long telephone calls, after quiet hours, is thoughtless to say the least. Yet the acid test of good breeding is consideration for others.

If you think freshmen are the only ones who need to be groomed in the essentials of good manners you were never more mistaken. I have lived both on, and off, the campus, and I am struck with how little innate refinement there is in the average graduate student.

Universities are not supposed to be finishing schools, but I know of one school that refuses to award a degree to a candidate unless the candidate measures up to the over all standards of the college, regardless of whether she has passed her academic courses.

Graduates of this school are considered representatives of the college. The school takes pride in the kind of ambassadors it sends out.

If it looks like I am hipped on the subject of manners, I can only say I am, because throughout life the difference between good manners and lack of manners is the difference between success and failure in our human relations.

People with good manners are the people you like to live with, the kind of mate you stick with until "death do us part." I see so many of both kinds, the thoughtful and the thoughtless, that I am glad to say I never seen a really bad mannered person at the University. That would be inconceivable at UNC.

Rules can serve as useful guide posts to the ultimate goal which is a fierce pride in ones own self-respect and an equal respect for the rights of others.

IFC Ruling Scored

Editor:

You mentioned today that you hoped that the IFC would be as zealous in the enforcement of the prohibition of loud Sunday parties as they were in passing regulations pertaining to such parties. I am sure that most of us hope so too but I feel that you, along with those who passed these regulations, have failed to see the detrimental power of such obviously hastily prepared regulations. Such legislation is ominous if we consider that the legislators acting in this matter are the future "life blood" of America.

To get quickly to the point I will say that I object to the prejudice being displayed by the IFC against "live music." Such legislation against live American artists, or artists in the making, at the very time that they strive to speak to the entire world about OUR art can be nothing less than catastrophic blindness on the part of those who so legislate.

It is common knowledge today that American musicians, especially jazz musicians, are being accepted and praised as spokesmen for America throughout the world. There is hardly a good jazz musician in this country who hasn't traveled through foreign lands showing off America's only original art. The United States Department of State places enough dependence in jazz musicians to send them out as "good will ambassadors" — and they don't limit the musicians to Monday through Saturday performances. Before anyone suggests that the calibre musicianship used by the State Department is not available, I would like to point out that there are at least four students and two faculty members here at U.N.C. who have participated in "good will" tours.

I want to make it clear that I do not intend to degrade the IFC. I feel (most of the time) that it is a capable body. I do, however, feel that they could have solved the Sunday noise situation without legislating against "live music." "Live music" and "noises" are not inseparable. I have witnessed this on at least one occasion on our campus — one Sunday afternoon jazz CONCERT by a group consisting of Frank Wilson, Jim Crawford, Sonny Carr, Jim Duke and Pat McKoy. This was at the Chi Psi Lodge several months ago and I seriously doubt that they have received a complaint about the "noise" yet.

In closing I would like to suggest that there are right and wrong ways to legislate. If the IFC desires to rid fraternity areas of Sunday noise, it should first find out where the noise comes from. If the "noises" stem from "live music," then they should outlaw that particular "live music" on Sundays. If I were a legislator and desired to rid newsstands of pornographic mabazines, I surely would n't start by outlawing all literary works. Would you?

It is indicative of one of the inanities hereabous that the Duke University Student Forum last week sponsored Poet E. E. Cummings on their campus, while the local Student Forum made plans to present Cartoonist Walt Kelly here; were it not for the fact that Mr. Kelly was unable to appear and so there was no lecture at all, the University of North Carolina would have had the dubious distinction of playing host to the distinctly lesser poet.

There is a related implication in the fact that this University, along with several other organizations, sponsored a pre-eminent scientist, Dr. Edward Teller, in an address to a group of North Carolina high school students: and yet no attempt was made to permit Carolina students to meet, hear, or question this great man.

More understandable, perhaps, is the fact that the rarely seen Mr. T. S. Eliot was in the poetic state of Texas recently, and nobody here knew about it in time to bribe him here on his return east.

Particularly in the case of Mr. Eliot, and partly in the other cases, there is obviously no one person or group at fault. This does not alter the fact that the fault is a grevious one, and should be corrected; for it is through contact with men and minds such as these that the University becomes most valuable; this is particularly true since increased enrollment and lack of funds have seriously undermined the value of the University's own plant. Messrs. Cummings, Eliot and Teller could have compensated for a lot of internal stagnation.

In almost every area but the intellectual, there is no such lack of care and planning. In athletics every possible measure is taken to insure public enthusiams; there is no reason to assume that the new parking lot was intended primarily for anything but the football crowds; there is considerable pressure for a new gymnasium, or even a colosium, in spite of more pressing and important needs elsewhere; and the local athletic mentors are presented with exhorbitant salaries and an occasional Cadillac to make sure that they will not be enticed away.

In dress, great pains are taken to provide the student with the proper thing: any local merchant is only too happy to perform this function, most often, again, at prices which are as padded as the Ivy League jackets aren't.

In view of all this, it becomes essential that the interested students be encouraged by the University and its various sub-institutions to come into contact with intellects such as those of Dr. Teller Mr. Eliot, and Mr. Cummings. There is some effort being made on this campus toward that end, but not enough.

40 years, Branch explained. He revealed that actually the University is selling bonds to the government. At stated intervals the HHFA clips coupons from the bonds and sends them to the University agent, Wachovia National Bank, for payment of interest and principal, he said.

Two Ways

Chancellor Aycock said the University has two ways of paying for construction—either through state appropriations or by borrowing. "Of course, money borrowed must be repaid, and this policy of increasing the room rent is the only way we can do it," he said.

The University has applied for an additional loan of $2 million from the HHFA to finance construction of married students' Housing units, Branch said. "I want to emphasize," he said, "that this project will be entirely self-liquidating out of receipts from the occupants of these units."

"No one paying rent on a dorm room will pay for married students' housing, and conversely, no married student will help pay for a dorm," he said.

The business manager revealed that another project is on the drawing boards that will cost $1 million—a new wing to the School of Nursing Dormitory and a new dorm for male students in the Division of Health Affairs.

Lag Behind

The University has done much to raise the graduate stipends and to increase the number of stipends. However, those interviewed on this subject seemed generally to believe that the number of stipends lag behind the need.

The opinions concerning the adequacy of the financial aspects of the stipends varies according to the department.

Dr. Arthur Roe, chairman of the Chemistry Department, said, "The graduate stipend at the moment is very satisfactory." Dean Brecht of the School of Pharmacy commented that the stipends "at present" are competitive. (The stipends were raised recently.)

However, another departmental head commented, "The trend seems to be in the direction of stipends elsewhere growing faster than ours, and some of the stiffest competition is coming from some of the southern schools."

He noted that his department had about five-sixths of its initial offers to graduate students accepted. Those who declined stated that the financial aspect of the other institution's offer had been larger.

Could Not Afford

Dr. Fletcher Green, chairman of the History Department, said that his department got letters from graduate students saying that UNC was their first choice but they could not afford to come because stipends at other universities were better.

Another departmental head said that his department very often was not able to get its first choice of graduate students because of the stipend differentials.

Some universities have stipends ranging from $2,000 to $3,000. A considerable number of $4,000 per annum, non-service graduate stipends are being offered by schools of business administration.

In physics another southern publically supported university has been able "literally to get the two best" graduate students by offering grants of $2,500; this fellowship is, however, privately supported.

The amount which out-of-state graduate students have to pay is blamed by some faculty members as a factor which has kept good graduate students from other states from attending UNC.

WAS HE A MAN OR THREE MICE?

Steve Whittaker was one of the most phenomenal split personalities on record. Not content with a mere 1 or 2 distinct personalities, Whittaker was split 3 ways. His analyst's greatest problem was in deciding which of the 3 Steve Whittakers should be permitted to survive.

Steve Whittaker I was noisy, rude, and loutish. The only thing admirable about him was his Van Heusen walking shorts which he wore to each session.

Steve Whittaker II talked to the analyst while covering him with a gun. During one session, as the doctor was staring past the muzzle of the revolver, he noticed that Steve was wearing a particularly attractive sport shirt. Further inquiry showed it to be a Van Heusen.

Steve Whittaker III was a playboy. He'd walk into the office, toss his sweater on the couch and talk about country clubs and backgammon. He was a total bore. One day, the analyst noticed that the label on his sweater read Van Heusen.

Which of the 3 Whittakers did the analyst let survive? The answer is: none of them. The wise doctor diagnosed that each of the 3 had only one redeeming feature—each wore one Van Heusen leisure wear garment. So he created a fourth Steve Whittaker. This last had the walking shorts of the first, the shirt of the second, and the sweater of Whittaker the third. He was a paragon of style and common sense, and has been a useful citizen ever since.

You see, Van Heusen leisure wear is for your one personality. It's coordinated. Slacks, shirts, walking shorts, leisure jackets all designed to go together perfectly and give you a wonderful, unified look. At better stores everywhere, or write to Phillips-Van Heusen Corp., 417 Fifth Avenue, New York 16, New York.

The Air Force pilot or navigator is a man of many talents. He is, first of all, a master of the air—and no finer exists. In addition, he has a firm background in engineering, electronics, astro-navigation and allied fields. Then, too, he must show outstanding qualities of initiative, leadership and self-reliance. He is, in short, a man eminently prepared for an important career in the new Age of Space.

As a college graduate, you will be given priority consideration for the Air Force Aviation Cadet Program. While openings are limited, you will be tested and advised immediately of qualification status. Find out if you measure up. Paste the attached coupon on a post card and mail it now.

Sime, Cooke Set Records; Tar Heels Qualify Eleven

By REESE HART

DURHAM, (AP) — Duke's Dave Sime, noted for his record-breaking feats in the sprint, set a new conference record with the javelin and Maryland's Bid Ed Cooke broke the shot put mark in qualifying trials Friday for the fifth annual Atlantic Coast Conference track meet.

Maryland's Big Ed Cooke broke the shot put mark in qualifying trials Friday for the fifth annual Atlantic Coast Conference track meet.

Maryland's Terps, favored to pull down the team title for the third consecutive year, qualified 19 men in the 10 events in which trals were held. Duke qualified 12 and North Carolina 11.

Sime, speedy senior of Fair Lawn, N. J., who holds three world records, threw the javelin 212 feet 10 inches to top the ACC mark of 208 feet 2 inches set last year by Dick Bartulski of South Carolina.

Sime also led qualifiers in the 100 and 200 yard dash events. His :09.7 for the 100 equaled his slowest time this season. He ran the 220 in 21 seconds flat.

Cooke, who led qualifiers in the shot put and discus, tossed the shot put 54 feet 2 inches to crack the record of 52 feet 4 inches he set last year at Chapel Hill. Before he posted his record-winning throw, South Carolina's Dave Coates broke the record with a toss of 54 feet 1½ inches.

The finals of the meet will get under way this afternoon starting at 2 o'clock.

No trials were held Friday in the high jump, pole vault, one mile, two mile, and mile relay.

Duke's Tom Bazemore set a new school record for Duke of :48.5 in the 440-yard dash to better the old time of :48.6 set in 1941 by Warner Brown.

Several more conference records are expected to fall in Saturday's finals.

Bazemore also turned in the fastest qualifying time in the 880-yard run with 1:54.4. He came in ahead of Dave Scurlock, North Carolina's middle distance ace.

Sime, making his farewell conference appearance, uncorked his record breaking javelin throw on his third toss to top a throw of Paul Snyder of Clemson.

In Saturday's finals, Sime will shoot at records he set two years ago here as a sophomore — :09.5 in the 100 and :20.1 in the 220. He has bettered the 100 mark twice this season, but has not come up to his performance in the 220 since he ran it in California in 1956 with a world's record of 20 seconds flat.

QUALIFIERS

Following is the list of the qualifiers in the Fifth Annual Atlantic Coast Conference Track Meet:

Shot Put: Ed Cooke, Maryland; Dave Coats, South Carolina; Nick Leras, Maryland; Don Kemper, North Carolina; Boyd Eaton, Duke; Jeremiah Phaup, North Carolina. 54 feet 2 inches.

Broad Jump: Ray Stanley, North Carolina; Ward Sims, North Carolina; Elliott Thompson, Maryland; Robert Laverty, Duke; Perry Moore, Maryland; Edward Brawley, North Carolina. 22 feet 5¼ inches.

Javelin: Dave Cime, Duke; Paul Snyder, Clemson; Gerland Strickland; Duke; Ray Stanley, North Carolina; Ed Cooke, Maryland; Bill Mathis, Clemson 212 feet 10 inches.

ACC TRACK STARS—The face of Dave Sime, Duke's internationally known sprinter will be the dominate one at the ACC track championships at Duke today, but he will far from outshine Maryland's Ed Cooke and South Carolina's Billy Latham, two of the many stars that will be participating.

Tar Heels Play At Virginia Today

By RUSTY HAMMOND

Today the Carolina Tar Heels journey to old Williamsburg, Va. for step number two in their march for the pennant. The game is the second of their last four which began this week, and the Heels are in second place in the league race, behind the front-running Clemson Tigers.

Carolina played Virginia last Saturday and beat them 7-0 on the pitching of Wayne Young, who also beat Duke 2-1 Thursday. After this game, the Tar Heels visit Maryland and then entertain Wake Forest in the season finale.

The probable starter for Virginia on the mound today is big Herb Busch, who is quite a basketball player in the "off-season." Busch was expected to go against the Tar Heels here in Chapel Hill, but did not and the Carolina batsmen really teed off on two Virginia hurlers for seven runs and 12 hits.

Carolina will counter with Ben Harding, who has a fine 5-1 record this season, one of the best in the ACC. Harding started last against Maryland, and was shelled from the box in the seventh.

Carolina Takes One Stroke Lead In ACC Golf Tourney

WINSTON-SALEM — (AP) — Ronnie Thomas of Wake Forest and Jordan Ball of Virginia fired one-under-par 70's Thursday to tie for individual honors and North Carolina posted a score of 292 to take the first-round lead in the 5th Annual Atlantic Coast Conference Golf Tournament.

Ball and Thomas fired identical 36-34-70's over the par-71 Old Town Club course to windup one stroke ahead of North Carolina's Bill Thornton. They were the only three to break or equal par, but four came in with 72's, three with 73's, and three with 74s.

Wake Forest, with a 293, was hot on the heels of North Carolina for the team title, and two teams—Virginia and Maryland—were close behind. Virginia came in third with a 295 and Maryland, four with a 298. Duke, 302, South Carolina, 311; State 315; and Clemson, 321 rounded out the eight-team field.

Another 18-hole round Saturday, with the first threesome scheduled to teeoff at 9 A.M. will windup the two-day event.

Gene Lookabill and Tommy Langley of North Carolina, Jack Benson of Duke and Glenn Mitchell of Virginia came in with 72s to tie for fourth place, two strokes off the pace.

Tommy Helms of Wake Forest and Carl Lohren and Jerry McFerren of Maryland tied for eight with 73s.

Thomas registered two bogeys and three birdies enroute to his sub-par round. He bogeyed the par-4 first hole after missing the green, and three-putted the 13th for his other. He sank a 9-inch putt for a birdie-2 on the 11th, holed-out from six-feet for a 3 on the par-4 12th, and curled in a 15-footer on the par-3 15th for his third birdie. He hit a total of 14 greens—six on the front side and eight coming in.

Ball played a little better long game, hitting 16 greens. He, like Thomas, had to two bogeys and three birdies. Both his bogeys came on the front nine where he three-putted the first hold and on the fourth where he overshot the green and woundup with a six.

Thornton offset three bogeys with as many Birdies in circling the course in par figures.

Bortner Meets Romhilt In ACC Tennis Finals Today

By ELLIOTT COOPER

Top seeded Bob Bortner and fifth seeded Don Romhilt battled their way into the finals of the ACC tennis tournament yesterday and will meet at 1:30 this afternoon to decide the title.

Bortner and Romhilt both won two matches yesterday to earn the right to meet for the championship. In his first match of the day Bortner had to go three sets to beat Virginia's eighth seeded Ray York. At 2 o'clock the husky Carolina captain came back out and disposed of teammate Steve Bank 6-2, 6-1. Bortner played superb tennis and did not allow Bank to win a game on his own service.

Romhilt, who played number one for Duke during the regular season, beat seventh seeded Sunny Sumner in the morning and scored an upset later in the day when he beat Maryland's second seeded Jackson Yang in straight sets.

Bortner-Bank In Doubles Final

In the doubles action Bortner and Bank have reached the finals but their opponent has not yet been determined. The doubles is resting on the outcome of the Romhilt-Dick Katz and Malcolm Clark-Dick Makepeace match which was called because of darkness. In this match the Carolina twosome of Clark and Makespeace took the first set 13-11, but their rivals from Duke rallied to score a 10-8 victory in the second set.

The third set of this match will begin at 9 o'clock this morning with the winning team meeting Clemson's Sumner and Nasim at 10 o'clock. The winner of the 10 o'clock match will go against Bortner and Bank in the doubles final which will follow the completion of the championship singles match.

Carolina Clinches Kenfield Award

The Carolina team lived up to pre-tournament predictions and has already assured itself of this year's John F. Kenfield Memorial Award which goes to the team scoring the victories in the tourney. The Tar Heels have already racked up 28 points and lead second place Duke by thirteen markers.

THE SUMMARY

Quarter final singles:

Jackson Yang (M) defeated Dick Makepeace (UNC) 7-5, 4-6, 6-4. Don Romhilt (D) defeated Sunny Sumner (Cl) 6-4, 6-4. Bob Bortner (UNC) defeated Ray York (V) 6-4, 10-12, 6-1. Steve Bank (UNC) defeated Mickey Solomon (NCS) 6-1, 6-1.

Semi final singles:

Don Romhilt (D) defeated Jackson Yang (M) 6-2, 7-5. Bob Bortner (UNC) defeated Steve Bank (UNC) 6-2, 6-1.

Quarter final doubles:

Bortner-Bank (UNC) defeated Yang-Bucks (M) 6-1, 1-6, 6-3. York-Snyder (V) defeated Jones-Nelson (WF) 6-3, 6-2. Sumner-Nasim (Cl) defeated Beall-Palmer (M) 6-1, 6-0.

Semi final doubles:

Bortner-Bank (UNC) defeated York-Snyder (V) 3-6, 6-1, 7-5.

High Schools May Add Another Class

(AP) — A realignment of the high school athletic classifications likely will be approved when the North Carolina High School Athletic Assn. meets here today.

Under the proposal, a fourth classification would be added by splitting what is now the Class AA. The new class would be an AAAA, composed of schools with 601 and over enrollment and split into three sections.

The Heart-Rending Tale Of The Ant —

Once upon a time, an ant was stumbling along with his mandibles loaded with books and stuff. Coming around a bend he ran smack into a grasshopper, all hot up and fiddling "Lucky Love" for all he was worth.

"Dullard!" cried the ant, picking up his scattered books," can't you look where I'm goings?

"Hey, Hey!" said the grasshopper, rolling on his back and clapping away with his whole darn set of feet. "Hey hey, to you my industrious friend. A large guffah in fact."

"You may laugh now", snarled the ant, "but you wait. Foresight pays, and tomorrow —"

Unfortunately he never finished his sentence, as just then the farmer started his DDT duster, and the both of them hurried off to what we trust was a Better Place.

THE MORAL — We're sorry this thing didn't work out the way we planned it. What we wanted to point out was that when vacation comes, and you find yourself stranded in Nag's Head or Las Vegas or somewhere, you'll find books hard to come by. If you don't want your head to rust off during the summer, a visit to the undersigned right now is indicated.

ROTC Units Plan Joint Celebration

The UNC Air Force and Naval ROTC Units will hold their annual joint Awards Day and Armed Forces Day celebration at noon Thursday on Fetzer Field.

This is the biggest event of the year for these two units. Each year at this time the outstanding cadets and midshipmen are presented with the awards won by them for excellence in the various phases of their programs.

Chancellor Aycock will make the presentation of awards, after which the combined forces of the two units will pass in review.

For the school year 1957-58 the recipients of awards will be as follows:

Air Force

The Chicago Tribune Silver Medal, presented annually to the first ond year advanced cadet who demonstrates exceptional interest in military activities and the Air Force, Cadet Major William D. Lackey, Statesville.

The Professor of Air Science Certificate of Achievement Award, presented annually for outstanding contributions to the Corps of Cadets, Cadet Captain Jordan E. Adams, Sanford; Cadet Lt. Colonel Ralph P. Hunt, Lexington; Cadet Major William D. Lackey, Statesville; Cadet Captain Daniel L. Sherrill, Spindale.

The Captain Robert A. Gray Arnold Air Society Achievement Award, presented annually to the cadet making the outstanding contribution to the Jesse J. Morehead Squadron of the Arnold Air Society, Cadet Major Jerry R. Cole, New Bern.

The Air Force Association Medal, presented annually to the outstanding second year cadet, Cadet Lt. Colonel Ralph P. Hunt, Lexington.

The Chicago Tribune Silver Medal, presented nanually to the first year advanced cadet who demonstrates exceptional interest in military activities and the Air Force Cadet S/Sgt William S. Godwin, Erwin.

The Convair Award, presented annually to the outstanding second year basic cadet selected for further flight training in each of the nation's AFROTC detachments. Cadet Basic Richard G. Rhyne, year basic cadet who demonstrates exceptional interest in military activities and the Air Force, Cadet Basic Harry A. Usher, Northport, N. Y.

The Sons of the American Revolution Minute Man Medal, presented annually to the first year basic cadet who exhibits outstanding merit in leadership, military bearing, and excellence in academics, Morven.

The Chicago Tribune Gold Medal, presented annually to the second year basic cadet who demonstrates exceptional interest in military activities in the Air Force, Cadet A/1C Joel E. Vickers, Durham.

The American Legion Medal, presented annually to the first Cadet Basic Samuel S. Woodley, Jr., Columbia.

Open Hearing Planned

Student body president Don Furtado, announced yesterday that there will be an open hearing with the town aldermen in the courtroom of the Town Hall Monday night at 7:30 to discuss the proposed installation of parking meters in Chapel Hill.

The proposal calls for meters from the square along Franklin Street to the ATO house, along Columbia Street to the Scuttlebutt. Furtado has urged that all students residing in these areas attend this hearing.

Episcopalians Plan Service Of Regation

The annual Regation Service of the Episcopal Church will be held Monday at 4 p.m. at the farm of Rev. Clarence Parker, retired priest of the Episcopal Church.

This is an ancient service of the Church in which prayers are offered for a bountiful harvest during the year.

The service consists of a procession, hymns and prayers. Father Parker will officiate and will be assisted by the Rev. L. B. Mead, Rector of the Church of the Holy Family, and the Rev. W. R. Insko, chaplain to Episcopal students.

Students will participate as crucifier, torch bearers, flag bearers, acolytes, boat bearer and thurifier.

The public has been invited to attend.

Two Students Plan Recital Here Sunday

Connie Von Bramer, pianist, and Nancy Turner, organist, will present a joint junior recital in Hill Hall Sunday at 4 p.m.

Miss Von Bramer, Kingsport, Tenn., attended Barry College in Miami before coming to the University. At Barry she participated in many musical productions as well as accompanying the choral club. She is a student of Dr. William S. Newman of the Music Dept. faculty.

Miss Turner, from Winston-Salem, is a transfer student from Agnes Scott College. She studies under Dr. Jan P. Schinhan, retiring faculty member of the Dept. of Music. Miss Turner is assistant organist at the University Methodist Church.

Miss Von Bramer will present the first half of the program, opening with two movements from the Bach "French Suite in B Minor." The major work will be Beethoven's "Sonata in A-flat Major," Op. 26. The pianist will conclude her portion of the recital with Chopin's "Nocturne in E Minor," Op. 72, No. 1.

Miss Turner will begin with three works from the baroque period: Corelli's "Prelude in D Minor," Buxtehude's "Canzonetta in G Major" and Bach's "Tidings of Joy." The chief offering of the organist will be C'esar Franck's "Chorale No. 3 in A Minor." The recital will close with the "Ave Maris Stella IV" of Marcel Dupre.

The program is sponsored by the UNC Dept. of Music and is open to the public at no charge.

NURSE INSTITUTE — Over 200 persons from all parts of North Carolina attended a one-day institute at the School of Nursing this week. The theme of the day-long institute was "Infection: A statement of the Problem and Suggestions for Control." One of the panels heard during the institute was composed of personnel from Memorial Hospital. The panel shown here, left to right, is composed of Wallace Womble, supervisor of housekeeping; Miss Dorothy Tate, head therapeutic dietitian; Leon King, supervisor of central supply room; Dr. Robert R. Cadmus, director of Memorial Hospital; Miss Audrey Booth, pediatrics supervisor; Miss Barbara Bain, operating room supervisor and H. E. Thompson, hospital engineer. The next one-day institute at the School of Nursing will be held Tuesday. The theme of the coming institute will be "Selection of Content and Learning Experiences in Teaching Fundamentals of Nursing.

'End Of The World' Here Tuesday

Starting Tuesday at 8:30 p.m., the Morehead Planetarium will present a demonstration of how the world could conceivably come to an end.

Titled "End of the World," it will be presented nightly at 8:30 o'clock through June 30, and at matinees Saturdays at 11 a.m. and 3 p.m. and Sundays at 3 and 4 p.m.

Nature's means of ending the world as we will show them may seem fantastic, but they are possible in a number of ways," according to Planetarium Manager A. F. Jenzano.

Spectators will witness the replica of an exploding meteor hurtling through space and striking the earth with explosive repercussions. Giant fingers of lightning will streak across the Planetarium dome accompanied by simulated storms and tidal disturbances, the causes of which will be clearly explained. And a moon will fall to the Earth and shatter into a million fragments which would encircle it and be held prisoner of the Earth's gravitational force.

It will also be shown how the Sun could become a nova and release tremendous quantities of heat and energy capable of scorching all matter to a crisp in a few seconds.

Accompanying the moving demonstration will be Biblical readings of passages which refer to means by which the world could end.

The demonstration will be complemented also by numerous exciting light and sound effects and by panoramas and projections, some of which have been generously loaned by Coronet Magazine and Esquire, Inc.

This is the first time in seven years that "End of the World" has been presented at the Morehead Planetarium.

"The program in 1951 attracted widespread interest, but we have been unable to work it into our program in the interim," Jenzaro said. "Thus, we have been able to incorporate in it now the latest scientific facts and reasoning which should make it more interesting than before."

The school version of the program is recommended for high school grades, shows for which will be given at 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. Wednesdays through Fridays from now till the end of school.

Compulsory Orientation Meeting Set

Monday night in Gerrard Hall at 7:30 there will be a compulsory meeting of all men's orientation counselors for the fall.

This is the last training meeting of the year and is of great importance, commented Orientation Chairman Herman Godwin.

He has encouraged all counselors to prepare for this meeting and study their manual, particularly the section on the Honor Council.

Godwin stated: "It is of extreme necessity that all counselors be at this meeting. We have a lot of business to conduct and attendance will be mandatory."

SP Marking 20th Anniversary Here

The Student Party will celebrate its 20th anniversary at the last meeting of the year Monday night in Graham Memorial.

James Wallace, Instructor in the Social Science Department, will address the party, covering the founding principles of the party and its continued growth and development since 1938.

The Student Party was founded in 1938 by a group of six students who, in their opinion, felt "that it was unfair for a single campus group to completely dominate Student Government." Prior to 1938, the University Party was the only existing party.

These six men were soon to leave school, but their concept found fertile soil. One of these six, almost forgotten by time, was the present Dean of Student Affairs, Fred H. Weaver.

During the next ten years, the Student Party was to form many discussion groups on issues facing students, such as the adoption of the Student Constitution in 1947. Student Party leaders and members, Douglas Hunt, now of Washington, D. C., Jimmy Wallace, and Al Lowenstein were very influential in the drafting and adoption of the Constitution.

In 1949, after 11 years of striving, the Student Party was to win its first presidential election, with the candidate, Bill Mackie, now a graduate student in history and of the Social Science Department. Following his election Student Party candidates John Sanders, presently of the Institute of Government and Henry Bowers, Assistant Director of Admissions at State College, were also victorious.

The next few years were "lean" for the Student Party, with several University Party candidates and an independent winning.

In 1956 the Student Party was returned to power and has since continued to maintain the executive offices of student government, with its candidates Bob Young, Sonny Evans, and the recently elected Don Furtado.

Student Party leaders have invited all students to the meeting Monday in the hope that a fuller appreciation and interest in the party, why it was developed, and its underlying principles can be gained. A social hour will follow the meeting, in connection with the anniversary celebration.

Al Lowenstein, former National Student Association President, in congratulating the SP, said, "The Student Party in the past has served an extremely useful function in presenting issues concerning the University to the campus with intelligence and courage.

"The party's greatest contributions have come during those periods when it has been more concerned with presenting the best qualified candidates it could find and standing for those principles which seemed right regardless of alleged political consequences.

"This campus is better for having had the contributions of student leaders like Doug Hunt, John Sanders, Jimmy Wallace, and Bill Mackie, whose independence and willingness to champion an unpopular cause, when that cause seemed just, marked them as giants among their contemporaries.

"It is hard to think of another campus in the United States where a student political organization has engendered more constructive ferment and produced more lasting friendship than has the Student Party over the past decade.

"It is my hope that the Student Party will again rise to the heights of service that have distinguished it in the past."

Angel Flight New Initiates Total Eleven

Eleven girls have been taken into Angel Flight, sponsor group for the Air Force ROTC.

The 11 girls, chosen from 60 nominees, were judged by a selections board according to poise, personality, appearance and interest.

The new members are Judy Rock, Charlotte; Sophia Martin, Chapel Hill; Diana Johnson, Asheboro; Jeanne Crewes, Belle Glade, Fla.; Pat Chandler, Dalton, Ga.; Sarah Arnold, Monroe, Ga.

Pat Brown, Goldsboro, Eunice Simmons, Pascagoula, Miss.; Jean Seyer, Virginia Beach, Va.; Barbara Thomas, Asheboro and Carol Tieslau, Portsmouth, Va.

More Names Swell Student Prexy's List

The following appointments made earlier by Student Body President Don Furtado were not included in the list of those filling Student Government posts in Saturday's Tar Heel:

Ken Hall, chairman, Honor System Commission.

Charlie Coley, chairman, Dance Committee.

Dick Robinson, attorney general.

Audit Board: Don Gray, chairman; Bob Carter, John Brooks, John Owens and Erwin Fuller.

Books, Travel, Retirement, Medical Plans And Freedom Affect Decision

By PRINGLE PIPKIN

(This is the conclusion of a five-part series dealing with the prospective faculty member's choice of an institution.)

Outside of the primary factors of salary, research facilities and the status of the graduate school, there are a number of fringe benefits which may weigh heavily with a prospective faculty man according to his interests.

When Dr. William Poteat of the philosophy Department left UNC last year to go to the Episcopal Seminary of the Southwest, UNC was able to match the increase in salary he was offered.

However, UNC was not able to match their offer of a sabbatical leave with pay, a $1,000 allowance for his personal use in buying the books he needed for his research, free housing and guaranteed attendance at four conferences each year with all expenses paid.

Books

The $1,000 allowance for buying books is larger than the amount which the entire philosophy department at UNC is allotted.

The problem of having a well-filled library is especially critical for those departments in the humanities which are engaged in graduate work. For the sciences this problem does not hold the same position but is overshadowed by the problem of having adequately equipped labs.

Dr. B. L. Ullman, chairman of the Classics Department, commented, "we never have enough (money) for buying books. This year we ran out by February."

He explained that books have been growing more expensive and that it was necessary to fill up "holes" left from earlier years. He said that the library was going down in rank and "to keep our standing the library will have to be far bigger than it is."

In a recent talk Dean James L. Godfrey, dean of the faculty, stated that the ideal library would contain 30 million items but that the University's only contained 900,000.

Until recently UNC had not been doing too well in the area of sponsoring attendance at the conferences and conventions of learned societies.

It is at these meetings that the University's nation-wide reputation can be enhanced. They also give the faculty members a chance to get new ideas and help to boost a faculty member's morale.

Travel

Dean E. A. Brecht of the School of Pharmacy said that his school was given $500 state money for faculty travel. However, due to a lack of travel funds UNC was not able to send anyone to the Seminar of Pharmachology, an important national meeting, this year.

He went on to say that at another institution the dean of the school of pharmacy had a fund of $2,500 a year to take care of his traveling expenses and official entertaining.

Travel expenses if paid by the state become an enhancement to the salary which is not subject to income tax, he said.

In 1952 Alumni Annual Giving Fund provided the money to pay traveling expenses of a faculty member who is an officer of an academic organization or who is going to deliver a paper before that organization.

So far the Alumni have given $26,500 to this project which has helped to alleviate this problem in many of the departments.

Retirement

Another fringe benefit is a retirement program. Recently the state combined the social security benefits with the state compensation making it possible for a full professor to retire on about $3,000 a year. Reactions to this system are varied.

Dr. Ullman said that in light of what other universities do along these lines he did not think the system was adequate, but it is better than it used to be.

Dr. Fletcher Green of the History Department said that the system is "fairly good," and he has not found it a great obstacle in talking to prospective staff members.

"The state needs desperately to do something to improve the retirement system," Dr. Glen Haydon, chairman of the Music Department, said. Another departmental head noted that private universities are ahead of UNC along these lines.

Dr. George E. Nicholson, chairman of the Department of Statistics, said that since the country is subject to a creeping inflation, a retirement system maybe adequate at the time it is overhauled, but inflation soon overtakes it.

Medical Plan

Some members of the faculty noted the desirability of having a medical plan to cover the members of the faculty. At the present time faculty get no sort of state sponsored benefits or preferential treatment if they have to use the facilities at Memorial Hospital.

A man's chances for advancing his rank is sometimes a very important consideration. According to Dean Godfrey the possibility for adment here "is better than any other place in the country." Fifty-two per cent of the faculty are full professors.

Dr. Fletcher Green describes the basis for advancement as being a consideration of a man's excellence in teaching, secondly his research and publication and thirdly his general university activities.

Instructors are hired for one year terms, assistant professors for two three year terms, associate professors for five year terms and full profesors have their appointments for life.

Freedom

Academic freedom can be an important factor; however, at UNC the general consensus of those faculty members interviewed seemed to be that it was "good" here.

A university's national reputation will often help in attracting talented, young men. One staff member took an $800 cut salary in order to teach at UNC rather than going to another institution whose department in this field was not as highly rated.

This same factor also helped in causing a professor to turn down a $5,000 increase in his salary. Graduate students are also drawn to an institution which has a high national standing.

However, this factor does have its limits.

Selectivity

Sometimes student selectivity will be important to a professor. As UNC is a state institution, it has not been able to be as strong on this point as the private schools.

The Graduate School offers some relief along these lines. Also within the last four years a program for advanced freshmen has been started and will be extended to the sophomore class next year.

These advanced courses will offer faculty members the chance to teach classes of students who can compare favorably with any other group of students in any other university.

Some institutions provide quarters for the unmarried men of their faculty and use this factor as another inducement in the sharp competition to get capable, qualified faculty members.

These areas are those in which all institutions of higher learning now find themselves competing.

However, the destiny of the University rests ultimately in the hands of the North Carolina Legislature.

When they consider the budget next spring, it will be their decision which will determine if the University can continued to be a leader in higher education or if it will become a second class institution bringing few benefits or glories to the state.

IN THE INFIRMARY

Students in the infirmary yesterday included:

Miss Pat Gregory and William Christian, Thomas McGee and Theodore Edlich.

Anniversary

The Student Party is having its twentieth anniversary, but before congratulations are in order, there has to be an assessment of what it is that is having its anniversary.

Is it the party that was supposed to cater to individuals from all walks of life, devoted to bettering student government?

Is it a place where responsible people can gather to discuss ideas and problems with an eye to solving these problems?

Is it a place where concrete solutions are fostered and leaders are nurtured?

Is it a place where ideals are pursued and not compromised for the sake of the political expedient?

Is it a group of men with courage, whose willingness to display this characteristic mark them as leaders on the campus and in the world?

If it were the old Student Party the answers to all these questions would be "yes," for the old Student Party was founded to cultivate this type of atmosphere.

If it were that party that was having its anniversary, then congratulations are in order.

But it is not that party that is having its anniversary.

The men of courage have by and large left the party, and if there are any in the party now, they are in the minority.

The atmosphere of discussion, which would bring about the creative solution to problems is gone, and in its stead there is an attitude of cautiousness.

The type of spirit that would pick the most competent and courageous person to run for office has been replaced by the thought of electability over all.

It is nice to be in office, but if there are no ideas than can be expressed on the part of the officeholder, then what good is his being in office.

Yet, electability and avoidance are the keys of the new Student Party. Moreover, there is such a confusion within the party that at one meeting not long ago, a member made a motion that the party take stands on issues. Not what stand or what issues, but just a motion that the party take stands on issues. What is even more important, the motion failed.

The Student Party once was the bulwark of those who wanted to get things done. Now it is none of this. It promises nothing a third grader couldn't promise, and has nothing constructive to offer on campus issues as a party.

There comes a time for evaluation of a group, and at the present time this group being weighed on the scales is found wanting.

The party is in for congratulations for surviving twenty years. It deserves best wishes in trying to resurrect itself into the organization that it once was. The good of student government can be served if it does become what it was.

Anthony Wolff

The Comedy of Errors was probably the first play Shakespeare wrote; it is also the shortest of all his plays; and it is the least original, to the extent that it draws heavily from the Roman comic conventions, and observes the classical unities.

Such limitations gave Shakespeare an opportunity to manipulate situations to a degree which strains the audience's credulity, and Shakespeare does an admirable job of it. Such an ability to handle complexities stood him well in later, more mature plays: he also found occasion in later works to further develop the tragic implications in comedy, and to improve upon the device of utilizing parallel sub-plots to strengthen the impression of the main plot — both artifices which are used lightly in The Comedy of Errors. Working with nothing but the traditional mistaken identity situation, Shakespeare takes every opportunity to inject farce and word-play into the play, and, at the graduate-student's age of twenty-six or so, he was a master at such light fun.

The play itself is nonetheless not entirely successful, particularly as the original difficulty of identification becomes compounded again and again, almost ad nauseum; and as the plot moves toward the inevitable comic resolution of love and unity without much character development or increase of self-knowledge. All in all, it is a very clever exercise in scrambling and unscrambling, with most of the actual humor in the interpretation.

Credit is due Shakespeare, then, for a tidy and fast-moving script; but at least equal credit is due the Carolina Playmakers for the joys which they inject into the current production in the Forest Theatre.

The whole production is distinguished by fluency, verve, and pace. Only in those scenes where Shakespeare himself is at his weakest does the play become slow and heavy, particularly in the first scene in which the playwrite had to write into a long monologue all the background for the action; and perhaps, too, in the love scene between Antipholus of Syracuse and Luciana, in which the fault is partially due to Megan Stuart's none-too-forceful portrayal of Luciana.

Miss Stuart's lack of force is emphasised by the strong acting of Amanda Meiggs, playing Adriana, Luciana's sister and husband to Antipholus of Ephesus. Luciana is, of course, a subordinate character to Adriana, but she is nonetheless written as a strong character with some degree of sophistication. Miss Stuart's acting is properly stylized and graceful — there just wasn't enough of it.

Miss Meiggs characterization is extremely forceful — sometimes, perhaps, too much so — but, again, a character is misinterpreted. Adriana is no Kate: she is not a shrew. She is extremely loving, and equally pealous, but not so vitriolic or tough as she often seems in this production. She, like Luciana, is not essentially a comic character, but, rather, they are both foils against which the confusion of the male characters is displayed. They have their moments, but to give them more is ot destroy their charm.

The truly comic moments in the production — and there are many — belong in good part to the two Dromio's played by John Sneden and Darwin Soloman. Their antics are of seemingly endless variety and excellent timing as they suffer unjustly and indignantly for the pervading confusion.

Special credit must go to Sneden, who provides most of the comic highlights of the show; but Soloman, as his twin, is not much his inferior.

John Whitty and Taylor Williams, as the two "Antipholi" whose twinship provides the basis for most of the confusion, are both excellent. Their farce is never overdone, and their mugging "asides" are very musing.

As the Courtezan, Betty Rhodes gives her best performance of this year. David Peterson, George Manasse, Harvey Knox, and Margaret Starnes are also good in other minor roles.

Doris Berry and Carl Hinrichs are only adequate as Aemilia and Aegeon, respectively — although Mr. Hinrichs' faults must be shared by Shakespeare.

Director Tommy Rezzuto has conceived a group of harlequin-type mimes as scene shifters, and occasional participants in the action. They are effective in preserving the continuity during the scene breaks, but perhaps their initial pantomime could represent more closely the action which is to follow: were they so employed, their appearance before the first scene would have more value, in terms of the total effect of the play, as well as more effect on the audience at the moment; to use them as a dumb show would be in keeping with Elizabethan practice, as well (c.f. Hamlet).

Perhaps Director Rezzuto deserves the bulk of the credit for the undeniable success of the production as a whole. Most directors would be loathe to undertake The Comedy of Errors, and it is usually left for some student of Shakespeare to search for indications of what was to come in its author's career. But Rezzuto took it with all its faults, and, supplementing the script with a repertoire of gimmicks, he turned out a genuinely amusing and often hilarious play.

Richard Newdick's costumes and Albert Gordon's setting were very effective. The costumes are all almost equally stunning, but Amanda Meigg's and Betty Rhodes' are outstanding. The conception of the Antipholus house is the best part of the setting.

This is, without a doubt, a good show. It is well worth going to see, and the playmakers should be applauded for a good job all around. But this is still pretty poor Shakespeare, and as a University we have a certain responsibility to do better by him.

Besides putting on an amusing show, the Playmakers have proven by The Comedy of Errors that they can do Shakespeare, and do him pretty well, to boot. If, with a minimum of rehearsal, they can do so well with a relatively easy undertaking, it seems not too much to assume that they can do equally well with something a bit more heavy and complex.

Doing a university's "duty" to Shakespeare does not, to be sure, involve giving up such pleasures as The Comedy Of Errors; it does involve something more than classroom lip-service to Hamlet, Measure For Measure, Leap, etc.

The Beat Generation can now rest happily on its laurels. A young man named Mort Sahl has just released a recording on the Verve label entitled The Future Lies Ahead which seems sure of great success. Mr. Sahl typifies, in many ways, the Beat Generation—and I am still not at all sure that it exists.

Whether or not the Generation exists, Mr. Sahl certainly does and he certainly is funny. The recording, made in San Francisco's hungry night club, is a wonderful example of a man who is against everything and makes it all seem funny.

Sahl's delivery is unorthodox, to say the least. He may start to talk on Adlai Stevenson and end up discussing a Veterans Housing Project in California. He may bounce from the Beat Generation into Billy Graham. His disorganization, however, takes on an amazingly organized pattern.

None of his materials are written. He appears on stage in a tattered sweater, old pants, tousled hair, and with a newspaper wadded in his hand. He picks a topic — "Eggheads and Government" — and starts from there. Where he ends up is anybody's guess.

A few Sahl-isms are going to stick: on a folk singer — "He had one of those velvet shirts open down to the navel . . . the thing is, he didn't have one . . . that is either a show business gimmick or the ultimate rejection of mother;" on a man who illegally collected the offering during a Billy Graham Rally (which Sahl went to for a "consumer test")—"When they brought him to Graham for salvation, he was asked why he did it. 'Because I wanted to get closer to God' . . . By eliminating the middleman?"

It would be easy to go on forever, quoting remarks like the one made about LeMay's plan to scare the Russians by flying from Omaha to Argentina in ten hours —"I think it will terrify them . . . if they look down to see him go by." The record is on sale down town, however, and I would not want to rob you of the pleasure of first hearing. But get it—it really is a gem.

Like fellow laborer Whitfield, I am having subject troubles. I don't feel particularly vitriolic, nor do I feel particularly humorous. If I try to write a damnation upon the "Mickey Mouse Club" and the people who watch it, I'll get angry letters from most of the campus, so that is out. If I try to be funny about eating places in Chapel Hill, Lenoir Hall will want me expelled. It's a hard life.

I notice that one of our local flickeries has two Alec Guiness shows coming up next week—they are both good, and no self-respecting student should let himself miss them . . . After careful examination I have decided that clothing sales are a farce. Unless you happen to like the styles of 1948, there isn't a thing for you.

It was too bad that Walt Kelly got sick. Maybe we didn't offer him enough? . . . As you journey to La Pizza, the Rathskeller, or any other spot which offers the pizza, bear in mind the remarks made about it in the latest issue of "Mad," which might be referred to as a college boys' Bible—Mort Sahl refers to the "New Yorker" as the college girls' Bible. The suggestions made were excellent — especially the ones which come to bear on that new $49.50 charcoal grey suit.

The plans for a new student union sound very enticing. But for all that stuff it seems as though they would need Kenan Stadium . . . I wonder if the "night club" would serve mixed drinks? It wouldn't be a night club without them—and a $12.50 cover charge. That's night life.

Have you ever thought to make a collection of slang expressions of the day, with the end view of having a memory book to muse over in your old age? I thought of doing one without definitions — I wonder if thirty years from now I'll remember what "Skody" and "Ain't sharp enough" used to mean? Ah for the good old days, of "vines," and "out sack," and "sick sick sick," and "gasser." Oh well, the terms should prove interesting to a folklore professor a hundred or more years from now.

A STOP GAP? — No, but these fences provide some fancy acrobatics. Here shown are two ways to win the war of the fences.

The Student Legislature has a true Will Rogers among its members. His name, officially, is Representative Norman Smith (SP).

To the members of the legislature he is the tall, lanky guy who rose for recognition on the night of the UNCARC debate, and by one simple sentence, broke the tension and angry tempers generated by hours of bitter debate.

To The Daily Tar Heel readers, he is just another author of just another bill to set up just another committee, where there very well could be too many bills and committees already.

But to those who know him, Norman's soft manner and slow pace of action and speech, so catch the mood of Oklahoma's favorite son, that you expect him to get up and say: "The United States of America is the only nation in the history of the world that ever went to the poor house in an automobile."

If you expect this, you aren't far from wrong, for when time comes to debate his bill on the dorm rent increase, he begins by saying: "Mr. Speaker, and fellow legislators, this thing is an iceberg! It's an iceberg because there's more to it than meets the eye, only one eleventh is above the surface, but when your ship rams it you know that the rest of it is there."

He continues, using descriptive phrases like "Hydra-Headed Monster," and "1958 style Colonial."

Not in spite of his humor, but because of it, Norman Smith's points are put across, and remembered. And the legislature is a more pleasant place in which to work as a result of his presence.

In the 25th Assembly, the principle of "I am helping myself when I hurt the other group" has given away to an attitude of "let's both of us take care of our problems, together."

As a result, this assembly has been able to pass more constructive legislation and take a longer and deeper look at real campus problems than any of its predecessors in a like or even longer period of time.

As an Episcopalian I get tired of people classing me as a Protestant. I, as an Episcopalian, am a Catholic. Members of the Roman Church are not the only Catholics. Catholic Christendom includes not only the Roman Church but also Anglicanism and Eastern Orthodoxy. As for the Episcopal (i.e. Anglican) position, I quote the late Presiding Bishop of the Episcopal Church, the Rt. Rev. Charles P. Anderson: "The Episcopal Church, historically, structurally, theologically, belongs to the Catholic group. When the Church of England had a family quarrel when the Bishop of Rome, and rightfully (as we think) declined to recognize his jurisdiction, she put herself on record in her canon law, as not thereby forsaking or rejecting the Catholic Churches of Christendom. She never broke off Communion with Rome or with Oriental Churches. She remained Catholic. Her doctrine of the Church is the doctrine of the Catholic Creds. Her doctrine and practice of Baptism, her doctrine and practice of Confirmation, her doctrine and discipline touching Holy Matrimony, her doctrine and practice of the Eucharist, her doctrine and practice of the ministerial priesthood, her acceptance of Catholic orders, her rejection of Protestant orders, her threefold ministry, her theological premises, her devotional life—all these align her with the Catholic family and differentiate her from the Protestant family."

Far from obscurity, yet even further from the pinnacle of esteem he so emphatically deserves, stands our ex-chancellor, Dr. House. Never has one word been uttered, at least that reached my ears, of Dr. House that has not been sincere praise. The words he utters, so richly filled with wisdom, are as "apples of gold and pictures of silver." He is, irrefutably, among the most noble of persons ever to honor this university with their presence. In truth, he borders on the omniscient. What recognition has been given the good chancellor is, not because of it's quantity, but his transcendental preeminence, pathetically wanting. When I look into the future I see his name among those that have contributed greatness to this school. Fie on us, that we allow a day to pass without in some way showing our gratitude for all that he has done for us.

His classes not only painlessly give us an insight into the glory of Rome, but cultivate in us the admirable habit of thinking, reasoning, and appreciating that which deserves it. Not one person shall leave his class but shall be the better person because of his influence.

Perhaps this shall serve to show the good Dr. that we of the student body are now, and forever shall be, exceedingly appreciative; perhaps it shall stir into action those persons that have been planning on thanking him for being what he is, and for helping to make of them what they are.

Thank you, Dr. House, for providing us with a goal towards which we might strive.

Don Furtado, dynamic Student Body President, blasted the Aldermen of the town of Chapel Hill with one of the most colorful tongue lashings seen on this campus in recent years.

Said he, "If the town Aldermen do not reconsider this parking meter proposal and at the same time consider the problems which fraternity and sorority residents have parking, we the students will initiate and carry out the most complete boycott of the merchants, theaters and restaurants of Chapel Hill that this town has ever witnessed."

The President was still working to head off the proposed installation of parking meters in front of Big Fraternity Court at press time. It was known that many people were in sympathy with his cause and that popular support would be easily gathered for a boycott movement.

In other important political developments in the past week, Dick Robinson, a sophomore member of the PIKA fraternity was selected as the new Attorney General of the Student Body.

Robinson succeeds the very able and highly talented Sonny Hallford in the position. Robinson has been very active in the past with the Student Legislature, Carolina Symposium and as Assistant Attorney General under Hallford.

It was expected that the new Attorney General would work well in conjunction with the other new Student Body officers and Hugh Patterson, the new Honor Council chairman, in coordinating and setting up the Honor Council procedures.

UNC track flash Dave Scurlock blazed to another school record last week in a dual meet with DOOK T.he brilliant junior, one of the finest middle distance men in the world, turned in a very fine 48.2 sec. time in winning the 440.

Omnipresent Sam Magill was boosted up the chain of command in South Building this week as he was made Assistant Dean of Student Affairs. In conjunction with this move, Mrs. Martha Decker was made Assistant to the Dean of Women.

On Monday night, 724 people, almost scattered by threatening weather braved the elements to attend the annual Y-Nite picnic held in front of the Old Well. Featuring a lively program, the event went smoothly under the expert guidance of Co-Chairman Daryle Farrington and Graham Claytor.

The Order of the Old Well held its annual elections this week and selected Al Goldsmith as president, Katy Stewart as vice president, Herman Godwin as secretary-treasurer and Bob Carter, Paddy Wall and Wayne Bishop to the executive committee.

As alternates to the executive committee, the group chose Don Millen and Bob Cowan.

Big 6'9" Joe Quigg of NCAA championship fame, will only be able to play for one semester next year. The ACC ruled this week that since Quigg will use up his eligibility of five years at this point, they could not rule him an exception regardless of the circumstances.

On Wednesday, Al Goldsmith the chairman of the Symposium Interim Committee, released the names of those students who will serve as members of this group.

Included in the list were Herman Godwin, Lucy Forsyth, Cynthia Thompson, Dick Robinson, Jack Lawing, Jack Spain, Ed Levy, David Parker, Mark Wilson, Jim Smalley, Jack Raper and Davis Young.

IFC President Tucker Yates and his group handed down a surprising edict this week abolishing all loud Sunday fraternity parties. One of the interesting features of the proposal is that only one vote kept it from passing unanimously.

Sonny Evans and Dot Pressly, perhaps the most well known members of the Senior Class, were voted Mr. Alumni and Miss Alumna respectively by classmates, grateful to them for their meritorious and unselfish service to the University. It was a fitting climax to a pair of great careers at Carolina.

Student Legislator Norman Smith went crusading this week against the self-liqidating plan of paying for residence halls at UNC. Smith explained that we must find another way to finance any future dormitories here, as the rising room rents will be too much for many students to pay. On Thursday night the Legislature set up an emergency committee at his suggestion to look into he situation.

New officers were chosen this week by the University Party. Selected to serve for the coming year were Jack Lawing, chairman; Morry Johnston, vice chairman; Susan Saunders, secretary and David Green as treasurer.

The Order of the Valkyries, highest honorary for Carolina Women initiated eight new women this week into its ranks. Those selected were Mrs. Mary Davis, Mrs. Guion Johnson, Miss Dorothy Douglas Kellman, Miss Barbara Faye Miles, Miss Mary Susanne Mosteller, Miss Midori Sasaki, Miss LuRuth Sutton and Miss Paddy Wall.

Wayne Young, Carolina's great sophomore moundsman continued along his winning ways this week setting dow the Blue Devils of DOOK on three hits in winning a close 2-1 decision. He won his own game by driving in the second run.

It was a busy week at Carolina with a lot of names making a lot of news. See ya next week.

Exchange areas served by General Telephone are shown in dark tone.

We're proud to be No. 2

The people who live in the United States have more of almost everything—including telephones.

Therefore it's possible, in such a fabulous country, to be the No. 2 communications system in size—and still have a great opportunity for service and growth.

General Telephone serves, for example, more telephone customers than the total number of telephones in such a country as France.

And this list is growing—at the rate of 1,000 new customers every working day—partly because so many of the areas we serve are suburban areas, which are the fastest-growing areas in this country.

All of which confronts us with many challenges.

If we cannot be the largest, we can surely aspire to be the finest—to do whatever we do better than it has been done before.

So we're happy to be No. 2. It keeps you on your toes.

Carolina Gets Tennis Award; Bortner Wins In ACC Singles

Carolina's Bob Bortner dominated the finals of the Atlantic Coast Conference tennis tournament yesterday by taking the singles crown from Duke's Don Romhilt and then teaming up with Steve Bank to cop the doubles title from Romhilt and Dick Katz.

Bortner, a senior from Richmond, Va., had little trouble with Romhilt and beat him in straight sets 6-2, 6-3, 6-3. Along the way Bortner cracked his opponent's serve nine times, three times in each set, and that was the story of the match.

Half an hour after winning the singles championship Bortner came back paired with Bank to take on Duke's Katz and Romhilt for the doubles title. As a team the Carolina twosome was seeded number one and they proved they deserved the top spot by whipping the Blue Devil pair 6-2, 6-3, 4-6, 6-2.

Immediately after the completion of the doubles match Dr. Henry Clark presented the individual trophies to the winners and runners up of both the singles and the doubles. After the cups were awarded Duke coach Wint Cobb, chairman of the ACC tennis committee, presented the John F. Kenfield Memorial Award to Vladimir Cernik. This award, given for the first time this year in memory of the former Carolina tennis coach, will be an annual award which goes to the team scoring the most victories in the conference tournament.

In his singles match the Carolina captain took charge from the beginning and kept the pressure on his opponent from Cincinnati by breaking his service at regular intervals during the entire contest. In the first set Bortner won the opening game and then broke Romhilt's service to take a 2-0 lead. The Duke star rallied by holding his own serve after cracking Bortner's second service. With the game score tied 2-2 Bortner began to roll and took four straight games and the first set 6-2.

Bortner served first in the second set and grabbed the first two games by holding his own service and busting Romhilt's. Romhilt won the third game but then lost the next two to make the score 4-1 in favor of the Richmond senior. At this point the Duke star again came back holding service and taking the seventh game after Bortner had built up a 40-30 lead. Down 4-3 but having the service Romhilt had a chance to even the count in the eighth game. Bortner would have none of this however, and swept the next two games and the second set 6-3.

In the first four games of the third set each player held service and the score was tied 2-2 going into the fifth game with Romhilt serving. Here again for the seventh time in the match Bortner crashed through Romhilt's service to take a 3-2 lead. In the eighth game of the set Romhilt won his last game of the day by breaking Bortner's service. Down 5-3 and owning the service Romhilt made his last stand, but the Duke senior couldn't hold the all-important service and lost the deciding set 6-3.

With the singles crown in his pocket and a clean tee shirt on his back Bortner was ready to try to win some more silver at the expense of Romhilt and Katz. Bank, a senior from Forest Hills, New York had played doubles with Bortner all year and the two were unbeaten in conference competition.

The first of the four doubles sets went to the Tar Heel pair by virtue of Romhilt's failure to hold his service. In the fourth and eighth games the Carolina seniors cracked through to gain victory. In the second set Bortner lost his service once, but Katz and Romhilt each lost their's once as the Tar Heel team took a commanding 2-0 set lead into the third set.

The third set was featured by five service breaks. This time, however, the Blue Devil twosome did most of the breaking and won the set 6-4.

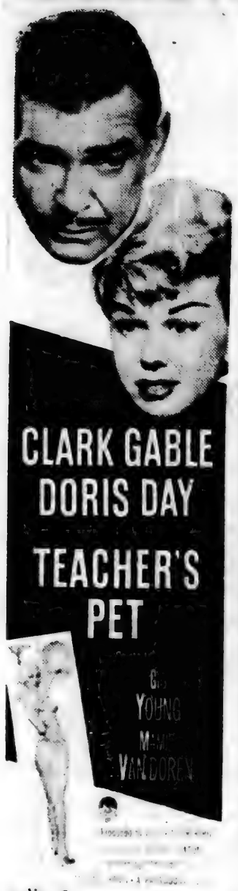
The fourth set turned out to be the deciding set of the match as Bortner and Bank again took advantage of Romhilt's failure to hold service and finished off the Duke pair 6-2. A smash by Bank marked the end of the match and finished the college tennis days of the victorious Carolina seniors.

The Heart-Rending Tale Of The Ant —

Once upon a time, an ant was stumbling along with his mandibles loaded with books and stuff. Coming around a bend he ran smack into a grasshopper, all hot up and fiddling "Lucky Love" for all he was worth.

"Dullard!" cried the ant, picking up his scattered books," can't you look where I'm goings?

"Hey, Hey!" said the grasshopper, rolling on his back and clapping away with his whole corn set of feet. "Hey hey, to you my industrious friend. A large guffah in feet."



"You may laugh now" snarled the ant, "but you wait. Foresight pays, and tomorrow —"

Unfortunately he never finished his sentence, as just then the farmer started his DDT duster, and the both of them hurried off to what we trust was a Better Place.

THE MORAL — We're sorry this thing didn't work out the way we planned it. What we wanted to point out was that when vacation comes, and you find yourself stranded in Nag's Head or Las Vegas or somewhere, you'll find books hard to come by. If you don't want your head to rust off during the summer, a visit to the undersigned right now is indicated.

Bishop Sets 2-Mile Record In ACC Meet

By DAVE WIBLE

Duke Stadium — Carolina's ironlunged Wayne Bishop posted a 9:19.9 in the 2-mile run yesterday for one of the six records broken in the Atlantic Coast Conference track championships won by Maryland.

Running with his usual grace and precision, Bishop set a fast pace and held it to finish 200 yards ahead of runner-up Walter Tyler of Clemson, clipping almost six seconds off of the old 9:25.3 mark held by Mike Shea of State.

Duke's Dave Sime took charge of the 100, 220 and javelin to gather 15 points for the Blue Devils and insure their second place standing over Carolina. The Blue Devils compiled 44 points against 37 for the Tar Heels. Maryland was far out of reach with 72½ points.

Sime won the 100 in the conference tying time of 9.5. His 220 clocking was 20.6. While winning the javelin, he set a new conference record at 212 feet 10 inches.

South Carolina's Done Goodroe started the record making ball rolling by knocking a tenth of a second off of his old high hurdles mark of 14.4. Sime followed up with his javelin record, and Bishop with his two-mile mark.

Down in the shot put area, Maryland's big Ed Cooke heaved the 16 pound ball 54 feet 2 inches to break the mark he set last year. South Carolina's Dave Coates was only a half inch off of Cooke's mark. Another Maryland man, Tom Tait went for height and cleared 6 feet 5¾ inches for a new record in the high jump.

The meet came to a climax when the Duke mile relay team of Paul Bollman, Curtis Cobb, Tom Menaker and Tom Bazemore chopped two seconds off of the record, clocking 3:19.

Carolina's Dave Scurlock had a successful day defending his titles with wins in both the 440 and 880. His 440 time was a tenth of a second slower than the 48.0 record. Ray Stanley joined the group of Tar Heel winners with a 22' 5½" broad jump win. Second place in that event was Carolina's Ward Sims.

Deacs Edge UNC Golfers By 1; Thornton Individual Champ

WINSTON-SALEM—(AP—) Virginia faltered and Wake Forest slipped in with its second straight Atlantic Coast Conference golf championship Saturday. North Carolina's Bill Thornton came through with his second straight par round for 142 and the individual title.

Wake Forest's four lowest players among the designated six combined for a two-day total of 589 over the Old Town Club Course to nose out North Carolina and Virginia who tied for second at 500.

Virginia's Paul Sackett ended the final round with two bogey sixes and a 77.

Wake Forest's Keith Eynon, a senior who made the team for the first time this year, came in with a one-over par 72 to sew up the title.

Maryland finished with a 592 to take fourth place in the 5th annual tournament and was followed by Duke, 610, N. C. State, 622, South Carolina 632, and Clemson 636.

Thornton's 142 total was only one stroke better than those posted by Ronnie Thomas of Wake Forest and Glenn Mitchell of Virginia who tied for second in the individual chase. Virginia's Jordan Ball finished fourth with 144, two strokes off the pace.

Thornton's second-day 71 enabled him to vault from third-place over Thomas and Ball who had shot 70's Friday to tie for the first-round lead.

The 24-year-old senior atoned for two bogeys Saturday with as many birdies. He three-putted the par 3 third and par 4 13th holes and sand 2 and 20-foot putts on the par 4 9th and par 5 18th holes.

Thornton needed the birdie on the final hole to beat off the challenge of Mitchell and Thomas. Mitchell also had two bogeys and two birdies in racking up his 71. Mitchell entered the second round with a 72, good enough for a four-way tie for fourth. He had registered his one-over-par, first-round score despite two bogeys on the final two holes.

Any Action On Meters Deferred While Aldermen Study Argument

But Decision May Not Wait Until Next Fall

By ED ROWLAND

Don Furtado, representing students opposed to the parking ordinance proposed by the Town of Chapel Hill, won a moral victory last night when the Board of Aldermen decided to defer any action until the Board members had time to look over the student's case.

Mayor O. K. Cornwell said the Board did not have to wait until the fall, as the students suggested, but that positive action may be taken at the next regular meeting of the Board in June.

Furtado told the town fathers the same thing that he told the Merchants's Association: students will be left with no place to park if meters and restrictions prohibit them from using spaces on Franklin and Columbia Streets.

He presented a series of proposals to the Aldermen setting forth the aims of the students.

Under the proposed ordinance, John Anderson, town planning assistant, told the meeting that a survey showed metered parking probably will have desirable effects on street and parking congestion.

Furtado, Gordon Street and Sonny Kinsey told the board that removing 44 parking spaces on Columbia Street from Franklin to Cameron and installing 2-hour meters there would leave the students with less place to park and they asked if that would solve anything.

Mayor Cornwell observed that limiting parking to 2 hours on that street has resulted in "100 per cent improvement in the situation. Before that time only one off-street lot was maintained by the fraternities, now there are several. This is what we wanted," he said.

Mayor Cornwell said the Board's interest was not revenue. "It will be a long time before the meters will yield any, but solving the traffic problem that is almost beyond our control now."

Furtado's proposals included:

Establish a committee of students, aldermen, merchants and University officials to study the problem over the summer and make proposals in the fall.

Let parking remain the same on Franklin Street from Spencer Dorm to the edge of the business district.

Allow parking on Rosemary Street from 9 a.m. 4 p.m. during non-rush hours.

Have the University put all-day parking in the lot across from the Carolina Inn where the old greenhouse is.

Have the Merchant's paved lot be used by merchants and employees until customers begin to take advantage of the lot.

Council To Ask Meters Only On Franklin St.

The University Traffic and Safety Council met Monday afternoon and recommended that the University adminstration ask the Chapel Hill Board of Aldermen to consider a request to install parking meters on Franklin St. only and to leave the other streets as they are.

A UNC faculty member said the Building and Grounds Committee had earlier gone on record as in "favor of meters," but they stated no particular areas in town.

All this is an effort to relieve congestion on the streets and in parking spaces. The University spent $75,000 in building the recently completed bell tower parking lot.

Thus far the new lot has received very little use the faculty member stated.

This is not the first time such action has been considered. Several years ago an administrative board of the University recommended parking meters for Chapel Hill, but no definite steps were taken.

CU-Education Board Conflict Committee Report Approved

RALEIGH, (AP)-The executive committee of the UNC Board of Trustees yesterday approved the report of a special committee, which has been studying apparent conflicts in authority between the trustees and the State Board of Higher Education.

However, Arch T. Allen, Secretary to the trustees, said the committee's report would not be made public until it is submitted to the full board of trustees at a meeting to be held at State May 26.

The trustees special study committee was headed by Thomas J. Pearsall of Rocky Mount. Other members were Victor Bryant of Durham and Rudolph Mintz of Southport .The committee was named to decide if the conflicts can be settled by administrative action or whether legislation is needed.

Rep. W. C. Harris Jr. of Wake, a member of the board of trustees, said at that time the trustees should decide whether "it wants to run the University or whether it wants someone else to run it."

One of the conflicts between the University and the education board resulted from a decision of the board to reduce from 500 to 300 units a housing development the University is planning to build at State College for married students.

A similar committee from the Board of Higher Education also has been studying the matter of conflicts of authority between the board and the trustees.

However, Dr. J. Harris Purks, director of higher education, said the board's committee has not yet made its report. The board is scheduled to meet here Friday.

Outstanding Senior Title Goes To Kit Whitehurst

Miss Mildred Hodge Whitehurst of Danville, Va., was named recipient of the Irene F. Lee Award to the Outstanding Senior Woman at UNC in a presentation ceremony Sunday in Spencer Hall.

Miss Whitehurst is the fourth recipient of the annual award. Chancellor William Aycock who made the presentation, noted that Miss Whitehurst has demonstrated outstanding qualities of leadership at the University, and has maintained high standards of active, constructive contribution to campus activities.

She is, he continued, "an intelligent student and a conscientious one, who is serious in application and who has shown sound judgment in combining her academic responsibilities with those of the leadership which she has assumed. She has exemplified excellence in character as well as in leadership; her high moral and ethical standards are an ideal to her associates, and her warm personality and her enthusiasm have gathered for her a host of friends and admirers."

Commenting on Miss Whitehurst's selection, Dean of Women Katherine Carmichael said: "Typical of her achievements in areas of leadership is her efficient, understanding work as chairman of Women's Honor Council, on which she has served since her first semester. She has been a tireless worker in educating the women students to the function of Women's Honor Council, and to various other organizations and issues of particular concern to women on this campus. Noteworthy also, has been her work within Panhellenic, where her clear thinking and dependability are valued highly."

Last winter, Miss Whitehurst's achievements were recognized campus-wide when she was tapped into the Valkyries.

Activities in addition to those mentioned above, in which Miss Whitehurst, who is better known as "Kit" has participated are Honor Council Commission, Pi Beta Phi (Rush Chairman), YWCA, Student-Faculty Review Board, and University Party.

Charles Shaffer, Director of Development, presented a short history of the award. Mrs. Lee, whose name the award holds, made a bequest in order that the outstanding senior woman might be honored.

Mrs. Lee was the first housemother of Spencer Dormitory, the first women's residence on the campus of the University.

The winner of the award was presented with a silver goblet, and was honored at a reception following the presentation.

Few Signatures Being Added To Meter Petition

Student Body President Don Furtado reported Monday afternoon that fery few signatures wer obtained on the petitions UNC students had circulated among Chapel Hill merchants last Thursday.

Furtado said, "We presented the resolution to the merchants in the hope that we could have some tangible evidence of merchant support for our battle gainst meters in residential areas.

"Very few signatures were gained, primarily, I believe, because the resolution pertained to a certain area, while many of the merchants are opposed to the entire idea of meters.

"Others did not sign it, I believe, because they have no desire to commit themselves. Some merchants have shown that they are wiling to support us through personal contacts. Just how much they have done will be seen tonight" (Monday).

New Exchanges Are Scheduled For Next Year

Three foreign students will study at Carolina next year under the foreign exchange program, the Foreign Exchange School Committee announced yesterday.

In addition to the two students from Goettingen University in Germany, a student from the Finance School of LaPoz, Bolivia, will spend a year in Chapel Hill.

The main purpose of the Bolivian student's stay will be to study government in action.

Heinrich Hamke and Peter Nikolaisen have been named to represent Goettingen. Frances Reynolds of Newton and Bob Noble of Raleigh will attend Goettingen next year under the exchange program.

Jose Lopez from Bolivia is the third student. There will not be a Carolina student studying in Bolivia.

Meals for the two Goettingen men will be furnished by the IFC while they are studying here.

Jim Menzel, secretary of the Foreign Exchange School Committee, said the group would like to have the foreign students rooming with Americans.

Four Receive Scholarships At Annual Press Club Banquet

Four rising seniors were awarded $300 scholarships, a graduating senior appointed as research assistant, four seniors and two graduates students were initiated into Kappa Tau Alpha, journalism honorary, and new Press Club officers were announced at the fourth annual awards banquet last night of the student Press Club.

The results of last month's Press Club officers election were announced. Ann Frye, Hickory was elected president for next year. Elected to serve with her were Paul Rule., South Norflok, Va., vice-president; Joan Brock, Burlington, secretary and Parker Madrey, Seaboard, treasurer.

Chancellor William B. Aycock gave the principal address. Awards were presented by Dr. Norval Neil Luxon, dean of the School of Journalism. W. Davis Merritt Jr., Hickory, president of the Press Club, presided.

Ann Frye was awarded the Louis Graves Scholarship; Donald L. Shaw, Waynesville, the Gerald W. Johnson Scholarship, and Gail Godwin, Asheville, the O. J. Coffin Scholarship.

Misses Frye and Godwin are the first women to win scholarships in the School of Journalism. The $900 for the three scholarships came from Journalism Foundation income. The Quincy Sharpe Mills Scholarship, also valued at $300, was given to Charles S. Young, Long Island, Catawba County.

Jerry A. Shields, who will receive his A. B. in Journalism degree in August, was appointed Research Assistant for 1958-1959. The $1,500 stipend will be paid from Journalism Foundation funds.

Six students, four seniors and two graduate students, and one alumnus of the School of Journalism were initiated into Kappa Tau Alpha, journalism honor society. Graduate students elected were Charles M. Bonjean, Jacksonville, Ill. and Francis X. Wamsley, Asheville. Seniors were Merritt, Joan D. Ashford, Scotland Neck; Stanley L. Brennan, Elizabeth City and William P. Cheshire, Hillsboro,

Holt McPherson, 1928 graduate in journalism, editor of the high Point Enterprise, and president of the Journalism Foundation, was the alumnus honored by election to Kappa Tau Alpha.

Wesley Group Elects Smith New President

Wayne Smith, junior from Charlotte, will serve as president of the Wesley Foundation student council for the coming year.

Elected to serve with Smith were David Brooks, Burlington, vice-president; Carol Yeager, Chapel Hill, second vice-president; Doris Taylor, Roanoke Rapids, secretary and Charlie Sheets, Greensboro, treasurer.

Bob Johnson, chaplain to Methodist students and director of the Foundation, has announced that the Foundation offices will be transferred this summer to newly purchased property at 214 Pittsboro St.

Student offices, the chaplain's office, a student lounge and a kitchen will be maintained in the building. Upstairs rooms will be rented to students participating in the Foundation's program.

The present frame building now on the property (next to the Tri Delt house) will be used until the erection there of a Methodist Student Center sometime in 1961-62.

The cost of the new center has been estimated at $310,000. It will include a chapel, library, social hall, hall, dining facilities and recreation area.

It will provide for more than 1,700 Methodist students now on the campus a center for worship, study and recreation.

A campaign for funds to build the center will begin this fall througout North Carolina.

Sonny Evans Receives Johnston Parker Medal

Eli Nachamson Evans, better known on the UNC campus as "Sonny," has been named recipient of the John Johnston Parker Jr. Medal for unique leadership in student government.

This medal is given annually by the late Judge John J. Parker and his wife in memory of their son, John Johnston Parker Jr., class of 1937, who rendered distinguished leadership as President of the Student Council in one of the critical years in the history of Student Government.

This medal is awarded by a special committee appointed by the President of the University to that member of the graduating class who has demonstrated most clearly the highest qualities of leadership in perpetuating the spirit of honor and the process of student self-government.

Evans, from Durham, is a member of the Tau Epsilon Phi fraternity He served as president of the UNC student body this year until recently elected president Don Furtado took over last month.

Don Kemper Elected Monogram Club Head

Don Kemper, rising senior from Hatboro, Pa., has been elected president of the Monogram Club.

Other new officers are Curt Hathaway, vice-president; Don Redding, secretary; Phil Blazer, treasurer; Bob Shupin, sergeant-at-arms; Fred Swearingen, social chairman and Dave Scurlock, CAA representative.

After the election the new officers took over their positions for the remainder of this school-year. They will continue to serve through next year.

Kemper has urged all members of the Club to be present at the meeting Thursady night at 7:30 Final plans will be made for the annual beach trip.

Balloting Begins Today For Miss Fashion Plate

For the Third consecutive year five campus beauties will vie for a wardrobe and the title of Miss Campus Fashion Queen beginning today and running through May 25.

The five candidates for the prize were chosen over the past school term at the rate of one per month, with the exception of December and October.

Miss Fashionplate for November was Cecile Martin, an art major from Jacksonville, Florida. She is a junior, and a member of Delta Delta Delta sorority. Miss Martin is also an Angel Flight Queen for the AFROTC and is active in the YWCA.

Dottie Bull was the January Miss Fashionplate. A junior from Montgomery, Ala., she is a Tri Delt and is a elementary education major.

Miss Fashionplate for Feburary was Miss Polly McLamb, a senior journalism major from Goldsboro. She is a member of Alpha Delta Pi sorority, and active in Ram & Ewe, YMCA, and University Party.

March brought forth Miss Betsy Miller as Robbins' Miss Fashionplate for that month. Miss Miller is a junior Education Major from Carol Gables, Fla. She is a member of Kappa Delta Sorority.

Miss Nancy Adams of Miami, Florida was Miss Fashionplate for the month of April. She is a member of Pi Beta Phi sorority and the University Party, and serves as Chairman of the Women's Honor Council. She is a junior English education major.

The contest, sponsored by J. B. Robbins of Chapel Hill is held, in the words of Robbins, "to build better relations between the students and the merchants of Chapel Hill . . . to get closer to the student body and get them to realize that we are here to serve them and always have them in mind as our customers."

Robbins explained that three Carolina cieds are presented for the monthly title and a vote by students decides which of three is to reign as Miss Fashionplate for that month.

Each monthly winner is presented a gift by Robbins, with each winner eligible to compete in the Fashion Queen Contest to be held at the end of the year.

The prize for the Fashion Queen title consists of a wardrobe, complete with dresses, hats, bags, shoes, and hose. The prize is cur-

Dorm Spirit Helped Win 'Best' Prize For Lewis

By DAVE YOUNG

"Dorm spirit, that's what did it for us.

Those were the words of Paul Woodard, president of Lewis Dormitory, last week as he talked of his dorm being awarded the trophy for best dorm on campus by the Interdormitory Council.

Lewis wasn't always the winner of everything it entered, but consistently finished high enough to be in the money. On very few occasions did the boys fail to make a good showing.

This was evidenced by the fact that they finished second in basketball, third in the overall intramural program and won the Rod and Gun Field Meet.

In addition to this, the Lewisites had an outstanding homecoming display, sponsored the Homecoming Queen, Miss Gale Willingham, and was one of the few dorms that entered the Beat Dook Float Parade.

Lewis Dorm is also one of the few residence halls which features a dorm newspaper. The paper, an outstanding "sheet edited by Allan Spader, is printed four times during the year and supplies everyone with general dorm news.

Lewis is run under an executive committee which formulates dorm policy. Twice during the year, it has had dorm meetings in the upstairs dining room of Lenoir Hall. According to President Woodard, "the turnout was great."

For future plans, Woodard called for a project to work on the social room. A plan is also underway to buy lamps and drapes and to have a trophy case installed.

Lewis is very proud of its past residents who have gone on to become "big men on campus." Included in this list are Benny Thomas, Frank Brown and Doug Eisele, as well as Woodard.

Student Gov't Summer Posts Are Still Open

Student Body President Don Furtado has urged all students who are interested in summer school government to apply for positions which are now available.

Openings are available on the Student Government Board, a seven member body headed by the summer school student body president. It has the power of appropriation during the summer session.

Other openings are available on the Honor Councils, seven member bodies whch investigate and decide all honor cases arising during the summer.

Interested students may apply at the Student Government offfice prior to 6 p.m. today.

US Alliances Debate Topic Set For Tonight

A resolution advocating the withdrawal by the U. S. from all alliances will be introduced tonight at 8 p.m. at the Dialectic Senate's final meeting to be held at Di Hall, third floor, New West. The bill was written by Sen. Gary Greer.

According to Greer the present alliances of the United States have forced our government to make decisions which are contrary to the concepts of our founding fathers and to the Democratic principles of the U. S.

Guests have been invited to attend and to participate in the debate.

Legislative Slate Shows Busy Evening

Two bills, 125 regular student goverament appointments, and the appointment of summer school student government officials will be considered by the Student Legislature tonight.

Gerrard Hall will be the scene of tonight's special session called by Speaker Ralph Cummings in order to take care of last minute appointments and other business.

In calling the session for 7:30 Cummings reminded all the legislators that regular attendance rules apply, and urged them to be present and prompt.

IN THE INFIRMARY

Students in the Infirmary yesterday included:

Misses Betty Winslow and Particia Gregory and Nathaniel Crews, Eugene McDonald, Thomas McGee, Richard Mason and Ted Huffstetler.

Authority?

One of the things reportedly holding up administrative support of the proposal to do away with the plan to meter Franklin St. and Columbia St. is the fact that the Buildings and Grounds Committee approved the plan. The question is—did they have the right to so approve?

The answer in this case is a definite "no" or at least their jurisdiction does not cover such things as parking meters, and hence their endorsement does not carry official authority.

The committee with authoritythe Traf-new meters and parallel parking. The meters new meters and parellel parking. The meters and parallel parking proposal lies clearly within the jurisdiction of this committee.

Hence an unofficial statement constitutes grounds for inaction, while an official statement does not spur action.

There is only one thing sure here—Building and Grounds had no authority to take action, and in doing so they hurt the student body immeasureably.

It is hoped that despite this wrong action, the administration and students can unite to put forward a concrete program for alleviation of traffic difficulties without parallel parking and meters.

Appointments

Student Body President Don Furtado has come up with a fine set of appointments.

Yet, one must question the system rather than the people he appointed.

People should not come to ask for positions. People should be gotten by the President.

Ability is only vaguely a function of interest, but much more important, it is a function of personal qualifications.

There are people on this campus that are as qualified or more qualified than the people who were appointed; however, they were never reached because of the system of applications.

President Furtado could lead the way for good student government, by instituting a system of go out and get, rather than wait and come. This way there might be insurance of the most qualified person for every job.

Directors' Action

When all the dust had settled from the meeting of the Graham Memorial Board of Directors this week, the appropriation to the Graham Memorial Activities Board had been cut by over $2,000, and much havoc had been wrought concerning certain key programs.

It may be that something had to give in order to pay twice the sum currently paid for a director's calary to have a permanent director. However, it is a shame that the board saw fit to cut so lavishly from the students' sole outlet for programming.

In other words those activities that students would want to participate in will be curtailed this coming year due to monetary considerations. This is not the area that should be cut, since student participation in anything more than sunbathing is almost nil.

Moreover, some of the areas that the board saw free to cut lie in the realm of some of the more popular student activities. For instance, the board saw fit to combine the free and foreign film series, and lump the two under a budget that is some $500 less than the film appropriation for the past year.

It seems that the board failed to take cognizance of the fact that the free films are the activity of GMAB that has the most people participating, if only passively. Moreover, they have failed to realize that the majority of people who go to the free films will walk out of a foreign film, simply because they are looking for a different type of entertainment.

Moreover, those who are going to a foreign film are not going to be happy with the shinanigans of those who inhabit the free films on Friday and Saturday nights.

In this case, it was just unwise to combine the series for the sake of economy.

"Well, Hello There, Old Pal, Old Pal, Old Pal"

Ad Libs

Whit Whitfield

Some of you may remember the photographer pare excellence who did such a wonderful job on last year's Yack — Truman Moore (the one who was always late when you were on time and vice versa).

Truman is living in Greenwich Village now (only God knows why and is obviously still a Tar Heel reader, for he wrote us a letter commenting on our column about Chapel Hill landlords as compared with those in the Village. Those of you who are of the aesthetic variety, and we can see from the peroxided hair that your number has not diminished this year, might do well to read some of the portions of Truman's letter which are to follow. Then think twice about your decision to try a year in the Village after graduation.

"Here in New York during the months of June, July, and Augus,t it was my good fortune to deal with really fair and just landlords, unlike the vile variety prevalent in Chapel Hill. For the same price (as his apartment here at the Hill), I subletted a quaint and charming 1½ room apartment in Greenwich Village. Located in the heart of the trucking district, it afforded me a round the clock check on the pulse of a great city—and damn little sleep. There was no sink in the kitchen, but dishes could be speedily washed in the bathtub.

Although I never saw the landlord myself, some of the other tenants said that he lived here in the city.

Repairs to the apartment were handled in expected manner. During the second month I was there the light in the bathroom developed some trouble in the pull-chain. Shaving in the living room is really no trouble. I had a good memory and an excellent flashlight.

"To show the landlord his appreciation for allowing him to occupy these cubicles, it is custom for the tenant to give him one month's rent as a fee, as well as a security of two month's rent. When the tenant is ready to move out, he and the landlord play a game in which he, the tenant, tries to get his money back, and the landlord tries to keep it.

"So I was very distresed to hear that the landlords of Chapel Hill required their tenants to put their trash in trashcans, and to wax their floors. We here in New York have great freedom in these matters. The landlord couldn't care less."

We're from one of the more rural areas of the state, Durham to be exact, (but only through the accident of birth for which we take no responsibility), and we can't quite visualize a kitchen without a sink. Where on earth do the people wash their feet before eating dinner? And in conversations how can they truthfuly use such colorful expressions as "everything but the kitchen sink?"

He must be lying.

UNC vs. Duke

The athletic rivalry between that University and Carolina supposedly represents an academic rivalry of equal ferocity—or it should; and it should annoy us more when Duke outdoes us in things intellectual than it does when they beat us in an athletic contest. If we care more about Duke winning a basketball game than we do about its victories in academic rivalry, we might just as well go home and play ball instead of sitting around here and pretending to exercise our minds.

The case in point: Duke University has stolen the bal again. Last night, Duke played host to the distinguished scholar and historian Arnold J. Toynbee, while E. E. Cummings was there only a week ago. During the same period, there was nothing of comparable interest or importance on this campus. To be sure, we were scheduled to have Walt Kelly here, but in the light of Messrs. Cummings and Toynbee, Mr. Kelly cannot help but appear third best, if somewhat the gaudiest.

The point implied is one well worth laboring: the current state of the University makes the visits here of important men from other schools and non-academic fields increasingly important. As the University continues to grow, with the consquent growth of classes and lowering of faculty standards, the University becomes unable to handle the intellectual needs of a good portion of its students. Unless it wants to lose those students — its most valuable citizens—it must make every effort to import as much stimulation for them from outside as it possibly can. This is not being done at present, and the local cream of the college crop suffer unjustly.

With all the current concern for the nation's educational system, one important fact has been under-emphasised, and it is this fact which makes the situation at this and most other universities slightly ludicrous: the fact is that almost any other possible system of education would keep at least some people happy while the prevailing system satisfies almost nobody.

Things are so democratic hereabouts that everybody and his brother (and, in some cases, his parents as well) are in college, and each is getting a pretty good course in frustration.

The bright students, and most particularly those with some degree of sophistication, are all but totally unprovided for in the present set-ups. At the other extreme, the dull students, who are also present in force, are required to strain for the mediocre which is often stll unobtainable, to them.

Those in between, the "average" students, do pretty well under the present system, but the "average" are few in number—for most things are to some degree too easy or too difficult.

The University serves most effectively the lazy and the presumptuous: those who are content to do the least possible to "pass" and those who are anxious for the superficial "knowledge" which is valued by the society which engenders the present system.

The fault is not entirely with this university, or with any other university in which it exists. This devaluation of education is part of our culture, and the universities, enmeshed perhaps too much in that culture, merely assume the faults of the whole. It should not be too much to hope that the university can dissociate itself to some extent from the society and act as a positive force for the good, rather than perpetuating the evil.

THE U. S. GOVERNMENT VERSUS RUSSIA

As the Cold War turns lukewarm for a while, and then freezes again, a fact emerges which would be amusing in less heavy context. The fact is that while Russia and the U.S. as political entities are locked in struggle, possibly to the death, the people of the two countries are perfectly willing and anxious to forget all differences. It is quite possible, in the light of the tremendous popular success both here and in Russia, of cultural exchange programs, that the emnity between the two nations is largely an artificial one on all but the economic level.

Certainly an American pianist was well received in Moscow when he was recently judged superior to several Russian pianists in competition; certainly there were no political overtones to the critical and popular acclaim given to the Russian dancers who are currently playing in this country; and there has evidently been nothing but friendship shown visitors from one country during their stays in the other: wherefore, then, this fierce dispute at the official level?

It would seem that the Communist government, anxious to live up to its professed ideology, would be anxious if it could to turn its military allocations over to the production of the consumer goods which its people are demanding.

And we would certainly do better to rededicate our tax dollars to the alleviation of critically pressing problems in education, communication, and public welfare, than to continue to invest them in useless war materials.

Part of the function of the United Nations, it would seem, should be to provide by force of opinion and the threat of retaliation the deterrent to aggression which national defense systems now provide. Whether Russia actually contemplates any further aggression or not is problematical; if we assume for the moment that it does, a United Nations police force could handle any problems.

Whatever Russia's intentions, it is up to us, as the foremost "boosters" of international friendship, to make the first move toward the furthering of that noble aim. Russia would be hard put to justify to its people and the world any refusal to follow suit.

It would certainly be worth a try. Anything would be better than the current situation, in which the arms race has gotten entirely out of hand and become self-perpetuating.

Letters About This And That

IFC Attacked On Sunday Ban

Editor:

First, let me make it known that I am not a fraternity man, and thus I have no leaning in that direction.

I am affirmed in my belief that the recent bill passed by the I.F.-C. concerning sunday parties emitting "loud noises" from "live music and the subsequent support given this piece of legislation by you, our editor, is an example of rash and shallow thinking.

The Sunday concerts held at fraternities increase the overall understanding of one of the true expressions of American culture, the music of Jazz. There are, on this campus, a number of very talented people who excel in this field. A jazz musician, either experienced or just a novice, must express himself in order to grow. This growth can only occur in an atmosphere made up of people who know and understand this form of art and those who seek to learn. The only method of understanding Jazz is listening.

The "Cabaret" or "Entertainment Tax" employed by the federal government is an act against live entertainment. It is, therefore, the duty of all the Universities and Colleges in this country to encourage and promote interest in live entertainment. For if "live music" is discouraged, then two disastrous effects will result. The young musicians, the voices of American culture, will be severely impeded and those of us who are aware of the greatness of Jazz will be stayed in our efforts to grow in a country that relies on it's free-thinking citizen's ability to think and reason. Culture gives us part of this ability and Jazz is American culture, it is America. "To cease to grow, would be to cease to live."—Stan Kenton

Editor:

To think is good and indeed, Emerson said that a student should only read when he cannot think for himself. But if your thoughts only drift along on a haze don't expect them to find anything worth telling to the world. Genuine thinking takes some effort. Most of us admire thinkers, and at times we will sit down in the quiet and tell ourselves that now we are going to cut out all of this foolishness; now we are going to do some concentrated thinking—none of this day dreaming. We sit there, but we can't decide what we want to think about. We expect our minds to produce thoughts. Now is the time to show myself my genius we say to ourselves, but we just can't seem to concentrate, and after a few minutes of futile effort we come to the conclusion that we weren't born to be thinkers and that anything that we think has already been thought by a well-known philosopher or writer who has put his thoughts and ideas into a book. We give up, and our defeated minds slip back in to a fog and remain there until we suddenly remember that we open our textbook and memorize enough of the material to make a grade on the quiz that is acceptable to us. Instead of being encouraged to create ideas, our minds are now being drilled by books. Our minds are now in a dry and flat existence where they will remain until they drift back into a fog.

From drifting to dreaming, back and forth all through our lives, and with this we admit our inferiority by imitation and simple slothiness. We hate to admit even to ourselves that we are inferior in any sense of the word, here it is, proof that we are inferior in probably the greatest meaning of the word. Our minds are inferior by the fact that they do nothing but imitate and rot away in trivial dreams.

Someone may say to this, so what? And I agree, we are what we are and that seems to be that. So, so what if we are inferior. Why did I even bring the point up?

Editor:

Your editorial of April 29 entitled "The President" was very upsetting to me and I immediately wrote my friend in the Senate, concerning the matter.

Surely it is unfortunate that those who carry the banner of "Good Will and World Peace" have to be classified among the scores of visitors who seek only selfish personal satisfaction and gain. However, it seems to one shortsighted on the part of your paper to blame the President for a policy which had to be set up on such matters. That policy does permit "those who are here officially" to be received for such purposes and certainly that does not mean, as you say, "the brass and upper chelons of society."

Let us hope that the people zealously desiring Peace and Good Will can find the right channels through which to implement their mission!

Mr. Dalton:

Re: Your letter in Sunday's DTH. As an Episcopalian you should read your Prayer Book. The title page clearly states "Protestant Episcopal Church". The Anglican church uses the Apostolic Creed which does affirm our faith in "the holy catholic church"; but this does not signify any particular Cathloic sect; it signifies the church universal; "one holy catholic and apostolic. Catholic meaning universal. You are catholic in as much as your church is universal, but you are protestant as your church protested against Rome.

C. G. Martin

Editor:

As an avid follower of "Pogo", "Peanuts" and a dozen other comic strips, I resent the direct and indirect slurs on them and their readers by some of your editorial columnists. The last straw was Anthony Wolfe's belittling of the Carolina Forum for scheduling Walt Kelly for an address here. As the readers of "Pogo"' well know, Mr. Kelly is an astute observer of the political scene, and his speech would have been entirely consistent with the purposes of the Carolina Forum.

In defense of comic strips and their readers, I submit that to the intelligent reader they offer an excellent commentary on social, economic, and political conditions today. Some, while primarily for entertainment, offer a public service as well in interpreting a particular profession and its subject matter. "Judge Parker" (law) and "Rex Morgan, M. D." (medicine) are examples. Some might look down on Charlie Brown, Linus, et al. but they offer at times a devastating insight into the values of this neurotic generation. Some may think that "Little Orphan Annie" is just one fantastic escape after another, but I know of no more bitter critique on the American policital and economic system than is presented there.

Not all comic strips are worth the time it takes to read them, but I believe there are a number which the busiest student could read with profit to his education. Maybe even Messrs. Wolfe, Winston, and Whitfield.

TRAVELING WEST—After a successfol showing in the ACC track Championships, Tar Heels Wayne Bishop and Dave Scurlock will head west where they will compete in the Coliseum Relays at the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum Friday.

Scurlock And Bishop To Run In Coliseum Relays Friday

By DAVE WIBLE

The ACC championships are over, and in most cases around the conference trackmen will be turning in their spikes, which will not see action until cross-countrytime next fall.

Such is not the case at Carolina. A glance around Fetzer Field will show that everything seems to be going on as usual even though the season is over. There are several reasons for the continual work outs. First, the freshman have their Big-Four meeting coming up Wednesday. Second, a squad of around ten varsity men will enter the AAU meet in Raleigh Saturay, and third, the hardest working boys, Dave Scurlock, and Wayne Bishop will be going for national honors at Los Angeles this Friday.

Both Dave and Wayne are ACC champions. Dave won the 440 and 880 titles, and Wayne won the 2-mile in record breaking time. This Wednesday, they will hop a plane and head for Los Angeles, California, where they will compete in the 18th Annual Coliseum Relays in the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum.

The meet is an inivitational affair. Dave was asked to run in the 880, and Wayne the two-mile. Top talent from all over the nation will be present. World's 1000-yard outdoor champion Annie Sowell will be in the along with Yale's freshman star Tom Carroll who did so well around the indoor this winter. Scurlock has defeated both an the boards but has not met them outdoors.

In the two-mile with Wayne, will be such forminable opposition as John Macy of Houston, Jerry Smart, also of Houston, and Alex Henderson of Arizona State. With three or four names still to be added you find another top flight field.

These two Tar Heels will leave Friday with head track coach Dale Ranson, who is very pleased with the outcome of the ACC meet. "I thought the boys did real well, "Ranson commented, "especially down the line. We had a lot of near misses and the boys proved they could put out when it was needed.

A heartbreak for Ranson and crew was in the 880 time trials Friday. Two Tar Heels, Cowles Liipfert, and Howard Kahn, ran the half mile in 1:55.5, and 155.4, but did not qualify for the finals.

Carolina Blows Lead, Loses To Terps, 7-6; Throws Away ACC Title Lead

COLLEGE PARK, MD. (AP)—Carolina's Tar Heels threw away their last chance to a clean shot at the conference championship here today as they lost to the last-place Maryland Terps 7-6. Duke beat Clemson in a special play-off of a game which had earlier been rained out, 7-1. A Carolina victory over Maryland would have put the Tar Heels in undisputed first place.

The ninth inning was the baseball game as Maryland lost the lead in the final inning then came back with two runs for the ACC victory. The Terps went into the ninth with a 5-3 lead but came out of the first half trailing 6-5.

The loss was the third against 10 victories in the ACC for Carolina, now 19-7 overall. Maryland is 5-11 against all opponents and 3-10 in the conference.

The Tar Heels can still gain a tie for loop supremacy with the Tigers by beating dangerous Wake Forest this Thursday when the Deacs visit Chapel Hill in the season finale. A Carolina victory would force a play off game for the conference championship in the regular season between the Tar Heels and the Tigers.

Duke Beats Clemson

DURHAM, May 12-(AP)-Duke's Blue Devils, behind the four-hit pitching of lefty Dick Burton, defeated Clemson, 7-1, here Monday.

The Tigers ended the season with a 11- 3mark in the Atlantic Coast Conference. They are still a half game ahead of North Carolina, which can tie Clemson for the league championship by beating Wake Forest Thursday.

Duke wrapped the game up in the first inning, reaching Clemson starter Harold Stowe for three runs. Two walks, singles by Lon Bonczek and Butch Allie and a double by Steve Crihfield accounted for the three runs.

The Blue Devils added more runs in the seventh on a single by Pete Maynard, doubles by Bonczek and Allie and a homer by Crihfield.

Burton, picking up his fourth win in nine decisions, faced only 29 batters, striking out nine and walkng only three.

ACC Standings

GREENSBORO, May 13, (AP) — Wake Forest's outfielder Rex McMillan, who surged into the Atlantic Coast Conference Baseball Batting Leadership just a week ago, increased his mark to .421 during the past week, enough to set his eyes on the conference batting record set in 1955 by Duks' Andy Cockreel at .429.

Several of the individual departmental leaders changed last week. Larry Bagwell of Clemson took over the lead in two-base hits with seven, replacing N. C. State's Danny Casteen who ended the season with six. But the major battle takes place for the runs-batted-in title. Alton Pons of Carolina opens the final week with 24, replacing Clemson's Bud Spiers who posted 23 rbi's. Close behind them were McMillan and Bob Kennel of N. C. State with 19 each, Ken Rosefield of South Carolina 17.

Ledford retains the stolen base lead with 14 while Hunter still tops the three-base-hits with four.

Troops Dispatched After Nixon Mobbed

WASHINGTON, — (AP) Four companies of U. S. Airborne troops and Marines are in their way to the Caribbean area as a result of the mob action against Vice President Nixon in Venezuela Tuesday.

VICE PRESIDENT NIXON
. . . attacked In Caracas

They are being sent, a Defense Department spokesman said, to "cooperate with the Venezuelan government if requested."

A spokesman said the troops, numbering about 1,000 were being sent to "certain United States bases in the Caribbean area." But he would not say what bases.

Among the American bases close to Venezuela are those in Puerto Rico and Trinidad.

Earlier Tuesday president Eisenhower demanded, and promptly recieved, assurance that Venezuela will take adequate measures to protect Nixon.

The State Department said it has been advised the Venezuelan government moved in infantrymen and tanks to keep order.

"The situation looks much better, and Mr. Nixon's staff in Caracas assures us that both the Vice President and his security aides are satisfied the situation is under control," a State Department official said.

Secretary of State Dulles, speaking on behalf of the president, hinted Nixon would cut short his good will visit if Veneuzelan authorities failed to act promptly. The visit normally would end Wednesday afternoon.

"If there is any lack of will or capacity (to protection) we want to know that quickly," Dulles told Venezuela's Charge d'Affaires at an emergency conference at the State Department.

Both Dulles and Tarchetti indicated they believed communists instigated the anti-Nixon rioting in a move to inflame U. S. relations with Latin America.

NSA To Hold Race Parley This Summer

A four week seminar of 15 Southern students from newly-integrated colleges and from institutions which will soon be desegregated, will be held this summer.

The seminar will be sponsored by the United States National Students Association, with a $9,850 grant the NSA received from the Field Foundation in April.

The seminar will be held on a non-Southern campus, probably Ohio Wesleyan University, Delaware, Ohio, from August 4-18.

Frank Elkins, chairman of the desegregation subcommittee of the NSA has been notified that he may be chosen as one of the 15 student representatives.

The purpose of this seminar is to develop understanding of the problems and complexities of race relations in the South, and to provide an educational experience which will prepare these students to make a responsible contribution to the solution of the human relations problems facing them on their campuses or in their communities.

Outstanding persons will be invited to aid in the preparation of the program and participate in the seminar.

Student representatives will be picked by Ray Farabee, president of USNSA, Paul Rilling of the Southern Area Council of YMCA and Max Heirich of the American Friends Service Committee.

To aid in program development and review, an advisory committee to the seminar will be appointed. The Rev. Charles Jones of Chapel Hill is on the list of six men who will compose the committee.

Scholastic Group Taps 13 Thursday

Phi Beta Kappa, honorary scholastic fraternity, will initiate 31 UNC students Thursday.

The initiation will be at 5:30 p.m. in Di Hall. Following the initiation at Di Hall, a banquet will be held in Lenoir Hall.

Membership in Phi Beta Kappa is based on a quality point average. Juniors, after completion of 78 hours with a 2.6 quality point average, are eligible. Transfer students who have spent two years at another school are eligible for membership after completion of 45 hours of work with a 2.5 quality point average.

Transfers who spend one year elsewhere are eligible on completion of 78 hours of work here with a 2.4 quality point average.

Students who have spent four years at UNC must have a 2.3 quality point average and 108 hours of work completed.

Miss Crater, Hallford Take Sullivan Prize

Julia Ann Crater and Sonny Hallford have been named recipients of the Algernon Sydney Sullivan Award.

This award, established in 1928, is bestowed annually upon the man and woman of the graduating class who have best demonstrated an attitude of unselfish interest in the welfare of their fellow students.

The terms of the award emphasize that it shall not be based on scholastic, athletic or other collegiate attainments.

Hallford and Miss Crater were chosen for the award on April 28. The award presentation will be made later in the year. Both winners will receive an engraved certificate and a plaque.

All Candidates For Degrees Get Briefing

A general meeting of all degree candidates will be held in Memorial Hall Thursday at 4:15 p.m. for briefing on commencement exercises.

Dr. J. C. Lyons, faculty commencement marshal, said it is "very important that all planning to get degrees at the June commencement be there to get instructions."

This meeting will include details on forming the commencement procession and where and how to go about getting academic costumes and commencement program.

TOP FRATERNITY AWARD GOES TO PHI DELTS
. . . Chancellor Emeritus House presents House Trophy to Don Millen

Phi Delts Win Award As Leading Fraternity

The R. B. House Outstanding Fraternity Award was presented at the IDC meeting Monday night to Don Millen, Phi Delta Theta fraternity, by Chancellor Emeritus R. B. House.

The award is determined annually by a board of two judges, Sam Magill and Ray Jefferies, of the Dean of the Student Affairs office, assisted this year by Tucker Yates, president of the Interfraternity Council, on the basis of a point system.

Phi Delta Theta earned the trophy, mainly on its accumulation of 28 out of a possible 30 points for scholarship. The pledge class also won the Outstanding Pledge Class Award.

Phi Delt's held many positions on campus and participated in the IDC and intramurals.

Total possible points are 22½ for campus representation, both major positions and percentage participation in extracurricular activities outside the fraternity; 17½ for IFC participation; 15 for intramurals participation; 10 for social activities and five for house appearance. The house appearance points are determined by the sorority house mothers. There is a possible total of 100 points toward the award.

The award was named after House for his service to fraternities since he has been here and will be presented by him as long as he lives.

The trophy itself will be retired affter eight years, going to the house that has won it the most times. At that time another trophy will be started.

Library Club Initiates 45 New Members

Forty-five students and alumni of the UNC School of Library Science have ben initiated into the newly-formed Epsilon chapter of Beta Phi Mu, international library science honor society.

Epsilon is the fifith chartered by Beta Phi Mu, which was founded 10 years ago at the University of Illinois. Other chapters are in California, Florida and England.

Fourteen of the UNC initiates are currently working for a master's degree in library science: Aylene E. Cooke, Mary Frances Morris and Frances V. Thackston, Durham; Mildred H. Farrow, Guilford College; Bobbie Newman Redding, Greensboro; Adriana P. Orr and Audrey B. Zablocki, Chapel Hill; Walter Gary, Wilson; and Philip D. Shore, Pilot Mountain.

Other student initiates are Jeanne P. Helstrom, Salem, Va.; Evelyn M. Kocher, Radford, Va.; Elaine Lansdell, Elberton, N. J.; Kathleen H. Cheape, Greensboro, Ala.; and Dewey F. Pruett Jr., Birmingham, Ala.

The 31 new alumni members include Margaret Allman, Edith E. Averitt, Jane C. Bahnsen, Olin V. Cook, Josephine B. Floyd, Jean Freeman, Eleanor S. Godfrey, Charles C. Hopkins, William H. Johnson, Pattie B. McIntyre, Robert A. Miller, Gay G. Moore, Katherine B. Mouzon, Helen M. Peacock, Virginia Y. Wells, Tera B. White, and Lena Mae Williams, all of Chapel Hill.

Anne E. Andrews, Burlington; Hazel Baity, Marjorie W. Lindsey, A. R. McGalliard, Davoria E. Neilsen, Emma W. Pohl and Gloria K. Whetstone, all of Raleigh; Audrey J. Cushman, Mary E. Darst, and Margaret S. Tillett, all of Durham; Grace B. Farrior and Mildred C. Herring, Greensboro; Gay H. Spivey, Guilford College and Mary Jane Wing, Altanta, Ga.

Alumni Assn. Member Drive Closes Taday

An increasing number of solicitors engaged in enrolling seniors in the General Alumni Assn. are reporting 100 per cent response among the soon-to-be alumni for whom they have personal cards, according to Frank Black and Jerry Oppenheimer, co-chairmen of the Senior Class Alumni Committee.

Today is the deadline for the more than 50 committee members to report results of their solicitation to the Alumni Office, headquarters of the Alumni Association in the Carolina Inn.

In commenting on the favorable response so far to the enrollment of the graduating class, Co-chairmen Black and Oppenheimer pointed out that there will be no other on-campus drive this year to enroll seniors in the Association.

Seniors who will not graduate until August or later are urged by the committee to join now and take advantage of reduced membership dues of $1 to which they are eligible during their first year as alumni.

It was emphasized that to become an Association member at this time implies no obigation on the senior's part to continue his membership beyond the first year.

All first-year alumni who join the Association at the special rate receive all benefits of regular membership, including a full year's subscription to the alumni magazine.

Austrian Art On Exhibition Through May

An exhibition of drawings by Paul Flora, the celebrated Austrian artist, has gone on display in the Morehead Planetarium's South Art Gallery here. The exhibition will close on May 31.

Planetarium Manager A. F. Jenzano said that "we feel very fortunate in securing the exhibition of this quite prominent artist." His first American showng was in New York in March of this year.

A native Austrian, Flora lives in Innsbruck, Tyrol. He has had one-man hows in Vienna and Munich, is represented in a number of galleries and has captured prizes and award in European countries.

Four books of his drawings have been published, and he has illustrated a number of books published both in Amercia and abroad.

Daily Tar Heel Staff Urged To Attend Meet

There will be a meeting of all members of The Daily Tar Heel staff in the news room at 4 p.m. Thursday.

Editor Curtis Gans has urged all present and prospective members of The Daily Tar Heel staff to attend the meeting.

Presidential Veto Of Radio Club Bill Upheld By Solons

The veto of the UNC Amateur Radio Club appropriation bill by Student Body President Don Furtado was upheld by the Student Legislature last night.

In submitting the veto, Furtado gave the following reasons for his action:

"I do not feel that the members of the UNCARC have adequately explored the possibility of receiving initial financial support from other areas."

"If we provide the $2,000 which has been requested, we will have entered our General Surplus by the sum of $600. It is very unusual and generally undesirable to enter the General Surplus. The General Surplus must be maintained as an emergency cushion."

"The Radio Club has yet to request bids for the equipment desired."

"The operation of the UNCARC, if equipment is furnished by student government, should be under the control and scope of some programming arm of student government such as GMAB."

The Student Body President concluded his message by saying: "There is no doubt in my mind that the Radio Club as proposed is a worthy organization and could benefit some students of the University. It must be remembered, however, that the funds of the students are expendable and not unlimited and that all new financial demands must be weighed carefully, remembering our obligations to the students and those organizations that we have previously committed ourselves to support."

The appointments of Summer School Student Body President Curtis Gans and Secretary-Treasurer Everett James were approved by the body last night.

Other Summer School appointments not previously announced, and approved include: Jim Rose as chairman of the Men's Honor Council, and Phil Blazer, Bob Burroughs, Fred Smith, Kay Herring, Burt Davis, Bob Shephard, council members; Gordon Street, Jean Southerland, Jane Duncan, Joel Fleishman, John Minter, Don Dotson, Betty Hobson Student Government Board;

Nancy Turner, chairman, and Barbara Miles, Libby Johnson, Betsy May, Nancy Grubb, Molly Adams, Beverly Heaton, Women's Honor Council Members; Hadyn Davis, Angus Duff, Dillon Wooten, Don Millen, Mike Smith, Dance Committee;

Jim Tatum's Contract Is Extended To 1963

The Executive Committee of the UNC Board of Trustees met in Raleigh Monday in the Governor's office to condsider appointments and promotions submitted for approval by the three divisions of the Consolidated University.

The Board approved the extension of Head Football Coach James Moore Tatum's contract for two additional years, from Jan. 1, 1961, to Jan. 1, 1963.

Appointments approved for the UNC were Karl Ludwig Selig, Associate Professor in the Dept. of Romance Languages; George Brown Tyndall, Associate Professor in the Dept. of History; Loren G. MacKinney, Assistant Professor in the Dept. of Pediatrics.

Pauline Wayne McCaskill, Assistant Professor in the School of Nursing; Lucia Cameron Morgan, Assistant in the Dept. of English; Benjamin Eagles Fountain Jr., Assistant Professor in the School of Education; Paul S. Hubbard, Jr., Assistant Professor in the Dept. of Physics; Robert Arthur Rupen, Associate Professor in the Dept. of Political Science.

Doug Eisele Is Abernethy Prize Winner

Douglas George Eisele, former editor of The Daily Tar Heel, has been named recipient of The Ernest H. Abernethy Prize for Student publications work.

Eisele was elected to the editor's post in last fall's campus wide recall election.

The Abernethy Prize was established by Ernest H. Abernethy of Atlanta, Ga., in 1922, as an annual award of a plaque and $50 in cash. It is presented to the student who is adjudged by a committee to have done the most distinctive work during the current year in the field of student publications.

Y Officers Are Installed At Banquet

Fifty-six students were installed into the YM-YWCA in tits annual banquet and installation ceremonies held in Lenior Hall's South room Monday night.

Highlighting the ceremonies was an address by Dean of Student Affairs Fred H. Weaver.

Weaver reviewed the year with comments on the highlights of the joint organization.

His topic concerned the history of the University and its "founding in the 1800's of an organization such as the YMCA and the manner in which that organization has come to permeate every phase of UNC life . . . and how such a gathering of dedicated Christians has reflected a student harmony founded on student responsibility, which is now and always will be the best manner in which to secure a mature mind and an educated one."

Following a welcome by Belle Coryc, outgoing president of the YMCA Stewart Colson presented reflections of the years achievements and highlights. New YMCA president Dee Dee Devere introduced the speaker, Dean Weaver.

Miss Ann Morgan and Kelly Wallace then introduced the new YM-YWCA executive committee officers.

They are, with YMCA officers and YWCA officers appearing in pairs, presidents, Bill Sugg and DeeDee Devere; vice-presidents,

Sigma Xi Sets Annual Affair Here Friday

The UNC chapter of Sigma Xi, honorary scientific society, will hold its annual banquet and initiation at 6:30 p.m. Friday, May 16, in south dining room of Lenoir Hall on the UNC campus.

Following the banquet the presidential address of Sigma Xi will be delivered by Harold Hotelling, professor of statistics and associate director of the Institute of Statistics at UNC.

According to Walter H. Wheeler, associate professor of geology and secretary of the local chapter, Dr. Hotelling's speech to be given at 8 o'clock Friday night in room 207 Venable Hall will be open to the public. Dr. Hotelling will discuss "The Statistical Method and the Philosophy of Science."

Sigma Xi was founded at Cornell University in 1886 for the purpose of encouraging original investigation in science; the UNC chapter was established in 1920. Membership is contingent upon evidence of excellence in research in one of the sciences. Advanced undergraduates and graduates who show promise in scientific research may be elected to associate membership, to be promoted to full membership later if deemed worthy.

DR. PAUL TILLICH
First Wesley lecturer next fall

First Wesley Lectures To Feature Paul Tillich

The Wesley Foundation has announced that Dr. Paul Tillich of Harvard University will deliver the first Wesley Lectures at Chapel Hill October 3-4.

Tillich is a clergyman of the Evangelical and Reformed Church.

A native of Germany, Tillich served for four years as chaplain to the German Army in World War I. He served as professor at the universities of Berlin, Dresden, Leipzig, Frankfort and Halle.

As a leader in the Christian Socialist Party, he was forced by Hitler to leave his teaching position in Berlin.

He found refuge at Union Theological Seminary in New York and conducted seminars in philosophy at Columbia University.

In 1955 he was named one of Harvard's six distinguished service professorships.

The Wesley lectures will be delivered in Hill Hall at 8 p.m. in October. Tillich's first lecture will be entitled, "The Present Encounter of the World Religions." The second one will be, "The Present Encounter of Religious and Secular Faiths."

The lectures are being sponsored by the Wesley Foundation, the Methodist Church's foundation for Christian education on state and private university campuses.

Foundation officials have expressed the hope that these lectures will be permanently established in Chapel Hill for the purpose of encouraging a continuing dialogue between culture and the Christian faith. The lectures are non-sectarian in purpose.

IN THE INFIRMARY

Need For Planning

There has been a series of articles appearing in this paper concerning the situation of the UNC faculty. Throughout the article there appeared the word "competitive."

The question is whether the University is presently able to compete with other public colleges and the private school for standard of education through faculty. The answer at present is no.

The salary standard of the University is below that of many other schools in the United States. The opportunities for research are limited. Courses here do not challenge the bright, and hence many pass elsewhere. Further, the outstanding college graduates are not coming to UNC. Moreover, the opportunities for having books from which to work are limited, and above all the opportunity to publish, in many cases, is limited to those who can afford it. Hence, the salary offered prohibits the creative work which would lead to advancement.

The picture is not good. However, there is at least one bright spot. According to Chancellor Aycock, there are plans in the works for a merit salary increase budget. This will stimulate incentive in a way that no across the board increase can do, since it is spurring quality rather than quantity.

The whole problems falls in the hands of the state legislature at Raleigh, who must be made aware of the need at the University and the critical condition of the entire higher education program in general.

It is not enough to meet at crucial times the offers of other institutions who are trying to get University professors. It is more important to be paying these people the right type of salary to begin with.

It is not enough for research grants to be financed by private corporations, for the state should take the interest in its future citizens.

It is not enough to make promotions dependent upon service measured in years; it must be service measured in quality.

It is not even enough to raise salaries, without the fringe benefits that faculty need to pursue their profession adequately or even superlatively.

It has been too long that legislators have been in the fog about the needs of education. It has been too long since there has been a realization of the necessity for an adequate faculty. A reappraisal of the state's policy towards education in general and intellect in particular is due and overdue.

It is all right to think of bringing to the state industry, but it is more important to develop the resources of the state. One of those resources happens to be the mind of its youth. This resource must be cultivated and protected.

The need for action that looks to the future has never been so apparent as it is now. The state must realize that the University is one of the bastions of democracy. It must further realize that the youth which pass through the school are the leadership of tomorrow.

The question is then, "What kind of leaders will there be tomorrow?" A partial answer may come from the final budget that is appropriated to the University next winter.

I am terribly sorry to say that I was unable to attend the recent appearance of e. e. cummings at Duke University. That talk seems to have caught the imagination of a great many students, and must have been highly stimulating. It is too bad, however, that so many of them have taken such a superficial look at the poetry and ideas of the poet, for there have been a good many erroneous, though well-intended, statements about his poetic credo.

Those who really wish to gain an honest understanding of cummings' poetry would do well to read his introduction to New Poems (1938) which is available aiso in both editions of his collected poetry; this is the most accurate summation of his credo available.

The primary misunderstanding is that cummings is "beat" and has no more faith in the world—that he gives the appearance of wishing he had not been born. Cummings is disappointed with part of the world. He refers to this segment of the population as "mostpeople." It would be best to let him explain for himself:

"Life, for mostpeople, simply isn't. Take the socalled standardofliving. What do mostpeople mean by 'living'? They don't mean living. They mean the latest and closest plural approximation to singular prenatal passivity which science, in its finite but unbounded wisdom, has succeeded in selling their wives."

And on those opposed to "mostpeople," whom he refers to as "ourselves," meaning "you and I": "You and I are not snobs. We can never be born enough. We are human beings; for whom birth is a supremely welcome mystery, the mystery of growing; the mystery which happens only and whenever we are faithful to ourselves. You and I wear the dangerous looseness of doom and find it becoming. Life, for eternal us, is now; and now is much too busy being a little more than everything to seem anything, catastrophic included."

Cummings is highly critical of man—"pity this busy monster, manunkind, not"—but he is critical in a constructive, thoughtful way, and he is critical because he loves man. He loves man as an individual but not as society. A few quotations from one of his most famous poems should bear this out:

"Anyone lived in a pretty how town
(with up so floating many bells down) spring summer autumn winter
he sang his didn't he danced his did.

"Women and men (both little and small) cared for anyone not at all they sowed their isn't they reaped their same sun moon stars rain"

This is not quite as difficult as it looks. Anyone is the hero, representing individuality and sensitivity. He lives in a little town where public opinion—pretty how"—is opposed to him, but all year round he was happy—"sang his didn't danced his did." The people, however, lived an unalive life of conformity—"sowed their isn't they reaped their same."

Anyone falls in love with a girl named "noone"—anyone being opposed to noone as male to female. Together they lived a happy life of this society which could not understand them, while the someones and everyones were born and grew into mostpeople. Eventually anyone died, and noone followed him. "Busy folk buried them side by side," and life went on, as the people "reaped their sowing and reaped their same."

This poem, in its entirety, is the summing up of cummings' beliefs. If the reader can surmount the initial hurdle of understanding the complexities of English as cummings sees it, he has opened the door to not only the understanding and appreciation of a major contemporary poet, but to a fuller understanding and appreciation of life on this earth. Cummings, like all of us, can only surmise as to the ultimate meaning of life, and can only suggest criticisms to improve life on this earth, but the manner in which he expresses his views is at once beautiful and profound and deserves appreciation by us all.

Good Grief! Happy Readers

Editor:

I am a junior at Chapel Hill High School and recent editor-elect of our school paper, the Proconian. This is all insignificant, however, and nothing more than introductory, for I felt like dropping a note saying that there certainly is a noticeable improvement in the Daily Tar Heel since the recent turnover by election. To me it's the best I've ever known it to be (that's pretty long) and I especially like the use of editorial columns on the editorial page, and the big features elsewhere.

Editorials are sensibly written, too. Especially the one on the parking meters. The sports page seems to have excellent coverage.

Actually, the reason I'm especially interested is that I plan to try some of the same things with the Proconian next year.

After the Daily Tar Heel's shaky go of it last year, I think that at last it's once again a top-notch publication.

Editor:

I am sorry if I have said or written anything to offend you. I haven't meant it that way.

I think you are putting out an excellent paper, and congratulation are in order.

"O Lost," Daily Tar Heel, May 6, was a brilliant editorial. However, if we have faith only in ourselves for our ultimate security we are certainly leaning on a broken reed. He who spends all of his time worrying about security and how to save his life will succeed at neither. When Senator Carter Glass said at the beginning of World War II, that people should have some greater purpose in life than eating and sleeping and going to the movies, he touched a sore spot with us. We don't like to face up to it that whe have hard tasks to do and loads to lift.

Gerald W. Johnston, recently speaking to the Phi Beta Kappas at Wake Forest College, points out that colleges exist not only to keep a young man from being infected by error; but to show him truth.

Tennyson penned these beautiful lines about man's quest for truth: "Some with sad faces sought for her. Some with crossed hands sighed for her. But these, our brethren, fought for her. At life's dear peril wrought for her, and tasted the raptured fleetness of her divine completeness.

"They followed her and found her, where all may hope to find. Not in the burnt out ashes of the mind, but beautiful, with dangers' sweetness round her."

Mr. Johnson, trying to find the answer to the confusion which envelops mankind, comments as follows; "Every great spiritual religion is based on faith (or truth) that in man alone among the animals God implanted a spark of divine fire. To search out and identify this spark of divinity is the first step toward learning how it may be nursed into flame, which is the goal of education, and this can best be accomplished through the study of the attribute that we call greatness, wherever and whenever it has appeared among men."

Mr. Johnston closes on a note of high hope: If the task before man is immeasurably great, so is the promised reward. That spark of divinity in man that makes God mindful of him is immensely more potent, vaster, and more wide-ranging than the sputniks and atom bombs .And to the extent that we understand and use this force "we have the hope that it will carry us forward, not into a new world, but a new universe of power, and beauty, and truth."

I certainly haven't done justice to Mr. Johnston's most delightful address at Wake Forest College. I have simply tried to resolve some questions raised by your editorial "O Lost."

Regarding Mr. Dalton's letter concerning his faith: It is encouraging to find one so devoted to his beliefs and so proud of his faith. The world certainly needs more men like Mr. Dalton—with a missionary zeal which matches their Episcopalian ire. As a Baptist (Southern, that is, suh!), and a member of that "historically, structurally, theologically etc. etc. etc." division of Christendom which has had so little influence in the history of our nation and the world, I take the liberty to speak for my Protestant brothers in apologizing to Mr. Dalton for being "classed" among us low-down, po-folk Protestants.

Philip Gamble

Dear Mr. Wolff:

As an avid-and-awed reader of your column, I would like to join you on the mourner's bench for a moment. I have noted, in your comments on the Sigma Chi Derby, with what open dismay you regarded the attendance at Beauty contests as compared with that of "any event of intellectual interest."

It's sad but I'm afraid, Mr. Wolff, that it's the way of the world. Hard as I try, I've had no success in trying to convince my friends and colleagues that the Saturday Review is a far more rewarding publication than Playboy.

Perhaps we should follow the old Chinese proverb and fight fire with fire. To wit, may I suggest that in forthcoming advertisement of events of intellectual interest, you use as a drawing card a reproduction of a Matisse nude, or a line or two from John Donne's "The Flea."

You may find consolation, as I have, in the fact that our position was strongly defended by a group of early twentieth century female writers, commonly called "the Oh-God,-the-pain girls."

"You'll Make Better Time Without This Extra Wheel"

Men Of The Golden Rule

Norman Cousins

Inevitably, a man is measured by his largest concerns and by what he regards as the ultimate questions. If he is troubled only by what happens to him here and now or in the hereafter, then his measurement is quickly taken and it is not necessary to use the long rule.

But if a man places a high value on life, whatever its accent or station; if he respects a mysterious but real connection between himself and the people who have gone before him and these not yet born, then there are proportions in his measure beyond estimate. In such a man, the gift of awareness has come fully alive. His perceptions are keenest when he looks inward and sees others in himself. He will fix his mind on the things that are more important to him than whether he lives or dies. The ultimate question for him has to do not with his personal immortality but with the immortality of values and meaningful life beyond his own time.

Civilizations must submit to the same measure. No society is smaller than the one that acts as though history does not exist beyond its own time and needs, or that sees no obligation to a later generation. Conversely, a society earns its place in the future by respecting the unclamorous claims of the unborn.

How, then, are we to measure ourselves and our civilization? In using the term "our Civilization" we are not limiting it to one nation or one continent. Whatever the razor's edge of our own emphasis on national differences, the species of human life as a whole is now in jeopardy, for the precarious balances which enable life to subsist are now being altered and damaged. The national units involved in the life-and-death rivalries are going far beyond the requirements of mutual total destruction. The invasion of the future has already begun. Day by day, the assault against later generations is growing in size and power. Even if the present tensions do not culminate in a worldwide explosion, the killing poisons now being put into the air and into the genes of human beings will twist and cramp and disfigure later life.

Several men who are unwilling to participate in the tyranny of the present over the future have attempted to stake their lives on their ability to awaken people. They believe that the species of man is a single organism; and so they have no trouble in recognizing and acting on the fact of connection among all men. They believe that people can become aware of the implications of what is happening only as their moral senses can come alive.

These are the men of the Golden Rule, a thirty-foot ketch with a sturdy sail and a twenty-four horsepower motor. There are four men in the company. The leader of the group is a former Lieutenant Commander in the United States Navy who is also a former state housing commissioner. The men of the Golden Rule set sail some weeks ago for the Eniwetok nuclear proving grounds. It was their object to expose themselves to the effects of the explosions. They put their faith not in the ability of their bodies to withstand the radioactive bullets released by the nuclear experiments but in the power of a universal response the moment the danger became real. The certainty which sustained them was that no force in the world was powerful enough to keep people from seeing the great moral issues involved as soon as these issues became visible and clear. In short, they were betting their lives that the necessary awakening would come not on the level of argument but through the strength of a symbolic offer.

The United States Government has put these men in jail rather than have them proceed to the nuclear proving grounds. But there is no law that is being violated. The United States does not possess the ocean area from which these men are being barred. Nor does it make sense to profess to protect them against themselves: rather, it is we who need the protection they are trying to give us.

If these men are guilty of anything it is of an effort to break down the idea that the individual is forever and tragically separated from large events. They do not satisfy themselves by bemoaning the fact of an insane society bent on altering the conditions on which life depends. Nor do they crave the distinction of belonging to the last generation of man on earth. Hence, they affirm the power of the free will to shape government and to effect historic decisions.

The men of the Golden Rule have been called crackpots: but who among the rest of us can call ourselves sane for sanctioning the action they seek to stop? The men of the Golden Rule have been put in jail, but those who have arranged these hideous explosions, with their toll of lives yet uncalculated, will go free. What the men of the Golden Rule seek is a simple test of conscience; what the nations seek is a test of devices that can expunge human life—devices that no longer have meaning in military terms. The weapons have nothing to do with victory; what they pulverize is the future of man and with it the things that are as valuable as life itself—justice, the assertion of conscience, freedom to grow, freedom to be.

There is unlimited power in the Golden Rule. If we would measure it, we have only to stop shielding ourselves from the symbolic power of what these men are and wish to do.

Monday night at the meeting of the Board of Aldermen, it was apparent that students and the city fathers are far apart in viewing the parking problem in the downtown area.

Student Body President Don Furtado presented the aldermen with a series of proposals which he felt represented the students' viewpoint. The aldermen postponed action on the situation until they had time to look over the proposals.

In the meantime, the Planning Board of Chapel Hill, under whose direction the overall plan for restrictions and meters was drawn up, sits on its hands while first merchants and then students find fault with the plan. The two groups seem unable to look at the merits of each other's plan.

The Planning Board employed John Horn of Traffic and Transportation Planning in Raleigh to make a comprehensive study of the traffic and parking problem in hapel Hill. The study was made over a period of more than two years, and his proposals were adopted into a resolution presented to the Board of Aldermen.

Students living in Fraternities on Columbia St between Franklin and Cameron are yelling that their sacred right to park on these streets is being removed or infringed, and others living on Franklin between Henderson and Hillsboro claim the same thing. They presented their objections to the proposals Monday.

The planning board surveyed the Columbia St. area and found that of 84 parking spaces on the block (both sides), they were in use 64 per cent of the time for an average usage of one hour and 47 minutes. At present parking is limited to two hours in the block. All parking is diagonal.

The Planning Board proposed to cut out all diagonal parking and permit parallel parking only from Franklin St. to the south side of the Big Fraternity Court driveway. Meters would be installed at the parallel spaces, limited to two hour usage.

The reasons the board listed for the changes include facilitating the flow of traffic. With the changes a third lane would be added to permit drivers to have separate lanes for right, left and no turns. The Board feels that the intersection of Cameron and Columbia is a bottleneck that must be opened, and clearing the street to the driveway is the only practical way of solving the problem.

On Franklin St. between the Post Office and the ATO house the survey found 102 spaces, 85 per cent used for an average time of one hour 33 minutes. Presently all parking on the street except for spaces in front of Kemp's and the Dairy Bar is unlimited.

The proposals would eliminate diagonal spaces on the north side of the street and replace them with parallel ones, a total loss of 16 spaces. Two hour meters would be installed.

The proposals for other streets will not affect students as much and the aldermen have encountered no other vocal opposition. At the Monday night meeting a representative from a parking meter company was present.

President Furtado has presented a good case of student objections to portions of the overall plan. The question is: are these objections valid or important enough to destroy the result of study by competent officials?

It has become official that Dr. Samuel Selden, chairman of the Department of Dramatic Arts, will be leaving Carolina next January to become head of the department at UCLA.

In other words, the Carolina Playmakers, and the DA Dept. as a whole are in for a new leading personality. With all due respect to the present chairman, Dr. Selden, it is high time the department and the Playmakers had some more vital leadership than is now in evidence.

There are many things which might well be accomplished in the near future, in regard to both the Department and the Playmaker organization. Not the least of these is expansion of facilities, enrollment, and curriculum.

There is also a crying need to make the Playmakers an active part of Carolina life—both as an intellectual and educational stimulus, and, equally important, as a source of entertainment. These functions of the organization are almost entirely neglected at present. Very few students attend Playmaker productions, and the fault is not entirely with the absentees: the Playmaker front office does absolutely nothing to encourage the students to attend, and, in fact, make it difficult for them to do so.

If it is true, as it is supposed to be, that one of the functions of the local DA Department and particularly of the Playmakers is to encourage public interest in the theatre, then they defeat their avowed purpose by withdrawing the Playmakers from the Carolina students.

PETITE DRAMATIQUES

The final Petites Dramatiques production of the year, playing on Sunday night only, will be a survey of the field of poetry with the emphasis on the contemporary efforts of Cummings, Eliot, and Ginsburg, with a bit of Robert Frost thrown in for respectability.

PLAYMAKERS

The most joyous Playmaker production of the year, regularly entitled "Capers," will be given on Saturday evening in the Playmakers Theatre. The local thespians will spend the evening making fun of themselves, their productions, and their faculty. Those who have seen the Playmakers in action this year will probably get a kick out of this shebang.

Tillman To Give Recital

Hunter Tillman, senior from Roxboro, will present an organ recital in Hill Hall Thursday at 8 p.m.

A student of Dr. Jan. P. Schinhan, Tillman has participated in varied musical activities. At the University he has been a member of the University Chorus, accompanist for the Men's Glee Club for two years, director of the Glee Club production of "The Mikado," accompanist of the Music Department's performance of Mozart's "The Magic Flute," organist of the Community Church of Chapel Hill able experience as church organist and choir director, will receive his A. B. degree in Music Education in th coming commencement.

He will open his recital with a "Prelude and Fugue in D Major" by Buxtehude followed by two chorable-preludes by Bach, "Our Father Who Art in Heaven" and "Rejoice Now Christian Souls."

A Bach Fantasia in G Major will be followed by the major work of the recital, "Organ Sonata No. 1" by Mendelssohn. Marcel Dupre's "Trois Elevations" and "Carillon de Westminister" by Louis Vierne will conclude the program.

Playmakers Tryouts

Tryouts for two one-act plays which will be given commencement day will be held today at 4 and 7:40 p. m. in The Playmakers's Theatre.

These tryouts will be open to all students.

Summer Job Open

Any student interested in serving as chairman of the Summer School Activities Council has been asked to contact Student Body President Don Furtado today.

The Council works with the YM- and YWCA and student government to plan entertainment for the summer sessions.

Furtado said the council "in essence is a small GMAB (Graham Memorial Board). It plans such functions as the watermelon festival and the welcome party."

Under the auspices of the University Department of Music, the recital is open to the general public, admission is free.

Teachers Get Study Grant

Forty North Carolina teachers have been awarded scholarships for summer study at UNC, it was announced today by Arnold Perry, dean of the School of Education. Each of the scholarships carries a stipend of $100 for a period of six weeks of study.

Twenty of those to whom the scholarships were awarded may attend either the first session, June 5-July 15, or the second session July 16 August 23. The remaining 20 are restricted to special programs which are offered during the first term only.

The scholarships were awarded for teachers who are planning graduate programs of study to improve subject knowledge and teaching competency.

CAMPUS CLUES

By CAROLYN

For those who like miniatures, there is another smaller Old Well tie bar for $2.95 with matching cuff links for $5.95.

Wouldn't this make a perfect gift for the nostalgic old grad?

Yes, graduation time is fast approaching. Just a small matter of a few exams between now and then. Good luck to the grads. We hope you've enjoyed these little helpful hints during the year. Those of you who aren't leaving old UNC will see us back again in the fall.

For Solid Comfort . . .

You might as well be comfortable during these last weeks of work. And for cool comfort you can't beat these casuals by Hood.

This is the Basque, one of the famous Sun-Step line, and comes in blue, red, white or black. You'll find them, of course, at ALEXANDER'S SHOE STORE.

Don't Forget . . .

When you do your graduation gift buying, here's something you should be sure to look at. It's the handsome cuff links and tie bar featuring the UNC Old Well at Julian's College Shop. The antique sterling silver cuff links are $7.95 and the tie bar is also $7.95.

Stan Gets 3000th Hit In Chicago

CHICAGO (AP) — Stan "The Man" Musial, hastily summoned as a pinch hitter despite a well-advertised day off, joined a handful of baseball immortals Tuesday by smashing a game-turning double for his 3,000th major league hit and a 5-3 victory for his St. Louis Cardinals over the Chicago Cubs.

Seven others collected 3,000 or more big league hits.

Musial, was supposed to have been benched so he could hit No. 3,000 in St. Louis Wednesday night. He was yanked from a sunny perch in the Card bull-pen in the sixth inning and belted his epic two-bagger which started a four-run Card rally.

It was the sixth win in a row for St. Louis over the error-plagued Cubs, who lost their seventh straight.

Musial had a 2-2 count, fouling off three pitches, before he tagged Chicago's Moe Drabowsky for a long double into deep left field. After a swarm of photographers besieged Stan on second base, he left for pinch runner Rank Barnes.

Musial batted for Card starter Sam Jones after Gene Green led off the St. Louis sixth with a double and Hal Smith grounded out. Green scored on Musial's hit and before the inning ended, a walk, Don Blasingame's single, an infield out and Wally Moon's double scored three more runs.

The Cubs had fashioned a 3-1 lead after five innings, one run coming on league-leading Lee Wall's No. 10 homer in the third. The Cubs' 12th and 13th errors in four games gave the Cards an unearned run in the third.

A Wrigley Field throng of about 5,692 cheered Musial's big hit.

It was the intention of Manager Freddie Hutchinson to keep Musial benched and let him try for No. 3,000 before the home folk in Wednesday night's Cardinal-San Francisco game.

Previous players who made 3,000 or more major league hits include Ty Cobb 4,191; Tris Speaker 3,515; Honus Wagner 3,430; Eddie Collins 3,313; Nap Lajoie 3,251; Paul Waner 3,152; and Adrian Anson 3,081.

Hutchinson, in announcing Musial's benching Monday night, had indicated he would use the man as a pinch hitter if conditions warranted.

National League President Warren Giles even issued a formal statement saying Hutchinson was showing "sentiment and consideration for the home fans of St. Louis."

EVERETT WHATLEY
. . . Receives Award . . .

Whatley Name As Outstanding Track Senior

Carolina varsity track coach Dale Ransom announced yesterday that senior track man Everett Whatley will receive the E. J. Evans award which is given annually to the outstanding senior trackman.

Whatley an English major from Altanta, Georgia was captain of both cross-country and track this season. A middle distance man, the slender runner is Carolina's number three all time man in both the mile and 880. He hit his peak in the last two weeks.

In the Duke-Carolina dual meet, he ran a 1:52.7 half mile which ranks only behind Dave Sime's 1:48.2 and Bill Hendrix's 1:52.6. Saturday, he placed third in the conference mile clocking 4:13.1 which has only been bettered by Tar Heels Jim Beatty (4:06.5), and Jim Davis (4:12.5).

Whatley plans to go into the ministry after graduation. He was married last September.

Concerning Whatley, coach Hanson said, "On the basis of his fine performances in cross-country and track during the past three year, we feel that Everett is indeed the most outstanding senior on the team."

Pharmacy Wives Elect New President

Dorothy McDonald has been elected president of the Pharmacy Wives for the coming year. Other new officers include Jane Price, vice-president; Marilyn George, secretary; Pat Ridenhour, treasurer; Linda Hansen, hospitality chairman; Rowe Hood, refreshments chairman; Blanche Coppedge and Betsy Stevens, publicity co-chairmen and Maxanne Morrision, historian.

Sudden Death If Heels Tie With Clemson

If a playoff between Clemson and Carolina is necessary to decide the Atlantic Coast Conference baseball title, the game will be staged at Gastonia next Monday night.

Carolina, however, must first beat Wake Forest here Thursday in its final regular season game to gain a tie with the Tigers.

Clemson ended its regular season Monday with a 7-1 loss to Duke and to have a record of 11-3. The Tar Heels have won ten and lost three going into the all important clash with the Deacons.

Because of the urgency in deciding an ACC representative for NCAA play, Carolina Coach Walter Rabb, and Clemson Coach Bill Wilhelm agreed Tuesday to meet next Monday night if there is a tie. It will be a one game playoff under conference rules, and Gastonia was chosen as the neutral site.

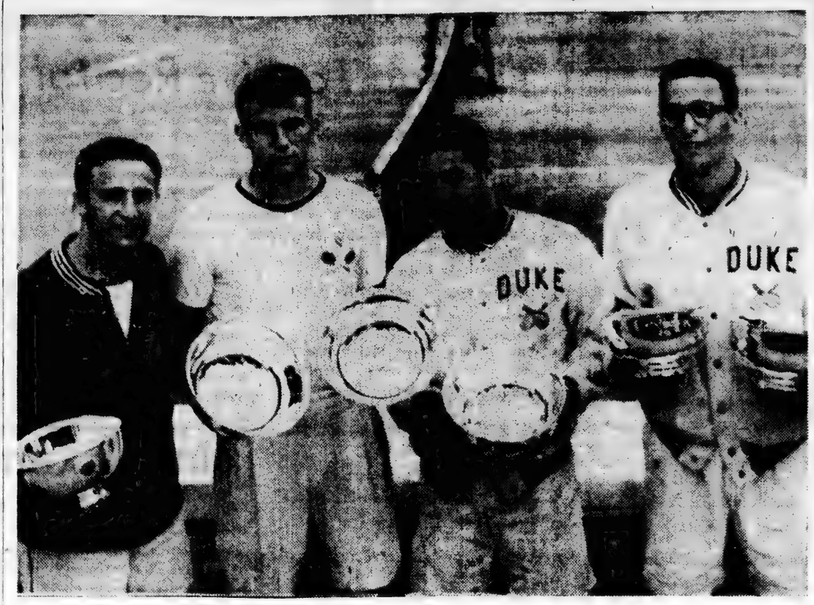
Meanwhile, Carolina licked its wounds following a 7-6 defeat at Maryland Monday and started preparations for Wake Forest. Rabb announced that his starting pitcher will be little Johnny Johnson a right-hander from Angier who has a 2-0 record. Johnson has been used only in relief roles so far this season.

Wake Forest will start Ben Trench, senior right-hander who struck out 19 men and won 4-1 in the first meeting with Carolina.

Stan Happy

By JOE MOOSHIL

CHICAGO (AP)—"Well, I'm glad that's over with," said Stan Musial shortly after cracking out his 3,000th major league hit Tuesday in the unfamiliar role of a pinch batter.



The two-base hit sparked a rally which led to a 5-3 victory for his St. Louis Cardinals over the Chicago Cubs.

"For the last three days so many people were giving it so much attention that . . ."

Just then another wave of photographers came up the lane which leads from the dugout to the clubhouse. Musial, ever the gentleman fulfilled all posing requests and answered all questions.

"It isn't every day a man gets his 3,000th hit," said The Man. "I knew it was in there and I'm sure glad it was a good, clean shot."

When Musial drove his double into left field in the sixth inning of the game, play was suspended. The ball was retrieved and given to Musial and photographers dashed on the field.

ACC CHAMPIONS—This quartet of ACC tennis players represents the very best the conference has to offer along this line. On the left is the Carolina doubles team of Steve Bank and Bob Bortner who won the conference title. Bortner is also the ACC singles champion. On the right is Duke's Dick Katz and Don Rohmhilt. They lost to Bank and Bortner in the doubles final, and Rohmhilt lost to Bortner for the singles crown.

Phillies Manager Charges His Team With Loafing

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — General Manager Roy Hamey Tuesday charged his Philadelphia Phillies with staggering around the field like amateurs.

Hamey, a combination of an angry and disgusted man, pulled no punches as he ripped into the sixth-place Phillies, losers of seven of their last nine games.

He indicated that more than the three players who must be dropped to meet the May 15 squad limit of 25 may be on their way out.

"What's the use of keeping them around," he asked.

Hamey insists the Phillies have enough talent to cope with any team in the National League.

"That is," he said, "if we ever start hitting and stop making mistakes. I can't understand it. Those players are making big money and staggering around the ball field like amateurs.

"I agree that something should be done, but I won't listen to that business about the manager being to blame.

"I don't go for that," he said. "It's easy to fire the manager. But he (Mayo Smith) can't hit, field or think for them. And there is nothing he can do about pop flies and those other things that have been happening to us."

Hamey, who admitted he was stymied in his effort to swing a major trade with the St. Louis Cardinals, said of his players, "they've got criticism coming, plenty of it. Maybe more than criticism.

"We've let some games get away that have been downright shames. I don't know how we do it at times. Someone always seems to goof."

CHAC To Stage Barbecue For Athletics

The Chapel Hill Athletic Club will hold its first annual Spring Awards Chicken Barbecue this Friday at 6:30 p.m. in Emerson Stadium.

The event will be in honor of the 34 Carolina seniors who have participated in the seven varsity sports this year. Monograms will be presented to the seniors by Carolina's athletic director Chuck Erickson and in addition, the CHAC will present placques and awards. CHAC president Vic Huggins will make these presentations.

Mr. Ted Danziger will handle the catering for the barbecue. The master of Ceremonies will be G. C. Pridgen who along with his Carolina Pranksters, will supply entertainment.

Campbell Beats Frosh

Campbell College pushed across five runs in the top of the ninth inning to defeat Carolina's freshmen, 7-5, here yesterday.

Sonney Chandler, who collected three hits in four trips, blasted a triple and knocked in three of the runs in Campbell's late rally.

Right-hander Mark Prince got credit for the win and Hennie Sapplee suffered the loss, Carolina's fourth in 20 games.

Joe Grimsley rapped out three hits in four trips and Russ Hollers got a pair to pace Carolina at the plate.

Carolina turned back State, 8-7, here Monday.

Score by innings:	R.	H.	E.
Campbell 101 000 005	7	6	2
Carolina 201 010 100	5	7	5

Batteries: Prince, Benson (9) and Hargrove, Shelley; Sapplee and Bolick.

Mays Homers Again

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Willie Mays, center fielder for the San Francisco Giants, hit home runs in his first two trips to the plate Tuesday hiking his total to seven in his last four games. He has a season's aggregate of eight. His two blows against the Los Angeles Dodgers were 400-footers. One mate was on base each time.

STUDYING FOR FINALS GOT YOU HOT UNDER THE COLLAR?
Try GM, Man. It's Very, Very Cool.
G.M.
STUDENT UNION

It was like this, man . . . way back then there were these seven crazy little cats, see? And they all swung together in a mad hut smack in the middle of the bushiest forest you ever saw. All these cats did all day was dig, man. They were wild. And then one day this really swingin' chick wandered on the scene and put all seven of those lads into a real flap. I mean they were gassed, man. That was when the old hut really began to rock. The sounds that came out of that place were way, way, way out. But it was too good to last, man. One day the local union rep happened to cool by, and when he found out they didn't belong, he put on the freeze. But this chick was the type that just had to swing, so she took her little troop and they all padded over to Carolina.

So if you're in the neighborhood, man, fall by GM and pick up on some of the stuff they blow. It really makes it.

Nixon Heads Home; Ike Plans Welcome

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP)—Vice President Nixon cut short the tag end of his riot-ridden South American good will tour and took off late Wednesday for Puerto Rico.

He is due in Washington at 10 a.m. today.

Venezuela's government sent out troops, tanks and armored cars to give Nixon and his wife Pat a safe send-off.

A bullet-proof limousine was provided for their trip from the U. S. Embassy to Caracas Airport.

It was at the airport that anti-United States demonstrators launched their spitting and stoning attack when the Nixons arrived Tuesday from Bogota, Colombia.

Clubs, stones and eggs battered their cars in street rioting. Today police cleared the streets.

Nixon planned to have dinner in San Juan with Gov. Luis Munoz Marin.

Munoz Marin has been hailed by U. S. senators as an outstanding spokesman for Latin America. The Vice President's desire to talk with him may relate to recommendations Nixon is expected to prepare on the basis of his tour.

The original schedule called for Nixon to leave Caracas at 12:50 a.m. Thursday. But he had cancelled programmed events after the mob violence and spent most of his time at the embassy residence—U. S. territory.

With the Puerto Rican stopover, his return to Washington will conform to the original schedule of 10 a.m. Thursday.

He and his party took off at 5:09 p.m.

Rumors that he was leaving ahead of time were widespread, but the exact hour had been kept secret. This was to frustrate rioters, though the city was calm and quiet today.

WASHINGTON — (AP) — President Eisenhower will join personally in what is planned as a roaring welcome for Vice President Nixon and his wife when they return today from their ill-starred South American tour.

The White House announced Wednesday night Eisenhower will be at the airport to greet the Nixons, victoms of abusive treatment by mobs in Venezuela and Peru.

A big homecoming demonstration was being urged on all sides as a symbol of national unity against discourtsey and hostility abroad.

At first the president was uncertain whether his work schedule would permit him to be on hand when the Nixon's arrive at noon (EDT). But he said he would try to make it.

". . . While it would be creating a precedent, because of my admiration for his (Nixon's) calmness and fortitude and his courage in very trying circumstances, I would like to make some special gesture," Eisenhower told his news conference.

The White House also announced later that the President had authorized all federal departments to let government workers off so they could go to the airport or help swell the crowds in the streets.

The Vice President and his wife were stoned, spat upon and jostled during yesterday's demonstration in Caracas, the Venezuelan capital.

At the end of his session today, the House unanimously adopted a resolution commending Nixon for his "courageous and dignified conduct" during the South American incidents.

Many members of Congress will travel to the airport in a body to join in the welcome. Eisenhower will be flanked by members of his cabinet and other senior government officials.

Feud Over UNC Control Unresolved

An effort to patch up differences between the UNC trustees and the State Board of Higher Education has failed—at least for the present.

This fact will be emphasiezd when the trustees report to the board of trustees at a meeting in Raleigh May 26.

The report is expected to reaffirm the trustees' position that the Board of Higher Education has wandered onto trustee authority and the trustees dislike it.

The executive committee voted 11-0 to adopt the report at a closed meeting held Monday in the Governor's office.

GOV. DISPLEASED

Officials have learned that Gov. Hodges was displeased with the report and wanted to delay its submission to the trustees until this fall.

The report was submitted by a subcommittee headed by Thomas Pearsall of Rocky Mount.

The net result of the report, originally planned as a report on efforts to compromise differences between the trustees and the board, will emphasize "no progress."

Another report to be made by the trustees may add even more fuel to the fire.

This one will come from a faculty committee appointed at the request of the trustees to examine administrative procedures as affected by the Board of Higher Education.

Unless future compromise efforts prove successful, the issue is certain to be tossed into the lap of the 1959 General Assembly. The Board of Higher Education may thus have to fight for its existence.

FEUD SOURCE

Friction developed when the trustees called for construction of housing units for married undergraduates at State College.

The Board of Higher Education cut the number of housing units.

Trustee W. C. Harris Jr. of Raleigh charged that the Board had usurped authority of the trustees.

Board spokesmen answered that they were only complying with the housing act, which required the board's okay before the units could be built.

Thus far the major dispute is the trustee claim that the Board of Higher Education has supplanted boards of trustees.

DR. HAYDON
. . . leaving for Europe

Dr. Haydon To Leave For Europe

Kenan professor and chairman of the UNC music department, Dr. Glen Haydon, has been granted a Kenan leave of absence to continue work on a research project in Europe.

Announcement of Dr. Haydon's leave was made by Chancellor William B. Aycock following approval of the Board of Trustees and Consolidated University President William C. Friday.

LEAVE MAY 27

Dr. and Mrs. Haydon will sail Tuesday, May 27, from New York for Bremerhaven, Germany. During their stay in Germany, Dr. Haydon will attend the meeting of the International Musicological Society in Cologne when he will discuss a phase of his research.

The Haydons also plan a visit with their son and his family who are in Germany this year while Dr. Glen B. Haydon, a physician, is doing research in pathology under a National Science Foundation grant.

Other stops on their trip include Holland, Belgium, England, France, Austria, Switzerland, Spain, Portugal and Italy. Dr. Haydon and his wife will return to Chapel Hill in January, 1959.

HYMN CYCLES

The trip to Europe will enable Dr. Haydon to gather material for his research on polyphonic hymns, a project which he began in 1951. The study deals with hymn cycles of the Catholic church year.

The project undertaken by Dr. Haydon involves preparing a historical account of each hymn cycle which contains between 30 and 45 individual songs, transcribing the music and writing a critical discussion on the works.

Dr. Haydon explained he is concentrating on hymn cycles known during the first half of the 16th century. He has already completed work on two of the four hymn cycles of that period.

Debating Societies' Halls Won't Become Classrooms; Godfrey Squelches Rumor

By PRINGLE PIPKIN

A latent rumor that the University intended to convert the halls of the Dialectic Senate and the Philanthropic Literary Society into classrooms was squelched yesterday.

Dean James L. Godfrey, chairman of the University Space Committee, said the societies would not be disturbed but the University could use the space if it had it.

A move to put these organizations into Person Hall after the Art Dept. leaves originated with a request from these societies to the Space Committee last year.

John Brooks, Phi president, said the move would provide an equal exchange of space. Person Hall would provide smaller debating halls better suited for the present societies.

GALLERY

In Person Hall the organizations would have a gallery to hang about 70 of their 90 portraits of renewned alumni and professors. Placing these organizations in this building was also expected to involve fewer alternations than necessary for a conventional classroom.

Recently there has been talk of putting the Di and the Phi in Gerrard Hall. Under such a plan the societies would ask for full authority over the use of the building.

The hall would also have to be altered to make it a debating hall. "I don't think that the situation has been given any serious thought," Brooks commented.

Another current rumor is that the two debating societies would move to the new student union when it is completed.

Brooks said the Phi had discussed this proposal with the directors of Graham Memorial.

In the new student union the debating societies would only be allowed to use rooms but would not have jurdisdiction over them. "The new facilities will be far less than what we now have," Brooks said.

At the present time the furnishings and the rooms of the debating societies are owned by them through a specific agreement with the University, according to Brooks.

Cuban Professor Here For Craige Lectures

A noted Cuban professor of constitutional law is here this week to conduct a series of seminars on revolutions and revolutionary movements with particular reference to Latin America.

Dr. Ramon Infiesta, University of Hanava professor has come here as Burton Craige Visiting Lecturer in Jurisprudence.

The guest of the Politicial Science Dept., he will also lecture on topics in comparative constitutional law and political systems to political science classes.

SECOND TIME

The present visit to Chapel Hill is the second as Burton Craige Lecturer for Dr. Infiesta, who served in a similar capacity in April of 1957. He is one of the most distinguished jurists in Latin Amercia, holding among other important posts in public life the presidency of the Permanent Committee on Constitutional Law of Bar Association of Havana and membership on the Executive Committee of the Cuban Society on Constitutional Law.

He serves regularly as a special visiting professor in the School of Politicial and Social Sciences of the University of Mexico.

Upon his return to Cuba after his visit to Chapel Hill in 1957, Dr. Infiesta published a series of articles on the University in the Havana newspaper El Mundo. These called attention to the special cultural and scholarly facilities of the University, in particular the collections of Public Documents and their importance in the comparative study of political and constitutional systems.

He is an honorary member of the Advisory Board of the Bureau of Public Documents Collection and Research established at UNC under the directorship of Prof. W. S. Jenkins in 1956.

Coed Group To Help Plan Dorm Activities

A new Women's student organization to promote interest and participation in extracurricular activities through dormitory coordination has been formed.

Called the Carolina Women's Council (CWC), the organization will work jointly with other campus groups in sponsoring dormitory and campus events.

It is composed of two representatives from each dormitory and two from the Town Girls' Assn., according to Miss Mary Morgan, secretary.

The Council's first service next fall will be a breakfast during orientation week for the new women students.

Officers for the 1958-59 year are: President—Miss Sue Ballantine of Hamlet; vice president—Miss Jay Patterson, Short Hills, N. J.; secretary—Miss Morgan, Fayetteville; and treasurer—Miss Jackie Turner, Raleigh.

The president's office will be located in New East Annex.

Daily Tar Heel Staff To Hold Meeting Today

There will be a meeting of all members of The Daily Tar Heel staff in the news room today at 4 p.m.

Editor Curtis Gans has urged all present and prospective members of The Daily Tar Heel staff to attend the meeting.

NEW WOMEN'S COUNCIL OFFICERS—Pictured above are the 1958-59 officers of the Carolina Women's Council, a new organization formed to promote interest in extracurricular activities through dormitory coordination. From left to right are Misses Mary Morgan, secretary; Joy Patterson, vice president; Jacki Turner, treasurer; and Sue Ballantine, president. The organization plans to work with other campus groups in sponsoring campus and dormitory events.

IDC Body Considers Changes In Structure

The Interdormitory Council Court Revision Committee met Tuesday to consider proposed changes in the IDC Court structure.

A plan for district courts was discussed. This plan entails the establishment of several district courts which would be composed of the dorm presidents and IDC representatives from the district. It would be presided over by a member of the IDC Court.

A house council plan was also discussed throughly. This plan would be on an individual dormitory basis. The individual courts would be composed of the executive committee of each dormitory.

Hilly Goldman, president of Cobb dormitory, and Curtis Gans, editor of The Daily Tar Heel, appeared before the committee and expressed their view.

Letters are being written to representative schools throughout the South to obtain information about their dormitory judicial structure.

Members of the Revision Committee are Otto Funderburk, Doug Bayliff, Walt Poole, Phil Edwards and H. E. Holland.

These meetings are open to the public and all interested persons have been urged to attend.

Works Of Famous Poets To Be Petite Program

Sunday evening at 8 o'clock Les Petites Dramatiques will offer an evening of poetry readings at Gerrard Hall. On the program will be selections from the works of Frost, Eliot, Lorca, Cummings, Ginsberg and Johnson.

The evening will be an attempt to combine poetry and theater in the manner of the famous John Brown's Body presentation of a few years ago.

Meeting Today For All Degree Candidates

A general meeting of all degree candidates will be held in Memorial Hall today at 4:15 p.m. for briefing on commencement exercises.

Dr. J. C. Lyons, faculty commencement marshall, said it is "very important that all planning to get degrees at the June commencement be there to get instructions."

This meeting will include details on forming the commencement procession and where and how to go about getting academic costumes and commencement program.

SAYS PHI

U. S. Nuclear Testing Should Not Be Stopped

The Philanthropic Literary Society Tuesday night decided it was necessary for the United States to continue nuclear testing.

A bill calling for immediate cessation of all tests was defeated, seven to four.

In introducing the bill, Rep. Don Jacobs said that cessation of the present tests in the Pacific and all other tests would be "the first step toward outlawing the utter destruction of mankind." He saw the testing of bombs as "productive of dangersous radiations" that can do permanent harm to the genetic makeup of man.

Rep. Stan Black said "the fight between Russia and the U. S. can only bring a peace in which victor and vanquished are destroyed." He called for passage of the bill on the moral issue.

Rep. Bill Fackert claimed the tests should be stopped The money saved should be spent on feeding and clothing the millions of India, China, and Africa, he said.

After introducing as an exhibit some radioactive glass, Rep. Henry Gould lambated the bill on the grounds that Russia can never be trusted to discontinue tests.

Rep. Carl Matheson said the "U. S. is the bulwark of Democracy and must not desert the Western nations." If we lose our technological abilities, the others "will be open to Soviet conquest," he said.

Rep. Bill Jackson said the U. S., in continuing to test small weapons, is "assuming that Russia will press many small wars in the future, and force must be met with force."

After stating that the U. S. must be as well equipped as Russia to maintain security, Rep. Bob Morely said "Atomic weapons are not bad in themselves; it is the people who use them."

Rep. Bill Lineberry catalogued the effects of radiation at Hiroshima and cited the world reaction to this as proof that the opinions of uncommitted nations will force Russia to keep their agreements if we cease testing.

In the voting Phi representatives defeated the bill seven to four. A vote of all those present was against passage seven to six. Rep. Bill Jackson was declared Speaker of the Evening.

Concert Series Will Present Four Performances Next Year

The Chapel Hill Concert Series has slated four performances for its 1958-59 season.

All four performances are scheduled for Memorial Hall.

Leonard Warren, baritone, will appear in Chapel Hill on October 6. Warren made his Metropolitan debut in 1939 and since that time has dominated the baritone roster of that opera house. He is noted for his concert radio and television appearances, as well as his portrayals in opera.

Beryl Senofsky will appear here on January 7. Winner of the 1955 Grand Prize of the Queen Elizaof Belgium International Contest, Senofsky is the first American-born and trained violinist to gain this international recognition.

On February 11 the New Orleans Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra Alexander Hilsberg, conductor, will be in Chapel Hill.

In 1956, the orchestra was selected by the State Dept. to play a concert tour in 16 Latin American countries. Its reception there and its sparkling North American performances have made it a top-rated concert attraction.

Louis Kentner, pianist, will appear here on March 2. Kentner has won acclaim as a major artist in recital, at the world's music festivals and with leading orchestras throughout Europe, Asia and South America. He is celebrated for having one of the most extensive repertoires of any living instrumentalist.

IN THE INFIRMARY

Students in the Infirmary yesterday included:

Misses Pat Anderson, Jo Britton, Carolyn Escott and Pat Gregory and Mrs. Betty Winslow and Richard Hicks, George Langford, Robert Kerr, Benjamin Levy, George Jackson, Wallace Graham, Thomas McGee, Carter Jones and Amos Moore.

Dark Abyss

At no time since World War II was it so evident that American foreign policy has failed, than it is at present.

America has plunged from the pre-eminent power of the world, to that power which every country of the world is itching to take a swipe at.

When Dean Acheson left the department of state six years ago, this was not the case. The United States was the supreme world power, and the world respected the United States for living up to its treaty obligations, for standing firm in the face of threats, and for upholding the cause of freedom.

In an eventful week, Lebanon, Algeria, Venezuela, and Peru have proved the failings of the foreign policy of John Foster Dulles.

It may be said that the uprisings in South America are communist inspired, but there needs to be a basic dissatisfaction with the United States before one gets mass action. This was evidently the case in the two South American countries.

The coup d'etat on the part of the Algerians will cause repercussions in France which will threaten the entire western alliance system.

The Lebanese revolution serves to show how tenuous is the allied influence on the countries of the Middle East in the face of rampant nationalism.

It is evident that each of these situations has possibilities for the communists to capitalize on, and with the present state of American foreign policy, the communists are going to win by default.

If the United States had backed an anti-colonial policy from the start, the government would have been consistent with its constitution and unequivocal with regard to the Algerian crisis. Then, the question would be answered by France as to whether they wanted to see the people of Algeria determine their own fate or whether they wanted control. A compromise commonwealth status might have resulted, or further, the United States pushing for the right solution, would have seen to it that Algeria won her independence.

It is exceedingly doubtful that France, with all her passion for individual freedom, would have gravitated very far toward the Communist bloc.

The failure of the United States' Middle East policy grows more evident daily. Instead of trying to benefit the underprivileged there, without placing the string of forced support for United States policies. The United States can capitalize on the nationalistic feelings of the Middle Eastern nations rather than letting Russia do the benefitting. To wholeheartedly endorse self-determination, and to give the countries the means for protection of their identity, without strings attached.

Finally, the neglect of the nations of this hemisphere must be critically reexamined in the light of facts showing that the Latin American countries have economies that are inextricably bound up in the fluctuation of the United States' economy.

What has been done in the past six years has failed the United States miserably. What can be done in the future by breeding the trust of the allies of the United States, by fulfilling America's commitments under its several treaties, and by living up to the letter and spirit of the Constitution of the United States is great.

A peaceful world, a strong United Nations, and a United States which possesses that rarest of qualities—integrity can be the result of some wise action at this time. If the action is not taken the result will be war or worse—the subjugation of individual minds to totalitarian domination.

Convention

Today, the state Democratic convention meets in Raleigh.

The meeting can be a back slapping, hand shaking demonstration of unity or it can be something by far greater.

It can be one of the occasions that Democrats throughout the state have a voice in the selection of candidates.

The convention can place a candidate in the seat vacated by Sen. Kerr Scott. It will no doubt cause a little disunity, by putting the power in the hand of the majority—the rank and file, but it will also demonstrate that even filling a vacancy can be handled in a democratic manner.

It is hoped that the convention will rise to the challenge.

Whit Whitfield

Some of you no doubt read the vituperous attack on Tar Heel columnists in a letter by Clyde Smith in Tuesday's paper. In the event that you were not so fortunate we would like to quote some of the more revealing portions:

EDITOR:

"As an avid reader of "Pogo," "Peanuts," and a DOZEN other comic strips, I resent the direct and indirect slurs on them and their readers by some of your editorial columnists. . . .

"In defense of comic strips and their readers, I submit that to the intelligent reader they offer an excellent commentary on social, economic, and political conditions today. Some, while primarily for entertainment, offer a public service as well, in interpreting a particular profession and its subject matter. "Judge Parker" (law) and "Rex Morgan" (medicine), are examples. . . .

"Not all comic strips are worth the time it takes to read them, but I believe there are a number which the busiest student could read with profit to his education, maybe even Messrs. (short for messers) Wolfe, Winston, and Whitfield."

Whew!

The first question which comes to mind is, what did we do to deserve to be included in this rogue's gallery? We couldn't have breakfast without "Peanuts," but our daily diet doesn't consist of 13 other strips as does Clyde's. Are we to be crucified for this? If so, then drop by the Tar Heel office and pick up one of Neil Bass' old crosses. He left quite a few.

We think that Clyde will be happy to know that as a result of his astute observations on the merits of comic strips that the law and medical schools are seriously considering the inclusion of "Judge Parker" and "Rex Morgan" into their respective curricula, and that several economics profs are likewise considering "Little Orphan Annie."

Clyde, you will be even happier to know that what you say about deriving an education from the comics is quite true. We have a younger brother in the sixth grade who divides his time equally between comics, television, and baseball, and that child knows everything there is to know. He definitely will have no need for college, and why should anyone for that matter, what with comics as cheap as they are, and not half so boring as college courses.

Our proverbial hat is off to you, sir, for bringing this to the attention of our campus community.

But, Clyde, your astute observations have left the college administrator with something of a problem. As soon as the exodus to the comic book stands begins, college enrollment will fall off, and then what will the administration have to make speeches about?

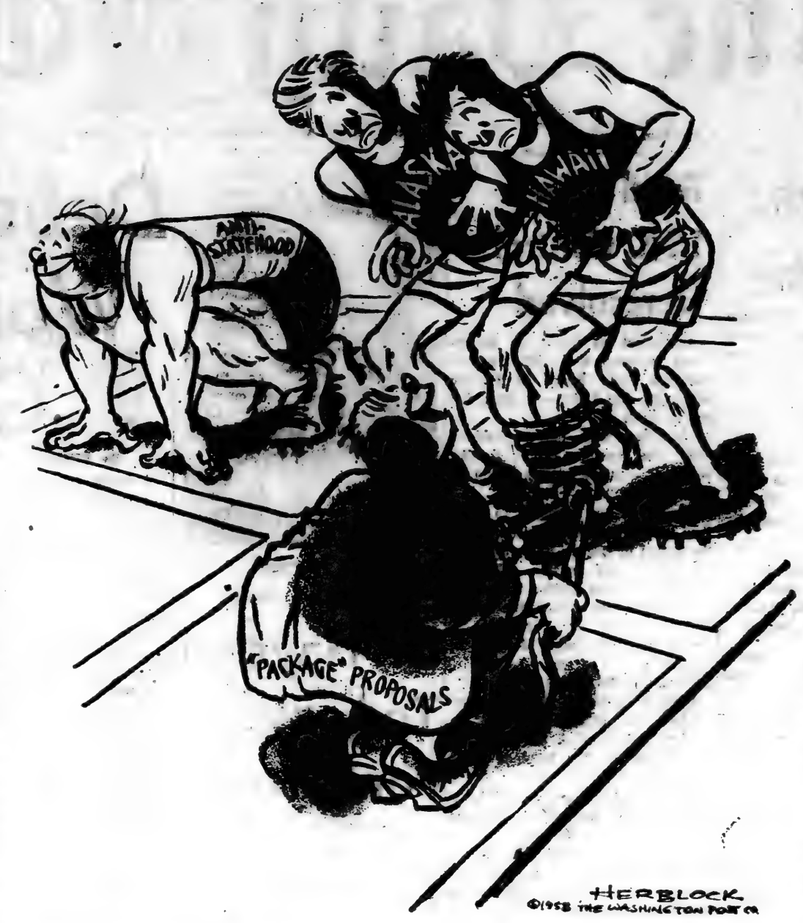
We wonder if the guy who came to English class with the shaving soap all over his earlobe and uppper neck realized it was there, or if he was merely trying to impress the girls with his personal hygiene measures, or if he had just posed for a Gillette ad? . . . Who is the nicest guy in the world? He's the one who tells you that the professor grades his term papers with a ruler after you have made yours as concise and meaningful as possible AND turned it in. In case you're wondering what the "ruler method" is: All papers over 1 inch in thickness get an "A," over ½ inch, a "B", etc. Don't laugh. It may happen to you. We understand that there are some profs who like this method. But then you can always pad them with laundry paper.

Letters: Episcopals Split



Editor:

Mr. C. G. Martin should follow the advice he gives to John Dalton and read the Book of Common Prayer himself. The title page therein clearly states "The Book of Common Prayer and Administration of the Sacraments and Others Rites and Ceremonies of the Church according to the use of the Prostestant Episcopal Church in the United States of America." It is quite obvious that "Protestant Episcopal Church" is the peculiarly American name for the branch of the Holy Catholic Church in this land. Please note that the wording is "Protestant Episcopal" and not "Episcopal Protestant." In other words, Anglican bishops are Catholic bishops protesting against the unCatholic position of the Roman Church. They do not and never have protested against the Catholic Faith. I refer Mr. Martin to the following pages of the Prayer Book: 15, 16, 18, 37, 39, 47, 280, 290, 291, 294, 316, and 529.

I note that Mr. Dalton has quoted a Presiding Bishop of the Episcopal Church in his letter. But I see Mr. Martin has no use to back him up! In closing may I quote His Grace the present Lord Archbishop of Canterbury-known by all to be of evangelical persuasion-"We (Anglicans) have no faith of our own. We have only the Catholic Faith of the Catholic Church enshrined in the Catholic Creeds. And this Faith we hold without addition or diminution."

"This Will Give You Both An Even Chance"

Anything Goes

Peter B. Young

Like the weather, everybody talks about American liberalism but nobody does anything about it. The standard cliche right now is to bemoan the way that the Democrats go back to the halcyon days of the New Deal for their recession remedies, while the Republicans (always ten years behind) try to revive the glory that was Hoobert Heever's.

Syndicated pundit, Walter Lippman, recently noted a new trend. It seems that such diverse characters as John Kennedy, Lyndon Johnson and Richard Nixon are suddenly reaching into university faculties for an infusion of fresh ideas. In point of fact, Lippmann is wrong. Adlai Stevenson revived the old New Deal "brain trust" concept in his campaigns of 1952 and 1956, both of which relied heavily on university talent.

In any event, while this "new" trend of Lippman's has not yet trickled down from the Ivy League echelons to Chapel Hill, it might be pertinent to note that we, like Harvard, have our share of men who are making a real effort to think in fresh terms, and who are not content to serve up the warmed-over remains of either the New Deal or Republican Normalcy.

Such a man on our campus is Morton W. Keller, a tough and intense young instructor on the social science and history faculties. Last week, Keller addressed a campus organization known as The Meeting. The topic of his talk was, "The American Liberal Since 1952: Where did he go—out: what has he done—nothing."

Terming liberal success since 1932 as the result of "a pact with the Devil of Pragmatism," Keller called for a return of thinking to the underlying theory rather than simply the continued emphasis on the mechanical techniques of winning an election. Don't do—THINK!" was the unique advice with which he concluded his presentation.

Keller sees the source of American liberalism's difficulties in the post-war red hunt, an episode in our history in which liberals enthusiastically joined. Liberals desired to prove to their new-found conservative friends that when it came to chasing commies the liberals were "right up there with the best of them." This was a serious mistake because the real objective of this hunt was not the impotent handful of American Communists; the real objective was the American liberal movement. Therefore, when liberals joined the holy crusade they were flinging boomerangs which swooped back to destroy themselves.

"Communism never has been the issue," says Keller. "The issue has been us, and will be what Communism feeds on." By violating the great baseball maxim to always keep your eye on the ball, liberals have squeezed themselves into a box of their own making. And as the Cold War changes in character, liberals wake from their big binge to find that they are ideologically bankrupt. Thus the return the theory, which Keller advocates, even at the cost of losing a few more elections.

During the question period which followed Keller's talk, the young instructor defined the typical pragmatic liberal as "a politician who happens to be a humanitarian." Today's great need is obviously for the "humanitarian who happens to be a politician."

The only point at which this observer will take issue with Keller is on his contention that "America of the 1950's is the New Deal dream come true, only the dream turned out to be a nightmare." What Keller has reference to here is the kind of prosperity which has put two television sets in every pot. This is all well and good, and it certainly does have its nightmarish aspects. But what Keller misses is the millions of Americans who don't have two television set in every pot, who don't have even one television set, who don't have a decent minimum of food, housing, and medical care. While I yield to no man in my admiration and love for Franklin D. Roosevelt, I do try to keep at least some perspective on what the New Deal achieved, and just as important, what it did NOT achieve.

As the kind of problem with which liberals should concern themselves, Keller posed this timely question: "Does the 'mixed economy' really work?" Some of his auditors had already decided, long ago, that the trouble with the "mixed economy" is that it's awfully mixed (up). Or, in the words of Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam: "Better creeping socialism, than stumbling capitalism."

Keller himself, while no socialist, would be in favor of changing the mixture of the "mixed economy." What has come to be known in the hallowed halls of Saunders as "The Keller Plan for Detroit" involves a massive infusion of governmental funds and special incentives to encourage the hard-pressed auto magnates to convert some of their excess plant capacity to the manufacture of low-cost public housing. As Keller said, one day, when the realization struck him that this plan has strong socialistic elements: "My God, it's socialism! Well, too bad; it can't be helped."

Mothers Of America

Joseph P. Lyford

On the day my old Harvard history prof, Sam Morison, took off his mortarboard and tramped off to Oxford to give a lecture in his admiral's hat, the age of the military pundit was officially upon us. Dr. Sam, who had won his stars writing Navy histories during World War II, never went back to the title of professor once the shooting was over. And, on arriving in England, he made a statement to the press about military strategy and foreign policy. It was a long haul, indeed, from the days when Dr. Sam lectured on such matters as the Maypole at Merry Mount, and the flight of Ann Hutchinson to Rhode Island.

Admiral Sam is no more aware of my distress over his evolution than he was of me as a student. But I regard him as a bit of a symbol. In these days of five-star college presidents, of Generals of the Army in charge of Remington Rand, and of Admirals telling us how to run the school, Dr. Sam had read the handwriting on the wall. To be an authority on anything, nothing helped more than to have a gold stripe on the sleeve or a silvery constellation on the shoulder. Faced with a choice of two titles, both merited but one deserved more than the other, Dr. Sam took the one less earned but more impressive. And I can't say I blame him. Who'd take the word of a history professor over the word of an Admiral on anything?

But let's proceed from Dr. Sam. Styles are changing. Beginning with a decline in the radiance from the White House, the tide of Generals and Admirals seems to be receding along with the economy. We haven't had a General in the Cabinet for years, and Princeton even appointed a philosophy professor its new president. Maybe this is a Good Thing. I am not sure. It all depends on what the next style in peerless leaders is going to be. Public Relations Executives? Policemen? I'll wait and see before I clap my hands at the passing of the military man from grace.

If I w..ted to be an unimpeachable authority I'd be a Policeman. By this I don't mean the ordinary hardworking patrolman, wearing a heavy blue uniform on hot days and pounding the beat for Law and Order. Such Policemen are never considered authorities; they are called Cops. They are also badly paid and footsore. No, I am speaking about Policemen who specialize in big problems like saving the nation from juvenile delinquency, bootlegging, and subversion. More particularly I am speaking about specialists on the highest levels: top echelon Policemen. You can look about you for a long while and never find an authority like on special law-enforcement official whom we all know and revere. He has been paid by the government a long while to catch criminals of various types, and catch them he does. But the apprehension of interstate malefactors is not his only function. As I said, he is also an authority on almost everything you will find in the Encyclopedia Britannica. He has one amazing capacity. All he has to do to become an authority on a subject is to express an opinion on the subject.

For instance, the Big Policeman has a solution for juvenile delinquency. He tells parents they should make their children go to Sunday School. The day after the speech, the papers carry his suggestion in detail. Compare this with the pitiful showing of all the books and speeches by people like teachers, psychiatrists, judges and social workers. Who listens to them? Other teachers, psychiatrists, judges and social workers.

Or take the Big Policeman on such aggravating matters as constitutional law or civil liberties. Simply by commenting he penetrates the mists of debate. He is reported fully and precisely. His picture runs in the adjoining column. Editorials reiterate his points.

I've always told myself I was going to write a big, fat, successful book some day and sell it to the movies. This has been a self-deception, because I am nobody and easily discouraged. To do an authoritative book you have to be powerful and you have to be sure. Like the Big Policeman. He wrote a book about how to save America from communism. It is a handy compendium of history, Marx, Engels, Stalin, Lenin, the revolution, intrigue, how to spot a disloyal American and the importance of snooping on your neighbors in the interests of national defense. It has sold 100,000 copies because it is broad and because it is sure. All the reviewers liked it. Only one critic got into trouble. Like Dr Oppenheimer, he didn't enthuse, so George Sokolsky did a column on him.

The best part of being the Big Policeman is his built-in security. General-presidents, Admiral-educators, five-star Secretaries of State and artillery-captain music critics get investigated. Congressmen blast them, sometimes; very often they get retired, either by promotion boards or by the electorate. But the Big Policeman goes on forever. Nobody investigates him. People buy his books by the ton. He knows all the secrets about everybody. He can scare hell out of any Senators, and often does. He has the biggest fingerprint collection in the world, but his own hand is invisible. He is the only American who never got pushed around by somebody.

The moral of this story is intended for the Mothers of America, to whom the Big Policeman has spoken many times as a counselor and friend: Don't be disappointed if your little boy says he wants to be a policeman when he grows up. Encourage him. Set the little devil at it. Buy him a tin badge tomorrow. What if he doesn't want to be President? Who wants to be President? Look what happened to Hoover. Herbert, that is.—From The Nation.

UNC Faculty Give Views On Anti-Nixon Rioting

By STAN BLACK

The stoning and spitting directed against Vice president Nixon the past two days has caused much speculation in the U. S. as to what has happened to our prestige and position that could have resulted in such wide-spread rioting. Communist-inspired though it is.

President Eisenhower has said that the economic troubles of various South American countries undoubtedly are a factor. Several faculty members who are interested in the situation were asked their views on the causes of the riots. All agreed that Communists provocation was an important factor.

Dr. Harold A. Bierck, professor of history, said that the incidents were "in part a spontaneous combustion, based on economic problems, envy of the U. S., and some Communist agitation."

"It was certainly an idiotic move to send Nixon down there at this time, with so much anti-American feeling expressed in Latin American newspapers recently. But Eisenhower's dispatch of a small number of troops to the Caribbean was the worst thing he could have done to inter-American relations. The day of the Big Stick is over."

Dr. Bierck further surmised that "it would seem that the administration sent Nixon to South America to give him some headlines. If they didn't expect this reaction, it was stupidity, and if they did, it was a deliberate plan to publicize Nixon."

Dr. C. O. Cathey, professor of history, called the incidents "gross negligence," adding that "it is inconceivable to me that the governments of Venezuela and Peru should have allowed this sort of indignity. I have no doubt but that these demonstrations were Communist-inspired. The majority of people in Latin America would be very regretful that this has happened."

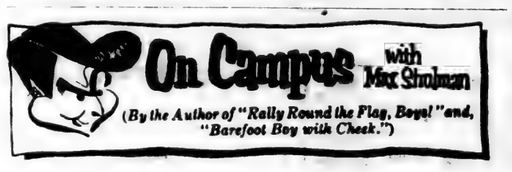
He also said that "this trouble is a reflection of an inferority complex. The people feel that the U. S. has ignored them in government aid, while sending massive aid to European nations. In regard to the troops, we would have been very remiss in not providing for Nixon's safety had Venezuela not been able to."

Dr. Sturgis E. Leavitt, Kenan Professor of Spanish, said "It is very unfortunate that these Communists, mostly among the students, should have been able to "provoke the riots." He didn't think that feeling against the U. S. was an important factor, but that "most thinking pepole down there are very disturbed over the affair." Dr. Leavitt said, "Nixon was sent to Latin America to find out what they want and what we can do for them." He thought that the troops would "be looked upon as very unusual."

Dr. Loren C. MacKinney, Kenan Professor of history, wondered whether "Nixon was sent down to South America to be a martyr for the Republicans?" It was noted that Eisenhower plans a big reception for Nixon in Washington. He also wanted to know why it is that "everywhere the students take the lead. Is that a characteristic of the better-informed people in these countries , or is it just student cockiness?"

Dr. MacKinney said that "buying friendship does not work, but we have to keep up with Russia. We haven't been able to buy much lasting friendship" in Latin America.

The opinion was expressed by Dr. W. W. Pierson, professor of political science, that "neither of the governments were neglectful. These people were incited by Communists, I think that it was a very unfortunate, foolish, grave "incident." He added that the rioting was pointed "against the U. S., rather than Nixon himself." He joined the other faculty members in deploring the incidents as unfortunate happenings, but cautioned against drawing any direct lines of causation at this early date.



Organ Recital To Be Topight By Tillman

Hunter Tillman, senior from Roxboro, will present an organ recital in Hill Hall tonight at 8 o'clock.

At the University Tillman has been a member of the University Chorus, accompanist for the Men's Glee Club for two years, director of the Glee Club production of "The Mikado," accompanist for the Music Department's performance of Mozart's "The Magic Flute," and organist of the Community Church of Chapel Hill.

The recital will open with a "Prelude and Fugue in D Major" by Buztehude followed by two chorable-preludes by Bach, "Our Father Who Art in Heaven" and "Rejoice Now Christian Soul."

Under the auspices of the University Dept. of Music, the recital is open to the general public. Admission is free.

THE STUDENT COUNCIL AND HOW IT GREW

Today let us investigate a phenomenon of American college life laughingly called the student council.

What actually goes on at student council meetings? To answer this burning question, let us reproduce here the minutes of a typical meeting of a typical student council.

Meeting scheduled for 8:30 p.m. at Students Union. Called to order at 10:03 p.m. by Hunrath Sigafoos, presiding. Motion to adjourn made by Louis Bicuspid, freshman representative. Motion ruled out of order by Hunrath Sigafoos, presiding. Hunrath Sigafoos called "old poop" by Louis Bicuspid, freshman representative. Seconded by Delores Wheatgerm, sophomore representative. Tabled by Hunrath Sigafoos, presiding.

Minutes of last meeting read by Zelda Pope-Toledo, secretary. Motion to accept minutes made by Hunrath Sigafoos, presiding. Motion defeated.

Treasurer's report not read because Rex Mercredi, treasurer, not present at meeting. Rex Mercredi, treasurer, impeached and executed in absentia.

Motion made by Louis Bicuspid, freshman representative, to allow sale of hard liquor in school cafeteria. Seconded by Delores Wheatgerm, sophomore representative. Motion tabled by Hunrath Sigafoos, old poop.

Motion made by Booth Fishery, fraternity representative, to permit parking in library. Motion referred to committee.

Motion made by Dun Rovin, athletics representative, to conduct French conversation classes in English. Motion referred to committee.

Motion made by Esme Plankton, sorority representative, to allow hypnosis during Rush Week. Motion referred to committee.

Motion made by Pierre Clemenceau, foreign exchange student, to conduct Spanish conversation classes in French. Motion referred to committee.

Observation made by Martha Involute, senior representative, that in her four years on student council every motion referred to committee was never heard of again. Miss Involute was tabled.

Motion made by Louis Bicuspid, freshman representative, to allow sale of hard liquor in Sociology I and II. Seconded by Delores Wheatgerm, sophomore representative. Motion tabled by Hunrath Sigafoos, presiding, crossly.

Refreshments served—coffee, cake, Marlboro Cigarettes. The following resolution adopted by acclamation:

"WHEREAS Marlboro is milder, tastier, and more pleasing to smokers of all ages and conditions: and WHEREAS Marlboro is contained in the crushproof flip-top box which is the slickest, quickest, neatest container yet devised for cigarettes; and WHEREAS Marlboro, that most commendable of smokes in the most admirable of wrappings, is graced with the exclusive Selectrate filter; therefore BE IT RESOLVED that it is the sense of this meeting that Marlboro is far and away the best cigarette on this or any other campus."

Meeting adjourned with many a laugh and cheer at 11:74 p.m.

Can Tie Clemson For League Championship

By RUSTY HAMMOND

Today is the big one. At 3:30 in Emerson Stadium, Carolina's Tar Heels will be fighting for a tie with league-leading Clemson when they take on the tough Demon Deacs from Baptist Hollow.

Clemson can now sit back and wait, as they have clinched at least a tie for regular season honors with their 11-3 record. Carolina is 10-3, and today they have the chance to force a play-off game for the championship with Clemson. If they win today, the play-off game will be held next Monday in Gastonia, selected as a neutral site.

Carolina lost a chance to be in Clemson's position the other day when they lost to the Maryland Terps 7-6 in a heartbreaker. A win over the Terps, coupled with Clemson's loss to Duke, would have put the Heels in undisputed first place with nothing to lose but a tie.

Today Wake Forest comes to town for the last game of the season, and they have the honor of being the only team in the conference to have a winning record against the Tar Heels.

In a replay of a game which was originally rained out, the Deacs beat Carolina 4-1 under the lights. The starting pitcher for Wake Forest will undoubtedly be big Ben Tench, the identical pitcher who beat Carolina the last time out. Tench struck out thirteen Tar Heels and allowed only two hits in that contest.

The Deacs will also bring some first rate hitting to town, including outfielder Rex MacMillan, who has the ACC batting championship practically sewed up with a healthy .421 average. Buster Ledford, one of the top home run clouters and base stealers, will be in center field.

On the mound for Carolina, with a chance for sudden stardom, will be little Johnny Johnson, a relative unknown on the staff. Johnson has been overshadowed by the exploits of Ben Harding and Wayne Young for most of the season and his fine 2-0 record is ofter overlooked. Johnson has not started a game; both of his victories came in relief.

In the hitting department, Carolina can counter with Carson Oldham, sailing along at a .360 clip, and Gerald Griffin, now batting at .330. Alton Pons, who leads the league in runs batted in with 24 will also be counted on heavily.

The game brings together the two hottest teams in the conference. Carolina has taken 11 out of their last 13 games. The Deacs, after dropping their first four conference contests, have swept seven of eight to boost their ACC mark to 7-5. The Deacs could beat out Duke for third place with a win today, and the Tar Heels are gunning for the pennant.

AAU Track Meet To Be Held In Raleigh

RALEIGH—The Carolinas AAU track meet will be held here Saturday afternoon and evening with 16 schools participating. The event will be held at the State College track.

Preliminaries will be held in the afternoon with the field events beginning at 2 o'clock and the track events getting under way at 2:30. Finals Saturday night start at 7.

A highlight of the track season, the Carolinas AAU has been one of the area's most successful events. This year's meet will climax the careers of many outstanding performers, including Duke's great sprinter, Dave Sime.

Sime, the record-breaking redhead, will be the favorite in the 100 and 220-yard dashes and will share the meet spotlight with Elias Gilbert, the hurdles star from Winston-Salem Teachers.

Taking part in the meet are teams from Duke, Carolina, State, Clemson, Davidson, Wake Forest, North Carolina College, A and T College, Presbyterian, East Carolina, Elizabeth City Teachers, Belmont Abbey, Chowan Junior College, EMI, St. Augustine's and Winston-Salem Teachers.

Camp Lejeune a strong contender for team honors, will not take part this year because of a schedule conflict.

Also absent are Dave Scurlock and Wayne Bishop of Carolina, two of the Atlantic Coast Conference's top stars. They will be in California for a meet.

Track events scheduled are the 100, 220, 440, 880, mile, three-mile, 120 high hurdles, 220 low hurdles, 440 hurdles and the mile relay. Field events include the high jump, broad jump, pole vault, shot put, javelin and discus.

The meet is under the direction of State College track coach Paul Derr. The referee is Dr. Charles Spencer, starter Ed Fogg, head judge J. L. Pierce, head timer Bill Smith, and head field judge L. J. Phipps.

Last year a crowd of 3,000 saw four records fall and two more equaled, including a 9.3 100-yard dash by Sime which tied the existing world mark held jointly by Sime and several others. Sime ran the 220 in 20.2 last year, only two-tenths of a second off the world's record.

The public is invited to attend. Admission is $1 and tickets may be purchased at the track.

Tar Babies Play At Wake Today

Carolina's freshman baseball team will end its season this afternoon when it challenges the Wake Forest Baby Deacons to a double-header at Wake Forest.

The Tar Babies have compiled a fine 6-4 record this year under the guiding hand of Coach Pat Earey who will be finishing out his first year as freshman baseball coach.

In the only other game with the Wake freshmen, the Tar Babies slid by 1-0. They have been especially powerful at the bat this season, mainly due to the power of outfielders Russ Hollers and Joe Grimsley along with infielders Ferg Norton and Bud Ellerbe who have hit safely continually through the season.

In the first game the probable starting pitcher will be Wayne Allen. Jerry McNeil is scheduled to go on the mound for the second go round.

At first for the freshmen will be Dee Fradey. Norton will be at second, Ellerbe at short and Tommy Camp at third. Carroll Bolick will do the catching.

In the outfield will be Grimsley in left, Dickie Hord in center and Hollers in right.

Freshman Track Team In Big-4 Meet Today

The Tar Baby track team will travel over to Durham today to participate in the annual Big-Four freshman track meet. The meet was called off last week because of rain.

This meet is the yearling's answer to the conference championships. In dual meet competition this season, the Tar Babies have fallen to Duke and State, but they defeated Wake Forest. Both the Duke and State squads are the strongest either school has fielded in many years.

The outstanding boys thus far for the Tar Babies have been Tom White (shot), Bob Eubanks (broad jump), Fred Wood (broad jump), and Henry Clements (discus), in the field events.

In the running events, Worth Sweet has been a top notch distance man along with Harry Miller. Benjy Seagle and Bob Foxworth have done very well in the middle distances, and Fred Wood has done well in the dashes.

The Tar Babies will leave this afternoon at 1:54 and the meet will start in Duke Stadium at 3 p.m.

Carolina Graduate Squelched In Jordan Ouster Attempt

Against of chorus of "No's", state Democratic Convention Chairman Floyd Crouse adjourned the state convention yesterday, with a Wake County delegate, Robert Pace from Morrisville, still trying to get the floor to introduce a resolution.

After all resolutions from the resolutions and platform committee had been brought up and passed, Pace stood up to get the floor to present a resolution to have the convention select the Senatorial successor to the late Sen. Kerr Scott.

The resolution would have had the executive committee directed by the convention as a whole to endorse the candidate that the convention selected.

The resolution was spurred by the appointment of Everett Jordan to fill the Scott vacancy. Gov. Hodges made this appointment recently.

After the official business had been completed Crouse asked for a motion to adjourn and refused to recognize Delegate Pace. Instead the chairman recognized John Kerr, Jr. of Warren County, who moved adjournment.

Several "ayes" were heard on the adjournment motion, however, a large group of "no's" were also heard. Throughout the voting Pace continued to attempt to get the floor.

Earlier, the resolutions and platform committee tabled the Pace resolution after some discussion.

According to Pace, the committee at first refused to hear the resolutions, and only after Pace had demanded his rights as a delegate, did the chairman of the committee allow the resolution to be heard.

According to Pace, the chairman only agreed to do this after saying, would let even a Communist speak."

Pace in commenting on the proceeding said "I doubt that Nikita Khruschev could have maintained firmer control of another type party meeting, than did the Hodges, Jordan, Larkins triumvirate at today's Democratic Convention."

Robert Pace As "Joe Smith"

A self-styled "Joe Smith", reminiscent of the 1956 Republican Convention, was refused the floor at the State Democratic Convention today.

Robert Pace from Morrisville, a Wake County delegate who wanted to present a resolution which would have allowed the Convention to pick the successor to the late Sen. Kerr Scott was not heard although he cried in vain to get the floor to present his motion.

Instead the Convention adjourned without his being allowed to speak.

Pace is currently a resident of Chapel Hill. and is a graduate of the University.

He was the youngest justice of the peace in North Carolina when Scott appointed him to a Wake County post. He was subsecquently reelected.

Pace also ran for the state house of representatives while a student at Carolina, and although he put forward only his $7.50 filing fee, received 2,000 votes.

New Library For Undergrads Will Be Opened During Summer

A new undergraduate library, designed to give UNC a collection of books equal to the total library of many colleges in this area, will be opened during the summer.

The new area will be on the first floor of Wilson Library in the space now occupied by the Business Administration and Economics library.

"It will proved much longer and more appropriate reading facilities for lower division students and will make immediately available a collection of books equal to the total library of many colleges of our area," say library officials.

The collections will include "the best and latests books" in all classes from philosophy and religion through the social sciences, literature, and history.

Library officials pointed out the present General College library will be merged with this collection. All its services will be transferred to the new space, they said.

Plans include a division of the room into smaller reading areas. This 'reduce the noises of traffic as well as improve the attractiveness of the area," officials said.

They said the possibility of air conditioning is being investigated.

"The two levels of shelving immediately adjacent and opening into the roof will be used as open shelves and, in time, it is hoped that shelving can be built around the walls to extend the book capacity and attractiveness of the room," they said.

Miss Mary Lou Lucy, chief of the Circulation Dept., will be in charge of the room, to be staffed by professionals and student assistants.

Athletes As Well As Scientests Challenge America Says Official

America faces the problems of matching Russia not only on the sciencific front but also in the health and physical well-being of her individual citizens, a Chicago athletic official told municipal recreation executives in Chapel Hill Wednesday.

Theodore P. Bank, president of The Athletic Institute, a non-profit organization promoting athletics, physical education and recreation, addressed a session of the 10th anniversary meeting of the N. C. Municipal Recreation Executives Conference.

"The Russians are devoting more time to recreational sports and physcial education than are we Americans, who have neglected physical activities with our automobiles, automation and high standard of living.

"We must give our children a recreation program to develop total fitness--physically, mentally, emotionally and spiritually," Bank added.

The recreation executives also heard a report on the N. C. Recreation Commission from its director, Ralph J. Andrews of Raleigh, and members of his staff.

William B. Stronach Jr., director of the High Point Parks and Recreation Department, introduced Bank and led discussion after his talk.

During Wednesday afternoon the conferees held separate sessions to discuss recreation problems in cities with population above and below 30,000. Two North Carolina recreation directors who served as leaders are Oka Hester of Greensboro and Wilbur L. Fay of Kinston.

Dr. Harold D. Meyer, director of UNC's recreation curriculum, discussed some current trends in recreation at a Wednesday night session.

The conference will continue through Thursday morning, when James S. Stevens Jr. of Raleigh will report on the N. C. Recreation Society, which he heads. Jack Amyette of the Society will preside at a business session following.

In his discussion of recreation as it relates to the executives, Bank emphasized the personnel recruitment problem which faces the recreation profession and many others today.

"With our great emphasis on science, many persons would have the school curriculum dominated by scientific studies. But all our students cannot become good scientists, and we must continue to provide a balance in their education," Bank said.

Bank urged the recreation officials to cooperate with our community agencies in planning facilities and programs for economy's sake. "The intense competition for the community dollar, both the tax revenue and the voluntary contribution, makes it important that we try to save the taxpayers' money."

He cited a cooperative plan in Chicago between the parks and recreation department and the school boards which has brought an estimated saving of $18 million dollars, through double use of facilities.

Sputnik Three Biggest Yet; US Taunted

MOSCOW — (AP)—Russia fired its third Sputnik into orbit yesterday, a 1½-ton, cone-shaped monster far heavier than any of the five satellites hitherto launched by man.

In a Kremlin speech taunting U. S. science, Premier Nikita Khrushchev implied the west now must come to terms with Moscow, although the Soviet Union did not want to use Sputnik III to "harm humanity or to blackmail the world."

Sputnik III joins three small U. S. satellites and ends a month-long space famine for Soviet scientists.

Whirling about the earth once every 106 minutes at a maximum altitude of 1,168 miles, Sputnik III should be visible to the unaided eye in the rays of the rising and setting sun, an official Tass announcement said.

Tass, the Soviet news agency, that Sputnik III is large enough to be a manned earth satellite.

Tass said if an ordinary one-stage rocket of the same weight were sent aloft with all necessary scientific apparatus and developing a speed of 2.1 miles per second, "it could carry out a flight to the moon, Mars or Venus."

Sunday Party Rule Supported By Sororities

The Panhellenic Council passed a resolution supporting the Interfraternity Council move disapproving of Sunday parties, in action Wednesday.

In other business the Panhel decided that four girls from each sorority will be in the receiving line at the Panhel Tea which will start Rush next year.

It was decided that the next meeting of the organization will be Wednesday, September 17. The meeting will be held to plan Rush dates.

Tillman Wins Glee Club Cup For 'Most Valuable Member'

By BEN TAYLOR

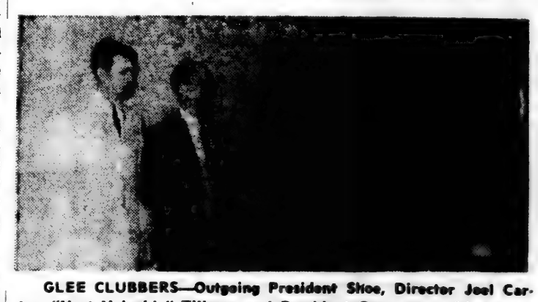
The Men's Glee Club rounded out what Director Dr. Joel Carter termed "one of the most successful years we've ever had" Saturday night with a banquet.

The Glee Club's most valued award, a loving cup for the most valuable member 1957-58, went to graduating senior Hunter Tillman of Roxboro. During his four years in the Glee Club, Tillman was accompanist in his sophomore and junior years, served as student conductor this year and directed the club's production of "Mikado" with Hollins College in April.

Commenting on the club's work for the year, Dr. Carter said, "This has been one of the best Men's Glee Clubs I've ever had. They racked up between 40 and 50 public appearances during the year and did a fine job on each one.

"Probably the most notable achievement was the high morale attained and sustained throughout the year and the constant realization on the part of the men that they were representing the University wherever they sang."

Twenty-six members received certificates and two trophies were presented at the choral group's annual banquet. A personal gift, a drinking mug emblazoned with slogans, was also presented to outgoing president Charles Shoe by Dr. Carter in recognition of his work in the Glee Club over the past three years. Shoe will become the club's first "administrative assistant" in the fall, according to Dr. Carter.



Following a steak dinner, the members and their dates heard Dr. Carter announce that 46 of the club's songsters had received credits for the year. Glee Club certificates, awarded for "meritorious service, interest, vocal talent, and good attendance," went to 26 members.

Nine members "who have completed at least four semesters in the organization and having a consistant record of faithful Glee Club participation" became eligible to buy Glee Club Keys. They were:

Malcolm Campbell, John W. Dalton. Jr., J. Warren Elledge, Darrell B. Kawkins, Kenneth L. Ames, James W. Kinney, R. Graham Matthews, Edwin G. Sapp, and James P. Tyndall.

The Glee Club's newest award, the "Blooper Award," went to rising junior Malcolm D. Campbell, from Needham, Mass. The award, a tin funnel, was presented by Publicity Manager Ben Taylor.

Dr. Carter took the occasion to release the club's plans for the forthcoming year in stating that the usual two annual tours will be undertaken. The fall tour is tentatively scheduled to take the club to Hollins, Va. for a presentation of Gilbert-Sullivan's "Mikado" and down to Knoxville, Tenn. for the football caravan. The spring tour is scheduled to include eastern North Carolina and South Carolina.

GMAB Group Heads Are Named By Carter

Twelve students received positions as committee chairmen of Graham Memorial Activities Board Thursday, GMAB President Bob Carter announced.

Those appointed and the committees they will head were:

Angus Duff, Calender; Louis May, current affairs; Gay Cowan, dance; Seamon Gottlieb, drama; Glenna Meginnis, films; Russel Link, music; Betty Zeh, office.

Dee Donroe, polls; Katherine Carter, receptions and decorations; Edna Faye Pugh, special events; Wally Kuralt, sutdent productions and Bob Borden, tournaments.

The publicity chairman will be chosen at a later date.

The chairmen will be responsible for determining the membership of their committee and will be responsible for the program under his area.

Those who applied for membership on a committee will be notified concerning their appointment or rejection.

Anyone who is interested in serving on one of the committees is urged to come by GM and fill out an application blank. Many people are still needed in order to complete the organization for the coming year.

"We have a fine group of students heading the committees and we are looking forward to a successful year. Anyone with any ideas concerning the program of GMAB please drop by and talk it over with me," president Bob Carter said.

Summer School Weekly Edit Staff Announced

Editor Davis Young of The Summer School Weekly has announced his appointments for staff positions on that paper for the first session of summer school.

They include John W. Young, managing editor; Barry Winston, associate editor; Ken Young, city editor; John Riley, news editor; John Minter, business manager; Hobart Steele, asst. business manager.

Seamon Gottlieb, arts editor; Westbrook Fowler, feature editor; Mike Simpson, circulation manager; and Jim Harper, sports editor.

In announcing these appointments Young said, "I am very pleased to have these people working with me this summer. They represent some of the finest talent in journalism that can be found on the campus of this University."

He went on to say, "I would like to make special mention of John W. Young. He is currently an Associate Editor of the Duke Chronicle and his wide experience gives me confidence that he will produce an eye catching layout of the pages."

The first issue of the paper will hit the newstands on the morning of June 5. It will be a six page issue designed for the new students entering the University for the first time. However, it will also contain much valuable information for veterans of Chapel Hill.

The paper will appear on Thursday during the summer instead of Friday as in past years. Young, in commenting on plans for the summer stated: "I hope to have at least three six page issues.

"We are hoping to have two of these supplements be about special features of off campus news which affects not only us, but people everywhere."

Obituary

The fourth republic of France is dying tonight. Bulletins streaming in proclaim the imminence of the DeGaulle coup.

When the third republic fell in 1940 before the Nazi tanks, grown men cried. Grown men are crying tonight.

The irony of this fiasco is that the DeGaulle government will probably deal with the Soviet bloc, while the French Communists, fighting to save the life of the Republic, are therefore, at least for the moment, on the side of NATO and the free world's interests. (But, of course, should the Communists and their allies win, they will immediately set up a "Popular Front" government that will also take France out of the Western Alliance. Either way, we've had it.)

Richard Nixon received a hero's welcome at Washington today when he landed after completing his "good will" tour of Latin America. Nixon, as usual, showed his quick brilliance and astonishing grasp of issues in a remarkable ad-lib speech to the assembled throngs of (coerced) governmental employees. But Mr. Nixon's astuteness is going to be just one casualty among many when France falls.

We do not think a Democratic Administration would be able to solve all problems. We know very well that Messrs. Acheson and Truman were guilty of serious mistakes. But the plain truth of the matter is that our sick Republican Emperor has no clothes on. He is naked as a jay-bird. And the imminent fall of France may well be the ultimate disaster.—P.B.Y.

Democracy?

Democracy in the state suffered a crushing blow yesterday, as the State Democratic Convention made a travesty of the democratic process and the individual's right to be heard.

Moreover, the meeting signalled the disorganization of the Scott wing of the Democratic party in the state.

Robert Pace was a delegate to the convention. Robert Pace had a right to a say and to introduce any resolution that he so desired.

Moreover, those Scott supporters, who were so irate when Governor Hodges appointed a successor, had a moral obligation to back Pace's stand and demand that the convention hear him out.

Neither event happened. Pace was denied his rights and the branchhead boys forgot their principles. Hence, Governor Hodges was able to dominate a convention which could have very well selected a qualified successor to the late Sen. Scott.

The day was trying for more people than just Robert Pace. It was trying for all those who believe in representative government and the voice of the people.

They definitely were not heard yesterday.

What's Wanted

Overheard at the state convention was the statement, "Why doesn't he (Robert Pace) get somebody more important to introduce his resolution?"

The answer to that question was simply that there was no one more important than Robert Pace at the convention.

Not only was Pace a delegate—a representative of the people, but he demonstrated more courage than any other individual at the convention including all the dignitaries.

Pace being a member of the people, should have introduced the resolution, and Pace being the person that Pace is had all the more reason to introduce the resolution.

It might not have been politically expedient for Pace to introduce the motion, but at the same time, when courage was lacking on the part of those who should have introduced the resolution, Pace had the courage.

In fact, Pace proved himself to be bigger than any of the politicians at the convention by his actions on the floor and at the caucus meetings that preceded the convention.

Bob Pace is a very important man indeed.

Congratulations

Congratulations are in order for the UNC baseball team who have tied for the league lead at the end of the regular season.

Best wishes also go to them in their quest to win the undisputed title next Monday.

Roundup

Dave Jones

Among the Student Legislature there are members who felt that their action in passing the UNCARC bill should have been final. They had convinced themselves that the club had all of the qualifications necessary to make wise and effective use of $2000 of the student's money.

When at 7:30 Tuesday evening, they learned that Don Furtado had vetoed their precious bill, they were up in arms. Any appreciation for the position of the executive in a checks and balances system was lost and a hue and cry of "who does he think he is?" was up.

Later on during the evening, after other matters of a routine nature had been taken care of, the matter was brought up.

The time lapsed acted as a cooling off period, for by the intelligent discussion that ensued from the floor and the effective points brought out pro and con, it was apparent that the legislature was legislating again.

Furtado's act had its proper effect, that is to have the body reconsider the legislation which he thought to be ill advised. A parade of faces marched up to the rostrum and back to their seats, and the body voted again.

This time a two-thirds vote was needed.

It wasn't available.

This action leaves the UNCARC in a position of challenge.

Now the club has a chance to prove to this column and to the Student Legislature that it wasn't just a flash in the pan, but a real effort to provide an effective and needed service to the student body.

Here is a box score of other action taken by the 25th assembly to date:

Subject: Action taken on the subject of the legislature itself; The speaker was given the power to appoint the delegations selections board for the State Student Legislature. A Bulletin board was set up in Y-Court and others approved to have legislature news posted. The residence requirement for legislators was temporarily suspended. Introduction of legislation at the "last minute or to meet a sudden need was simplified.

Subject: Action taken on bodies under the jurisdiction of the legislature; Opposition was expressed to rules which apply to freshmen only. The jury selection committees of the Honor System Commission were increased in number. Seven Cents a mile was established as a standard for UNC sponsored travel. Membership in the NSA was increased to 12 persons. The by laws of the Student Council were approved. The election laws were temporarily suspended and a committee set up to re-write them. The membership of the Men's Honor Council was increased temporarily to eight members. The Consolidated University Student Council was increased to seven appointed members.

Subject: Money bills; $85 to delegates to the NSA regional convention. $100 to the visiting Iranians. $125 to the IDC. $150 for the Daily Tar Heel. $85 to the High School Honor Council Committee. $100 to the NSA Summer foreign student conference.

Subject: Miscellaneous; A committee was established to study the rising dorm rent problem. The constitution and by laws of the UNCARC were approved. A paved walk was requested for the street behind Emerson Stadium. Trash cans were requested for the campus. And past student body officers were praised for their work.

More Episcopal Fight

Mr. Martin:

Re: Your letter in Tuesday's DTH.

If you will examine the title of the Church, you will find "Protestant Episcopal Church", not Episcopal Protestant Church. We are protestants in that we are protesting against some of the practices of the Church in Rome, but not against Catholicism. You will find repeated throughout the Book of Common Prayer the word "Catholic".

I would now like to ask you, Mr. Martin, how many protestant churches observe the Seven Sacraments: Baptism, Confirmation, Holy Eucharist Penance, Holy Matrimony, Ordination, and Unction? How many protestant sects have Bishops, Priest, and Deacons of the Apostolic Succession? How Many Protestant groups have Monastic Orders? How many Protestants believe in the Real Presence in Holy Communion? How many Protestant churches claim for their ministers the power of Absolution? These are Catholic practices and beliefs, not Protestant. And all are incorporated in the Dogma and Doctrine of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the United States of America and throughout the world-wide Anglican Communion. We are truly members of the One, Holy, Catholic and Apostolic Church.

"Find Any Fingerprints On It?"

Letters On IDC, Wolff

Editor:

The school year 1957-58 has drawn to a close. We, the authors of this letter have been harboring these thoughts and criticisms for this length of time. We sincerely hope that these conditions will be remedied with the institution of a modified dorm advisor system. The following is a list, rather hastily compiled, of our major complaints, all violations of our own honor code.

(1) I. D. C. money being spent for alcoholic beverages and being listed as food expenditure. This money is used by a few at the exclusion of many.

(2) Nightly consumption of large quantities of alcoholic beverages in the dorm.

(3) Absolutely no quiet hours observed.

(4) Cooking in rooms.

(5) Those who should maintain and uphold the dorm rules are just those who are either committing these infractions directly, or through inaction are responsible for the perpetration of these violations.

You may ask why we did not report these violations earlier. One is greatly deterred in reporting a person in authority to a higher authority. When a man who is supposed to prevent these infractions of rules, partakes in the infractions, who are we to turn him in?

We would at this point, like to recommend a type of dormitory system which we know is successful. A system similar to this should be adopted at U.N.C. At its head is a Resident Advisor. This advisor is paid several thousand dollars a year plus room and board. He neither takes nor teaches classes. He is in charge of all functions of the dorm and is directly responsible to the administration of the University.

Under this man comes an assistant advisor. He may be a graduate student. He is paid a smaller salary plus room and board.

On each floor is a student resident advisor. He is given only room and board. He is the link between the student and the dorm administration. He enforces the regulations and is responsible to the assistant advisor.

This system is, of course, designed for a much larger school. Under this system it is possible for a man to be "campused." You may cry an anguished, "No! Not at Carolina!," but gentlemen, this system works.

It has not been our purpose, through this letter, to cause discomfort or discredit to anyone, but merely to point out a great injustice to the men of Stacy dorm and to the rest of the school as well. It is hoped that the administration will take heed of this letter and think not in terms of punishment now but in terms of correction for the future.

Name Witheld By Request

Dear Mr. Wolff:

I have just finished reading your article, "View and Preview," dated May 14, concerning "the future of the Department of Dramatic Art and the Playmaker organization."

I am amazed at your talent for writing vague generalities and your capacity for bad taste.

It is obvious that you know even less, if possible, about what is happening backstage than you know about what is happening ON stage.

"With all due respect to the present" critic, I am ashamed for you.

Taylor Williams

Dear Mr. Wolff:

I congratulate you on your article concerning the Carolina Dramatic Association. In my opinion, the Playmakers have ceased to be an active organization and are now a decadent one. A fine example of this was at the recent CDA Contest Play Convention held here several weeks ago. Is it not strange that 6 of the 10 first ratings were awarded to active participants who had contributed to the Koch Memorial Scholarship Fund, with one exception. Most of the other winners had some type of political bind.

I wonder if Professor Koch would approve of this action?

The CDA is suppose to "encourage Dramatic Arts in the schools and communities of North Carolina; to meet the need for constructive recreation; to promote the production of plays, pageants and festivals; and to stimulate interest in the making of a native drama."

I wonder, if two years ago a representative of the CDA, who is also an officer in the CDA, furthered these ideals by being intoxicated at a festival made up of high school students.

I do not think so, and I also wonder how many of these student (those present at the time of the incident) would enroll in Dramatic Arts here at UNC?

I, being one of those students, interested in dramatic arts, did not enter the Dramatic Arts Department, as I had wanted to, because of this and other incidents.

Truly the Playmakers and the CDA need drastic revision but these revisions will not be made with just Dr. Selden leaving.

Just People

Eric Savareid

We have come to one of those periods in history when a psychological gulf is widening between ordinary people and their government in many countries. It is a period in which governments across the East-West line see each other as enemies. Because their responsibility for security naturally obsesses them, they have little or nothing to chance, rarely give their supposed enemies the benefit of the doubt. In the meantime, their citizens, through ignorance or perhaps through an instinctive faith that is the ultimate wisdom, less and less regard each other with fear and suspicion.

Here we have the spectacle of thousands of Americans officially taught that Russia implacably plots our downfall—her citizens all indoctrinated to that end—warmly receiving a Russian dance company in New York; over there, the spectacle of thousands of Russians, officially taught that Americans are culturally barbarians, giving standing ovations to a young Texan who plays the piano.

The two governments hurl official charges and counter-charges at one another every day; but virtually every private American who goes to Russia experiences polite curiousity at the very least from private Russians. Virtually every private Russian who comes here has the same experience. Human beings in the flesh are no longer alien and forbidding. More and more this push and drive toward flesh-and-blood acquaintance continues by the efforts of private people and their various organizations.

This reporter spent part of the weekend with a very old, very respected Hindu ascetic and philosopher, the Shankaracharya of Puri. In the thousand-year existence of his religious order, he is the first of its leaders to take himself overseas, in spite of his age and infirmities. He has spend weeks now, talking with Americans collectively and singly. His travels reinforce his faith that all religions are the same at bottom; that all human beings are the same.

He is acutely aware of what another great war would do to end the human story on this earth. He does not think that one great power will suddenly attack the other great power. He fears a spark somewhere, a spreading flame of hysteria and passions with governments then becoming the led, not the leaders. So he feels we have no choice but to try to know one another, as human beings.

There is no guarantee of peace on this road of personal and cultural exchange and intermingling. After all, the British, the French, the Germans lived close together geographically, intermingled in great numbers, absorbed each other's thought and culture to a very considerable degree—yet they came to blows, time after time. This road can guarantee no safe destination for peoples so alien, in distance and history, as the Russians and Americans, but it cannot harm the prospect to take this road; it can only help. The more our respective people know one another in the flesh, the more inclined they must be to extend the benefit of doubts, the less inclined about each other in times of incident and crisis. Perhaps that is all these exchanges of persons and thought can do. But that is something, and it is something positive at a time when the governments themselves appear stalled at dead and negative center.

How many people, of any country, really believe that the politics-weapons way is the lasting solution to finding peace? Probably not very many. How else explain why, in a period when they are drenched in talk of weapons as the key to security, a majority of Americans still want to see the East-West leaders sit down in a summit meeting? Such a meeting now may be a great mistake; the timing may be quite wrong. But this popular feeling both here and abroad persists and grows. Perhaps it is, indeed, a reflection of the ultimate wisdom. For consider where even the governments would be, consider the world prospect, if the popular feeling were against such meetings, against personal and cultural intermingling. Then, surely, even the faith in human sanity of such a man as the Shankaracharya would be gravely shaken.—From The Saturday Review

Press Tags & Tickets

Mr. Editor,

It was brought to my attention today rather abruptly just how well accepted our school paper is in Chapel Hill. The paper even the town people should respect as a spokesman of the students.

I was in the local court for parking violations. The bulk of which I received working for The Daily Tar Heel. While in court I explained that I received these parking tickets while I was doing Tar Heel work. It was then brought to my attention and the courts that the press stickers of the Daily Tar Heel are not recognized by local policeman. The reason, the stickers were not issued by Ray Jefferies office.

I would like to bring it to the towns attention that the Tar Heel has a very large circulation. This includes out of town and out of state subscribers. To mail these papers the paper also has the privilege of second class mail. The issues that are mailed out of this town go to alumni, other state papers and other school papers in the state and country. The Daily Tar Heel is also a member of the Associated Press. The Daily Tar Heel has a paid staff and is one of the few daily college newspapers in the country.

It is also true that other newspapers and the press associations print their own press stickers. These stickers are recognized and respected all over the world. Why shouldn't a press sticker from the Daily Tar Heel be recognized when it is a member of a press association and lives up to the standards of other newspapers in the country.

I think that it is matters like this that make the relationship between townspeople and students so hard. The people refuse to respect the students and their activities for what they are. I think that if these people will turn back just a few years in the pages of time they will see that it is the school that has made Chapel Hill what it is today. If the people of Chapel Hill don't respect this I for one am in favor of moving the University to Hillsboro.

Blue Imps Capture Fresh Big Four Meet

DURHAM (AP)—Duke paced the field in the second annual Big Four freshman track meet here Thursday, held in Duke Stadium. The Blue Imps, unbeaten during the regular season, captured 10 first places out of 15 events. No team score was kept.

Jerry Nourse of the Dukes set a new school record in the two mile run as he covered the distance in 9:36, chopping nine full seconds off the old mark set by William Nourse in 1941. Nourse also won Thursday's mile event, coming home in 4:39.6.

The only other double winner in the field was Duke's Jack Wilson in the 100 and 200 yard dashes.

100-yard Dash—1. Wilson, Duke: time :10.1. 220-yard Dash—1. Wilson, Duke: time :22.1. 440-yard Dash—1. Davis, State: time :51.0. 880-yard Dash—1. Wilson, State: time 2:00.8. Mile Run—1. Tar Babies Get Caught In No Hitter At Wake

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Bob Plemmons notched a no-hitter in hurling Wake Forest's freshmen to a 7-0 win over the Carolina freshmen in the first game of a doubleheader Thursday. Carolina, paced by the big bat of Russ Hollers, bounced back to win the second game, 9-4.

Plemmons faced only 24 batters, striking out 12. Jay Franklin, who went 2 for 4, including a three-run homer, paced the 9-hit Wake Forest batting attack.

Hollers poled a bases-loaded homer in the 7-run second inning to lead Carolina to the win in the second game.

Scurlock, Bishop Run Tonight

Dave Scurlock and Wayne Bishop, two Carolina runners who were stars in the recent Atlantic Coast Conference track and field meet, will match their speed against some of the nation's cinder elite at Los Angeles tonight.

Accompanied by Coach Dale Ransom, the two left Wednesday by plane, and will have an opportunity to do some work in the Coliseum before the Coliseum Relays are run.

"In my opinion, this is the most fabulous track meet in this country," Ransom said, "and I am real pleased that Dave and Wayne got invitations."

Scurlock will compete in the 880 and Bishop in the two mile. They won these events in the conference meet, with Scurlock also breezing to victory in the 440 as a doubles winner.

Scurlock's best time in the 880 was in the NCAA last year when he stepped the distance as a sophomore in 1:48.2, the third fastest in history. He came on brilliantly last winter to take the 400 in the Sugar Bowl meet, the 880 in the Millrose Games and the Latham 1,000 in the Boston AC Games, following this up with the 600 and 880 in the ACC Indoor Games.

This spring he was set back by an ankle injury, but finished strong late in the dual meet season.

Gain Right To Meet Clemson In Play-Off

More than 4,000 fans jammed Emerson Stadium to capacity here yesterday to watch the Carolina Tar Heels come through with the blue chips down to edge Wake Forest 1-0 and gain a tie for the ACC pennant with the Clemson Tigers.

Carolina has now earned the right to battle Clemson in a single play-off game to be held in Gastonia Monday night to decide the winner of the conference flag. The teams have identical 11-3 records.

Two Carolina pitchers, Johnny Johnson and Wayne Young, got together to limit the Deacs to no runs and only four hits. Young gained credit for the win, his seventh of the year against two losses, by coming on in the seventh inning with the bases loaded and only one out.

Young got Charlie Forte to force Al Baker at home, then struck out pitcher Ben Tench on a 3-2 count to end the inning safely. Young dit not allow a hit and retired eight men in a row.

Carolina threatened first, in the fourth, when Gerald Griffin crashed a tremendous shot into deep right field, good for three bases. But Griffin was out at home when he attempted to score on Al Pons' infield drive.

Beside the Deacons' near miss in the seventh, they almost hit pay dirt in the fifth. Al Baker doubled, went to third on a wild pitch, but was left stranded at the hot corner.

The only run of the game, which proved to be enough, was scored by Carolina in the bottom of the eighth with two men out. After the first two men had grounded out, Carson Oldham started it off with a walk, and then stole second. Griffin singled, sending Oldham to third. Al Pons walked, and with the bases full catcher Frank Skinner allowed a passed ball to get by him and Oldham raced in from third with the winning run. Skinner had been injured on the previous pitch when the ball struck him in the neck.

The loss was taken by Wake's big Ben Tench who beat the Tar Heels before in Winston-Salem. Tench pitched a good game, allowing only three hits over the nine inning route.

LINING UP FOR NEW YACKETY YACK
. . . once the line got as far as Alumni Building

Yackety Yack Makes 1958 Appearance

Long lines stretched to Morehead Planetarium yesterday as students filed past the windows of the Rendezvous Room at Graham Memorial to receive their 1958 Yackety Yack.

This edition of the yearbook sports a soft red leather-like cover. Its 455 pages are filled with pictures and feature articles. Included is a fast—reference index, showing exactly where each student's picture may be found in the book.

The theme, "Our Year at Carolina," is carried out with liberal use of bright colors throughout.

Following a section devoted to UNC Administration officers, student activities are covered, including Student Government, publications, fine arts and student life.

Next the Yack treats male readers to a bevy of campus beauties.

Campus organizations—honorary, professional, religious, military and social are treated in a section to themselves.

Sports fans are considered in a picture-filled section which includes football, basketball, baseball, minor sports, the Monogram Club and booster clubs.

Finally, schools ad divisions make up a section which includes individual portraits of undergraduates, graduates and students in law and

Second Lawn Concert Planned By UNC Band

The UNC Concert Band, directed by Herbert W. Fred and assistant director Calvin Huber, will present its second lawn concert of the season Sunday afternoon at 4:30 at Davie Poplar.

Miss Quillian White, soprano, will be the featured soloist singing "A kiss in the Dark" from "Orange Blossoms" by Victor Herbert, and "I'll See you Again" from "Bittersweet" by Noel Coward. A first performance of a transcription by Fred of the unpublished overture The Great Adventure by Henry Hadley, one of the important early 20th century Americans composers will also be performed.

Other works on the program include novelty arrangements by Fred of two popular tunes, "Chopstick," and "Li-l Liza Jane; "Headlines," a modern rhapsody by Colby; "Procession of Nobles" by Rimsky - Korsakoff; "Emperor Waltz" by Strauss; "Arioso" by Bach; "Carnival Day n New Orleans" by Morrissey; "Cuban Fantasy" by Kepner; and selected marches.

Activities Chair Is Still Open, Says Furtado

Don Furtado, president of the student body, called Thursday for applications from persons interested in serving as chairman of the Summer Activities Council plus those interested in working with the council.

The council works with Student Government, the YMCA, and Asst. Dean of Student Affairs Samuel H. Magill to plan entertainment for students in both sessions of summer school. Such activities include dances, swimming parties, free flicks and the watermelon festival.

Furtado emphasized that the positions open do not require much experience.

The President urged that interested students contact him as soon as possible at the Student Government office in Graham Memorial.

Di Senate Defeats Bill Opposing US Alliances

A bill advocating the United States' withdrawal from all entangling alliances was defeated in the Dialectic Senate Tuesday night by a motion to consider the bill unfavorable.

President Gary Greer introduced the bill, explaining that he felt the United States could better carry out its duties as a leader of democracy and the free world by withdrawing from those alliances which have drawn it into such embarrassing stands in the past several years.

Withdrawal from such alliances, he continued, as the U. N. and NATO, would not be a reversal to the policy of isolationism. Instead it would allow the United States to better persue her duties as a leader of the Free World, Greer concluded.

Senator Gahn countered by remarking that the United States cannot maintain a defensive posture in the modern day of guided missile without alliances. Alliances are essentially pledges to repell a common agressor. By withdrawing from alliances, the United States would be shirking her duty to the Free World nations, he said.

Other objections to the bill were that alliances provide the means of negotiating differences peacefully. Withdrawal from alliances with other Free World Nations would result in utter chaos in the World today.

Christie Farnham concluded that the benefits of such alliances as the U. N. have far outweighed the evils.

Dramatiques Will Feature Modern Poets

Tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock in Gerrard Hall the Petite Dramatiques will stage their last production of the year. It will consist of an presentation of poetry readings from the works of six modern poets.

The readings range in content from the rural poigancy of Robert Frost to the anguished outpourings of the Beat Generation's poet spokesman, Allan Ginsberg. From the retorically polished philosophy of T. S. Eliot to humble faith expresed in the folk sermons of James Weldon Johnson, and from the wry lyricism of e.e. cummings to the strident laments of Frederico Garci a Lorca.

Last Issue Is Tomorrow

Tomorrow will mark the final edition of The Daily Tar Heel for the current school year.

All announcements for publication in this last paper must be in the Tar Heel news office in Graham Memorial by 3 p.m. today.

Rocky Mount Honor Student Gets IFC Prize

William Lawrence Medford has been announced as winner of the $2000 Andrew Bershak Interfraternity Scholarship for 1958-59. Medford is to graduate from Rocky Mount Senior High School and will enter UNC in the fall.

Medford was chosen from among 125 applications for the coveted award. A committee consisting of Dr. Ollie Cornwell, Dr. J. R. Caldwell and Garrett Folger chose 10 finalists, including Medford.

The other nine finalists will receive tuition grants.

The Bershak Scholarship is sponsored by the Interfraternity Council and is supported by contributions from members of the social fraternities at UNC.

The award is made on the basis of ability, character and finacial need.

The $2000 grant, given to an entering freshman each year, is deposited to the Student Aid Fund by the IFC and credited to the recipient at the rate of $500 per year.

Currently there are four men at Carolina on the IFC Bershak program.

Folklore Head Hudson Co-Edits New Anthology

Arthur Palmer Hudson, Kenan professor of English and director of the Folklore curriculum, is co-editor with John T. Flanagan of the University of Illinois, of an imporant anthology of folklore literature recently published by Row, Peterson and Co. under the title "Folklore In American Literature."

The anthology, drawn from available sources of folk literature, is designed to show the rich legacy upon which many American writers have levied. The selections are assembled in 12 classifications based upon folk relevance and thus provide both a literary classification and a broad picture of American regional divisions according to literary interest and expression.

The book is designed to serve at once as a textbook for folklore courses and an anthology for those who wish to trace the literary heritage.

Professor Hudson, who began his folklore interest with collections of Mississippi tales and ballads, is editor of or contributor to a score of books in this growing field of literary interest.

IN THE INFIRMARY

Students in the Infirmary yesterday included:

Misses Patricia Gregory, Hilda Holt, Amy Peck and Betty Winslow and Johnny Blackburn, Ronald Britt, Robert Kerr, Nelson Lowe, Amos Moore and William Wall.

APO Initiates 7 New Men At Last Meet

Alpha Phi Omega, national service fraternity initiated seven new brothers Tuesday night. A supper meeting preceded the initiation ceremonies. Several brothers from the Duke chapter attended.

Hare, Rose Appointed

Jeff Hare, junior, Ann Arbor, Mich., and Jim Rose, senior, Pikeville, have been appointed by Student Body President Don Furtado to serve on the Honor Council until June 6.

The selections came as a result of a request by Council Chairman Hugh Patterson that the body be expanded to seven members. His request was approved by the Student Legislature last week.

Hare has served two years on the Council as clerk. He is president of the senior class, a member of the Student Legislature, chairman of the Finance Committee, secretary of Phi Gamma Delta and past chairman of the Summer School Council.

Rose is chairman of the Honor Council for the coming summer, was chairman of the Council last summer, is chairman of the University Traffic and Safety Council, chairman of the Traffic Committee and is an orientation counselor.

In announcing the appointments, President Furtado said, "Jeff Hare and Jim Rose are both experienced in Honor Council work. I have the greatest faith in their sincerity, ability and willingness to uphold those traditions of fairness for which the Council has been so long noted."

Dorm Leader Assures Safety; Letter-Writers Receive Threat

By PRINGLE PIPKIN

Two Carolina students have been threatened with physical violence because of an unsigned letter that was printed in The Daily Tar Heel yesterday.

The note read, "The residence of this hallowed hall are hereby invited to the funeral of Messrs. Quack (Robert Quackenbush) and Stein (Lewis Steingold), which will be held immediately after that quaint southern remedy for informers—tar and feathers is carried out."

The signature the note bore was R R Resl and the rest was unintelligible. The recipients of the note said they had definite ideas as to who might have sent the note.

Quackenbush said that around 11:30 yesterday morning he had been blocked in the hall way by three students who were not "making friendly gestures."

He said that the boys would have probably gone further if they had known definitely at the time who had written the letter.

French National Assembly Votes Pflimlin More Power

PARIS — (AP) — The National Assembly overwhelmingly voted Premier Pierre Pflimlin drastic authority yesterday to fight any grab for power by Gen. Charles de Gaulle's backers at home and in Algeria. The vote was 461-114, the greatest majority any government has received since World War II.

Charging there was a plot against the Republic, the moderate premier even got all the Communist vote in his appeal for emergency powers to meet France's gravest postwar crisis.

The rebellious Committee of Public Safety in distant Algiers stood firm in its demands for the return of de Gaulle to power.

Paris was tense but quiet after the news came during the morning that Pflimlin's home outside Paris was bombed and considerably damaged Thursday night.

More than 1,000 armed special security troops stood guard outside Parliament while the Assembly angrily debated the emergency powers bill, then passed it.

The Council of the Republic, the upper house, was expected to pass the bill within hours.

Francis Venable Honor Awarded To Williamson

The recipient of this year's Francis P. Venable award in chemistry is Stanley M. Williamson of Charlotte.

The Venable medal is awarded each year by the Rho Chapter of the Alpha Chi Sigma professional chemistry fraternity to the outstanding senior in chemistry UNC The medal is awarded on a basis of scholarship, leadership and personality.

During his sophomore and junior year Williamson also received scholarship awards given by the fraternity to outstanding members of these classes. In addition to the scholarship awards, Williamson was awarded a $500 grant at the beginning of his senior year given annually by the Chemstrand Corporation of Decatur, Ala.

On completion of his B. S. degree in chemistry this June, Williamson will assume as summer position as a research assistant to Dr. J. F. Bunnett in the Department of Chemistry. In October Williamson will begin graduate study in chemistry at the University of Washington in Seattle.

Health Affairs Faculty Changes Announced

A number of faculty changes have been announced in the Division of Health Affairs by Chancellor William B. Aycock.

The announcement was made with the approval of President William C. Friday and the Board of Trustees.

The Division of Health Affairs is composed of the Schools of Dentistry, Medicine, Nursing, Pharmacy, Public Health and Memorial Hospital.

Dr. Loren G. MacKinney was named assistant professor in the Department of Pediatrics of the School of Medicine. His M. D. degree was awarded by the Harvard School of Medicine in 1945. Prior to accepting the UNC post, he had taught at the University of Pittsburgh. Dr. MacKinney has already assumed his new duties.

On Sept. 1, Mrs. Pauline W. McCaskill will join the faculty of the School of Nursing as an assistant professor. Her B. S. degree was awarded by Duke and her master's degree was granted by Columbia University. For the past four years she has been on the faculty of Duke University.

A total of 11 promotions were announced within the School of Medicine. Dr. John B. Graham and Dr. David W. Abse were promoted from associate professors to full professors. The following five men were promoted from assistant professor to associate professors: Drs. Isaac M. Taylor, James W. Woods, Jeffress G. Palmer, Thomas B. Barnett and Joseph H. Perlmutt. Four men were promoted from instructors to assistant professors. They were Drs. J. Dewey Dorsett Jr., Allen W. Downie, Richard L. Dobson and Myron G. Sandifer.

Dr. Clifton C. Crandell of the School of Dentistry was given leave of absence during the next academic year to continue graduate work in the School of Medicine of the University of Pennsylvania.

Dr. Harley C. Shands of the School of Medicine was granted a leave of absence from October 1958 to August 1959. He will do study and research under a Commonwealth Fund Fellowship at the Institute of Psychiatry in London.

Delta Omega Initiation Set For Fourteen

A total of 14 new members will be initiated in the Theta Chapter of the Delta Omega National Honorary Society of the School of Public Health tomorrow night.

The ceremony will be performed during a dinner meeting at 6:30 p.m. at the Carolina Inn. Members of the society are selected on the basis of scholarship and leadership.

The new members are Edwin S. Chapman, Sherman Oaks, Calif.; Martha E. Clark, Jackson, Miss.; Helen M. Fedde, Staten Island, N.Y.; Samuel D. Harrison, Chamblee, Ga.; Tefta Iralu and Vichazelhu Iraly, both of New York City; Vincent D. Patton, Tampa, Fla.; Howard A. Peters, Omaha, Neb.; Henrietta H. Pfeffer, Miami, Fla.; Dr. George Soopikian, Iran; Richard H. Sudds Jr., Williamantic, Conn.; David A. Tejadade-Rivero, Peru; Etra E. Page, Clarkton and Hiawatha B. Walker, Florence, Ala. The last two persons are members of the faculty of the School of Public Health.

Repeat Show Planned Today By Splash Club

Due to popular demand, the Splash Club will again present this year's water show "WPOOL TV" this afternoon at 4:30 p.m. in the outdoor pool.

The 25 swimming coeds first presented the show May 6 in the indoor pool and it was received so well that they decided to repeat their feats outside.

The theme of the show is ". . . spash, splash, splash, the slogan show," a takeoff on television comercals. 15 skits will be presented along this line: "She ain't sharp enough," "Play it cool," "Jackie Swims good like a coed should," and "The ham what am."

No admission will be charged.

Order Of The Old Well Pictures Now Available

The pictures of recent initiates into the Order of the Old Well have arrived and are available to members of the society free of charge.

Members desiring pictures may pick them up at the office of Dean E. L. Mackie, 312 South Bldg., any day from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

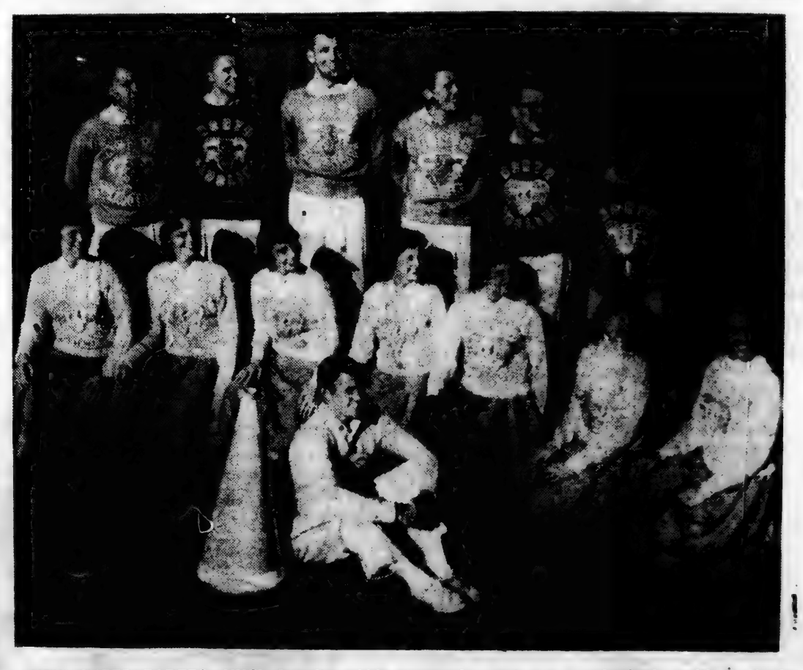
More Than 400 Of Senior Class Join Alumni

More than 400 members of this year's graduating class who live on the campus have joined the General Alumni Association in the current drive to organize the "Alumni Class of '58," according to Committee Co-chairmen Jerry Oppenheimer and Frank Black.

Members of the alumni committee yesterday were joined by Senior Class President George Ragsdale in expressing pleasure over the success to date of the on-campus phase of the drive to enroll seniors in the University's alumni association.

Most committeemen have already completed their solicitations and reported their results to the Alumni Office.

Some seniors could not be personally contacted and they may be expected to visit the Alumni Office, Association headquarters in the Carolina Inn.



Seniors living in town are being solicited by mail. Letters from the committee were mailed this week inviting them to join the Association at the special $1 rate to which all members of the class are eligible during their first year as alumni.

Playmakers Offer 'Capers' This Evening

The Carolina Playmakers will present their annual "Carolina Capers" this evening in the Playmakers Theatre, at 8 p.m. Directed this year by Taylor Williams and John Whitty, "Capers" are written, planned and performed entirely by dramatic arts students.

The Playmakers will burlesque their own productions of "No Exit," "The Lark," "What Every Woman Knows," "Teahouse of the August Moon," "A View From The Bridge," and "Hymn to the Rising Sun."

The public has been invited to attend, free of charge.

Supremacy?

The State Democratic Convention in addition to mocking individual rights on the floor of the convention, mocked individual rights in its platform.

On the issue of segregation, the state Democrats deliberately placed themselves in a position outside the law by advocating the separation of the races in public facilities.

Where the state leaders could have taken a stand which would have led the fight for individual freedom throughout the south, the state leaders failed.

They placed themselves above the law and in open defiance of the Constitution of the United States.

Instead of moving forward, they proposed a platform identical to that of the convention of 1956, and with it dashed the hopes of many who felt that maybe North Carolina would be the first state in the South to work out a plan for integration that would not bring a hardship on the majority of the people and would protect individual rights for all - not just the whites.

It is high time that the South realized that the Constitution of the United States is the law of the land, and the Supreme Court is the supreme apellate body. Given these two premises the South has but one choice - to find the most workable plan that complies in letter and spirit to the Supreme Court decision of 1954.

This Democratic Convention was a travesty on justice.

Turmoil

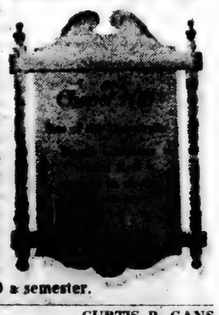
The present crisis in France is potentially destructive to France and the entire western alliance system as well as any feeling of internationalism on the European continent.

As it stands now, the nation of France will be very lucky indeed to get out with its national identity.

The alternatives at present are a Gaullist regime which would break down the alliance system, retrench into a distinctly authoritarian government, open the floodgates of nationalism in Europe, and precipitate an open war in Northern Africa.

If the government drew on Communist strength, they would probably be able to hold De Gaulle off. However, the bargaining point for the Communists would be the ministry of interior, a position which netted the Communist block Czechoslovakia earlier.

A third possibility is civil war in which the workers would side with the Communists, the army with De Gaulle, and the rest with the government. This would make for an international battleground worse than that of the Spanish Civil War.



There is a small chance that the center and moderately leftist and rightest coalitions can give the premier enough backing so as to strengthen his hand and enable him to call on aid from outside. If this was done, the crisis might be averted.

This is a slim chance, and probably will be lost.

The situation could get even better, if the show of strength by the center coalition would force the army to back down from its Gaullist sympathies, and retreat from the coup d'etat of three days ago in Algeria. This too is improbable.

The situation is bleak. It is hoped that it is not impossible.

On May 14, this column contained some words about the Department of Dramatic Art on this campus. Specifically, the criticism was of the current disposition of the Department as a whole, and, mostly by implication, of its Chairman, Mr. Samuel Selden.

Since then, the column in question has been condemned by both members of the DA Department and Playmakers, and other readers as well. Much of their criticism, however expressed, is extremely valid, and in view of this it is the responsibility of this column and its writer to reconsider the statements made, to further justify those which seem true, and to correct any false impressions, whether or not they were intended.

The first statement in the column was that Mr. Selden's departure from Carolina for UCLA, under consideration for some months, was now definite, and that he would leave here in January. While this is correct, the information was released before Mr. Selden had any opportunity to make a formal statement of his own, and it should not have been mentioned before he had done so.

The rest of the column was devoted to criticism of the Dramatic Art and Playmaker organizations, particularly in their relationship to this campus and their reason for existence.

Unfortunately, the way in which this criticism was expressed implied that Mr. Selden was directly and primarily responsible for the alleged faults in the organizations which he leads. The statement read: "With all due respect to . . . Dr. Selden, it is high time the department and the Playmakers had some more vital leadership than is now in evidence."

This statement implies not only that Mr. Selden, as Chairman, is responsible for the faults of his departments, but also that he is not "vital." This is not true. Mr. Selden has been for many years a force in the American theatre, and his vitality is evident both in the current state of the theatre in this country and the testimony offered by those people in the theatre who have felt his influence. The fine organization of the local Department of Dramatic Art, and its reputation, particularly as a graduate department, is also due in large part to Mr. Selden. If any further evidence is needed of Mr. Selden's value, UCLA's strong desire for his leadership, and the anxiety of this University and its DA Department over his imminent departure should suffice.

What the May 14 column was intended to say, but evidently expressed ambiguously, was that whoever takes Mr. Selden's place as Chairman would do well to concentrate his attention on some specific areas of persistent concern; that he should be able to do this is due primarily to the work which Mr. Selden has already done.

This work of Mr. Selden's, for which he deserves full credit, was inadequately recognized by the clause "With all due respect . . ." There is more than a little respect due, and not only from the local departments.

The specific concern referred to in the column as deserving attention is the relationship of the current organization to the university community, to its students, to its own purpose, and the purpose of the university.

All of these relationships are, or should be, provided for in the aims of the Playmakers and the DA Department. Primarily, this aim is the stimulation and perpetuation of public interest in the American theatre. This involves not only the satisfaction of the local need for theatre through the the Playmaker productions, but also the training of teachers for dramatics classes in the development of professional skills, and the advancement of interest in drama through public relations.

Perhaps the most vital of these functions is the last, for one of the crucial problems in American theatre today is lack of general public interest and support. Also, the training of dramatic arts teachers, as well as playrights, directors, designers, and performers of amateur and professional ambitions, is best justified by the simultaneous "training" of a general public to support these people.

In terms of this campus, this involves making the DA Department and the Playmakers more a part of the University as a whole—increasing their attraction for the student body as a whole. The student body is, in small, the American public, and if the theatre cannot be made to exist for them, as a vital part of their intellectual life, then it has to some degree failed in its purpose. The theatre cannot exist in a vacuum. A poem may exist without a reader, but it is doubtful whether a play can be said to exist without a participating audience. The development of such an audience is the problem at hand; its solution is not simple, but it must be sought.

The relationship of the Playmakers and the Department to their students is less obvious, particularly to any observer outside the department. It appears that the policy of the Department is to discourage the entrance of any student who is primarily interested in acting on the professional stage. If this is true, it is also true that some students in the Department want to prepare for careers as professional performers. (Whether or not the best dramatics teachers are frustrated or retired performers or not is another question.) Whether or not the Department is going to provide for these students, who may very well be a minority, is a question which has undoubtedly been considered often, and should be considered again.

These are but hints at problems which are beyond the present scope of this column, although they may well be worth more extensive coverage on this page in the future. There are other problems, concerning the plays presented, the securing of better facilities from a downright Philistine legislature, and probably other areas.

But the purpose of this column is not, at present, to consider these any further: it is rather to apologize to Mr. Selden—and any others who took offense—for the unintended insult to his competence and reputation. It would be blindly unjust not to lament the loss to the University of Mr. Selden, along with the other men of his stature who have felt, for one reason or another, that they had to leave Carolina.

"By The Way, What Have We Been Doing About Latin America These Past Few Years?"

About Sam Selden And Religion

Editor:

The ill-advised and somewhat irrational letter by Mr. Dalton regarding his intense preference for being called a 'CATHOLIC' instead of a 'protestant' seems to have provoked some discussion no more enlightening than that customarily seen on the editorial page of this paper.

As another member of the Christian church, the same denomination as theirs, I would like to suggest to this Anglo-Catholic cell that they cease this all-consuming interest in petty word-mongering, semi-pagan forms, rituals, and other effluvia, and 'get on' with the business that they obscure, that of being a Christian. If their faith and practice seems insufficient without all this extraneous padding, I would like to suggest that they omit a few Hail Marys and genuflections, and read something like Matthew 5, 6, 7.

This letter perhaps evinces some lack of charity on my part; in any case I hope that the offense suffered by the believers in such trivia is no less than the offense they offer the members of other denominations by their insistence on such supercilious asisinities.

David Mundy

Dear Mr. Wolff:

It was with regret that I read your column yesterday morning—regret that a person with your intelligence showed such poor taste and such total lack of maturity in your comments about the Carolina Playmakers and the Department of Dramatic Art.

Samuel Selden has been Director of the Playmakers and head of the Department of Dramatic Art since 1944 and as much as Frederick Koch, the founder of the Carolina Playmakers, is a part of Chapel Hill, the University and the Department. This very "vital" man has a reputation both in this country and abroad as one of the leading men in educational theatre, and has contributed so very much to the University and to the students who have studied under him. Mr. Selden is listed in Who's Who and if you will check in that publication, you will find that he has a more than adequate background to head any Dramatic Art Department and to give very "vital" leadership. He received his A.B. at Yale in 1922 and did his graduate work at Columbia. He was a student at the New York School of Fine and Applied Arts. He was awarded a Guggenheim Fellowship in 1938 in New York and European Theatres. He was a member of the Provincetown Playhouse during the years Eugene O'Neill, another "vital" man in the theatre, was there. He is a member of the National Theatre Conference, the Southeastern Theatre Conferenc, the American National Theatre and Academy, the American Educational Theatre Association and other esteemed associations. He has written books on the theatre which are used and studied around the world. He has been an integral part of the symphonic drama movement, which originated here at U.N.C. and is growing throughout the South and mid-west. He directed the Lost Colony from its inception until only a few years ago. This summer he will direct the new Paul Green outdoor drama, The Confederacy.

The "Report of the Committee on Research and Creative Activity of the University Conference Proceedings for 1950 rated the Department of Dramatic Art as one of the ten departments at the University of North Carolina which stand in scholarship and creative work among the best in the country,' and as one of the four departments without equal in the South." This was accomplished under the leadership of a "vital" man.

The University should well be proud to have had a man of his caliber, and it is the University's loss and U.C.L.A's gain. It is a sad commentary on our state that U.N.C. is losing its finest men to other universities.

As to expansion of facilities, this cannot be accomplished by "vital leadership" alone. Mr. Selden has fought relentlessly for better facilities, but these matters are governed not by the members of a department, but by the legislature in Raleigh.

The Carolina Playmakers are as much an "active part of Carolina life" as they ever have been or ever will be on a campus with so many diverse entertainments. We do not live in a Golden Age of Drama and drama will, for a long time to come, be relegated behind other national pastimes. It is as ridiculous to say that the drama department is not an "active part of Carolina life" as it would be to say the same of the athletes. Drama students and athletes have much in common. They both work unendingly to give to the student body and to the University. Both have very little leisure time due to the demands made on them, and both are stereotyped falsely—the athletes, as possesing very little grey matter and the drama students, as bohemians. Many of our athletes are scholars of the highest rank and our drama students are about as un-bohemian as Brooks Brothers and Dunn and Bradstreet. Athletes and drama students are very much an "active part of Carolina life." Without these two groups and the addition of a third, the politicians, there would be precious little Carolina life.

The fact that "very few students attend Playmaker productions" does not lie with the Playmaker organization. Naturally, few students are willing to pay $1.50 to see a play, but even when student prices were introduced and bargain nights attempted, the response was nil. The fact remains that only a certain percentage of students, or of Americans as a whole, are interested in living theatre. It is a sad fact that this situation exists, but if the American public does not support drama, how can a student body be wholly expected to support it!

Samuel Selden and his very excellent staff, composed of some of the finest people in their field, have fought hard to bring stimulating, informative and exciting drama to U.N.C., but a staff is only as effective as the students both in the department and without allow them to be.

Mr. Selden is leaving and the department will sorely miss his direction, advice and aid. He is a small man physically, but a big man in every other way. It is strange that some small men can be so big and some big men be so very small.

Vice President Nixon's recent entanglement with the United States spurning mob in Peru was a regrettable incident. Government officials of Peru, having made sufficient apologies, have adequately handled a difficult situation. However, there is one voice in the repercussions to the incident in this country which needs to be isolated and carefully examined. This voice is the clamor that the only reason for the occurrence of this regrettable incident is that we have been neglecting our southern neighbors and have allowed their economies to sag, we have allowed a friendly relationship to deteriorate.

What do we mean when we say this? In the first place, we are saying that we are dissatisfied with the results of our previous outpouring of aid: military aid, economic aid, and technical assistance. Coupled with this dissatisfaction is the intimation that perhaps we are not giving enough and should increase the flow of aid in all three categories.

This attitude is the heart and soul of the United States' foreign policy. It is a very frank revelation of the United States' motive. The motive of course, is for the United States to acquire friends and prestige. Because of this basic motive our foreign aid program is doomed to failure. The $51,339,142,000.00 extended in the form of foreign grants and credits from the end of World War II to June 30, 1955 (plus the amount extended since June 30 1955) amounts to nothing more than a public spectacle of a hypocritical and egotistical people. Admittedly, there are a great many people, especially those connected with the foreign aid program, who are sincerely interested in this aid and the good it can do for people: but the majority of Americans are not. Everytime someone speaks out in anger against a country because it has not been very friendly to the United States, even though the United States has extended a large amount of aid to it, he is only speaking the mind and heart of the American people.

Even if miraculously the American people can someday initiate a foreign aid program which is motivated by a humanitarian spirit, the program is still doomed to failure. Unwittingly, envious enemies would still be created, for in directly receiving aid from the United States the recipient country loses its self respect. The extension of foreign aid to the recipient country cannot help but label the United States as a condescending entity.

In the face of all these very formidable difficulties there is a solution which, although it is relatively unpolished and untried, offers to be the most promising solution yet devised. This plan proposes to turn over our enormous foreign aid appropriations to the United Nations for subsequent distribution through that organization.

There are three concrete reasons for such an action, reasons which are very attractive. First, being realistic, we have to realize that at least for a long time there will be no miraculous transformation of present self-beneficial foreign aid motives to ideal, humanitarian motives. This plan would offer less opportunity for selfish motives to flourish because of the indirect passage of aid.

In the second place, the distribution would be a much more objective process and, consequently could be more wisely and efficiently allocated.

The third reason is that because of the objective and impersonal nature of the allocation (impersonal in that the movement of aid would be multilateral instead of bilateral), there would be much less opportunity for the recipient country to experience a loss of self respect. And self respect is one of the most cherished possessions of any individual or group.

Right now you're probably asking yourself: What do people do in all-night restaurants at 3 o'clock in the morning? (This is assuming of course that you are willing to believe that there is really anyone in an all-night restaurant at such an unearthly hour.)

The Chuck Wagon here in Chapel Hill recently started staying open on through 'til dawn, so to satisfy my curiosity I dropped in one morning last week.

To be truthful, I had expected to see a waiter and a cook taking turns throwing hot charcoal at each other to keep awake. Instead the place was a beehive of activity. In fact proprietor Don Belton says there's a steady stream of customers all night, every night from as far away as Dook.

This seems to prove that there has been a definite need for such an establishment in Chapel Hill for a long time. As Belton says, the Chuck Wagon is the only place in town where you can buy so much as a pack of cigarettes after midnight most nights.

May is National Radio Month and the television industry is celebrating it by announcing the cancellation of more and more shows following skidding business. Much of this advertising is being diverted to radio, which is doing better than it has in years.

It hasn't been many years since prophets of doom were saying that television would soon replace the older medium, but it looks like radio may get the last laugh after all.

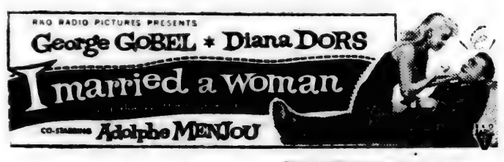
Residence Counselor Applications Are Ready

Applications are now being received for positions as resident counselors in the new counseling program to be established in Lower Quad next fall.

Eligible are persons who have received the bachelor's degree and will be engaged in graduate study at the University during the coming year.

Resident counselors are to be the representatives of the Division of Student Affairs in the residence halls. Their responsibilities will include counseling regarding personal problems, advising on dormitory group life and government and assistance in academic difficulties by referral to appropriate University agencies. They will work in the context of student self-government.

Resident counselors will be allowed to take up to nine hours of course work per semester and the work load should not average more than twenty hours a week. A one-day orientation program will be held for all counselors prior to the beginning of new student orientation and bi-weekly in-service training sessions will be held throughout the academic year.



A stipend of $1,250 is carried with the job, from which room rent must be paid. Non-resident counselors will be given a reduced rate on tuition charges, $360 rather then $500 per year. The job is for fall and spring semesters.

Applications may be picked up in the office of the dean of student affairs, 103 South Bldg., the office of the assistant dean 206 South Bldg., and the Graduate Office 2 South Bldg.

Completed applications should be turned in to the office of the dean. Notification of selection will be made after June 1.

Philologians Elect Allen To Presidency

Walter Allen Jr., professor of Latin, has been elected president of the Philological Club.

Other officers are Prof. Robert B. Sharpe of the Department of English who is vice president; Prof. Lawrence A. Sharpe of the Department of Romance Languages who is secretary; Professor Henry R. Immerwahr, Department of Classic, treasurer. Prof. John E. Keller, Romance Department, was re-elected keeper of the records.

The Philological Club was founded January 20, 1893, to promote interest and activity in scholarly studies among the faculty and graduate students. The first president was Eben Alexander, professor of Greek.

The Club meets eight times a year for the reading of professional papers of an original character by its members, who belong largely to such departments as languages and literatures, philosophy, art, dramatic art, music and history.

The club directed the publicaton of the University's periodical "Studies in Philology" through its first years in 1906-1915.

Stacy Dorm, said he thinks "the dorm situation is serious and that action should be taken to remedy it; however, the situation is not peculiar to Stacy." He assured the two men that they are not in danger.

"It is one which exists all over campus to some extent. I am greatly in favor of the proposed dorm counseling system and think it will do much to improve dormitory conditions at Carolina.

"The present system leaves much to be desired. The job is too much for the responsible individuals that are provided now.

The authors of the letter said that last night that it had been their intention to attempt "to point out to the Administration the existing difficulties in the dorms and to show them the needs for the future."

The letter was written "in terms of correction in the future, not in terms of punishment now," Quackenbush said.

Steingold said they were "simply trying to push for a new dormitory system. If we had wanted to cause trouble we would just turn the names into the Administration, but we did not use specific names."

Thirty-six hundred copies of the Yack were received on the first shipment, and most of those were distributed yesterday.

Next week 2500 more are due and will be given out early next week, Editor Gene Whitehead announced.

Commenting on the new Yack, Whitehead said, "I'm pleased with the book. I wish to express my appreciation to the staff, both those listed in the book and those who worked for only a short time. It was a joint effort.

"I hope we have covered the events of the year in a manner pleasing to the student body."

To make the Yack even better, he continued, "We need larger quarters and a larger staff. Adequate space for filing and cataloging would prevent many of the small errors which inevitably will result in each book at present."

Payne Named "Outstanding Athlete" As CHAC Honors Senior Athletes

By DAVE WIBLE

Carolina's fine all-conference end Buddy Payne, climbed up on top of the Emerson Field dugout to receive the Jeff Thomas Memorial award last night at the first annual Chapel Hill Athletic Club Spring Awards Chicken Barbecue.

This presentation was the highlight of an evening of fun and entertainment as the CHAC honored Carolina's graduating athletes. Selected by the Athletic Council as the most outstanding athlete in the school, Payne gained the right to have his name engraved by that of last year's winner, Lenny Rosenbluth, on the beautiful trophy. Jimmy "Moose" Mullis, made the presentation.

"Pranksters" Entertain

All of the school's athletic teams—with the exception of football and basketball, which had previously been honored—were on hand for the lively affair. After a chicken barbecue dinner, G. C. Pridgen and pranksters entertained the club and athletes.

Nick Kearns and his combo started things rocking, followed by blues singer Kak Anthony. Hoke Simpson came on next, followed by Jim Tally and the "Shades." Sodsai, the female vocalist from Thailand, rounded out the entertainment.

With the clubs president, Vic Huggins presiding, Orville Campbell was elected as next year's president. Chuck Erickson, Carolina's athletic director gave a quick review of this year's varsity teams and records and then introduced S. H. Basnight who presented Al Pons with the most outstanding baseball player award.

Payne received the Thomas award, and then Chapel Hill High School coach Bob Culton presented monograms to Chapel Hill's senior lettermen. Huggins then awarded plaques to E. Carrington Smith and Jake Connors, past presidents of the club as a reward for the efforts in organizing the three-year-old club.

Eleven Tar Heels To Compete In AAU Meet At State Tonight

Carolina will send a squad of 11 men to Raleigh today to compete in the annual Carolinas AAU track meet at the State College track. The meet will begin at 7 tonight.

The Tar Heels will be competiting against the very best trackmen North and South Carolina has to offer, the two most notable being Duke's Dave Sime, and Elias Gilbert of Winston-Salem Teachers College. Sime will be competing for the last time as a collegian. He will enter the 100, and 220-yard dashes. Gilbert is perhaps the nation's finest hurdler, and will be running in both the highs and lows.

A look at the favorites finds Tar Heels Ray Stanley and Ward Sims on top in their events. Sims is favored to take the pole vault, and Stanley the broad jump. Stanley won the ACC broad jump title a week ago and Sims placed second.

Stanley will also be throwing the javelin along with Bob Cooke and John O'Neal. Lyndon DeBorde and Lou Glascock will be competing against Gilbert in the high hurdles.

Bob Sherrill will enter the jump, and Frazer Smith the discus. In the running events. Alex Coffin will go that long 3-mile run, and freshman Worth Sweet the 880. Another freshman Bob Eubanks will enter the broad jump.

Gallik Wins Chess Title

Dan Gallik successfully defended his chess title in the recent all-campus swiss tourney.

Gallik swept the tourney with a 5-0 score. John Wilson placed second (4-1), Wooten Lewis and Lou Wallace tied for third (3½-3½).

Others who made to the fifth round are: J. T. MacQueen, M. Eid, Pete Somers, Laila M. Eid, D. K. Roy Chaudhuri, Al Margolis, Dick Somers, E. B. Jenkins, J. Roy, Bob Adams, H. Tawfik, Tom Saboske, Tony Burke, Don Miller and Ralph Forsyth.

Don't Forget

All students who take Physical Education in Woollen Gym have been reminded by the department to remove all personal equipment (shoes) and check their baskets before leaving school.

Tar Heels Surprise Them All

By RUSTY HAMMOND

By 11:00 Monday night someone will have taken all the marbles. Either Carolina or Clemson will have won the Atlantic Coast Conference pennant for keeps. The game is in Gastonia, selected as a neutral site.

One of the teams, Clemson, coasted home after winning their first eight conference games without a loss. The other, Carolina, has had one long pull from the day the season opened.

The Tar Heels are the surprise team of the conference, the squad that wasn't even supposed to make a showing. Coach Walter Rabb, who has done a tremendous job with his team this season, finally has a chance to enter a team in the NCAA District V playoffs. Rabb has been chairman of the event for the past ten years, but has never yet been able to enter a team.

Clemson ended their season with the pennant practically in their pocket, only a rained-out game with Duke remained, and it would not be played unless it directly effected the final conference standings. Carolina had lost as many games as the Tigers, and had won two less. The Heels had four games left, and had they lost a single one, that would have been all.

With tremendous pressure riding on nearly every pitch of every inning of every game, Carolina came through to sweep the first two of the games, forcing Clemson into playing Duke. Clemson lost. So did Carolina. But Carolina came back to win the last game of the season Thursday against tough Wake Forest to boost their record to 11-3, identical to Clemson's.

Wake catcher Frank Skinner has absolutely nothing to be ashamed of in letting the winning run cross the plate for the Tar Heels on a past ball. This is not meant as a stab in the back. Skinner had just been struck in the Adam's apple by a ball fouled off by Al Pons. Being fairly close to the play, we could see the effect the blow had on Skinner. He may have let the winning run in, but he showed sheer guts in even staying in the ballgame after being struck by the ball.

Ironically enough, Duke, Carolina's most hated rival, is the team that made it possible for the Tar Heels to qualify for the upcoming play-off game. The Blue Devil's victory over Clemson is all that saved the Tar Heels from a second place finish, coupled with their taking three of four pressure games.

Beside the winning run scoring, there were many other key points in the Wake Forest game. For instance, when the bases were loaded with only one out and Vaughn Bryson nipped the runner at home on a close force play. One slight momentary fumble would have changed the whole complexion of the ball game. Another instance, when pitcher Wayne Young came on with the sacks full, retired the first man on a force, then struck out pitcher Tench on a 3-2 count to end the inning. Young then proceeded to retire the next six men in a row, making a total of eight straight.

Carolina had used two pitchers all year: Wayne Young and Ben Harding and they have been very effective. Then Johnny Johnson, a reliever who had never started a game was picked to open on the hill in the vital Wake game. Johnson did a fine job, better than most expected. A stratagem? Look at it this way. When Young came in to pitch the finaly three innings, he was obviously fresh as a daisy and a mean man to get a hit from.

Monday night will be the big one for both teams. Clemson will no doubt start big Harold Stowe, their ace southpaw. Carolina will start either Harding or Young, with the other of the two ready to relieve at any time. Rabb will shoot the works, for this is the big one. The contest is the rubber match for the season series between the two teams. They have split two games so far. Neither mattered half as much as this one does.

THEY MIGHT NOT

Carolina and Duke University will oppose each other in a football game next year in Kenan Stadium if Duke University decides to show up.

Top Aide Deserts Pflimlin; Crisis In Algeria Worsens

PARIS—(AP)—Embattled Premier Pflimlin was jolted last night by the loss of his top military adviser as he struggled in the Algerian crisis against backers of Gen. Charles de Gaulle. The threat of riot and bloodshed was in the air.

Gen. Paul Ely, chief of staff of the combined armed services and a de Gaullist sympathizer, resigned. A popular figure in the army, he was reported angered by the arrest of two of his generals in a roundup of rightists.

As the crisis deepened, de Gaulle announced from his rural home 150 miles from Paris that he will come to the capital tomorrow for a news conference.

De Gaulle's leader in parliament dealt Pflimlin another stiff blow by evading police surveillance in Paris and flying off from Switzerland to the Gaullist hotbed in Algeria.

Jacques Soustelle, former governor general in Algeria and darling of French settlers, was cheered wildly by massed thousands in Algiers as he shouted "Long live Algeria, long live France, long live de Gaulle."

Then Soustelle announced: "I have no other ambition than to remake the national unity on both shores of the Mediterranean."

Undoubtedly incensed that Soustelle got away, the Cabinet announced severe restrictions would be imposed to prevent French citizens from leaving France. Border controls were tightened. The Cabinet also said certain restrictions would be placed on movement inside France, but did not explain this. It also threatened to censor newspapers.

Student Letter Writers Harassed; IDC Probes

By PRINGLE PIPKIN

Two anonymously threatened students, Robert Quackenbush and Lewis Steingold who were authors of a contriversial letter, spent a safe though harassed night in their dorm, Stacy.

Quakenbush and Steingold said that they were called names, and some members of the dorm beat on Steingold's door intermittently for about two hours. They have received no more threats.

Asst. Dean of Student Affairs Ray Jefferies and IDC President Rudy Edwards said that no charges were at present being pressed against any students as a result of the letter as the authors had submitted no specific names.

"We feel that the first place to take your grievances is to the dorm officers rather than take them to The Daily Tar Heel," Edwards commented.

He said that he had been checking on the letter and trying to determine where "the main sources of trouble are." He said he hoped to make the duties of dorm officials more explicit to thtm.

The IDC has drawn up a new set if rules which will be more explicit and "more enforceable" than those at the present. The rules have been submitted to the Trustees for their approval and have not yet been released for publication.

Jefferies said that he was aware of the problem of noise and had talked to Stacy dorm officers.

As to the allegation of the letter that money from the IDC social fund was being used to buy beer, Jefferies said that he did not know of any incidence of this.

Edwards said, "It is definitely against the IIDC rules to buy beer with the IDC money."

Dramatiques Slates Poetry Show Tonight

A varied program of readings from the works of six modern poets will comprise the final Petites Dramatiques production for this year. The program is free to the public and will begin tonight at 8 o'clock in Gerrard Hall.

The program will include: selections from "God's Trombones" by James Weldon Johnson, "Death of a Hired Man" by Robert Frost," "The Love Song of J. Alfred Prufrock" by T. S. Eliot, selections from the works of E. E. Cummings, "Death of a Bullfighter" Frederico Garcia Lorca and "Howl" by Allen Ginsberg.

Maddux Tops Fraternity's Officer Slate

Randy Maddux, Boone, was elected president, and Miss Barbara Hoffman of Durham was elected Dream Girl, in recent Theta Chi activities.

Other Theta Chi officers for the coming year are, J. C. Byrd, Goldsboro, vice president; Max Carpenter, Concord, secretary; Allie Hutchinson, Winston-Salem, treasurer and Don Ambrose, Washington S. CC., pledge marshal.

Yearly awards from the fraternity were given to Bill Walsh of Arlington, Va. as the outstanding senior; to Bill Ott of Point Pleasant, N. J., for outstanding scholarship as a pledge and to Don Ambrose of Washington as outstanding pledge. Regge Moore of North Wilkesboro received the fraternity's Alpha Eta Award and Randy Maddux of Boone received the Intramural Award.

Bayliff Named Summer School IDC President

Doug Bayliff, a rising senior from Graham, was chosen summer school IDC president at a meeting of the Interdormitory Council Wednesday.

The trophy for best intramural manager went to Jerry Phaup, a rising junior from Asheville. Phaup is intramural manager for Winston Dorm.

No Decisions Completed Yet On New Rules

By WYNDHAM HEWITT

Women's Residence Council rules for freshmen women have been neither approved nor disapproved by Katherine Carmichael, Dean of Women.

Dean Carmichael said that she would not make a decision on the rules until she had heard from all of the faculty members concerned. Dean Carmichael has sent a letter to members of the faculty explaining the new rules and asking their opinion of them.

She explained that during this busy time of the year many of the faculty members have not been able to answer her letter.

Dean Carmichael said her reason for waiting on the faculty answers is because of the "great amount of coatroversy on the part of the students which has been stimulated mostly by The Daily Tar Heel."

It is her opinion that The Daily Tar Heel has gone too far in its handling of the women's freshmen rules, she added.

In defending her stand for not making an immediate decision Dean Carmichael cites this ruling from the Board of Trustees:

"Among the duties of the faculty and Chancellor in each of the component institutions of the University of North Carolina shall be included the duty to exercise full and final authority in the regulation of student conduct and in all matters of student discipline in that institution; and in the discharge of this duty, delegation of this authority may be made to established agencies of student government and to administrative

UNC Band's Lawn Concert Set For Today

This afternoon at 4:30 the UNC Concert Band will present its second lawn concert of the season, Director Herbert W. Fred announced that it is slated to be held at Davie Poplar.

Assistant director is Calvin Huber.

Miss Quillian White, soprano, will be the featured soloist singing "A kiss in the Dark" from "Orange Blossoms" by Victor Herbert, and "I'll See You Again" from "Bittersweet" by Noel Coward. A first performance of a transcription by Fred of the unpublished overture The Great Adventure by Henry Hadley, one of the important early 20th century Americans composers will also be performed.

Other works on the program include novelty arrangements by Fred of two popular tunes, "Chopsticks," and "Lil Liza Jane; "Headlines," a modern rhapsody by Colby; "Procession of Nobles" by Rimsky - Korsakoff; "Emperor Waltz" by Strauss; "Arioso" by Bach,

Of Rising Dormitory Room Rent Smith Appointed To Lead Study

Norman Smith will head an emergency committee to study rising room rents due to the self-liquidating building policy of the State, it was announced yesterday by Student Body President Don Furtado.

Other members appointed included Rudy Edwards, Lillian Shannonhouse, Jim Jordan and Jim Scott.

Commenting on the appointment of the committee, President Furtado said "The problem which the self-liquidating policy of the state has presented to the students of the University of North Carolina is obvious.

"Dorm rents will rise $30 next year, and with other dormitories already planned in the next few years, we can expect an accompanying rise with each new addition to the campus, unless the State Legislature reverses its present self-liquidating requirements.

"The students of a state university should not be burdened with the responsibility of paying for dormitory construction through room rents.

It is my hope that these five students will be able to make a comself-liquidating policy and that they will be able to suggest to the Student Legislature, the administration and the student body as a whole, the means or removing this unreasonable expense."

Some Summers Are Busier Than Others

UNC student Vince Gibson, a member of the Carolina Forum, will be in Europe during the summer working at the Renault factory in France. He will also be in attendance at the International Eucharistic Congress in London, July 1-5.

The Congress is under Anglican sponsorship with the Rt. Rev. and the Rt. Hon. the Lord Bishop of London as president.

The Congress will bring to Britain delegates patriarchs, primates, archbishops, bishops, priests and laity from Anglican, Orthodox and leans" by Morrissey;; "Cuban Fantasy" by Kepner and selected marches.

NSA COMMITTEE MEETs

There will be a meeting of all members of the NSAA committee, and all delegates, alternates and second alternates attending the National Student Association National Congress at 4 p.m. Monday in Roland Parker II at Graham Memorial.

Albert Hall.

More Yackety Yacks

The second shipment of Yackety Yacks is to arrive in time for distribution Wednesday.

Students who have not received their copies are requested by Editor Gene Whitehead to bring their ID cards to the outside windows of the Rendezvous Room at Graham Memorial on that day.

Kappa Elects Miss Cobbs To Presidency

Jan Cobbs, Webster Groves, Mo., has been elected president of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority for the coming year.

Other officers elected at this week's meeting included: vice president, Libby Johnson, High Point; recording secretary, Edith Hurt, Cheraw, S. C.; corresponding secretary, Pat Hamer, Lenoir; treasurer, Barbara Koch, Elmira, N. Y. and rush chairman, Charlotte Pope, Albemarle.

Eight Rising Seniors Are Named Marshals

Eight rising seniors have been named marshals for the 164th Commencement Program, Dr. J. C. Lyons, chief faculty marshal, has announced.

The marshals are Jeffrey Averill Hare, chief marshal, of Ann Arbor, Mich.; Sarah Glover Arnold, Monroe, Ga.; Diana Arneson DeVere, Morganton; Herman Allen Godwin Jr., Dunn; Diana Ruth Johnson, Asheboro; Wade Hampton Lefler Jr., Newton; and John Clarke Whitaker Jr., Winston-Salem.

The chief duties of the marshals will be to help organize and serve as leaders in the main activities of the commencement program which begins Saturday, May 31, and concludes Monday evening, June 2, with graduation exercises.

Among the functions to be attended by the marshals is the baccalaureate sermon to be given Sunday, June 1, at 11 a.m. by Dr. Albert C. Outler of Southern Methodist University in Memorial Hall.

The marshals will also be present to welcome parents and visitors at the University reception planned for Monday, June 2, at 11 a.m. at the site of the Davie Poplar on the UNC campus.

Following the reception the group will attend the alumni luncheon to be held in Lenoir Hall when they will greet commencement guests.

Ushering at the graduation exercises to be held in Kenan Stadium Monday evening at 7 o'clock will wind up the activities of the marshals. Keynote speaker for the occasion will be Norman Cousins, editor of the Saturday Review of Literature.

Concert Crammed Year Successful Says Glee Club Director Joel Carter

By BEN TAYLOR

Forty public apearances and over 1500 miles of touring have been logged by the University's only touring choral group, the Men's Glee Club, during this academic year.

Each appearance contained at least an hour and a half of spirited singing, or about sixty hours for the year.

And just to make sure that these songsters aren't here to sing their way to an A.B., here is what Glee Club director Dr. Joel Carter said about the year's feats at the annual Glee Club banquet last weekend.

"The morale of the Glee Club was the highest I've ever seen it. The boys did a tremendous amount of singing and one of the brightest points of the year was the fact that the number of members who had to drop out of the touring group due to scholastic troubles was negligible."

The year 1957-58 saw the Glee Club give its "usual" two full touring concerts, one per semester; a formal Christmas concert in Hill Hall; a performance before the N. C. Press Club in Raleigh; a major concert before the N. C. Bankers' Assn. Convention in Pinehurst. Then there were appearances at University Day, Valkyries, Talent Show, Parent's Day; a joint concert with Hollins College in presenting Gilbert and Sullivan's "Mikado;" and two performances before the television cameras of the Atlantic Coast Conference in UNC basketball games.

According to Director Carter, "there were actually no bright or dull spots on our concert agenda this year . . . every concert was well-done, with our tribute to Sigmund Romberg numbers one of our best group of songs.

"Perhaps the notable slack in the Glee Club this year was the lack of a particular style of music; a group in the club to perform their own stylized numbers . . . something on the order of the Whippenpoofs at Yale. However, we are hoping to formulate such a group next year," Carter said.

A parody on "The Thing," an old novelty number done by Phil Harris was reworded by Dr. Carter this year and used as a novelty number for encore.

Insofar as next year is concerned, Dr. Carter revealed that a full year of singing is planned, but "not quite as much as this year; as many miles but not as many performances."

Daily Tar Heel Closes Up Shop

With this issue The Daily Tar Heel marks the end of another year of service to the students, faculty and alumni of UNC. Since September its staff has endeavored to present as complete and accurate an account of daily happenings at Chapel Hill as possible.

Except in the case of an emergency which would require a special edition, the next isue of The Daily Tar Heel will appear in mid-September.

During the summer the campus will be served once each week by the Summer School Weekly.

GM SLATE

Activities scheduled for today at Graham Memorial include: Presbyterians, 9:45 a.m., Williams-Wolfe and Rendezvous; Friends, 11 a.m., Williams-Wolfe; Community Church, 11 a.m., Roland Parker I; Faculty-Student Tea, 5-7 p.m., Main Lounge and CPU, Grail, 8-11.

Dean Mackie Lists Winners Of Top Prizes

The students are Sonny Evans of Durham; Douglas Eisele, Statesville; Edward U. Hallford, Rocky Mount; Julia Ann Crater, Raleigh; Carl Adam Barrington Jr., Fayetteville; Wilson B. Partin Jr., Scotland Neck; and Klaus Gerhard Witz, Southington, Conn.

The John Johnston Parker Jr. Medal for unique leadership in student government, which is given annually by the late Judge John J. Parker and his wife in memory of their son, John Johnston Parker Jr., class of '37, was awarded to Evans, president during 1957-58 of the UNC student government.

Eisele, former editor of The Daily Tar Heel, was named recipient of the Ernest H. Abernethy Prize for student publication work. The prize was established by Ernest H. Abernethy of Atlanta, Ga., in 1922, as an annual award of a plaque and $50 in cash.

The Algernon Sydney Sullivan award established in 1928 is bestowed annually upon the man and woman of the graduating class who have best demonstrated an attitude of unselfish interest in the welfare of their fellow students. Hallford and Miss Crater will receive a certificate and plaque denoting this honor.

The University's oldest medal,

IN THE INFIRMARY

Students in the Infirmary yesterday included:

Misses Patricia Anderson, Sue Gilliam, Amy Peck, Frances Newman and Patricia Gregory, Mrs. Betty Winslow and Robert Butler, Robert Kerr Jr., William Walsh, Terance Carmody, Johnny Blackburn, John Garver and Amos Moore.

COMMENCEMENT MARSHALS—These rising seniors will serve as marshals for the 164th Commencement program. They are, left to right, John Clarke Whitaker Jr., Wade Hampton Lefler Jr., Miss Sarah Glover Arnold, Dr. J. C. Lyons, chief faculty marshal, Diana Arneson DeVere, Miss Sallie M. Armfield, Miss Diana Ruth Johnson, and Jeffrey Averill Hare, chief marshal. Not present when the picture was made was Herman Allen Godwin Jr.

A Need Shown

A letter to the editor, a subsequent threat, and a continuation of noise in one dormitory on the campus is illustrative of the need for some system of law and order within the confines of dormitories on the UNC campus.

More over, the reaction of the students in the dormitory demonstrates the level of maturity of dormitory residents on this campus.

If the two boys who wrote the letter were at fault at all, it was because they singled out a dormitory when the case is generalized throughout the campus, but this is excusable since they only had to go by what they knew.

The case points out the need more than ever for a good program of counseling, for a reorganization of the IDC cuort in order that quiet hours can be preserved and rowdiness held to a minimum, for enforceable rules so that every student's action is not a travesty on justice, and for competent student officers in the dormitories.

The two boys are to be praised for their courageous action, and the present dormitory president whose reaction in endorsing the new counseling program as a possible way to alleviate the problam in all dormitories deserves praise too.

Those who deserve rebuke are the dormitory officers who do not live up to their responsibilities in keeping quiet and making the dormitory a livable place, the designers of the dormitories, who made the dorms an almost impossible place to keep quiet, the students who make the noise, the students who made the threat, and the IDC and administration for keeping unenforceable legislation still on the books.

It is hoped that with IDC court revision — it is hoped that the local court plan will be adopted — and dormitory counselors with the ability to keep the peace through the court and to stop mob action, that very well could have erupted Friday night and nearly did to a Daily Tar Heel photographer, that some order may be preserved within the near future.

A dormitory is constructed to provide a decent study atmosphere and a hospitable living place. It isn't that now. It is hoped it will be that in the future.

Too Far?

The Dean of Women has said that the Daily Tar Heel has gone "too far" in the handling of the new freshman coed regulations.

Apparently the Daily Tar Heel has not gone far enough, since some of the restrictive legislation still remains on the books to be approved by the Dean of Women.

The Dean of Women might excercise a great deal of care before it passes rules, which would restrict the freedom, tear down Carolina tradition, and take away from student responsibility and maturity without any cause whatsover.

The particular rule in question is the closed study regulation, but it might well apply to any and al discriminatory legislation, when there is no reason for discrimination according to past records.

The Daily Tar Heel should have gone a good deal further, but space did not permit. It is hoped that Dean Carmichael will use some discretion about the many considerations involved in these rules, before approving all of them.

Graduates

Congratulations are in order for the somewhat less than 10% of the senior class which will graduate on June 2.

A much larger percentage will receive diplomas, but only a few will have really had an education, and deserve a diploma.

Too many have gotten by with the bare minimum. Too many have felt social activities more pressing than their academic responsibilities. Too many have not participated in the extra-curricular activities that go to make a college education. And too many will leave the University no more stimulated than came and utterly unchallenged by the world of knowledge to conquer after college.

It is a sad commentary that so few have indulged themselves liberally of what a University has to offer. It is even a sadder commentary on the University which is unable to stimulate and unable to separate the sheep from the goats prior to registration for the first semester.

This situation is due to many factors. Most of these factors are correctable, but it is regrettable that they have not been corrected before now, so that many young minds could be saved for useful purposes.

To all those receiving sheepskins, there should go some congratulations, sonce what education they did not receive was not entirely their fault.

If they soaked up some Carolina atmosphere, they still may be better off in the future.

They Made The News

Today is the last issue of The Daily Tar Heel for the academic year of 1957-58. Rather than comment upon the endeavors of a few individuals during the past week, let's deviate from that path and explore the high spots of the news of the year as you read it in this paper.

September saw the usual mass of lost freshmen fight their respective ways through such new and exciting experiences as Rush Week, the first college football game and homesickness?

During that first month, with only a rare quiz, students fresh from the summer's labors took every opportunity to have a little fun and raise a little hell. Now, eight months later, facing finals, students are still have a little fun and raising a LOT of hell.

October was the part of the year when Carolina football fans rose and fell with the fortunes of Jovial Jim Tatum and his crew. For three consecutive Saturdays, Buddy Payne, Phil Blaser and Dave Reed led the team on the path to glory.

The first of those great victories was a 26-0 thumping of Harvey White and his Clemson crowd, followed by a shocking 13-7 upset of Navy and a hard earned 20-13 squeaker over omnipotent Miami.

Then the roof fell in as Reed, Leo Russavage and Bernie Donatelli were "heaved" from the ranks of athletes to the doldrums of ordinary students by Tatum. Maryland immediately turned the tables and came up with a 21-7 thumping of the Heels in front of Queen Elizabeth and Prince Phillip.

October was the month of the Asiatic Flu and the famed editorial binge of the always colorful Nell Bass. In three October issues of the DTH, Bass wrote edits on such far flung subjects as "Abortive Pre-Season Polls and Scholastic Prostitution," "Faubus Intelligence Thoroughly Exploited; All Gray Matter Listed" and "Myopia in the Infirmary; the Flu Fly Flies Fast."

In one month he would be recalled and Doug Elsele would take over the reigns of the campus paper. The recall occupied all headlines throughout this period. Along with the names of Bass and Eisele you would read daily of the exploits of the other two people connected with the recall —Paul Rule and Barry Winston. Also, Jolly Wally Kuralt, the great petitioner always made the scene.

William Aycock was installed as Chancellor on October 12, thus beginning the young look for South Building. Through the first seven months of his term,, Aycock has continually demonstrated his desire to work closely with the students.

October was also the first birthday of the great Ken Young of 9 Davie Circle in Chapel Hill. "Big Ken" is the nephew of this columnist and will have his own DTH paper route next year in the Glen Lennox area. Gotta do something with the little monster!

November had the final effects of the recall election, as Eisele swamped poor old Neil and Rule finished out of the money, a poor third. Winston was the only smart one as he cleared out of the race.

November also featured the come from behind, surprising, highlight of the season, stupendous, wonderful, damn tremendous 21-13 upset of the boys from the West Durham Finishing School. Poor DOOK!

December reeled off five more basketball victories as the record went to 37, before the University of West Virginia snapped the streak in the finals of the Kentucky Invitation Tourney. Even after this blow was struck, McGuire's boys went on to compile a neat little 19-7 record for the season; a fine effort considering the early season loss of Danny Lotz and the season long loss of the great Joe Quigg.

At the end of the season, the Heels wound up second in both the conference and the conference tournament, while winning the Dixie Classic. Also a high national ranking was given to the McGuiremen. Brennan made All American, Kearns made All American and these two along with Quigg were all drafted into the N. B. A.

In the middle of the year, the Honor Council was changed to the progressive Jury System, whereby the Council merely decides the sentence, while nine individuals composing the jury give the decision on guilt or innocence.

This was one of the biggest stories of the year and much credit should be given to Roger Foushee, Sonny Evans and members of the Honor Council for having the foresight to see the need for such a system.

January, February and March all saw the planning, holding and completion of the greatest Carolina Symposium on Public Affairs ever staged on this campus. Over seventy (70) prominent speakers from all over the globe and from every walk of life thrilled the many thousands fortunate to attend any part of the program.

This week long series of lectures was easily the zenith of the year and enough praise cannot be showered upon Sonny Hallford and Bill Geer for leading the way for this outstanding event.

As the Symposium ended, campus elections swung into full prominence. In one of the hottest contests in recent years, Don Furtado emerged victorious for the Student Body Presidency over two very tough and qualified candidates—Al Goldsmith and Bob Carter. The latter was eliminated on the first ballot while Furtado and Goldsmith fought it out in a runoff, with the former just easing past the University Party's standard bearer.

In the vice presidency the Student Party first nominated John Brooks, but later had to turn to Ralph Cummings when South Building officials decided that Brooks was not going to be able to run. Cummings easily defeated the UP's Jack Lawing. In other major results Paddy Wall won as secretary in a landslide and Charlie Gray defeated his fraternity brother Everette James by 17 votes for the treasurer's job.

The two defeated presidential candidates went on to almost equally important jobs with Goldsmith now the head of the Symposium and Carter guiding the forces of the Graham Memorial Activities Board.

And that's just about all of the important news for the year. Of course we recognize that we left out such other efforts as the burning of the Presbyterian Church and the work of the firebug. And we didn't even mention the choice of the liberals everyhere—Curtis B. Gans.

Well you can't win em all and you gotta take the good with the bad. All in all though it was a good year and like we said we did raise a Lot of HELL didn't we? Thanx for the memories.

Anything Goes

When the brothers Karamazov, one of them a psychiatrist and the other a proctologist, decided to open a point practice, they set out a shingle which read: "Odds and Ends."

This column consists of the odds and ends from a year's random observations.

I want you to get this picture: I'm lying in my rack, suffering from Tangerian bone-grindings and the East Indonesian flu. I have a high fever and every bone and muscel in my body aches. Suddenly I am seized with a violent spell of coughing. The whole bed shakes. Tears run down my face. And my always solicitous wife runs in from the ketchen and says, "Shut up, you fool, you'll wake the baby." (I tell this charmin little story for all June brides and grooms.)

Hollywood trade papers have rumored in recent weeks that the well-known producer, James Dorman, is ready to film a new script: "I Was a Teen-Age Phallic Symbol." The flick will probably feature that rising new star, Norman Brown.

Speaking of things theatrical, this reporter has been inveigled into doing a reading of "Howl," the national anthem of the "beat generation," tonight for Petite Dramatique. This lengthy ode to violence and sin has already beaten one obscenity rap in San Francisco, and the local producers are keeping their fingers crossed. (On the other hand, the blasted poem is being sold here, so I suppose it should be all right to read it here, even in public. Oh well: Bluenoses of the world unite! You have nothing to lose but your gonads!)

In a tight pitchers' battle that lasted for twelve unbearable innings, the History Department softball team hung on to the Falstaff Trophy for another year by edging the English Department, 18-16. The game's founder (back in 1951), elder statesman John Risen Jones, watched benignly from the sidelines as did Coach Fletcher M. Green. At one critical moment Coach Green threatened a student with loss of his forthcoming Ph.D. if the student didn't get a hit. Spurred by this kind of terrorism, the student belted the ball just over the second baseman's head, a truly remarkable achievement.

Most of the sterling young athletes involved in this contest spent the next week with their heating pads and linament.

One of America's great journalists, Murray Kempton of the New York Post, has been in town the last three days attending sessions of the annual Editorial Writers Conference.

Kempton is the author of what may well be the 20th century's outstanding line. One day, when his innumerable children were loving and kissing and kicking and smashing him, Kempton looked at them sweetly and said: "Thank God for fallout."

In a recent letter to this reporter, Kempton wrote: "Lenin was in better shape than I am the last time they aired the tomb."

Speaking of children, Ken "Big Ken" Young has had a very exciting week. On Monday, he learned two new words: "hor-SEE" (horse) and "bay-BB" (baby). On Tuesday, he said his first sentence: "I want cracker." (It's got a subject, verb and object, so what's wrong with it you purist so-and-sos?) On Wednesday, he discovered that it was great fun to pick up a basketball and throw it at an unsuspecting cat. And on Thursday, he was appointed city editor for the summer school weekly. This appointment was arranged by his uncle, Davis Young, who will serve as weekly editor during the long hot summer. The appointment was made strictly on merit and family considerations played no part.

As a motto for all those who are about to graduate, we can do no better than to quote one of the concluding line from the aforementioned "Howl."

"O skinny legions run outside/O victory forget your underwear we're free!"

Lot's of luck, gang, and may your hitch in service be the merriest.

Letters From Here And Abroad

Editor:

It is apparent that this tempest in a censer raging (for some persons, at least) over the nature of the Episcopal Church can be cleared up by a definition of terms. The Episcopal Church is basically Catholic—as fully as is the Roman Church. It is also Protestant—but not in the usual sense of the term Protestant. Perhaps a better word would be "reformed"—and "reforming." The Protestantism of the Episcopal Church is not something that happened once and for all in Wittenberg in the 16th century. It is a reformation that is continuing and will continue, without separating itself from the Catholic Church.

And by the way, Mr. Editor, Episcopal is an adjective, not a noun. We are Episcopalians, not Episcopals. And we're not split.

Eddie Bass

Editor:

In reply to Mr. Dalton's letter of May 16, I strongly urge that he read the "Articles of Religion as established by the Bishops, the Clergy, and the Laity of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States of America," which are found in the back of the Prayer Book. I hate to see the tenets of one's religion argued on the editorial page of a newspaper, and I have no intention of arguing with Mr. Dalton on matters of interpretation. But such a blatant misstatement of the expressed beliefs of the Protestant Episcopal Church, as found in the Articles of Religion, cannot go unanswered. The false impression of the Episcopal Church that has resulted from Mr. Dalton's argumentation is ample reason for a closer look at the Articles of Religion.

Mr. Dalton stated that the Protestant Episcopal Church accepted all seven sacraments. Such is not the case: Article XXV, "There are two Sacraments ordained of Christ our Lord in the Gospel, that is to say, Baptism, and the Supper of the Lord. Those five commonly called Sacraments, that is to say, Confirmation, Penance, Orders, Matrimony, and Extreme Unction, are not to be counted for Sacraments of the Gospel, being such as have grown partly the corrupt following of the Apostles . . . for that they have not any visible sign or ceremony ordained of God."

Mr. Dalton stated that the Protestant Episcopal Church accepted the "real presence." Such is not the case: Article XXVIII, "Transubstantiation (or the change of the substance of Bread and Wine) in the Supper if the Lord, cannot be proved by Holy Writ; but is repugnant to the plain word of Scripture, overthroweth the nature of a Sacrament, and hath given occasion to many superstitions."

To compare the Protestant Episcopal Church and the Roman Catholic Church, as Mr. Dalton has done, can be attempted, but the obvious conclusion of such a comparison shows that the two Churches differ drastically. The differences are not minor ones as Mr. Dalton said—indeed they are irreconcilable. Article XIX, "... the Church of Rome hath erred, not only in their living and manner of Ceremonies, but also in matters of Faith." The differences are innumerable: Communion in both kinds (Article XXX), the non-acceptance of purgatory and adoration of Saints (Article XXII), the belief in predestination (Article XVII), the marriage of priests (Article XXXII), etc. These are only a basic few of the great differences between the Protestant Episcopal Church and the Roman Catholic Church.

The Articles of Religion show unmistakably that the Protestant Episcopal Church is in no way connected—physically or spiritually—to the Roman Catholic Church. It is truly a Protestant faith.

Probably you will be a little astonished to get a letter from a German student concerning the new rules for freshman women. I am living with Dave Davis in an international student house and I read in the "Tar Heel" about those "new rules." Naturally, I am not familiar with situations at your University, however, I hope you will be interested to hear the opinion of a German student about the problem.

Maybe, according to special situations it is found inevitable to close doors at 11 p.m., but I can not understand why students are in favor of this rule regard people as machines that feel inclined to do a wanted work, whenever they are supposed to. And in my opinion this is not the aim of real pedagogues. After all, if you are willing to work, you can advance in your studies far easier and quicker, too. I do hope this special rule will vanish as quick as posible, for America is usually regarded as the motherland of democracy and freedom, and in my opinion, this rule doesn't agree with freedom of study!

Some may reply, the American freshman are one year younger than the German ones, and because of this fact it is necessary to establish such rules, however why establish such rules in a University? Stricter rules in the schools, that's what I am in favor of, because I heard from an American professor that the American schoolboys and girls are able to do what they think is right. Moreover, I believe this new rule is wasted effort for "Was Hamsehen night lernt, lernt Hans nimmerniche."

Before closing I would like to explain how students here conduct their studies. When someone takes courses he is supposed to attend them, but nobody is looking after him and so if he does not like to hear lectures he stays away. I believe this is a good thing, becauseb y means of this freedom one learns to stand on his own two feet. From American students, I learned that you have to undergo an exam almost every fortnight. In this case we are luckier, because we have to undego only two exams. After the 4, 5, or 6 semester starts the so-called "vorexamin" and when we believe ourselves capable of passing the final exam, we ask for admission concerning the "vorexamen" tgere are some variations between the faculties.

I have been reading with interest the letters in the DTH concerning the nebulous differences between the various religions. In this respect religion is a great paradox. The most basic dogma of any Christian religion should be to love thou fellow man as thyself—regardless of his belief. Basically any Christian religion should be resolved down to this idea. Yet, history is full of infamous deeds committed by religious men and atheists against each other. Thousands of lives have been lost in fighting for the RIGHT dogma.

The friction which exists between various sects stems from the belief of each sect that they have the TRUE religion. These various sects have "the word" and furthermore they are duty bound to spread this "word" to the "unbelievers." In most instances in history the "unbeliever" was not very happy or willing to receive "THE word." What followed is history.

The more religious a man becomes, the more he should love his fellow man. In many cases, however, he has not been very kind to people who hold a different belief. Some very religious people are very narrow minded and intolerant when it comes to recognizing other faiths. These people know that they have THE religion and therefore the other man's faith must be wrong.

Of course in our modern world we have learned to avoid actual physical violence in most instances when we disagree. But if we are not careful we will at least condemn the other fellow when he disagrees with us on such a basic principle as religion. Will we ever know which is THE religion?

Foreign Policy

Editor:

There seems to be a no more prevalent, popular, and irresponsible practice today than that of quickly scanning the globe and pointing a condemning finger at the foreign policy of the U. S. government and those responsible for it. This practice is particularly in vogue among editorial writers, columnists, and some ivory-tower college professors. They give the impression of coming from the "Monday morning hindsight and know-it-all school." They delight themselves and others in pointing out "aistakes" and "inconsistencies" in the application of our present foreign policy. Such a practice is understandable—but regrettable. Almost everyone thinks he knows something about the problems of the world.

This article is in no way meant to discourage constructive criticism and popular debate concerning the international issues that face our nation today—rather it is meant to encourage such action. But the point is this: let us be more thoughtful and well-informed when making our criticisms and suggestions and even cautious. Let us not harp on one individual action by our State Department without making an endeavor to get some picture of the overall policy context in which the action was undertaken. Let us not resort to name-calling and mud-slinging when we could be using our time and minds in considering the realities and probable resolutions of our problems. But also let us not be so insensible as to seek ultimate solutions to all of our problems on the world scene, nor expect our leaders to find the ultimate answers to all these problems. And above all, let us place more confidence and support behind our present leaders who are closer to the realities than we are, and who did not gain their offices by accident.

It is very true that the United States is today intimately involved in a crisis-packed situation which bodes continuing danger for this country. But there is real hope to be had if the American people are willing to join with their leaders in making a level-headed appraisal of the realities of the external threat and our own potentialities and limitations. There are those who say the communists are going to win by default, due to the present state of our foreign policy. Well, I, for one, am convinced that the communists will never win due to the fact that our foreign policy faces difficulties. They can win only when enough people are willing to sit back and say they are going to win by default.

It is true that many countries of the world today seem to be "itching" to take a swipe at the United States. But it is doubtful that this is due in whole or even in part to the "failure"of our foreign policy in recent years. We have made many gains in recent years—closer co-operation with the UN, the Middle East, disarmament and atoms-for peace a more equitable policy toward all the nations of proposals that have captured the imagination of the ing of the free world's unity and defense by our world for their sincerity and fairness, a strengthen-sponsorship of the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization (SEATO) and our co-operation with the Baghdad Pact, the continuation of a practical and vigorous aid program designed to further the internal development and progress of the underdeveloped countries, and the full acceptance of our responsibilities as the bulwark of free-world defense. At the same time we have been faced by an unrelenting nemy bloc of nations who "have it in" for the United States and who take advantage of inevitable grievances and conflicts in the world to foment discontent toward the United States. The communist nations are determined to pursue their totalitarian goals if it means competition in every conceivable field, and they are willing to use any means (witness Eastern Europe).

There are a lot of unsolved and insoluble problems in the world. The American people must learn to live with their problems. The problems we face today will not become less-aggravating when the present administration leaves Washington. So often in foreign policy there is no choice between "good" or "bad" policies—rather it is a matter of degree and alternatives depending on the changing world scene. The United States is just not omnipotent—we cannot always have things the way we want them —and there are many factors beyond our control. The world of today and tomorrow demands of the American people poise, faith in their own system, and a determination to pursue a peace that has freedom as its counterpart.

SCHOOL OF EDUCATION SUPPLEMENT

UNC Education School Has Varied Teacher Program

COLLEGE SCIENCE CLASS

TEACHING GEOGRAPHY

A TYPICAL CLASS

By NOLA HATTEN

The School of Education is the administrative agency set up by the university to provide the coordination of university services and resources necessary for the education of teachers, supervisors and administrators to staff the schools of this state and others. The primary function of the school is recruitment, selection, training and placement of youth who show promise of becoming effective teachers. To perform these functions the School of Education is in a large measure dependent upon other schools and departments for the subject mastery and liberal education which are the core of teacher preparation.

Before a student can become a teacher he must complete approximately 16 years of schooling. The first 12 years are elementary and secondary general education. This program is for all children attending school in the United States. Upon completion of these 12 years the student receives a high school diploma and may enter college for special training in the field of his greatest interest. The first two years of college are a continuation of the student's general education; therefore, the student is said to be in General College. Courses taken during these two years are English, a foreign language, mathematics or Latin or Greek, social science, physical science, biological science, physical education, hygiene, and other courses which may be selected from the departments of anthropology, sociology or political science. Specialization in a specific field begins in the third year of college. At this time the student wishing to teach enters the School of Education for his last two years necessary in becoming a teacher.

More than 80 per cent of the college courses taken by teachers-in-training are taken outside the School of Education. The pattern of courses and the sequential arrangement are planned cooperatively by the School of Education and the University schools and departments involved. Under such a plan the various disciplines make an optimum contribution to the personal and professional development of the teacher and assure him the valuable foundation which excellent teaching in the humanities, the natural sciences and the social sciences can provide.

A student may qualify to teach, in an elementary school or a secondary school. The requirements are prescribed by the State Department of Education and the School of Education in the university. A teacher usually teaches one or two subjects in a secondary school, but an elementary teacher must know a number of subject fields.

Graduation with a degree in elementary education requires 129 semester hours credit, of which 105 semester hours are devoted to the general education of the student. In addition to the General College requirements, the elementary education student is required to take at least six semester hours of work in geography, in American history, in art, in music, and in health and physical education. The major objective of the program is designed to help the student become an educated person-to know something to teach.

Students who wish to prepare themselves for teaching in the secondary school may meet the requirements for the bachelor's degree and at the same time meet certification requirements. In his junior and senior years the student takes approximately 30 semester hours in the subject which he wishes to teach. For his second subject or minor the number of hours required varies in each department.

The course work in education for elementary and secondary teachers begins with Education 41, Introduction to the Study of Education, and is followed by Educational Psychology. In the student's senior year, during either the Fall or the Spring semester, he is enrolled for a block of courses in education which normally require the full time of the student for the semester. This semester of study is divided into two parts.

For the elementary education student the course work for the first eight weeks includes the development of units of study which organize material around topics cutting across each of the designated courses. A student will learn materials used in teaching various areas as well as learn the physical, mental and emotional characteristics of children.

For the secondary education student the first part is devoted to intensive course work in studying the secondary school, adolescent growth and development, and the methods and materials needed for successful teaching. The second part of the program is spent in student teaching in some North Carolina elementary school under the joint supervision of an experienced teacher and a member of the staff of the School of Education.

By this method a student is introduced to the job of teaching in an actual situation. At the successful completion of this work a student is given the necessary certificates to teach in an elementary or secondary school. The only problem in this program is that the demand for teachers is greater than the production. The University is striving to educate more and better teachers.

Current enrollment in the university is 365, an increase of 53 per cent in the past four years. After the School of Education was re-established, the first group to graduate was in 1950 and numbered 72. In 1958 the school expects to graduate 200. Although this is a considerable increase, the shortage of teachers continues to rise.

Working under the Graduate School, the School of Education offers the Master of Arts, the Master of Education, the Doctor of Education, and the Doctor of Philosophy degrees. Applicants must hold either the bachelor or master of arts degree from recognized colleges or universities before they are admitted.

The fields in which a graduate major or minor may be chosen are Elementary Education, Secondary Education, Administration and Supervision, Education Psychology, History and Comparative Education, Physical and Health Education, Guidance and Personnel Work, Special Education, and Distributive Education. Thirty semester hours of graduate work are required along with a reading knowledge in one foreign language, a written examination in the major field, an oral examination covering the entire field of study and a thesis. The requirements are similar for a Master of Education degree, the exception being an optional thesis.

There is a constant effort being made to improve the curriculum and teaching in the School of Education. The student teaching program is carefully coordinated by the staff and is fast becoming the model for other teacher education programs in the state. The need for teachers is critical and the School of Education is striving to meet that need.

Teaching Is Not Limited To Campus

The School of Education cooperates with the Extension Division in offering off-campus extension courses. During the fall semester a total of 131 students were enrolled in a total of 5 courses offered at Fayetteville, Goldsboro, High Point, Oxford and Rockingham. During the spring semester a total of 118 students were enrolled in a total of 5 courses offered at Carthage, High Point, Laurinburg and Oxford. This compares with a total of 122 enrollments in 5 courses at 5 centers in the fall of 1956 and a total of 194 enrollments in 6 courses at 6 centers in the spring of 1957.

Graduate Centers have been established at Charlotte and at Goldsboro. Students may earn credit at these centers which will apply toward a graduate degree. However, the number of hours which may be taken in these centers and so applied is limited. There were 107 students enrolled in the classes at Charlotte during the fall semester of 1957 in four classes. 100 more are enrolled during the spring semester of 1958 in 3 sections. There were 26 students enrolled in the class at Goldsboro during the fall and 22 enrolled this spring.

MEXICAN SCHOOL

The Escuela Normal Superior in Mexico City is for teachers who have graduated from the escuela normal (or have received the bachillerato from the preparatory school) and have taught successfully in the primaria for four years. Tuition is free and graduates are guaranteed placement in Mexican secondary schools.

The subject program is highly concentrated in the students' teaching field. The professional courses include educational psychology, experimental educational psychology, guidance, history of education, general teaching methods and specialized teaching methods in the chosen subjectfield. A kindergarten, a primaria, and a secundaria are operated in conjunction with the school as experimental and practice schools.

TELEVISED CLASSES

UNC's Television Station Is Great Help To Teachers

By DR. DONALD TARBET

WUNC—TV, the educational television station of the Consolidated University of North Carolina, began its operations January 8, 1955. Various departments and individuals take part in programs and in the sponsorship of series of programs. The school of Education of the University of North Carolina has sponsored one or more series of programs from the beginnig of the telecasting activities to the present. The coordination of these programs has been done by a staff member of the school of education most of the staff members have appeared on a number of programs.

The earliest series was an af- THE YOUNGER SET It was deter-school viewing series called culum of the schools by providsigned to supplement the curriing a worth-while program for boys and girls to view in the late afternoon hours. Programs dealt with music, arts, sports, vocations, literature, and science. Additional programs featured, hobbies and pets.

This series was followed by the enrichment programs which are being presented now. These programs are designed to supplement the instruction available in the various schools by bringing specialists to the classrooms by means of television. Teachers and students watch the programs in their classrooms. Areas now being presented include SCIENCE AND NATURE, PLAY PERIOD (a health and physical eduaction series), MUSIC IN THE AIR. TODAY ON THE FARM. CAREERS FOR YOU. and ENGINEERING VISITS (vocational guidance programs) and POTPOURRI (a home economics series). Several of these programs are now in their third year of presentation.

The North Carolina In-School Television Expediment is a project which provides direct instruction by means of television. 7,000 students in 19 different school systems are watching programs daily as a part of their regular school program. A studio teacher teaches the class and the follow-up activities are carried on in the classrooms with the regular classroom teachers. This is an experiment in the teaching of large groups by means of television. 3,000 more students are reported as viewing the programs on a regular schedule even though their schools are not actually in the project. The subjects being taught include American History, General Science, World History and Arithmetic (for 8th grade). The project is to be continued and possibly expanded.

Adult education is being included as a part of the television activities of the Schol of Education. METHODS FOR MODERN TEACHERS is an in- service education series designed to aid supervisors and administrators in their in-service eduaction programs. There programs are planned by a committee including administrators, teachers, State Department of Public Instruction personnel, School of Education representatives, and WUNC-TV staff members. Various topics are presented including language arts, science, mathematics, children's literature, audio-visual aids, health and physical education, art, music, social studies, and many others areas. Here again the method used is to bring a specialist to many schools by means of television.

Credit courses are being offered by television. Staff members of the School of Education have taught such courses. Teachers in many scattered areas watch the programs and earn credit toward certificate renewal or degrees.

KNOW YOUR SCHOOLS was a series designed to interpret the work of the schools to the public. Specialists in various areas discussed topics of interest to parents and teachers. A studio audience composed of Parent Teacher Association members took part in the discussion. This is a means of informing the public of what our schools are and should be doing.

This Special Supplement Sent To Mexican School

This special issue of The Daily Tar Heel inaugurates an interinstitutional affiliation between the Escuela Normal Superior in Mexico City and the School of Education at the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill, North Carolina, U. S. A. More than 1,000 extra copies are being printed and sent to Escuela Normal Superior for distribution to students and faculty in that institution. Over 5,000 copies will be distributed to the students and faculty of the

The center pages of this issue were prepared by a committee of students in the School of Education headed by Miss Ellen Rothschild. All of the students participating in the project are members of the National Student Education Association and are studying in preparation for careers in teaching. Pages 1, 2, 5 and 6 are typical of the issues written and published daily by the students. These pages carry news about the State, the Nation and the world as well as news about the University and various student activities. Pages 3, and 4 are a special insert with pictures and articles to describe the program of teacher education at the University of North Carolina. Except for this particular article, all of the columns are in English and will be of special interest to the students of Escuela Normal Superior because the study of the English language is included in the curriculum of that School.

The purposes of the interinstitutional affiliation are (1) to exchange helpful information on public education and the training of teachers, (2) to promote better understanding and good will between Mexico and the United States, and (3) to encourage a more purposeful use of foreign language by teachers. Activities to be undertaken in the project include exchange of textbooks, student publications and letters; preparation of colored slides showing school and college activities; preparation of an exhibit of mounted photographs showing public schools in operation and various college facilities and activities in teacher education; preparation of magnetically recorded discussions of educational problems for classroom use and broadcast over radio stations; and an exchange of examples of student work. The project is to continue by mutual agreement for at least a year and, it is hoped, for many years to come. If funds to finance a student exchange can be procured at some time in the future, it is hoped that a student of Escuela Normal Superior can come to Chapel Hill for a period of study and that in return a student of the University of North Carolina may visit Escuela Normal Superior.

In inaugurating this interinstitutional affiliation the faculty and students of the School of Education salute the teachers of Mexico and those students preparing for careers in teaching. As colleagues in a world-wide movement to provide universal education as a means of making secure the blessings of liberty, the students and faculty of the School of Education welcome this opportunity for professional collaboration and the building of lasting friendships.

STUDENT NATIONAL EDUCATION ASSN.
America's Future Teachers

UNC's Athletic Program Has Produced Many Stars

It's not the 1957 basketball championship, or many Atlantic Coast Conference titles in other sports, or great football teams like 1947 and 1948, or Jim Tatum, or Frank McGuire.

Athletics at Carolina is hundreds of young men participating in intercollegiate athletics of all sorts. It is this basis upon which those grew, but this is the basis.

The Charlie Justices, Lennie Rosenbluths and Harvie Wards are by-products of an athletic program that embraces eleven major sports officially and may expand to others in coming years.

Included in the UNC intercollegiate program are football, baseball, basketball, golf, tennis, soccer, indoor track, cross country, outdoor track, swimming, and wrestling. Gymnastics dropped from the list two years ago, but lacrosse and fencing may soon become part of the program.

This program has sprung from the fertile, forward-looking imaginations of many men, Charles Thomas Woollen, William Rand Kenan, Jr., R. A. Fetzer, the late Dr. Robert Lawson, Bowman Gray among them. It takes its keynote from "Coach Bob," long time director of athletics, who is largely responsible for its growth since 1921. It is the effort to show in participation "that intangible something that characterizes a real man."

When "Coach Bob" retired from the athletic field a few years ago he had brought Carolina athletics out of the wilderness and into the light of modern education. His dream of "athletics for all" had come true, as UNC now offered so wide a range of sports that any person of almost any stature or strength could participate. Facilities, too, had sprung up under his direction, with the UNC now offering modern Kenan Stadium (capacity 43,971) for football, Woollen Gym (5,500) for basketball and indoor track, Fetzer Field (capacity 7,000) for track, Emerson Stadium (capacity 5,000) for baseball, Bowman Gray Indoor Pool, many tennis courts, including six varsity composition courts, the Tin Can as a supplementary gymnasium, Navy and Intramural practice fields.

1956-1957 CHAMPIONSHIP BASKETBALL TEAM

These facilities and the spirit which permeates them have turned out, among the hundreds of monogram winners, the superstars and super teams, too.

The role of UNC All-Americans cover every sport in which the dream teams are picked. In football there are Justice, Art Weiner, George Barclay, Andy Bershak among many others. In basketball last year's Helm Player of the Year and All-American Lennie Rosenbluth, George Glamack, Jack Cobb, Cart Carmichael, Jim Jordan. Golf had the great Harvie Ward; tennis Vic Seixas; track Jim Beatty, Floyd Simms, Bill Albans; swimming Jimmy Thomas, Charlie Krepp; baseball Clyde King, George Sternweiss; cross country Jack Milne; and many others.

The dream-teams have had the national spotlight, too. Latest instance is last year's NCAA basketball champs, national runners-up and others.

The tally sheet will show Tar Heel victories far ahead of defeats since the first intercollegiate contest, baseball in 1867.

But more important, the human tally sheet will show the products of those wins — and defeats — among the leaders of the state and nation in business, religion, professional, educational and recreational life.

SP And UP Are Campus Group For Politics

Students are free to join either of the political parties on campus or to remain independent.

However, students don't have to join either party. The president of the student body last year was an independent. Don Furtado, the present president, is a member of the Student Party. Student Party members also occupy the offices of vice-president and secretary. The treasurer is a member of the University Party.

The Student Legislature is pretty well evenly divided among members of both parties.

The Student Party tends to be liberal; the University Party tends to be conservative. The Student Party usually introduces more bills in legislature and is a little freer in app ropriating student government monies.

Most of the active members of student government belong to either of the two parties. A student can become a member of the Student Party by attending two meetings and paying a small party fee. Members of the University Party either represent different organizations on campus or become members by turnin in a petition signed by 25 students.

At election time posters go up on all conceivable and inconceivable places, from sidewalks around campus to walls and doors in dormitory bathrooms.

Much of the campaigning time by candidates is spent telling students how much more qualified they are for office than the fellow running against them. One thing is certain: A student can't believe everything he hears, because often he will hear contradicting views and opinions, not facts.

STUDENT BODY OFFICERS—Don Furtado, president; Ralph Cummings, vice-president; Paddy Sue Wall, secretary; and Charlie Gray, treasurer.

Student Solons Pass Many Laws

The official governing body of the student body here at Carolina is the Student Legislature.

This 50-member body is authorized under the Student Constitution to make certain rules and regulations to govern UNC students. It has the power to levy all student fees except athletic fees appropriate funds for student publications, make laws concerning elections and to levy laws necessary for carrying out the constition.

One of its most important powers is the determining of offenses against the student body, categorizing each offense, and fixing maximum and minimum penalties and punishments for each category. Another important function—and one that requires a lot of work—is setting up the annual student budget of approximately $100,000.

The student Legislature also approves or rejects appointments of the student body president, and has the power of impeachment of any elected official.

The powers of the body are somewhat limited. Of course, it does not control class attendance regulations and other important matters which are left up to the faculty and administration. But the UNC constitution is considered all over the nation to be very liberal.

Legislators meet every Thursday night to hash out the various issues that come before them. Some of them take their work serious and live, eat and sleep legislature. It's important to them; they know it and they work hard at it.

Others get elected just to know they've got another honor and just let it go by.

Party lines—there are two political parties here at UNC— are usually split down the middle, and members vote just that way. But on mediocre, usual bills, nothing is said and they usually pass them unanimously.

Words are spouted by the dozens in long orations in attempts to get across certain points.

UNC Freedom A High Point

Here at the University, students have an unusual amount of freedom, as student freedoms go. Aside from the fairly detailed regulations governing coeds, the general rules on conduct here are few and simple.

Only three activities are expressly forbidden by student law: Lying, cheating, and stealing. The student law proscribing these activities is known as the Honor Code. The mode of conduct which it seeks to encourage is called the Honor System. It makes sense for all students to know what the code is, how the system operates, and what happens when the system, for some reason, breaks down in an individual case.

The code itself is simple: A student is on his personal honor to refrain from lying, cheating or stealing.

Every year, however, there are students who find these simple demands too hard to follow. In a University of this size, it is expected that some students who enter here will be unable to face up to the responsibilities of personal honor.

These students find great temptation in the fact that many tests and exams are not monitored by instructors. This same type of student has been known to take advantage of the willingness of those in authority to accept a student's word of honor. Moreover, cases of thefts committed by students have not been entirely unknown.

Of the three types of offenders, the cheater can hurt more people more of the time than the liar and thief combined.

In many courses here, grades are awarded "on the curve;" that is, the high man in the class, regardless of his numerical grade average, receives an "A," and the rest of the class is scaled proportionately.

A cheater in such a class is not cheating himself, he is cheating everybody in the group. His illegal high grade serves to move everyone else down a notch, and in many cases this could mean that he who would have passed will fail, he who would have made Phi Eta Sigma will not, he who would have stayed in the University cannot, etc.

Students alone have the responsibility for enforcing the honor system. For this purpose, students elect members of the Men's and the Women's Honor Councils, judicial bodies with power to try accused students and to impose sentences which include suspension and expulsion.

UNC Grad At NYU Wins Mock Trial

James G. Exum Jr., a UNC graduate, son of Mr. and Mrs. James G. Exum, Snow Hill, has won his first practice court case during the recent moot court competition at New York University School of Law.

He and the other members of his student firm have earned the privilege of entering the quarter finals to be held next fall.

Under the moot court program each firm is required to submit an appellate brief and then argue its case before a court composed of practicing attorneys.

The case which Exum and his partners argued involved the constitutionality of a New York statute forbidding discrimination in private housing.

Exum is attending law school on the three-year Root-Tilden Scholarship, the most valuable offered by any law school in the United Sattes. Each year twenty of these scholarships, with stipends of $7,200, are awarded throughout the nation to young men who have demonstrated academic excellence in their college work and a potential for public service.

Exum graduated from UNC in 1957 with honors. While at Carolina, he participated in student government and Sigma Nu fraternity, being elected to Phi Beta Kappa.

He attended Snow Hill High School where he was president of the student body.

Four Thefts Are Reported To Town Police

Four reports of stolen possessions on the UNC campus have been turned in to the Chapel Hill police within the past week.

Frank Gunter, 234 Cobb, reported that someone took his billfold, containing $15 and personal papers while he was out of his room taking a shower. He said he noticed a strange man about 33 years old and 6 feet tall in the dorm before he missed his billfold.

Mike Ronman, Stevens, St., Chapel Hill, reported someone took his J. C. Higgins English-style bicycle from the side of Woollen Gym, Saturday, May 10. It was red, had gear levers, and hand brakes and was valued at $25.

Bert Haywood, 310 Everett, reported that his Viking bicycle was taken from the front of Everett about April 8. It was an English-style, faded blue bicycle with a head missing front fender. It was value at $20.

Nash E. Hardy, Winston-Salem, reported that on May 6 two side view mirrors were taken from his car which was parked behind Peabody Hall. He valued them at $10.

VD Lab Staffers Receive Award From HEW Dept

The U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare has presented awards to six members of the staff of the Venereal Disease Experimental Laboratory of the School of Public Health.

The awards, which consisted of certificates and shields, are given to employees upon completion of 10-year intervals of creditable service.

The recipients of the awards were John W. Clark Jr., Thomas C. Merritt, Edward L. Petit, Robert R. Snipes, Dr. Henry Tauber and Dr. James D. Thayer.

All of the awards were for 10 years of service except the one going to Dr. Thayer, which was for 20 years of service.

Dr. George O. Doak, assistant director of the laboratory, made the presentations.

'Social Science And Psychiatry' Is Meet Topic

"Integration of Social Science and Psychiatry in the Basic Curriculum" will be the theme of a one-day institute sponsored by the School of Nursing Wednesday, May 21.

The institute is planned especially for nurses engaged in teaching students in North Carolina; however, registration is open to all interested nurses.

Registration will open at 9 a.m. in the lobby of the School of Nursing Building. The program will begin at 10 a.m. with Miss Evangeline E. Soutsos, assistant professor of psychiatric nursing at the UNC School of Nursing, presiding.

This is the fifth in the current series of institutes sponsored by the UNC School of Nursing.

During the morning session, Miss Barbara H. Bernard, associate professir of psychiatric nursing, UNC School of Nursing, will speak on "Implications for Integration of Social Science and Psychiatric Concepts in the Basic Curriculum."

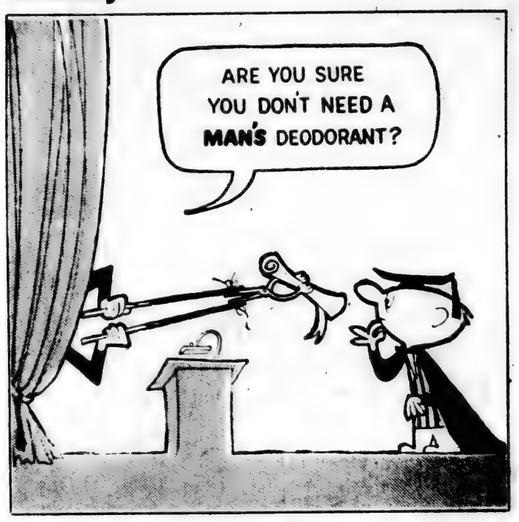
Zetes, Cobb And Meds Win Intramural Trophies

The Carolina Intramural Department announced the winners of its annual awards for intramural participation yesterday.

This year's organizational trophies were won by Zeta Psi in the fraternity division, Cobb in the dormitory division, and Medical School in the graduate division.

The Intramural Department awards a large cup to each of the organizations in the Dormitory, Fraternity, and Graduate Divisions which receives the greatest number of points throughout the year. A cup becomes the permanent possession of any organization winning it three times.



The Order of the Grail presents a cup to the Intramural Athlete in each division who wins the highest number of individual points during the year's competition. This year's Grail Awards went to Jim Kelly (SAE), Wayne Wright (Joyner), and Jack McGinley (Peacocks).

or other officers of the institution in such a manner and to such extent as may by the faculty and Chancellor be deemed necessary and expedient . . . ."

Dean Carmichael has received a few replies to her letter.

Dr. Claiborne Jones of the general college stated: "The general college insists that it cannot be academically responsible for freshmen women students unless the University si socially and residentially responsible.

"It is folly to disdain the responsibility which parents assume the University will undertake as they send their daughters to this institution."

Dean Cecil Johnson wishes to have freshmen women admitted here only with the provision that the University is able to care for the needs of the individual freshman woman. He hopes that the rules will offer sufficient flexibility so that the students' library obligations can be met.

Miss Margaret Moore of the Department of Physical Therapy said in a memorandum to Dean Carmichael; "Thank you for sending me the revised regulations for freshmen students on this campus. Having been educated in an extremely st ict situation in a state supported women's school in Virginia, I am having difficulty finding too many objections to some of the rules which have been so controversial of late . . . ."

Dean Carmichael said of these statements, "These comments indicate that perhaps we shall yet have to polish the rules further, before final form is reached."

Dean Carmichael in giving her opinion of the new rules and the Women's Residence said, "I wish publicly to take occasion to praise the Women's Residence Council for their patience and restraint and hard work in the face of opposition; through weeks and months they have continued to work through on a project which they consider right and proper. The rules for freshman women have been intelligently and thoughtfully drawn up, they seem capable of being enforced, and they offer a neat compromise between leniency and strictness."

UNC FENCING CLUB

Epee Individuals Close Season

Winners of the final session of the Intramurals Fencing Competition in duelling sword fenced last Friday night at GM were: First place epee, Carroll Raver; second place, Bill Orr; and third place, Jerry Jernigan.

Last week's bouts in sabre saw Bob Aldridge win first with Mike Collins and Al Deal in second and third places. The epee event concludes the club's activities for this year. Several fencers attended an individual foil competition yesterday at WC in Greensboro and officiated for the women's foil bouts.

During the time between the first round elimination and the finals several UNC fencers put on exhibition bouts in foil, sabre and epee. The women's fencing is limited strictly to foil competition and only four touches are required to win a bout as compared with five for the men's.

Next year the fencing club will resume activity at a called meeting about the 15th of October and plans for the season will be made and team captain elected. Coach Barrow invited all those interested in coming out for the team to watch for the announcement in the fall and attend the meeting.

Gravely Staff Taking Part In TB Meeting

Three papers will be presented by staff members of Gravely Sanatorium at UNC at this week's meeting of the National Tuberculosis Association in Philadelphia.

The national meeting will open tomorrow and continue through Thursday.

Papers wil be presented by Dr. H. S. Willis, superintendent and medical director of the State Sanatorium System; Miss Irene Melvin and H. M. Vandiviere, both of the Gravely research staff.

All three papers will concern the work now being done at Gravely under a grant from the American Trudeau Society, which is the medical branch of the National Tuberculoses Association. The papers will relate to immuntiy and protection from tuberculosis.

Gravely Sanatorium also will display an exhibit on tuberculosis at the meeting. This exhibit has been prepared under the direction of Dr. H. E. Kennedy of the Gravely staff. The exhibit wil consist of models of human lungs and microscopic views of lungs that are infected with tuberculosis.

The display also will show hew vaccine for tuberculoses is made and the results of the uses of such vaccines.

UNC Library Gets Letters To Mitchell

Letters to Elisha Mitchell from other famous North Carolina and national personalities have recently been reecived by UNC and deposited in the Southern Historical Collection for permanent preservation. These letters, numbering twenty-nine, were a part of the Elisha Mitchell papers which were taken West by his descendents after his death in 1875.

The letters came as a gift to the Botany Department from Mrs. Harry E. Miller of Las Vegas, Nev., the widow of Mitchell's great-great-grandson.

Elisha Mitchell was the first man to measure Mt. Mitchell, named after him, and to discover that it is the highest peak east of the Mississippi.

He was a geologist and botanist, and came from Yale to UNC in 1818, where he remained as professor of mathematics and natural philosophy until his accidental death on Mt. Mitchell in 1875.

The letters are from noted governors, statesmen, scientists, bishops, clergymen and Supreme Court judges, among whom were John Starke Ravencroft, David L. Swain, William Gaston and George E. Badger.

Charlotte Senior To Study At UNC On Jefferson Grant

CHARLOTTE — Two Jefferson Standard Foundation scholarships, each valued at $2,500, have been awarded high school seniors in Charlotte and Clinton.

The four-year scholarships went to Richard Hobson Blackwell Jr. of Charlotte and Wade Hampton Hargrove of Clinton.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard H. Blackwell and a senior at Harding High School, Richard will study electrical engineering at State College.

Hargrove, a Clinton High School senior and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wade Hampton Hargrove of 106 Eastover Avenue in Clinton, Wade will major in creative radio and television at UNC.

Blackwell has been interested in electronics for several years and plans to get his amateur radio operator's license this summer. He builds radios, amplifiers, and other electronic devices. He also taught himself to play the piano and the Hammond Organ.

Hargrove has been working as a sports announcer for a Clinton radio station.

Each scholarship is worth $625 a year and is renewable for four years, contingent upon maintenance of a good scholastic average.

The Jefferson Standard Broadcasting Co., owners and operators of WBT Radio and WBTV Television in Charlotte and WBTW Television in Florence, S. C., has awarded the scholarships annually for the past seven years.

The two winners were selected from seven finalists by a board consisting of Earl Wynn, director of the UNC Communications Center; Dr. George Hoadley, chairman, Department of Electrical Engineering, State College; Dr. Alfred Goetche, assistant professor in the Department of Electrical Engineering of the School of Engineering, State College.

The other finalists were Howard Raymond Weeks of Durham, James Landreth Cason III of Alliance, Guion Oakes Eels of Rock Hill, S. C., John Stephen Daves of China Grove and Martha Faye Harrison of Thomasville.

WUNC-FM Ends Year Tomorrow

The University's FM radio station, WUNC, will complete its broadcast year Monday, the last day of classes for the spring semester.

The station, which recently moved into newly remodeled quarters in Swain Hall, will resume broadcasting September 21, when the fall semester opens.

This year the station extended its broadcast time one hour and added two programs which were locally produced by UNC students: "This Is Carolina" on Monday nights and "Personalities in Residence" on Wednesday nights.

Dr. A. Howell Given Advisory Appointment

Prof. Almonte C. Howell of the Department of English has been appointed adviser to foreign students, Dean of the Faculty James L. Godfrey announced Friday.

In addition to this post, Howell is secretary of the faculty.

Howell succeeds Kenan Prof. Sturgis Lovitt of the Department of Romance Languages who is retiring.

Howell has had extensive experience teaching English to foreign students.

Nine New Faculty Appointments Approved By Friday And Trustees

Three associate professors and six assistant professors have been appointed to the UNC faculty effective September 1.

Chancellor William B. Aycock announced the appointments among a number of personnel changes approved by President William C. Friday and the Board of Trustees.

Named as associate professors were Karl Ludwig Selig, Romance languages, now at Johns Hopkins University; Robert Arthur Rupen, political science, now at Bryn Mawr College; and George Brown Tindall, history, coming from Louisiana State University.

Appointed as assistant professors are Stephen B. Baxter, History; Benjamin E. Fountain Jr., education; Richard L. Frautschi, Romance languages; Richard G. Hiskey, chemistry; Paul S. Hubbard Jr., physics; and Miss Lucia Cameron Morgan, English.

Selig was also granted a leave of absence for the academic year 1958-59, in order to accept a Fulbright Grant for work in Europe. A native of Wiesbaden, Germany, he holds B. A. and M. A. degrees from Ohio State University and the Ph. D. from the University of Texas.

Tindall, a native of Greenville, S. C., received his A. B. degree at Furman University and his M. A. and Ph. D. degrees from UNC at Chapel Hill. Before going to LSU he taught at Woman's College in Greensboro, University of Mississippi and Eastern Kentucky State College.

Rupen, in addition to teaching at Bryn Mawr, has done research work at the University of Washington and at Harvard. His degrees are the B. A., Williams College; M. A., Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy; and Ph. D., University of Washington.

Fountain is a native of Rocky Mount, where he taught and was school principal for several years. During 1955-57 he was associate executive secretary of the N. C. School Boards Association, while working toward his Ph. D. degree at Chapel Hill. He also holds the A. B. and M. Ed. from UNC.

Frautschi is now an instructor at Smith College and for two years was a teaching fellow at Harvard, where he took his M. A. and Ph. D. degrees. A native of Rockford, Ill., he took his B. A. at the University of Wisconsin.

Also a Harvard graduate with a B. A. degree, Baxter received his Ph. D. from Cambridge University in 1955. He taught for three years at Dartmouth College and is currently a visiting assistant professor at the University of Missouri.

Hiskey is currently on the faculty of Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute and serves as consultant for Mann Research Laboratories. A native of Emporia, Kansas, he holds two degrees from Kansas State College, and the Ph. D from Wayne University, where he was a teaching assistant and fellow.

Hubbard is currently completing his Ph. D. degree at Harvard, where he also took his M. A. Originally from St. Petersburg, Fla., he did his undergraduate work at the University of Florida.

Miss Morgan, a native of Baton Rouge, holds the B. A., M. A. and Ph. D. degrees from Louisiana State University. Her teaching experience includes LSU, Michigan State, Florida State and the University of Mississippi, where she is currently an associate professor.

Teague's Namesake Second Recent Honor

One of three new men's dormitories has been named for Claude Teague, special assistant to Consolidated University President William C. Friday, and retired business manager of the University at Chapel Hill.

UNC Chancellor William B. Aycock recently made the announcement. The new building will be designated Claude E. Teague dormitory.

It was the second honor received in recent weeks by Teague, who retired last year as UNC Business Manager.

Teague, himself quite a debater during his college days here, was presented the 1958 Di-Phi Award, given annually by the Dialectic Senate and the Philanthropic Literary Society, the two student debating organizations.

Chancellor Aycock reported recommendations for names of the other two dormitories have been submitted to the trustees. Action will probably be taken at the trustee meeting Monday, May 26.

Aycock said all three dorms would be named by the time they open next fall.

Teague was graduated from the University in 1912 where he was active in campus affairs. After graduation he worked at several occupations, including teaching, law, school principal and superintendent, business manager and adviser to educators.

He came to the University in 1943 as business manager, a position he held until last year, when he formally retired at the age of 69.

He was married in 1923 to the former Mary Spaugh. They have four children.

Colorado Host To Two Local Faculty Men

Two UNC professors will be guest lecturers at the University of Colorado 1958 summer session.

W. E. Rosentendel, professor of education, and Harold D. Meyer, sociology professor, will be among 64 visiting lecturers in the College of Education. Each will teach courses in the second summer session.

Rosentendel will conduct two graduate courses in business administration of city school systems and in school surveys.

Extra-class activities, home rooms, student councils, education for leisure and recreation will be among the items covered in two courses taught by Meyer.

Both men will begin teaching July 22.

Raper Wins Root-Tilden Grant For Three Year Law Study At NYU

John E. Raper, Jr., of Fayetteville has received an Elihu Root-Samuel J. Tilden Scholarship for three years of study at the New York University School of Law. Recipients of the scholarships, which are valued at $7,200 each, were announced today by Dean Russell D. Niles.

Mr. Raper will graduate in June from the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill and will begin his law studies at NYU in September.

Root-Tilden Scholarships are awarded annually to two outstanding college men from each of the 10 federal judicial circuits. The grants are named for two famous NYU alumni.

Elihu Root (Class of 1867) served in the cabinets of William McKinley and Theodore Roosevelt. Samuel J. Tilden (Class of 1814) was governor of New York and unsuccessful candidate for the presidency against Rutherford B. Hayes.

Recipients of the grants are young men with distinguished scholastic records who, in the opinion of the selection committees, show unusual capacity for unselfish public leadership. Applicants may apply in either the circuit in which they live or the one in which they study.

Mr. Raper won his scholarship in the Fourth Judicial Circuit, which includes North Carolina.

The selection committee for the Fourth Circuit was composed of Bolitha J. Laws, chief judge of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia; Admiral Frederick J. Bell, executive vice president of the National Automobile Dealers Association; and Delmar Karlen, professor of law at NYU.

The other Root-Tilden recipient from that circuit is Larry W. Childers of Rock Hill, South Carolina, a senior at Providence College in Providence, Rhode Island.

Mr. Raper graduated from Fayetteville Senior High School, where he was senior speaker at commencement and received the Danforth Foundation and Outstanding Key Clubber awards.

At Carolina he is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, national honor society, and Beta Theta Pi, social fraternity. He also is chairman of the Carolina Symposium Committee, a member of the Graham Memorial Activities Board, and a member of the University's soccer team.

The New York University School of Law was founded in 1835. Located on historic Washington Square in New York's Greenwich Village, it has an enrollment of more than 700 day and evening students.

Roommates Are Needed

The Foreign Exchange Schools Committee has reminded students that it would like for the two Goettingen exchange students to room with Americans.

Anyone interested in having a German student for a roommate next year has been asked to contact either Larkin Kirkman or Jim Menzel as soon as possible.

Nash Delivers Baccalaureate At Stephens

Prof. Arnold S. Nash of the Department of Religion will deliver this year's baccalaureate address at Stephens College in Columbia, Mo. As a main speaker at the commencement exercises on May 25, Dr. Nash will speak on "The Tragic Sense of Life."

A member of the UNC faculty since 1947, Nash is professor of the history of religion, and formerly chairman of the Religion Department. A native of England, he was educated at the University of Liverpool and the University of London.

French Review Prints Article By H. K. Russell

An article by H. K. Russell, Carolina English professor, has been published in a special issue of the French literary magazine, La Revue des Lettres Modernes. The article deals with the works of Ernest Hemingway.

The article, "The Catharsis in A Farewell To Arms," was first published in Modern Fiction Studies. The editor of La Revue des Lettres Modernes requested a number of articles on Hemingway to be translated and reprinted in the French publication; Dr. Russell's article was among those used.

The purpose of La Revue is to put before its reading public the new ideas of modern literature. The current issues of the magazine are devoted to critical discussions of themes and creations of modern writers. In addition to the number concentrating on Hemingway there have been publications dealing with William Faulkner, John Dos Passos, Walt Whitman and others.

A member of the UNC faculty since 1929, Dr. Russell is interested in contemporary English and American fiction. Before coming to UNC, he taught in the American University at Beirut, Lebanon.

Heron Wins Coker Award At Banquet

The Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society has presented the 1958 William Chambers Coker Award in Science to Stephen Duncan Heron Jr. of Durham, who is completing his Ph.D. degree in geology at Carolina.

Heron received the award at the society's spring banquet, at which two new officers were introduced. They are the new president, Dr. Roy L. Ingram, who is chairman of the Department of Geology and Georaphy; and the vice president, Dr. Albert E. Radford, an associate professor of botany.

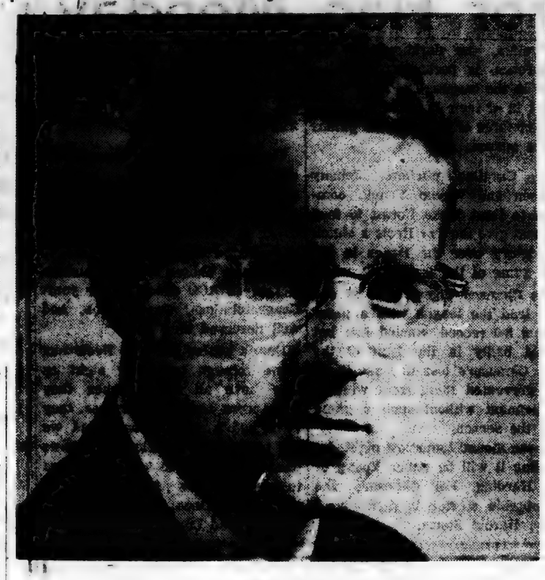
Carolina Med Scholar New Student AMA Head

Carwile LeRoy of the School of Medicine has been elected president of the Student American Medical Assn.

LeRoy is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. LeRoy of Elizabeth City. He received his undergraduate education at Wake Forest College and entered the UNC School of Medicine three years ago. He is a Morehead Scholar at UNC.

During the past year he has been devoting his full time to research work at the School of Medicine. He is a post-sophomore research fellow working in the field of blood clotting. This work is being done in the Medical School's Department of Pathology under the direction of Dr. K. M. Brinkhous, professor and chairman of the department. The research project is being financed by a grant from the U. S. Public Health Service.

The Student AMA was organized in 1950 and today has a membership of 50,000 medical students and house staff in 74 of the nation's 82 medical schools.



LeRoy was elected at the eighth annual convention of the organization in Chicago last week. The announcement of his election was made yesterday.

The constitution of the organization reads, "The objects of this association shall be to advance the profession of medicine, to contribute to the welfare and education of medical students, interns, and residents, to familiarize its members with the purposes and ideals of organized medicine, and to prepare its members to meet the social moral, and ethical obligations of the profession of medicine."

'End Of World' Ends Up Year

Till the end of school the "End of the World" will be presented at 3 p.m. daily at the Morehead Planetarium here, Manager A. F. Jenzano has announced.

Reservations for this added school program will be required just as they are for the 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. programs Wednesdays through Fridays.

A contest for college student photographers is being sponsored by The Intercollegian, a magazine covering the college field and published by the National Student YMCA-YWCA. Theme of the contest is student life and education in America, and $850 in prizes in equipment and cash are offered.

The contest will close November 1 and judging the entries will be Jacob Deschin, photography editor, New York Times; David Linton, president, American Society of Magazine Photographers, and Grace M. Mayer, curator of the Museum of the City of New York.

Prize-winning pictures will be published in The Intercollegian and exhibited at the YMCA-YWCA National Student Assembly in Urbana, Ill., December 28 to January 3.

For complete contest rules and an entry blank students may write to Intercollegian Photography Contest, 291 Broadway, New York 7, N. Y.

Top equipment prizes are as follows: Konica III MXL camera, case and flash, DeJUR Eldorado III 8 mm. Movie Camera, Argus C44 camera, case and flash, Graphic 35 camera and Ansco Memar travel outfit (camera, case and flash).

First prize winner will receive 150 and first choice of one of the pieces of equipment and second prize winner $50 and choice of one piece of equipment. Third through fifth prizes will be equipment, and sixth prize will be a 3.5 Flash Flex Capacitor flashgun.

Honorable mention awards will include: six prizes of $15 in cash; No. 2 Nikor stainless steel developing tank for 120-620 film, five copies of Picture, the American Society of Magazine Photographers annual, five copies of The Family of Man, six super-slide kits for Rollei cameras and ten Ansco 35 mm magazines of Super Anscochrome.

Everett Proud Of Record, Want To 'Win Top' Next

By DAVIS YOUNG

"That's right," commented Rudy Edwards, when asked if his dorm had been given an award for being the second best dorm on campus. "We are very proud of this distinction and will endeavor to win the top position next year."

Everett Dorm has long been distinguished for being one of the most progressive residence halls on this campus. For two consecutive years, Everettites walked off with the Intermural Championship, overcoming stiff opposition each time.

They also go in for scholastics in a big way and have one of the most efficiently organized quiz files on campus. Recently the dorm has fixed up the social room with additional furniture, pictures, curtains, magazines and other aristocratic innovations.

Edwards said, "We do not want to be outdone by the boys from Lewis who won the best dorm award. So, like them, I am submitting a list of outstanding people who have lived in this dorm. Sonny Hallford, attorney general this year and a past president of the IDC; Whit Whitfield a former chairman of the SP and Jim Holmes also a past chairman of the SP have all lived here." In his modesty, he overlooked himself. His record is also comparable to any of those above.

During the year, residents of Lewis went in for the social side of life in a big way too. They sponsored one highly successful dance with coeds from Aycrett College. This was supposed to be one of the finest dorm events in recent years. They were also making big plans for a dorm beach party to be held immediately before the start of spring examinations.

Succeeding Edwards as dorm president is Tom Mehl, who attributes the success of his group to a great amount of unity.

IDC Honorary Inducts Five

Five men were inducted into the Interdormitory Council Honorary Society in special ceremonies last week, according to Rudy Edwards, president of the IDC and the IDC Honorary Society.

AT ANNUAL AWARD NIGHT

Awards Granted 18 Pharmacists

The annual Awards Night was held at the School of Pharmacy Tuesday night with 18 awards going to pharmacy students.

The Awards Night was held at the final joint meeting of the academic year of the student branches of the North Carolina Pharmaceutical Assn. and the American Pharmaceutical Assn.

The awards were presented by Dr. E. A. Brecht, dean of the UNC School of Pharmacy.

The School of Pharmacy Student Body Award went to Ronald L. Austell of Shelby. This was a mortar and pestle plaque. This goes to the graduating student who has demonstrated the highest qualities of character, deportment, scholarship, participation in extracurricular activities and promise of future distinction in the pharmacy profession.

The two Merck Awards in Pharmacy went to Donald K. Chapman of Winston-Salem and James M. Prevo of Thomasville. These awards are sets of reference works and are given each year by Merck & Co.

The Bristol Award In Pharmacy was won by William N. Ponder of Hendersonville. This award also is a set of reference books on pharmacy and is given each year by Bristol Laboratories, Inc.

James L. Inabinet of Winston-Salem was the recipient of the Rexall Award in Pharmacy Administration. This award is a replica of an antique bronze mortar and pestle. It is given each year by the Rexall Drug Co. to the graduating student for the highest achievement in the pharmacy administration course.

The Kappa Epsilon Award went to Christine B. Manos of Fayetteville. This national honorary pharmaceutical sorority awards annually a silver cup to a women student in the School of Pharmacy who has demonstrated qualities of leadership, character, service and scholarship.

Hugh M. Hinton of Middlesex received the Pharmacy Senate Award. This silver cup is given each year by Floyd E. Jones of Norfolk, Va. in the name of the Pharmacy Senate. It goes to the student who has shown the greatest loyalty and service to the School of Pharmacy.

The M. L. Jacobs Memorial Award went to Virgilia Carswell of Spring Lake. This award is in honor of the memory of the late Dr. M. L. Jacobs, dean of the Pharmacy School from 1946 to 1950. The award, a gold key, is given by the UNC Chapter of the Rho Chi Society. It goes to the student demonstrating the greatest excellence in pharmaceutical organic chemistry.

Nancy M. Faison of Rockingham received the Rho Chi First Year Award. This is a reference work that goes to the student who shows the highest scholarship in the first year of the pharmacy curriculum.

A key was presented to Hugh M. Hinton of Middlesex. This award is given each year to the outgoing president of the student body of the School of Pharmacy.

David R. Davis Jr. of Williamston was the recipient of the Pharmacy Faculty Award and the Buxton Williams Hunter Medal in Pharmacy. This first award is an engraved bronze mortor and pestle and is given by the faculty of the school to the student in the graduating class making the highest average during the four years of study.

The Hunter Medal is offered each year by D. R. Davis of Williamston in memory of the late Buxton Williams Hunter of New Bern. This medal goes to the graduating senior who has excelled in campus citizenship and scholarship.

Two of the school's national pharmaceutical fraternities presented awards. The Outstanding Senior Award given by Phi Delta Chi went to Gene R. Dutton of Hickory. This was a mortar and pestle plaque.

Kappa Psi presented keys to students.

THE POWER OF POSITIVE WRINKLING

While everybody knows that the soft collar on Van Heusen Century Shirts won't wrinkle, ever, a Van Heusen survey among college students has revealed that precious few know why. Here are some of the responses:

J. L.—sophomore at the Psychodynamic Institute for Arts, Crafts, and Number Painting—"Obviously, the collar won't wrinkle, because it's afraid to wrinkle. It may have been threatened by some surly Van Heusen vice-president. Ergo, it exhibits the Cavandish anti-wrinkle syndrome."

G. F.—junior at Usury School of Advertising—"Collarwise, there's no demand for wrinkles. No customer benefit. Now, this is strictly off the top of my cranium, but the statement, 'the soft collar that won't wrinkle, ever,' is too negative. Substitute 'never' for 'ever' and you not only have a positive statement—but—as demonstrated by that famous cigarette, this ungrammatical concept will be attention-getting."

L. V.—senior quarterback at Millown College—"I wouldn't be without a Van Heusen. Look here . . . under my pleatless shoulder pads. See? Out of simple decency, the collar refrains from wrinkling. It's this kind of restraint that recently led to our glorious victory over Birdbrain U. Not a man was scathed. Huzzah for the collar—and fight furiously, fellows."

Yes, this is the kind of ignorance we run across. Actually, while other collars are made of 3 pieces of material, the secret of this soft collar with its wrinkle-shunning qualities is one-piece construction. Van Heusen Century shirts come in 5 collar styles. $4 and $5.

As The RAM Sees

By DAVE WIBLE, Sports Editor

The senior athletes have been feted, monograms have been awarded, and the year's most outstanding athletic — Buddy Payne — has been chosen bringing to a close with the exception of baseball — Carolina sports 1957-58. Now with all this past history the ram figures its time to go back over his notes to see what happened during this course.

Tatum Begins Winning Football Season

The best place to start is on the gridiron with King Football. Coach Jim Tatum and crew open the season on a hot, fall afternoon with a loss to State. The Heels bounced back to take Clemson. Navy came next and the Carolina squad never looked better as they gave the Middies their only defeat of the year. Miami fell and it loked as though the Tar Heels couldn't be stopped.

Then came that fateful day before the Queen at Maryland and the Tar Heels were knocked off of their high road. Wake Forest came next and a star — Jack Cummings — was born as the Heels got another taste of victory. Homecoming brought Tennessee and another Tar Heel defeat. A pep talk during the week and South Carolina fell the next Saturday.

Tar Heels Whip Blue Devils 21-13

Then it happened. With Cummings throwing, and Payne catching Duke was beatened, stomped, clobbered, runover, downed, smashed, slashed and bombed. 21-13 the scoreboard said. Virginia took advantage of the airlanes the next week and poof! dumped the Heels in their final game.

The season was a winning one, 6-4. Might have been better, could have been worse, but the fact remained that Carolina football was getting better and better.

The second section of the course was basketball, and very few people will forget the day the newspapers headlines said, "Quigg injured, Out For The Season." The news hurt bad—but it didn't take long to shake off the pain and hope for the best. Few fans will forget that opening game with Clemson and the ovation the national champions received as they ran out on the floor for the first time.

Basketball String Ends At 36 Straight

Five straight games the Tar Heels won and people began to think, "Well, maybe we cna still do it." On December 21 at the Kentucky Invitational Tournment at Lexington West Virginia shattered the dream of another undefeated season the Tar Heels showed that they were still a team to deal with. Six times the Tar Heels faultered. Maryland, State, Duke, and Notre Dame all joined the ranks with West Virginia as having beatened the Champs. Maryland did it twice, the second at the ACC championships ruining the Tar Heels chances to defend their National title. 19-6 the records read, and the experts said, "Watch them next year."

Then came baseball and an unfinished story. From a doubtful squad to playoff for the conference championship the Tar Heels marched. Again, with a sophmore infested squad the Tar Heels of 1959 will be the team to fear.

Carolina Wins Conference Championships

And so it went, even in the minor sports. Carolina came out on top more often than not. The Cross-Country team won the conference title. The swimming team turned the same trick as did the tennis squad. Dave Scurlock made the rounds on the indoor track meet boards, and week after week brought the nation's attention to Carolina as he swept through middle distance opposition.

The Track Team came through with a second in the conference indoor championships, as did the golfers in the ACC tournment with Tar Heel Billy Thornton winning the individual title. Outdoors the tracksters placed third. Both the soccer and wrestling squads finished their season with winning records. The wrestlers advanced three men to the conference finals.

Just To Mention A Few

Many names are in these history notes. Buddy Payne, Jack Cummings, Pete Brennan, Joe Quigg, Tommy Kearns, Bobby Cunningham, Al Pons, Carson Oldham, Wayne Young, Ben Harding, Dave Scurlock, Everett Whatley Wayne Bishop, Perrin Henderson, David Wall, Ted Youhanna, Mac Mahaffy, Walt Rose, Bill Roth, Tony Schiffman, Bill Zickgraf, Bob Bortner, Billy Thornton, Gene Lookabill, Steve Bank, Tom Langley, Roger Honeycutt. All of these plus many many more have made this year a successful one on the Carolina sports scene.

In the past the Daily Tar Heel has tried to select the five top athletics of the year. To pick five from the list above that are more deserving than the others listed or the others that haven't been mentioned here seems impossible to the ram, so he is going to take the easy but the sensible-way out and name them all to the honor what ever the Daily Tar Heel can bestow upon them by saying thanks for a wonderful year of sports.

Heels In Play-Off For Flag Monday

By RUSTY HAMMOND

Tomorrow night, in Gastonia, the two top teams in the Atlantic Coast Conference will vie for the pennant in a single sudden-death play-off game and the right to enter the NCAA District 5 play-offs. Carolina, the Cinderella team of the year, will meet Clemson, the very surprised old pros, and the winner gets all the marbles.

The clubs sport identical 11-3 conference slates, and have split the two games they played each other. Clemson took the first game, at Clemson, with Harold Stowe getting the win and Wayne Young absorbing the loss. At Chapel Hill, the score was exactly reversed with the Tar Heels coming out on top. The pitchers were reversed, too. Young handed Stowe his first loss of the year.

Carolina, the darkhorse of the conference, is perhaps the hottest team in the league. The Heels have swept 12 of their last 14 games, including three of the last four games of the season.

Two Carolina pitchers, Johnny Johnson and Wayne Young, combined to limit Wake Forest to four hits and give the Tar Heels a clutch 1-0 victory over the Deacs in the final game of the seasson.

The Clemson Tigers, who at one time lead the league with a phenomenal 8-0 record, started fast but slowed badly in the heat of the race. Clemson's loss to Duke is all that prevented them from winning the pennant without such a game after the season.

On the mound tomorrow night, for Carolina it will be either Young or Ben Harding. For Clemson, the undoubtable starter is their ace lefty, Harold Stowe.

The Tar Heels had a truly remarkable record at home, winning all twelve of the home games without a loss. The only black mark was a 7-7 tie with VPI.

Coach Walt Rabb, for many years chairman of the NCAA baseball tourney, for the first time has a chance to enter a team in the event. Rabb, who did a great job with his predominately sophomore team, was chosen by the Durham Herald as ACC coach of the year. Congratulations, Coach Rabb, and well deserved they are!

Here's hoping our Tar Heels can come through tomorrow night as they have all season when they chips were down. Win or lose, they have had a great season and we are proud of them. The DTH closes shop with this issue so we urge you to read the state papers and follow your team. Once again, good luck to Rabb and Company!

Dave Scurlock Wins 880 At Los Angeles

Carolina's middle-distance star and conference champion in the 880 and 440, won the Coliseum Relay's 880 yard dash Friday night in Los Angeles clocking 1:50.5.

Carolina's other entry, Wayne Bishop, was not among the top three in the 2-mile, and it is not known how well he finished.

Scurlock, barely edged Occidental's Jimmy Cerveny who placed second clocking 1:50.9. Ernie Cunliffe of Stanford was third in 1:51.2. The World's outdoor 880 record holder Arnie Sowell was entered in the event, but wire reports do not say whether or not he ran.

This was the same meet the Australian runner Herb Elliott ran the mile in the amazing time of 3:57.8, breaking the world's record of 3:58 held by Australian John Landy.

Merchants Plan Big Welcome

One of the most extensive welcomes ever given new Tar Heels by the Chapel Hill-Carrboro Merchants' Assn. has been planned by the 152-member association.

Next Monday has been set for the big day when local merchants will hold open houses for the new students.

Various souvenirs and gifts, such as key chains, ball point pens and ashtrays, will be given away. Free movies will be shown at both theatres that day for all new students. An information booth will be maintained all day, with maps and newspapers to be given away, as well as additional copies of the classified membership directory. Radio broadcasts from the booth are also planned.

GIFT CERTIFICATES

Thirty gift certificates for $10 each will be given away in a campus quiz contest. Students can enter the contest in as many stores as they wish, and the names of the winner in each individual store will be turned in to the Merchants' Assn office.

On Tuesday, 30 of those names will be drawn, and those 30 persons will each receive a $10 gift certificate redeemable in member stores. The names of the winners will be published in The Daily Tar Heel and other local newspapers.

Four different sets of quiz blanks will be distributed to provide variety. Prizes will also be awarded to winners at some of the individual stores.

New students also will be invited to establish credit in the local stores by getting their parents to authorize charge accounts with any association member. The credit bureau here will handle all the arrangements, according to Mrs. Jane Whitefield, executive secretary of the association.

Some Of The Big Men Gather To Talk Things Over

Shown above (left to right) discussing the current state of affairs are: Robert House, chancellor of the University here at Chapel Hill who is scheduled to retire next June; John Motley Morehead, the University's greatest benefactor and a noted philanthropist who built the Morehead Sundial, the Morehead Planetarium, and also helped build the Bell Tower and gives numerous scholarships to students here at UNC each year; Kerr Scott, one of North Carolina's U. S. senators, and Frank P. Graham, former president of the Consolidated University and mediator for the United Nations.

Housing Situation Serious As Three-Man Rooms And Basements Are Put To Use

By CHARLIE SLOAN

Three-man rooms and crowding into dormitory basements will again be the lot of University students this fall.

Everyone of the 3,010 spaces in the men's dorms have been filled, about one hundred students will be assigned to dormitory basements and many men are being referred to apartments and rooming houses in Chapel Hill, James Wadsworth, Director of the Housing Office said recently.

Women's Dormitories have been filled to capacity, and with the exception of Connor, Winston, Joyner and Cobb, all the men's dorms will have three-man rooms. This includes medical, dental and law students.

Shortly after the Second World War, according to Wadsworth, the Housing Office had to send students to Durham to find living quarters.

He added that many of them reached the campus and returned to their rooms by hitch hiking.

MARRIED STUDENTS

Housing married students is a growing problem in universities across the nation. At Carolina there are 500 names on the waiting list for Victory Village, where homes are priced from $30 to $40 a month. Wadsworth estimates that it will take a year or more to accommodate the students currently on the list.

Openings in the established apartments and rooming houses in Chapel Hill for married students are becoming scarcer as the first day of classes approaches, Wadsworth said.

The University has only eight new apartments this fall. There has been a lot of building in the Chapel Hill area, but because of the cost of construction, it would not be practical for the owners to rent the quarters at rates the ordinary married student can afford.

The three new dorms which were approved last spring have not yet been started. Wadsworth speculated that this was due to affairs arising in connection with letting contracts. Construction of the proposed addition to Spencer dorm has not been begun.

With the advent of entrance examinations, enrollment at the University might level off.

WITH SEVERAL EXCEPTIONS:

Freshmen Can't Have Cars On UNC Campus

With the exception of veterans, physically handicapped persons and commuters, no freshman will be allowed to own an automobile this year.

According to Ray Jefferies, assistant to the dean of student affairs, the students falling under the three exceptions to the "no freshman cars" rule must petition his office for a ruling on whether or not they are eligible for a parking permit.

Violators of the rule are subject to administrative action, said Jefferies. He explained that it will be all right for freshmen to borrow the cars of upper classmen, but if he sees a freshman driving the same car frequently he will "get suspicious."

PARKING FEE

A fee of $2.50 will be charged for student parking stickers this year. The money collected will be put into a fund for future parking facilties.

Jefferies said he intends to be strict with violators of the ruling requiring all students to display parking stickers within 24 hours of their arrival on campus.

State College issues a $10 fine for parking violators, and Jefferies said he has recommended the same amount for violators here.

Rather than obtaining money for future parking, Jefferies said the reason for registering automobiles is to "prevent students from getting in trouble."

Students will be able to register their cars at registration, or in the Dean of Student Affairs Office, Jefferies said.

STUDENT COURT

Jefferies said the newly established student traffic court will handle cases involving students whose cars do not display parking stickers and glagrant violators of Chapel Hill traffic and parking regulations.

The court will have the power to recommend that cars be sent home, and will be backed up by the administration. According to Jefferies, one of the reasons the court was established was to take some of the work load off the honor courts.

Freshmen who claim they do not own a car at registration, and later are discovered to be car owners will be violating the honor code, said Jefferies.

REGULATIONS

As in the past, there will be no parking except by staff cars and visitors on the campus between the hours of 7 and 3, Monday through Saturday.

The campus is defined as the area bounded by Franklin St., Columbia St. and the Pittsboro Rd., Raleigh St. and Raleigh Road.

The town of Chapel Hill has limited parking on Columbia St. to one hour and eliminated all parking on Rosemary St.

Phi Eta Sigma Is Honorary For Freshmen

Phi Eta Sigma is a national honorary fraternity for freshmen who gain high averages in their work.

Comparable to Phi Beta Kappa, scholastic honorary fraternity for upper classmen, members are taken in at the end of the first semester, and others are admitted at the end of the second semester.

Many outstanding freshmen have gone on to make Phi Beta Kappa with a good start as a freshman.

In 1889

In 1889 the University stood at the forefront of American universities and had the second largest student body in America.

Popular Hypnotist Will Entertain Frosh Here

Franz Polgar, world renowned hypnotist and a frequent visitor to the Carolina campus, will present a show Saturday at 8 p.m. in Memorial Hall.

Admission will be free. The show is being presented for the benefit of new students, but the public is invited.

The show will feature a performnce of telepathy, memory feats and hypnosis. Polgar, who last appeared on the University campus last summer, claims he is able to hypnotize a group of ten or twenty volunteers from the audience at will.

He then makes them do anything he wishes. In the past, he has made them fall asleep at his command, shiver at his suggestion that it's suddenly gotten cold, and just as swiftly perspire when he tells them it is unbearly hot. He also says he can walk down a line of 100 people and be introduced to each one, then go back up the line and identify every one of them by name.

Polgar takes those under his hypnotic control on a plane trip, and puts glsses on them and makes them think these glasses enable them to see through clothing.

He has also been known to find his check by mental process after it has been given to someone in the audience. Polgar has long been popular with Carolina students, and all new students should attend his highly entertaining program.

192 UNC Students Attend 'Y' Camp

Approximately 192 freshmen were on hand for the YMCA-sponsored Freshman Camp which opened Monday.

Bob Leonard, a junior from Hendersonville, was director of the camp this year.

The camp is sponsored each year to help students meet problems of adjustment to college life and to inform them of opportunities at the University. Held at Camp New Hope, seven miles from Chapel Hill, Freshman Camp precedes the orientation program for all new students.

Thirty-two upperclassmen acted as counselors. The freshmen were grouped in cabins corresponding to their dormtory assignments so they could get acquainted before the semester officially opens.

Included in the program were discussions on the role of religion in college life, adjustment problems, the pros and cons of fraternity membership, a faculty-freshman softball game, and a faculty-led panel on the meaning of a college education.

Also included in the activities were a faculty-freshmen picnic, to give the new students a chance to meet informally with faculty members and discuss problems with them.

Among the faculty and administration members and others who were on hand were: Acting President William Friday, Chancellor Robert B. House, Dean Cecil Johnson of the General College, Coach Jim Tatum, and Roy Armstrong, director of admissions.

Other people who took part in the program were Sam Magill, director of student activities; the Rev. Harry Smith, minister to students of the First Presbyterian Church; Claude Shotts, general secretary of the University YMCA, apd Gerry Mayo, YMCA president.

Ministers of Chapel Hill churches were guests at one session of the camp.

Freshmen Deferred During First Year

All duly enrolled college freshmen will be deferred from Selective service induction until the end of their first year, according to Gen. Carlyle Shepard, UNC veteran's advisor.

Those who finish their first year in the upper one-half of the class will be deferred through their second year.

Gen. Shepard also announced that he is available at his office at 315 South Building to answer questions of any student regarding draft status.

1956-57 SCHOOL YEAR OPENS:

Orientation Of 1,800 New Students Begins Full Operation Today

Orientation for approximately 1,800 new students began last night at a general assembly in Memorial Hall. Freshmen girls, nurses and dental hygienists met in Gerrard Hall.

The program gets into full swing today and will continue through next Thursday. Orientation Chairman Bill McLean, who yesterday issued a statement to all new students, said:

"I am happy to welcome you to a school you will learn to love.

"Now why come to school this early before classes begin? You could be working or you could be playing. Why add an extra week of school?

"Well, this week could very likely affect your whole four years at Carolina. Maybe you will be acquainted with a new approach to an old subject or a new activity.

"We certainly hope this happens.

"May you are having a hard time finding your way around. By the end of orientation week, you should know buildings and facts about Carolina which on your own would take years.

"It is the earnest hope of student counselors, faculty and administration that you no longer be a novice after orientation week, but a full-fledged member of the Carolina community.

"We want you to know that these groups that are interested in your development in the Carolina way of life are ready at all times to assist you.

"Don't hesitate to call on them. Good luck in all your endeavors at Carolina."

Today's program includes physical examinations for men, group meetings for freshmen, tours, women's welcome convocation, placement tests in Chemistry, Math and foreign Languages.

The official Welcome Assembly will be held in Memorial Hall at 8:30 p.m., and a film entitled "In The Name of Freedom" will be shown.

Major parts of tomorrow's agenda are a meeting of all upper college transfer men, group meetings for freshmen, English placement test for those not tested prior to orientation, school and college aptitude tests, O. S. U. tests for women, business administration, Journalism, education and arts and sciences transfers, A. C. E. test for freshmen not tested prior to orientation, Kuder test for women, open house at Lenior Hall, Greek and Latin placement tests and special entertainment by Polgar, world renowned hypnotist, in Memorial Hall.

UNC Folks Have Lots Of Freedom

Here at the University, students have an unusual amount of freedom, as student freedoms go. Aside from the fairly detailed regulations governing coeds, the general rules of conduct here are few and simple.

Only three activities are expressly forbidden by student law: Lying, cheating, and stealing. The student law proscribing these activities is known as the Honor Code. The mode of conduct which it seeks to encourage is called the Honor System. It makes sense for all students to know what the code is, how the system operates, and what happens when the system, for some reason, breaks down in an individual case.

The code itself is simple: A student is on his personal honor to refrain from lying, cheating or stealing.

Every year, however, there are students who find these simple demands too hard to follow. In a University of this size, it is expected that some students who enter here will be unable to face up to the responsibilities of personal honor.

These students find great temptation in the fact that many tests and exams are not monitored by instructors. This same type of student has been known to take advantage of the willingness of those in authority to accept a student's word of honor. Moreover, cases of thefts committed by students have not been entirely unknown.

THE CHEATER

Of the three types of offenders, the cheater can hurt more people more of the time than the liar and the thief combined.

In many courses here, grades are awarded "on the curve;" that is, the high man in the class, regardles of his numerical grade average, receives an "A," and the rest of the class is scaled proportionately.

A cheater in such a class is not cheating himself, he is cheating everybody in the group. His illegal high grade serves to move everyone else down a notch, and in many cases this could mean that he who would have passed will fail, he who would have made Phi Eta Sigma will not, he who would have stayed in the University cannot, etc.

RESPONSIBILITY

Students alone have the responsibility for enforcing the honor system. For this purpose, students elect members of the Men's and the Women's Honor Councils, judicial bodies with power to try accused students and to impose sentences which include suspension and expulsion.

One Of Every Four Students Is Veteran

Freshmen who have recently shed a uniform of the Armed Forces will soon learn that veterans on the UNC campus are far from rare.

One of every four students seen in the classroom this fall will be a former serviceman.

The UNC veteran's advisor, Gen. Carlyle Shepard, expects 1,700 ex-servicemen to claim their GI benefits this fall. This will be an increase of 200 over the number enrolled last year.

All but six of this year's veterans will be receiving benefits under the Korean War Bill (Public Law 550).

Korean veterans that are newcomers to UNC should report to the Women's Gymnasium (behind Woollen gym) September 18 or 19 to make application with the UNC veterans' office for their benefits.

After this initial application, a certification of attendance must be filed each month at the veterans' office at 315 South Building. This consists of simply filling out a short form and handing it to the secretary. It must be done between the 25th and 30th of each month.

On or about the 20th of each month, the checks for the previous month's attendance are mailed to student veterans.

Caroline Coed

The young lady above possesses the typical beauty that will be seen in many Carolina coeds this year. She is Miss Libby McDowell, who represented Chapel Hill in the North Carolina Beauty Pageant held at Morehead City last summer.

For The New Thinkers: Hope Lies In The Mind

A freshman, attending the University for the first time, may be short on poise, security, money and a dozen other things. But the University makes sure there is no shortage of one thing—advice.

So, in line with past editorials to the freshmen, herewith is our advice:

Don't be afraid to be different.

There are certain limits to what you can wear, say and do while you are at the University, but there is no boundary on your mind.

A freshman's mind should be free, and it should be kept free. If it loses its freedom, the University will graduate in four years a class of inneffectual simpletons, ready and willing to follow whenever anyone else beckons.

But how, you will ask, could a freshman's mind be anything but free? How could he be anything but different?

We can only answer that we have seen freshmen come to this University with free minds. We have seen them lose their freedom of thought, their freedom to think differently.

This precious freedom can be lost in many ways. Perhaps the easiest way is through fear.

It is easier, for instance, to agree with the other fellow simply because you fear he will dislike you if you disagree. It is easier not to argue with the professor when you disagree because you are scared of him.

It is much easier to become an academic sheep, to follow blindly, bleating through four years of college. But the freshman who becomes a sheep has turned into a coward.

There is a great conformity of thinking on the campuses of the United States today. No one knows exactly why, but it is evident to everyone who looks even half-closely.

The University of North Carolina, its historians recall, used to be a center of liberal thought. At one time you were almost a range if you didn't think liberally.

It is different now. While the town and the University remain the citadel of liberal thought for this state, the strange people no longer are the conservative thinkers—they are the liberals.

The increasing pressure of state politics has been blamed for this phenomenon. A cowardly generation of college students has also been blamed.

Wherever the blame lies, this fact remains:

Part of the hope—precisely one-fourth of the hope—for the preservation of the freedom of man's mind in the United States lies in the groups of freshmen who are gathering this week in campuses around the country.

If those freshmen keep their minds open, if they refuse to become academic sheep and cowards, if they will stand up and speak their honest convictions before everyone else (whether or not they be popular convictions) then they will have struck a hard blow against the conformity of mind that is creeping across the country.

We could ask nothing more of this freshman class.

And Coeds: Our Arms Are Open

And here's some advice for the new Caroline Coeds:

If ever there was a place for females to get interested in extra-curriculars, this is it.

The woman's place on this campus is not in the lounges of the coed dorms; nor is it in the sorority house kitchens. It is everywhere.

In practically every campus organization (with the exception of the athletic teams) the coeds are invited to join, work and direct. That includes everything from student government organizations and The Daily Tar Heel to church groups and the Cardboard.

Coeds who work in campus organizations receive an everlasting feeling of self-satisfaction. They also can show to their Carolina Gentleman friends that the woman's place is not necessarily in the home.

And, in case you haven't thought of it yet, it's a dandy way to make friends among the male population.

One Legend Isn't True

There are many legends about Chapel Hill. Some of them are true. But the one about the country club is false.

For years now, people around the state have been referring to the University as the "Country Club" in the Tar Heel educational system.

If you don't know already, you will find out in a couple of weks: Carolina isn't a country club.

The students who think it's a pleasure resort, a place to escape the draft for four years either (1) Discover it is a place of serious study, and change their habits accordingly, or (2) Fail out of school and get drafted.

The students who stay are usually the ones who have found the correct mixture of studies and extra-curriculars.

They blend the two together, and get something good out of their four years here.

These are the well-adjusted people, the people the country-clubbers envy.

And it has been found that the better-adjusted people in later life are those who carefully blend their social and intellectual lives. The wise freshman will do well to apply the same rule here.

No Beanies This Side Of Durham

As a brand-new freshman, you probably have started to feel a little bad about one thing:

Only three months ago you were on the top of the heap. You were seniors, and you had the respect of all the freshmen, sophomores and juniors. But now you are back on the bottom.

Well, here's some consolation: While you're at Carolina, you probably won't be asked more than a dozen times what class you are in. You won't wear a beanie. (Freshmen at the other university, over in Dook territory, we hear, are distinguished by their beanies. When they grow older, they are distinguished by their air of superiority.)

Most people here—even lots of third-year coeds — really don't care what class you're in. They care about what sort of person you are.

So there's really no need to worry about being a freshman: It's a nice occupation for a year.

But make sure it doesn't last longer than a year.

The Daily Tar Heel

The official student publication of the Publications Board of the University of North Carolina, where it is published daily except Sunday, Monday and examination and vacation periods and summer terms. Entered as second class matter in the post office in Chapel Hill, N. C., under the Act of March 8, 1870. Subscription rates: mailed, $4 per year, $2.50 a semester; delivered, $6 a year, $3.50 a semester.

DR. FRANK REMEMBERS HIS UNIVERSITY TOWN:

Chapel Hill: A Chapel For Spirit, A Hill For Increasing The Vision

Dr. Frank Graham

(Dr. Frank Porter Graham, who is better known around here as "Dr. Frank," has done as much as any person of any generation to mold the shape of the University's present and future. A former president of the University, he is now contributing his energies to creation of East-West understanding in the United Nations. Here, he remembers Chapel Hill.)

Chapel Hill, in the midst of primeval forests, hills and streams, as the beautiful seat of the original University of the people and as the lovely village home of a friendly folk, is rich in both its historic heritage and its humane hopes.

The strategic little University village has been for more than a century and three score years the symbol of struggles, advances, frustrations and struggles again. The words denote a Chapel for deepening the spirit of youth and a Hill for heightening the vision of the people.

The class rooms and playing fields, the historic buildings from other centuries, the moss-covered rock walls, the ancient oaks, the memorial bell tower and cupolas, the monumental laboratories, herbarium arboretum, planetarium, institutes, graduate and professional schools. Memorial Hospital, Extension Division and Communication Center, discussion forums, music hall, theatre and art galleries, dormitories and fraternity houses, village homes, flower gardens, streets and a store, campus walks vivid with students on the way to classes and gathering places for zestful youthful talk before and after the hour, the bells ringing early in the morning and youth singing in the evening, the alumni returning for the renewal of associations and fealties to alma mater beyond price in the brotherhood of the University, past, present and yet to be — all these are a part of the connotations of the life and spirit of Carolina.

Inherent in the place are the liberty and learning of the self-governing community of teachers and scholars, the tested wisdom of the ages and the venturesome idealism of youth in the campus democracy.

On-going with old and recurring problems for fresh and zestful mastery, student self-government develops the self-discipline of defeat, without bitterness, and of victory, without vain glory, in the common duties and civic sense of the general life, on the way from the campus to the commonwealth, as old as the University and as fresh as the hopes of youth.

SHADEFUL TREES

Under its shadeful trees, within its ivy-clad halls, and under its steepled towers, religion, without cant, would undergrid, and learning, without bias, would enlighten young men and women in their quest for truth, goodness and beauty.

It is in the tradition and hope of the college that youth win freedom without license, find and publish facts without fear, organize knowledge logically, interpret the truth clearly without slanting, develop democracy without vulgarity, active excellence without pride, strengthen lasting friendships and high loyalties above all vicissitudes, serve private and public causes without patronage or bending, become leaders of the people without demagoguery, and grow in reverence in the way and spirit of Him who, under the Fatherhood of God, would have us all become more truly the children of one God and the brothers of all people.

I NOW RECALL . . .

Above many scenes, faces and events which now come to mind . . . I now recall an episode which expresses the sense of the oneness of the University community and still shines through the shadows of a dark time.

The Great Depression had brought in its train foreclosed farms, bankrupt enterprises, closed banks, the mounting state deficits, increasing legions of unemployed, desperate and almost defeated men and women.

Mothers and fathers all over the land communicated their anxieties to the children of the Depression. The State of North Carolina made heavy cuts in the state budgets and horizontal slashes in the low salaries and wages of the staffs of all state institutions.

In the midst of emergency pressures an invitation came from the Janitors' Assn. requesting the University president to attend their appointed meeting. He gladly went and expected to hear a justifiable petition that the janitors, if possible, should not be cut the full amount of the horizontal cut.

A decision had been made, with the advice and approval of the faculty's own elected advisory committee, to make the cut less in the lowest brackets and to absorb the difference in the larger cuts to be made in the highest brackets.

This policy had not yet been announced and was then unknown to the janitors. We were thus prepared to tell this to the janitors for whatever little value it might have in their hard-pressed situation.

The meeting opened with the regular procedures and characteristic dignity of the association. A chosen spokesman was recognized to state the case for the janitors.

He spoke not a word about their own difficult situation. The concern spoken eloquently by him and others was only for the plight of the students caught short of funds by the closing of all banks.

They had heard that the Student Loan Fund was running out and that the students were unable to pay the University and other creditors. Therefore, to help out as much as they were able to do, the spokesman said that the janitors had raised a small fund to put in the Loan Fund for students and hoped it would, when added to such other funds, help both the students and the University to come through the hard times.

This example of sacrifice and sense of common loyalty had its moving part in helping to raise in alumni meetings and other conferences approximately $150,000 in cash for the Student Loan Fund at the bottom of the depression. The students borrowed from the Loan Fund and paid the University.

The University, stricken by the heavy cuts and blows, came through to better days. The janitors revealed the living Biblical truth that those with the least in income can give the most in soirit. They made deep and personal the fact that we are members of one University family.

In the fellowship of learning and struggle, the University teaches us that we are one community in heritage and hope, loyalty and sacrifice.

The ties that bind us all reach from the Old East Building to the Morehead - Patterson Memorial Bell Tower, from Davie Poplar to Kenan Stadium, from Battle Forest to Hill Hall, from libraries to laboratories, teachers to students, janitors to Kenan Professors, from centuries gone to centuries yet to come, from the immortal dead to eternal youth, in the light, liberty and brotherhood of the University of the people by whom it was given birth and for whom it lives to serve in spirit and in truth from generation to generation.

THE ETERNAL CHAPEL HILL
. . . a place of hearts and souls and minds

DR. FRANK GRAHAM

CAROLINA CAROLEIDOSCOPE:

Thoughts About The University: Notes On Piloting Your Own Ship

Frank Crowther

(Columnist Crowther, like Managing Editor Johnson above, is usually a tough man. But when he writes about Chapel Hill, he remembers very sentimental things.)

In the next days and weeks you will direct many questions to your classmates, your professors, and to yourselves. Among those may be:

"Just what kind of a place is Chapel Hill?"

"What is expected of me?"

"Why am I here, anyhow?"

Each of these is justified. After all, this is—we trust—to be your home for the next four years. You should want these and, eventually, many others answered.

MORE WORDS

Well, all we can do is add to the already many thousands of plain and fancy words, phrases, sentences, paragraphs, editorials, stories and books written in attempts to answer the first question.

One almost feels compelled — after having been infected with Chapel Hillitis — to attempt to capture its stray moments, experiences and feelings:

The warmth of a summer afternoon that covers you with contentment; the despair of a dripping fall morning that gilds your loneliness; the bite of winter tensing your muscles during a January walk to the library; spring's arrival seeming to ooze the stopper from your bottle of fevered emotions and winterized energies; shrugging your shoulders and going to class unprepared, knowing you will be spotlighted the moment you enter the classroom; listening while in the barber's chair to Chancellor House and Paul Green as they discuss the creative processes, Shakespeare, higher education, and agnostics; sitting on the rock wall in front of Battle-Vance-Pettigrew and rhythmically bouncing your shoes on the stones while casually, almost disinterestedly, watching the passing parade and mulling over a few thousand things; morally supporting the squirrels in their unceasing flight from the Chapel Hill canine citizenry; and, finally, as Dr. Frank P. Graham put it, " . . . a Chapel for deepening the spirit of youth and a Hill for heightening the vision of the people."

These are but a few of the many "moments to remember" you may have to savor . . . or pass over unnoticed.

EXPECTED

And what is expected of you?

Sincere effort. No one is to blame but yourself for any type of failure. Your previous examinations have proved that you possess the capabilities and meet the standards of the University.

You must build and captain your own ship from now on. Do not try crying or pleading or self-pity or rationalizing or postponement. Come out of the shell; expose yourself and enjoy it.

And why are you here?

To answer this, we must look at the basic essentials and prerequisites. Examine yourself, for once, instead of those around you. Get outside yourself and look back in. Get up in a strong tree and look down with a new perspective. Unless the basic drive is there, unless there is sincerity, unless there is good, no fruit will be borne.

Only you can make it bear the fruit and only you can retain the fruit's stains. "It is only with the heart that one can see rightly; what is essential is invisible to the eye."

And don't be a college "passman;" we can all pass in life.

Some men are born great; some make themselves great; others have their greatness thrust upon them; but, they all have the same basic qualities of honesty, sincerity, goodness, loyalty, justness, and fear of, respect for and faith in their God.

JUST SITTING AND WATCHING LIFE GO BY
. . . mulling over a few thousand things

This Is Center Of Free Thought

Charlie Johnson

(Writer Johnson is The Daily Tar Heel's managing editor, a position usually calling for lots of grumbling and a rather sarcastic outlook on life. But when Managing Editor Johnson returned to the campus this year, he couldn't help but get a little sentimental about Chapel Hill.)

Chapel Hill and the University make a unique community. The town and Carolina are so interposed that they are unseparable.

The melting pot of North Carolina adequately describes this locality. People of all races, creeds, religions and nationalities live and work here and get along because they are all seeking the basic things of life.

This is a liberal community, and Carolina is a liberal university. Freedom of thought and belief abounds here with practically no obstruction other than the expression of opinion by the fellow with the opposite viewpoint.

Students who come here grow into the community and begin to love it.

What is here that attracts and becomes dear to so many?

Is it its liberal atmosphere, its serenity, its beauty or its opportunity for anyone who seeks it?

Or maybe it's the friendliness and brotherhood that exist here. It could be football and the thrill that goes with seeing Kenan Stadium packed to the top rows to see the sons of Carolina give all they've got to win for UNC.

One who comes and lives here will always remember the noisy hustling and bustling of classes, football weekends and Y-Court . . . the beauty of the Arboretum in springtime . . . CU Day, with hundreds of WC girls milling around . . . that cute little coed you spent many happy hours with . . . a professor who instilled many ideals in you . . . the night you drank coffee all night to stay awake to study for a final . . . or to await the outcome of an election . . . extra-curricular activities that interested you . . .

It has often been said that when a person leaves here and returns, he will always find someone he knows, usually just by running into them on the streets.

Some remember the echo of cheers at football games, the first game they go to, the Bell Tower wafting out its sweet sounds through the many pines and the Alma Mater being sung at the end of a game—a game that may have ended in defeat for the home team, but the song still means as much.

The day you slept through a quiz and begged your prof to let you take it late, the old familiar sound of "Go! Tar Heels, Go!" resounding through Woollen Gym to urge on a cage victory—all these will remain with you.

Some of you will stay less than a semester, a semester, one, two and three or four years or more; and, some of you will stay here for life. You may leave, but its been said before—"They always come back."

Fraternity or sorority rush just in the thick of your studies . . . dancing at the Patio to a pop tune . . . all night parties for Germans . . . the thousands of friends you meet . . . these will forever flood your mind.

It's hard to say what people see in this place, but stay here a while and you'll know . . . You can't explain it, but you can feel it. It isn't taught in text books, nor is it on file in the library. It's just a feeling, and a great one at that.

Campus Landscapes Offer Inspiration

University of North Carolina Magazine
Circa 1860

The College Campus is now arrayed in all the charms of Nature assisted by the fostering hand of Art, and the soft, balmy air is perfumed by the almost eternal flowers that bloom in vernal beauty along the works that lead from the Buildings to the Village.

If it be true that the noblest traits of character and intellectual progress and development are the effects of such natural scenery — if it be true that it is owing to such scenes as these that a Wallace and a Tell were reared, and if "the untrammelled element of liberty, the safeguard of religion and virtue" be there nourished to bloom and bless the world — then, surely, it is fortunate for students here that such gay, smiling landscapes spread out before them, with forests, hills and valleys extending in majestic grandeur and the freshness of perpetual morning far away to the distant limits of the horizon . . .

Bachelor Life Can Be Casual

By CHARLIE SLOAN

Columnist Sloan, an associate editor of The Daily Tar Heel, has put some time in University dormitories. But his secreted hotplate got found, and now he lives in a fraternity house.)

Most of the many facets of life at Tar Heelia-on-Franklin St. have been described, extolled or generally drooled over in other parts of this issue.

However, there is one phase of University existence that draws little attention, but takes up most of everybody's time. For the sake of convenience it can be called Carolina Homelife.

Naturally, Carolina Ladies are very much aware of this situation, and domesticity in the women's dorms is more or less passed over rather casually, according to reports from the inside.

But, to the Carolina Gentleman facing a heavy date with nothing but dirty socks, there is some real meaning to "I have to rinse out a few things." Of course he could meet his lady-fair bare-footed or in sandals, but . . .

While the young man in question is working on his argyles, his roommate — which one does not really matter — will usually start whipping up supper. Cooking is not allowed in the dorms — draws ants and things. So the hot plate comes out of the bottom of the trunk, the milk off the window sill, and the other necessary items from similar storage places.

MUSIC

Now add music. Carolina Homelife is not a silent affair. First, tune in the latest rock and roll hit, put some Brahms on the hi-fi down the hall, tell the dorm's bath tub baritone to sing a little louder and call in the trumpeter from the dorm next door for a jam session. The musical stage is almost set.

For added satisfaction, get a group together, and serenade coeds passing under the window with the good old college songs. The ones with the unprintable titles are best.

Dorm wall decoration varies from room to room, with taste ranging from "Still Life of a Fruit Bowl With Half Eaten Apple" to Marilyn Monroe and Diana Dors. Pennants, girl friends' pictures and last week's shirt are hung impartially from available outcroppings in the wall.

How To Look Best

How to present your prettiest and very best self during the rapid succession of rush parties is probably a weighty question in the minds of many incoming Caroline Coeds.

In the rush manual, there is a sketchy description of what-to-wear for each party, but with the variable weather prevalent in Chapel Hill, this list often needs revising somewhat. Let the type of party guide your selection of dress for the most part.

At a casual affair, your costume should definitely be casual. But, for instance, if sweaters and skirts are the order of the day, and the thermometer soars to 108 in a flurry of Indian Summer enthusiasm, the smart coed wil appear at her polished best in a simple Ivey League skirt and tailored shirt.

ATTITUDE COUNTS

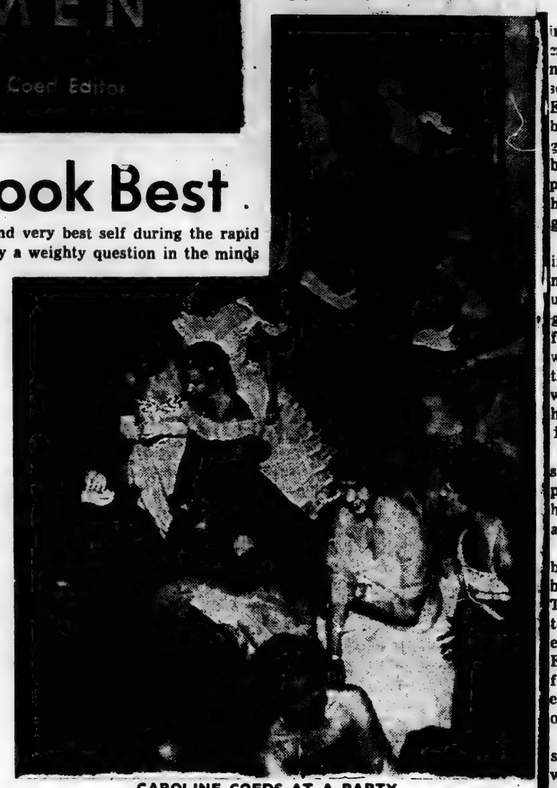
One important thing to remember is that although clothes are important at rush parties, just as they are everywhere, they are definitely not the last word. A natural relaxed attitude plus meticulous grooming will sell you faster than the latest Adele Simpson or Dior creation.

The stores are crammed with the exciting but surprisingly very basic selection of new fall fashions. Bulky knits, slim tailored lines and good tweeds seem to be most popular. Black is back, as important as ever. Loden green is the biggest newcomer, color-wise. The various shades of the brown family are good, with sand and maple sugar the newest and most exciting ones.

If the temperature should plunge, a good knit sheath or a tailored wool dressed up with some simple jewelry would be ideal for the dressy parties. For the teas, most girls will be wearing exactly what they would wear to church, complete with gloves, bag and simple hat. Although some may appear in bouffant, more elaborate dresses, there is no necessity to wear attire of this sort if you feel more at ease in conservative designs.

Simplicity reigns supreme in Chapel Hill. Frills, bangles and faddish ensembles are strictly out of place. Coeds are alert to the latest in good fashion and select the basic styles which appear each season. This year the new blouson look and the high-waisted styles reminiscent of 1912 can easily be worn at Carolina. These lines are appearing in modified forms in wools, jerseys and knits.

SILK SHIRT



The silk shirt might come in handy at one of the dressier parties, highlighting a jumper or in combination with a dressy skirt, perhaps in bold plaid. Dressy blouses in cotton-Dacron are also good.

If the weather actually is cold enough for cashmeres and tweeds, you may be sure they will be worn at the informal parties. White collars frequently spark necklines, and skirts are generally slim with little or no detail. Tailored shirts with good leather belts are always a perfect topping.

JUST TAKES A LITTLE WORK:

Dorm Can Be Nice

Your "home away from home" really can be a joy to live in during your stay at Carolina.

CAROLINE COEDS AT A PARTY
. . . there are informal ones, too

Even with three girls packed into a room, it is quite possible to create an atmosphere of spaciousness and comfort with carefully selected harmonizing furnishings. Each room is equiped with one bureau, closet, desk and bed per girl. Waste paper baskets, bulletin boards, curtains and such are supplied by the inhabitants. Each room has one comfortable chair, but the girls often add sling chairs.

School regulations say no to poking holes in the plaster, but the molding at ceiling level may be used for hanging pictures. Several girls last year hung a mammouth fish net from their molding on which they were able to tack all their souvenirs and pictures. Two-way tape is useful — with careful handling, it may be used without damage to walls.

Notion counters in department stores offer an abundance of inexpensive containers for garments, hats, and shoes for the coed with an eye for a neat-looking closet.

The plastic paper with a sticky back found in dime stores might be used to cover boxes and shelves. This paper is also useful for bureau tops, for spilled cosmetics can be easily wiped off with a damp cloth. Even waste paper baskets can reflect your personality by being covered with this same paper, pictures, or magazine covers.

The current color taste in designing seems to be leaning towards the greens and beiges. The popularity of aqua and pink is predicted to end shortly. House & Garden's forecast colours for 1957 includes a wide range of the beiges and off-whites which are assuming great importance in decorating. For accent colors cantaloupe, flame, tangerine, mustard, and saffron are suggested.

Generally a scheme of about three colors or varying shades of one color with an accent of one other is a good rule to follow. Plants always provide a good touch, but it is advisable to have a sturdy one, able to withstand temperature changes and lack of water when you forget.

Parties: Ice Water And Talk

Coeds planning to go through rush will find an imposing schedule of parties on their agenda.

The hectic pace of the sorority rush parties is indeed a memorable experience even for the coed who decides not to pledge one of the six Greek sororities on campus.

At the Panhellenic tea, which begins the festivities, the rushee may expect a minimum of conversation with any individual, for at this time representatives from all groups will be shaking hands and exchanging brief words with each girl planning to attend the following parties.

GET ACQUAINTED

When the parties at the houses begin, the rushee will have a better chance to become acquainted with members of the different groups. She will be entertained in the finest tradition of Southern hospitality at each of the houses.

As rush progresses, the number of rushees dwindles, and everyone has a chance to become better acquainted with her prospective sisters.

During the course of the parties, the rushees will be taken on a tour of each of the houses. Entertainment will be provided in the form of skits and song-fests.

Ice water is served at the first round of parties, but each time thereafter, the refreshments become more complex, with progressive dinners scheduled for the final night.

Not In A Sorority? Join The Independents

The Independent Women's Assn. is the legislative organization of all UNC women students who do not belong to a sorority.

The association is composed of three representatives from each of the women's dorms and three representatives from the Town Girl's Assn.

Its purposes are to promote extra-curricular activities, aid other campus oganizations, provide opportunities for independent coeds to participate in campus activities, make dorms more home-like and to coordinate the activities of independent and sorority girls.

Nearly 200 Expected In School Of Nursing

Dr. Elizabeth L. Kemble, dean of the University School of Nursing, has estimated approximately 200 students will be enrolled in the School of Nursing this coming semester.

Dr. Kemble gave the following estimated number of undergraduate students by classes: freshmen, 61; sophomores, 52; juniors, 41, and seniors, 29.

THE IVY LEAGUE LOOK IS STILL HERE:

Caroline Coed Picks Clothes For Informality And Comfort

The comfortable, casual approach to fashion is highly approved by Chapel Hill coeds.

Obvious at Carolina is the Ivy League look which took the campus by storm last fall and probably will continue in popularity this year. Back-belted skirts and tailored shirts with matching print belts are seen everywhere.

During cold weather coeds don luxurious cashmeres to mix and match with good tweeds, usually slim in line. Bermudas take over on weekends for fraternity cabin parties.

For dressy occasions such as football games, wool sheaths and suits are preferred. Jewelry is simple, with gold and pearl creation worn most of the time. One dazzling pin and tiny button earrings are always in good taste.

According to predictions from the top fashion magazine, Milady will present a more softened appearance this year. Polished elegance with the stress on femininity will prevail.

Vogue's editors say the silk shirt is the key to the coming era. This however, won't mean any radical change in the way UNC coeds will be dressing this year . . . only that they will add a silk, or perhaps a fraile looking, cotton-Dacron shirt with tiny ruffles to wear with velvet or bold plaid skirts.

The costumes which Cecil Beaton designed for the set of "My Fair Lady" have had a thundering impact on the garment industry this fall. The high-waisted look of 1912 is appearing not only in extreme styles, highly unsuitable for college students, but also in modified designs.

The blouson is another big newcomer this season which also appears styled for the college level. Instead of purchasing simply a suit with a box jacket, why not select one with the drawstring hip-length jacket?

As for shoes, they are due to have skinnier-than-ever heels with very pointed toes, but the heel height is apt to be about two inches. Suede is said to be gaining in popularity.

Color-wise, black will predominate with loden green and various shades of brown also important.

Brown and black are good in combination, and sand is an excellent blouse color as a change from stark white.

Four Officers Hold UNC's Government Executive Power

The executive power of student government is vested in four student body officers—president, vice-president, secretary and treasurer. All are elected every spring in campus-wide elections.

President this year is Bob Young, senior of Asheville. The other officers are: Vice-President Sonny Evans, junior of Durham; Secretary Jackie Aldridge, senior coed of Winston-Salem, and Treasurer John Kerr, junior of Warrenton.

Much of the book work is done by the student government executive secretary, who is a hired secretary. This position is now held by Mrs. H. J. Grassman.

The president has the power to appoint various committees, appoint a cabinet, to administer and enforce laws enacted by the Student Legislature, to veto acts of the legislature, to serve as an ex-officio member of all committees and boards. One of his very important duties is to represent the student body of Carolina in all dealings with students of other schools, the University faculty and the University trustees.

The vice-president advances to the office of president should that office become vacant. He also serves as speaker of the Student Legislature and presides over its meetings; this is his most important duty and most of his time is spent at this job.

The secretary maintains all records and files of the student body and arranges for permanent preservation of its archives.

The treasurer disburses all monies appropriated by the Student Legislature and serves as chairman of the Budget Committee.

The president each year delivers a State of the Campus address to the Student Legislature. He gives recommendations and comments of the state of affairs here at Carolina. The president has the power to veto legislation, and then again, legislation is often passed over his veto.

Past presidents have received much criticism in performing their duties, especially in editorials in The Daily Tar Heel.

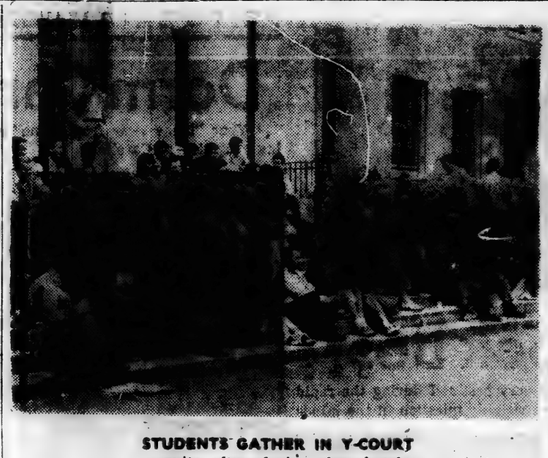
Germans Brings Top Musicians

The German Club is the organization that brings some of the big name entertainers to Carolina. It is an organization of 13 UNC social fraternities and sponsors three big weekend dances during the school year.



In the past the agenda has included such big time musical men as Louis "Satchmo" Armstrong, Les Brown, Ralph Marterie, Johnny Long, Tex Beneke, and Stan Kenton. It is anticipated to have the Four Freshmen this year for one of the dances.

These dances are formal and bids are limited to members only, but anyone wanting to go may usually obtain a bid from some member who does not wish to go.

The German weekends usually include a concert in Memorial Hall and a dance in Woollen Gym. The activities are spread over Friday and Saturday.

These weekends are a time of big parties—those kind that last on and on, usually all night. Students date coeds for these dances, or either date imports from home, WC, Meredith, or one of the many other girls' schools in the surrounding area.

These gala times are often looked forward to with great enthusiasm by some, whereas, others come to Carolina and never attend one of them during their entire college career.

STUDENTS GATHER IN Y-COURT
... quite often during class breaks.

Y-Court Is Center Of UNC's Social Activity

Where's the center of social activity at Carolina? Ask any upperclassman, and he'll tell you that the most popular spot on campus for casual conversation, friendly get-to-togethers, and chats with coeds is a square of asphalt beside South Building known as Y-Court.

The bench-lined square is located in front of the YMCA, where late sleeping students who miss breakfast may grab a cup of coffee and a doughnut during the 10-minute break between classes.

It has been estimated by expert observers that a high percentage of romances here got their start on a bench in Y-Court or perhaps on the steps of South Building.

Y-Court has other uses, in addition to serving the cause of l'amour. Almost any weekday morning, a dedicated scholar may be seen poring over a formidable looking textbook, oblivious to the light hearted trivialities of the world around him, an expression of intent concentration on his face. Ah! A straight "A" student, you say to yourself. Not so. The poor lad probably gave his all for the fraternity cause the night before, and now must do something about that mid-term exam next period.

The administrative moguls in South Building also have a good use for Y-Court. The brass has made Y-Court its favorite retreat from the cares and worries involved in running a University.

For them, Y-Court is a haven. Here they can relax in unsophisticated comfort, rubbing elbows with the man from the lower quad and the lowly freshman from Hicksville, USA.

Y-Court is a common denominator. It serves as a common meeting ground for all those who call Carolina their home. Football heroes, student leaders, deans, campus personalities and just plain old Joe College guys gather; all are one in Y-Court.

They've told you about the Carolina tradition. This is it.

Scabbard & Blade Is ROTC Honorary

The Scabbard and Blade is a national honorary organization for men taking part in the school's Reserve Officers' Training Corp (ROTC).

Each spring several outstanding members of the Air Force and Navy units here are tapped for the organization. Membership is by election only.

South Building Is Home Of UNC's 'Top Brass'

By CLARKE JONES

South Building is the place where most of the Consolidated University and administration officials work.

The first person you will probably see when you walk in is Mrs. Gustav Harrer at the information desk. Called by some the friendliest person in town, she can inform you about almost anything.

Let's skip on down the list and look at other members of the who's who club:

First are the officers of the Consolidated University, very busy men as their activities are divided among Woman's College in Greensboro, N. C. State College in Raleigh and UNC.

William C. Friday, the acting president of the University heads the list. At the age of 35, he is the third youngest man ever to occupy the top executive's chair. He is prominently mentioned as a candidate for the permanent presidency.

HOUSE

Chancellor Robert B. House, who has become almost synonymous with UNC itself, serves in both the Consolidated University and the administration. Being the administrative head at UNC, he represents the school in the University. He is known also for his harmonica playing.

House is facing retirement in July, 1956, due to the automatic retirement age of 65. He will remain at UNC, however, in a teaching capacity.

William D. Carmichael Jr. is the Consolidated University vice president and finance officer. He controls the University purse strings and assists the president on programs of adequate financing through legislative appropriations, foundation grants, endowments, etc.

The University Business Manager, Claude E. Teague, serves as the assistant to the president on matters of University business management activities. He also is the man behind the ball on the new dormitories scheduled to be constructed in the near future. He also faces retirement next July.

Dr. William M. Whyburn is presently serving as acting provost. Before taking over the position in mid-February, 1956, he was the chairman of the UNC Mathematics Dept.

WEAVER

Turning to the UNC administrative side, the two top officials are Dean of Student Affairs Fred Weaver and Dean of Women Miss Katherine Kennedy Carmichael (no relation to the University Finance officer.)

Weaver is on leave of absence this year in order to get a Ph.D degree. Miss Carmichael was away last year touring different colleges and universities to study the history and positions of deans of women in light of economic and cultural changes in this country during and since World War II. Miss Isabelle MacLeod, assistant dean of women, was acting dean of women during Miss Carmichael's absence.

Ray Jefferies serves as assistant to the dean of student affairs.

The director of student activities is Sam Magill, a Carolina student in the late 1940's. He came "home" last year from Davidson College where he was YMCA secretary. He also is an ordained minister.

Miss Martha Decker, who works in the dean of women's office, is the assistant director of student activities.

ARMSTRONG

The man who admitted you to Carolina is Roy Armstrong, the admissions director. His assistant is Charlie Bernard, whom many of you will probably get to know.

Charles M. Shaffer is the director of development. His assistant is Roy Holsten, former director of student activities.

Serving as dean of awards and distinctions is Ernest L. Mackie.

Cecil Johnson, C. P. Spruill and J. Carlyle Sitterson serve as deans of the General College, faculty and the college of arts and sciences, respectively.

Information about draft status can be supplied by Gen. Carlyle Shepard who maintains his office in 315.

Mantovani To Be On SEC Program

Montovani, master of the cascading strings, is one of five top performers scheduled to appear on the student entertainment program this year. Students are admitted free to these SEC programs upon presentation of ID cards.

Metropolitan Opera Soprano Licia Albanese, the General Platoff Don Cossack Chorus, Actor Henry Hull, and Jose Limon and Dance Company will also perform for Carolina students in the coming year.

Mantovani, the international recording sensation and his orchestra of 45, will feature his "New Music" on Dec. 6. This Venetian-born Londoner, who began the era of new music with his first album for London Records, "Waltzing With Mantovani," has currently made many records including 'Cara Mia," which was written for David Whitfield.

A versatile concert figure, Mantovani has music for everybody, be it the 300-year-old "Greensleeves," a serenade by Tschaikowsky, or the strains of "Charmaine," which has come to be his theme song.

COSSACK CHORUS

Also internationally famous is the Gen. Platoff Don Cossack Chorus, directed by Nicholas Kosrukoff, appearing here in its 18th transcontinental tour on Feb. 12, 1957. The booming cossacks have performed in 2,100 concerts in the USA and appeared in 65 countries on six continents. The Chorus is composed of the best vocal and dancing talent of the White Russian emigres, who have fought communism in Russia.

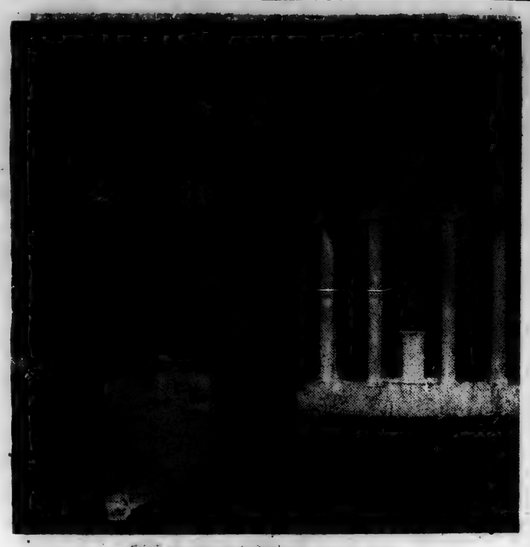
Henry Hull, noted for his performance as Mark Twain, will be presented by the SEC on March 26, 1957. Through his four decades in the theatre he has also distinguished himself in such roles a Malvolio in "Twelfth Night," Jesse Leester in "Tobacco Road," and Edgar Allen Poe in "Plumes in the Dust," along with such plays as "Mr. Roberts," "The Trail of Joan of Arc," and many others. He has also played in "Great Expectations," "Objective Burma," "Lifeboat," and many other movies.

Jose Limon and Dance Company will perform on April 11, 1957. Limon and his dancers recently swept South America, not with native rhythms, but with modern dance selections.

Licia Albanese, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, will open the SEC programs on Nov. 1.

The members of the SEC are: John Kerr, chairman, Joel Carter Don Freeman, George Hamilton, Kai Jergenson, Olin Mouzon, Jimmy Wallace, and Misses Martha Barber and Shiralee and Barbaree Frestwood.

Radio, TV Dept. Is Improved



Another segment of the University is the Dept. of Radio, Television, and Motion Pictures, usually referred to as RTVMP.

The dept. has two operating stations: WUNC, 91.5 on your Frequency Modulation dial and first born; and WUNC-TV, the Consolidated University's educational station operating on Channel 4 from Greensboro, Raleigh, and Chapel Hill.

The department has expanded and improved considerably in the past few years, and today is on of the best known and best respected in the country. Many of the productions have attained national recognition and these were produced, to a large extent, b the students themselves.

"American Adventure," written by John Ehle and directed by John Clayton, was a radio dramatization of "man in the new world," and won the Freedoms Foundation Award two years, first award for two years from the Institute of Radio & Television at Ohio State (rated as one of the highest awards in the country), and was cited this year by the National Conference o Christians & Jews.

One of the outstanding productions of the television station last year was their presentation o William Saroyan's "Hello Out There" in its first TV adaptation The kinescope reproduction o this drama was shown at the Ohio State Conference last May and ha since been well received through out the country.

Old Well Is Memorable Site

The Old Well is a place well-remembered by Carolina students. It stands across from South Building and is surrounded by a walkway and many beautiful flowers. It was rennovated by the graduating class of 1954.

Look At Infirmary Will Come With Physicals

By BILLY BARNES

New students will get a look at the University Infirmary this week when they go there for their physical examinations.

Chances are it won't be a last look; for sooner or later, there will be a sore throat, cold or some other ailment for which they will return for medical treatment.

The present Infirmary building was built during World War II by the University and the U. S. Navy. The Infirmary staff first occupied it in 1946.

It is best entered through the hospital's clinic entrance if one goes there walking, or through the side entrance at the rear of the hospital if one drives over.

The first floor houses the outpatient department, housing consultation rooms, waiting hall and laboratories.

The second floor provides rooms for overnight patients. It boasts some 60 beds, although the average number of students who stay there at one time is from 20 to 25. in the University's Art Dept.

Infirmary doctors say they have the greatest number of patients during January, February and March when respiratory diseases are most common.

Excuses in some cases come from the Infirmary. Students may be excused from classes for medical reasons at the time an illness occurs, if in the judgment of the attending physician, such excuses are justified. It is expected that students will meet their obligations and accept their responsibilities for classroom work.

Excuses are not granted for reasons other than medical nor for trivial complaints where the fulfillment of their obligations does not endanger the students' welfare.

Excuses are not granted at night, Saturday afternoon or Sunday. In the event the student is ill at home, a signed statement by the physician or parent must be presented at the Infirmary before the student can be excused from those classes missed.

Infirmary hours are 9-11:30 a.m. and 2-5 p.m. Monday through Saturday. Sunday hours are 10-11:30 a.m. and 2-5 p.m.

However, the Infirmary's doors never close; emergency cases are received 24 hours a day, including holidays and periods when school is not in session.

The Infirmary has equipment for laboratory work and routine X-rays, plus the opportunity of consulting the staff and using the equipment of the larger Memorial Hospital.

No charge is made for usual treatment because a standard medical fee is including in student fees paid along with tuition.

However, if treatment requires use of Memorial Hospital facilities, the usual hospital expenses must be paid by the student.

FOR ENTERPRISING STUDENTS:

Part Time Jobs Are Open

A great majority of Carolina students earn part of their schooling by working part-time.

If you would like a job, here's what you will have to do.

You will first visit the Student-Aid Office in the basement of Hanes Hall. There you will be interviewed and will tell them the kind of job you are interested in and the kind of work you are capable of doing.

You may have the choice of working for cash or you may like to work for your meals. They will try to land you the position you want. In either case, you can earn up to about half of your expenses by working part time.

Also available are scholarships, loans, and grants-in-aid. These can all be applied for at the Student Aid Office.

If you get a job working for the University it will likely be at Lenoir Hall, Carolina Inn, Graham Memorial, Scuttlebutt, Monogram Club, various libraries or one of the many other university owned places on the campus.

A C average is usually required to keep a job or scholarship but exceptions sometimes can be made. The reason for this requirement is that there are a large number of applicants who would like to have jobs.

Mr. Ed Lanier is the head man and he will likely talk to you before you get approved for a loan, job, scholarship or grant-in-aid. He is the man who will reject or approve your application.

Good grades in high school or your first semester here may earn you a scholarship ranging from $150 to $500 if you have definite financial needs.

The Student Aid Office thinks it best that freshmen not work if at all possible, but they realize that not all can get by without working.

The Student Aid Office is open from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. on weekdays and until noon Saturdays, and have extended a welcome to anyone interested in discussing any phase of the above mentioned program that they handle.

One thing should be pointed out. Approval of the Student Aid Office is not needed if a student wants to work at one of the downtown eating places, theaters, downtown stores, filling stations, fraternity houses or other prigately owned places. In this case, a student is on his own and his job has nothing to do with the Student Aid Office.

Golden Fleece, Valkyries Are Top Honoraries Here

The highest honorary organizations at Carolina are the Order of the Golden Fleece for men and the Valkyries for women.

Golden Fleece members are juniors, seniors, graduate students and faculty members showing the highest character, versatility and ability in University life.

The Order was founded in 1903 through the interest and encouragement of the late Horace Williams. Its purpose is to cut across sectional boundaries of student interest and to honor the outstanding men in all fields of campus endeavor as the occasion should arise.

The tapping of members into the Fleece, which is held each year in public ceremony in Memorial Hall, is the only public function of the Fleece.

The Valkyries is limited to approximately two per cent of the undergraduate coed enrollment. Founded to promote leadership and service among women students, they tap new members in secretive pre-dawn ceremonies.

Members are chose for membership on the basis of leadership, character, scholarship and unselfish service.

OTHER HONORARIES

The Order of the Holy Grail is an honorary service organization composed of outstanding Carolina men selected each year.

Thirteen rising juniors and seniors are honored with membership, six dorm men, six fraternity men, and the delegata, the choice being made largely on character and achievement.

The Grail is dedicated to improving the Carolina way of life by awarding scholarships to deserving students, sponsoring informal dances, handling senior rings and invitations, aiding other organizations and sponsoring campus improvements.

The Order of the Old Well is an honorary organization open to both men and women. Members are selected for their outstanding participation in campus activities by a point system.

Administration Is Mixed Up At Present

The situation concerning the Consolidated University of North Carolina (Woman's College, N. C. State and UNC) is mixed up at present.

How did it get that way? Here's the picture in a nutshell:

Gordon Gray, University president since 1949, obtained a leave of absence last year to become assistant secretary of defense for international security affairs.

In July, 1955, Dr. J. Harris Purks, vice president and provost in charge of assisting Gray on educational matters of the University, became acting president during Gray's absence.

Gray offered his resignation to the Board of Trustees who first refused, then later accepted it. Purks continued as acting president while a nine-man trustee group began searching for a permanent president.

During the first week of January, 1956, Purks was appointed director of the N. C. Board of Higher Education. William C. Friday, then Consolidated University secretary, stepped in as acting president.

On Feb. 13, 1956, Dr. William M. Whyburn, chairman of the UNC Mathematics Dept., was appointed acting provost.

All this "shaking up" has left the Consolidated University with an acting president, an acting provost and a vacancy in the secretary's position, which Friday held before assuming the temporary presidency.

UNC Board Of Trustees Is The Supreme Governing Body

The Consolidated University Board of Trustees is the supreme governing body of the three member schools — Woman's College, N. C. State and Carolina.

Consisting of 100 members, at least ten of whom are women, the trustees have numerous and detailed powers on matters concerning the University. The most important, student-wise, are roughly as follows:

1. power to make rules and regulations for the management of the University as they see fit.

2. power to appoint a president and with the president's approval, a provost, business officer and treasurer, finance officer, chancellors, professors and other University officials as may be necessary.

3. power to enact regulations dealing with streets and parking areas of the campus.

In addition to the full board, which meets twice a year, there are several standing committees, the most important of which are the Executive Committee and the Visiting Committee.

The Executive Committee, chaired by the governor (who is ex-officio chairman of the full board) acts for the full board and submits in writing all its actions to the board. They cannot, however, change or nullify any orders of the board. This committee of 12 meets four times annually.

The Visiting Committee is in charge of visiting each of the three campuses at least once a year to study the problems and needs of the institutions. Members of this committee—there are 12 here also—have power to look into any problem considered important to the campus general welfare.

School Supplies Can Be Bought At Book Ex

The Book Exchange, located in the Basement of Steele Dorm on the South side of the campus, sells used and new books and other school supplies, including paper, notebooks, and pencils.

New books are sold at the market price, but prices of used books vary, depending on the condition of the books. The Book-X also buys books back from students for from half price on down to nothing.

Hours of the store are 8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. on class days.

The Scuttlebutt is located diagonally across from the Carolina Inn and Big Fraternity Court. They also sell school supplies in addition to snacks, sandwiches, soft drinks, magazines, newspapers and toilet supplies.

The Scuttlebutt is open from 7:30 a.m. to 11 p.m. on weekdays and from 1 p.m. to 11 p.m. on Sunday.

The Monogram Club also has a snack bar and fountain, known as the Circus Room, and sells various supplies for the students' use. The same hours that are observed by the Scuttlebutt are kept by the Circus Room.

Supplies can also be bought at the Y Court from 7:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., at Lenoir Hall during meal hours, and at downtown stores.

Dance Committee Plans Host Here

Fulfilling the role of host at Carolina dances and maintaining order at social functions given by various campus organizations are the main functions of the University Dance Committee.

Chairman for this year is Pat Winter, senior of Charlotte.

University Club Seeks To Promote Enthusiasm

The University Club is primarily a service organization, and all of its functions are carried out in the interest of the student body and University.

The functions of the club are many and varied. Through its cooperation with the Athletic Association, the club seeks to promote and maintain enthusiasm and good sportsmanship in all University events and contests.

Carolina Playmakers Is A 40-Year-Old Organization

By MARCELLINE KRAFCHICK

The Carolina Playmakers are one campus organization which has brought nation-wide fame to UNC.

It began as a pioneer folk theatre almost 40 years ago, and since then has toured from Boston to Texas, including several performances in New York City. Although it claims to be nothing more than a university-community theatre, it often proves to be a stepping-stone for many eventually successful professionals in the theatre.

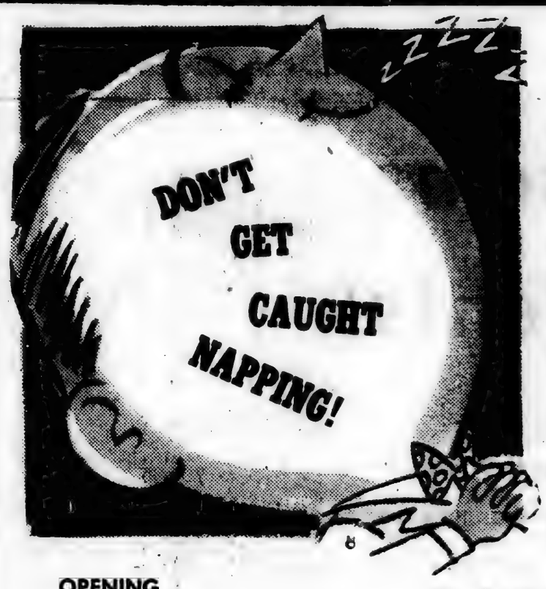
The Playmakers Theatre is one of the University's oldest buildings, located on Cameron Ave. across from Old East Dorm, and has been everything from the University Library to the "University Stable" during its history.

It houses four of the six productions each year, while the annual musical comedy is presented in Memorial Hall and the spring outdoor production is at the Forest Theatre, across the road from the Monogram Club.

Besides having produced such famous persons as Paul Green, Thomas Wolfe, Betty Smith, and Kermit Hunter, the UNC Dramatic Art Dept. has been the training-ground for about thirty professionals recently working in New York's theatre and television.

These include Andy Griffith, who starred in "No Time For Sergeants" before he was called to Hollywood; Bob Armstrong, who appears in "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof"; Dick Adler, collaborator on "Pajama Game"; Shepperd Strudwick, screen, TV, and stage actor; Douglas Watson, who has appeared in several successful Broadway productions, and many others.

The Playmakers' tryouts and activities are completely open to the public and the student body. Anyone at all who is interested may try out for a part or help with the backstage work. The name "Playmaker" applies to anyone who has in any way worked on a production — often including representatives of such departments as Statistics, History, and Economics, as well as local housewives, merchants, clergymen, and members of the faculty.



This year the Playmakers will present a varied program of: "Anastasia", a recent Broadway success; "Androcles and the Lion", a comedy by Bernard Shaw, which will later tour the Carolinas and Georgia; "Desire Under the Elms", an American classic by Eugene O'Neill; "Brigadoon", one of the most popular Broadway musicals of all time; a premiere production of an unknown play introducing a promising new playwright; and—outdoors—Ibsen's "Peer Gynt".

October 1 Is Deadline For Student Insurance

October 1 has been set as the deadline for applications for student insurance.

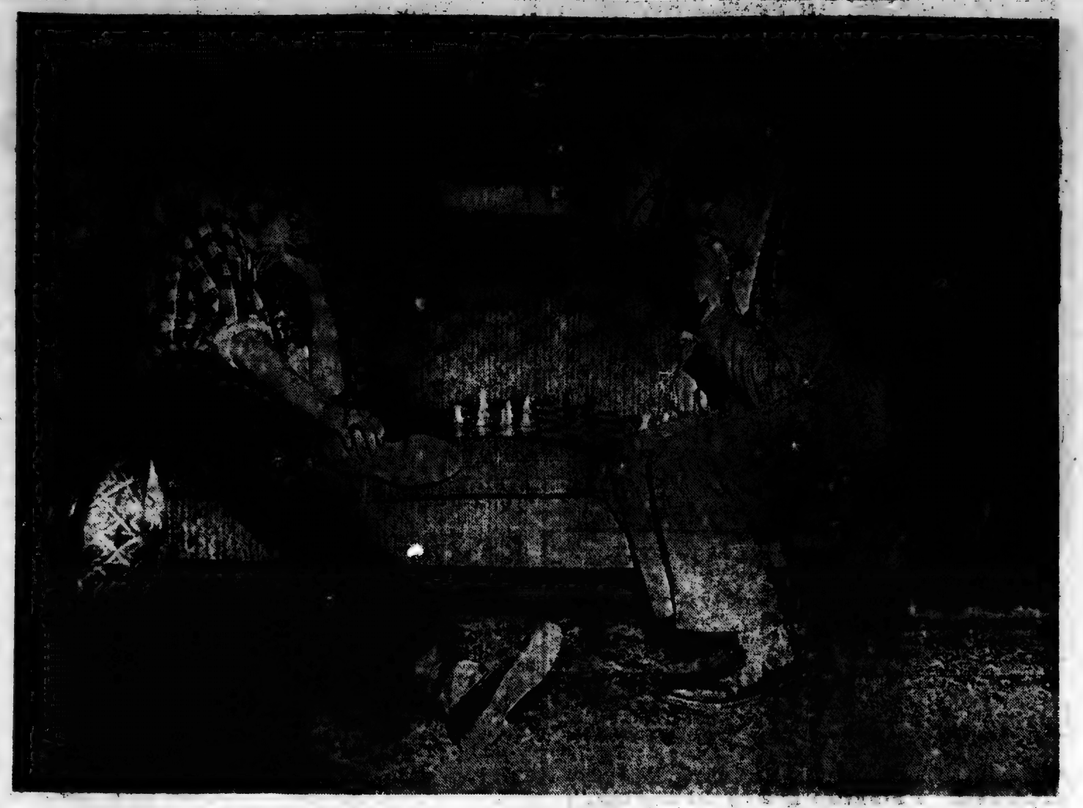
The cost of the policy is $9.50 a year. According to Ray Jefferies, assistant to the dean of student affairs, the premium's cost has dropped since last year.

Insured students will be covered for up to $1000, and for up to $200 for surgical expenses. If the student dies, his beneficiaries will receive $1000.

Jefferies said, "I think this insurance plan payed off for us last year." He pointed out that the insurance comes to less than 80 cents a month.

The insurance coverage is for a 12-month period, including the periods when students are traveling to and from Chapel Hill, and while they are on vacation. Jefferies said last year there were not many claims, but during the summer the company payed on policies several times.

An information booth will be set up during registration. Applications for the insurance will be available at the information booth, the Y and at Graham Memorial.



The policy is made available through the Pilot Life Insurance Company, Raleigh. Jefferies explained that students here will pay a slightly higher premium than students at State College because of the surgical coverage.

He reminded students who already hold policies and are eligible to receive payments for claims must file claims with the company. Blanks are available at his office and the Infirmary.

UNC Club Provides Exchange Of Ideas

The Cosmopolitan Club is the campus organization for American and foreign students to come together to give members an opportunity to exchange ideas and cultures.

It has an object of promoting friendship and understanding among different nations. There are about 90 regular members.

Graham Memorial Patronizers Meditate Over Game Of Chess

The Main Lounge of GM is thoroughly used by UNC students to read newspapers, magazines, play checkers and chess and listen to music over the loud speaker system. Graham Memorial will celebrate the 25th anniversary of its opening this fall and of its dedication in January. Miss Linda Mann, 1956 UNC graduate, is temporary director of the build...

UNC Cardboard Prepares Stunts For Football Game Color

One of the phases of Carolina life that students enjoy and one that adds enjoyment to college is the UNC Cardboard.

The Cardboard is a student organization that designs and prepares the card stunts performed as halftime entertainment at all home football games, and sometimes, at games away.

Much work and cooperation is involved in preparation of a stunt from the time an idea is submitted until it is finally performed. But work is not all there is to it.

At the Cardboard offices, in Emerson Stadium, the members have a change to meet others, discuss different things and have a lot of fun working. Work goes on in a voluntary manner during the football season through the last game, for essentially the organization is only a fall semester activity, but last season there was much activity that ran over into late spring.

Last season began what is hoped to be an expanding of activity into other areas besides that of just students. All members were given transportation and admission to the Duke-Carolina game where stunts were performed before national television cameras.

An awards banquet was held and awards were given to members who did outstanding work during the season. A scrapbook of the year's activities was also presented, and new officers were also installed.

Late in the spring, a pre-exam party was given by the executive council. All these activities were well received by the members.

New and better activities are planned for this year. Among these will be more group get-togethers and parties, entries in parades and coordinated stunts with the Band.

New Art Museum Will Be Erected

By CHARLIE JOHNSON

Erection of the new, spacious Ackland Art Museum here on Columbia St. is expected to bring about considerable improvement in the University's Art Dept.

Work on the building has already started and it is anticipated that it will be completed in a year and a half.

The building itself is estimated at a cost of $800,000 with another $100,000 allocated for equipment. The interest on $1 million, donated by William Hayes Ackland (figured at approximately $30,000 per year) will be utilized for the acquisition of objects of art for the museum.

Ackland died in Washington in 1940. His will directed that his entire $1,500,000 estate go toward establishment of a memorial art museum, provided the university or college getting the money would install his tomb in the building. Duke University would not take it, and Carolina won the bequest after an eight-year court battle involving Carolina, Duke and Rollins College.

The structure is designed in two parts, with the gallery in the front facing Columbia St. and the art school behind the gallery. On the first floor of the school will be the school of art history, the art library and a lecture hall.

The second floor will contain classrooms and art studios. The sculpture department will be in the basement.

The building will also contain a memorial to the late Ackland. His white Italian marble tomb will be in the main floor gallery. The new museum will also contain belongings and personal effects of Ackland, in addition to other art collections.

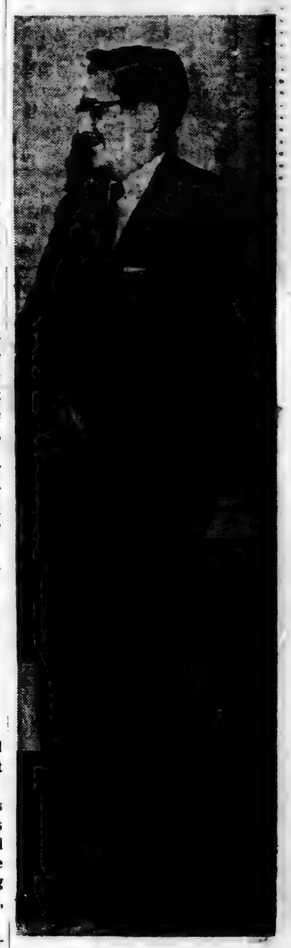
GREAT ENTHUSIASM

The University Art Dept is happy over the new building. It will help in various ways, according to John Allcott, head of the department. The new, enlarged gallery space will allow for changing exhibitions and a permanent collection. Various collections have in the past been offered to the department, but a lack of space prevented accepting them. These gifts can be accepted now.

The new space is tremendously important for consolidation of all the effects of the department, Allcott said. They are now spread over various parts of the campus. The new space will provide excellent classrooms and studios and the establishment of a fine art library, he said.

The art staff is now made up of six members. "We have a very exceptionable staff; you can't beat them any where in the country," according to Allcott.

Degrees offered now by the department include a B.A. and M.A. in art history or in studio creative art. But most of the students in the department are general University students who are taking courses in art but are not majoring in art.



Over 60 art majors were enrolled in the department last year, and there were 575 individual students who took art courses.

Planetarium Schedules 10 Fall Programs

The 1956-57 schedule of programs at the Morehead Planetarium on the University campus was recently announced by Manager A. F. Jenzano.

Eight new celestial dramas and the popular Christmas and Easter stories make up the years' program, starting September 25. Until that date the interesting and timely "Mars, Planet of Mystery" will be presented in the Planetarium chamber.

The year's program schedule follows: September 25-October 22, "Our Sun;" October 23-November 19, "Mister Moon;" November 20-December 31, "The Christmas Story;" January 1 - January 28, "1957 Celestial Preview;" January 29-February 25, "Satellites;" February 26-March 27, "Weather Whys;" March 28-April 29, "Easter, the Awakening;" April 30-May 27, "Signals from the Stars;" May 28-July 1, 'Science Fiction;" and July 2 through September, "A Trip to Venus."

Bill Friday

Bill Friday is acting president of the Consolidated University, the third youngest man to hold the top executive post. He is 36 years old. A story about Friday appears elsewhere in this paper.

Carolina Forum Celebrates 20th Year

The Carolina Forum celebrated its twentieth anniversary last year.

Since its founding in 1935 this student-run speaker series has brought to the campus national and international figures whose views have an important meaning in current affairs of the state, nation and world.

During its two decades of existence, the Forum has presented such speakers as Governors Averill Harriman and Robert Meyner; socialist leader Norman Thomas, Senators William Knowland, Estes Kefauver and Robert Taft, and British Ambassador Sir Roger Makins.

1956 Pigskin 'New Look' Brings Air Of Optimism To UNC

The freshman of '56 couldn't have picked a better time to enter Carolina, athletically speaking. Things are looking up in all sports, especially the three that hold the fall spotlight. Football has Jim Tatum and the new look. Cross-country has Jim Beatty and a host of rising sophs. Soccer has a good chance for the conference crown. And the freshman football squad looks slightly terrific.

GRIDIRON DOPE

The first love of most newcomers to the Hill will probably be Jim Tatum's football team. How long before we'll be national champs, you'll ask. The answer to that is rather uncertain, but it probably won't be this year. Coach Tatum himself will tell you this present edition of the Tar Heels has far too many weak spots to be a really great team.

Chief early season sore spot has been the line. "Our line lacks technique and finesse," says Tatum. "The potential ability is there, and if we could just bring it out and start to function, we could really go offensively."

Tatum, speaking at a press conference here last Friday, was bemoaning the loss of his top quarterback, Dave Reed. "That's the worst thing that ever happened to me on a football field," he said. Reed suffered a knee injury that will keep him on the sidelines for the entire season when he was tackled from the blind side by an overeager teammate. "That boy could have been one of the best quarterbacks in the land," he said. "He's the type player who can tear a defense to pieces when he's right. With Reed in the lineup, I thought we might spring an upset or two this season, but now I'm doubtful," he went on to say.

With Reed benched for the year, the search for a signal caller must begin anew. Sophomore Curt Hathaway apparently has the inside track, but a dark horse candidate named Doug Farmer has served notice he'll be a hard man to deal with. Farmer, a senior who didn't go out for football last season, has displayed a nifty touch with the pigskin in fall drills, and could turn out to be a real surprise package.

Inside tip: . . . Here are some other Tar Heels to watch: Howard Williams and Don Kemper at guard, Vince Olen at end, and Emil DeCantis, Jim Varnum and Daley Goff at halfback.

The Tar Heel backfield should have speed to burn. Ed Sutton and Larry McMullen, the starting halfbacks, are sprinters on the track team. So are Moe DeCantis and Varnum. DeCantis should be the top dash man on the cinder squad next spring. Other gridders who double in track include Kemper, John Jones and John Bilich, shot put; and Buddy Payne and George Stavnitski, javelin.

Tatum uncovered another possibility at his press conference that may come as a surprise to many. The Tar Heel mentor disclosed to the sports scribes that McMullen may be held out this year if Sasser is moved back to halfback. "The boy has everything a good halfback needs except polish," he said, "and we believe a little hard work and close attention would turn him into a great player."

Whenever anyone is inclined to wax too optimistic over the pigskin outlook, he need only take a look at the schedule to get a more realistic view of the situation. Half of the Tar Heel games this season are against teams rated among the nation's top twenty in many preseason polls. Oklahoma, Notre Dame, Maryland and Duke are generally conceded spots in the top ten, while Tennessee, reportedly on the comeback trail, figures to finish somewhere in the second ten. Need we say more?

ON THE MINOR SPORTS FRONT:

It looks like a good year for cross-country and soccer. All-America Jim Beatty is back to pace the harriers, and he will be capably supported by soph Wayne Bishop and junior Everett Whatley. In spite of intense competition from State and Maryland, we're willing to go out on a limb and predict a conference crown for the runners.

As for Coach Marvin Allen's booters, the only thing that apparently stands in their way is a Nov. 17 date with Maryland's defending champs. If they get by this one, they should have a good chance to sweep all the marbles.

Allen and cross-country coach Dale Ranson have issued a call for all interested freshman athletes, runners and booters both, to turn out for practice as soon as possible, regardless of experience. Some of Carolina's greatest athletes have been boys who never played in high school. Why not you?

IT HAPPENED THIS SUMMER:

UNC athletes were busy this summer. Jim Beatty spent the month of June on the west coast participating in track meets. He came home with a second place in the NCAA 5,000 meter run and a host of high finishes in other meets. For the past five weeks, the diminutive distance runner has been in Finland with an AAU team.

Charlotte junior Gene Lookabill advanced to the quarterfinal round of the NCAA Golf Championships last June. Other Tar Heel representatives didn't fare so well, however.

ED SUTTON
. . . flashy Tar Heel halfback

Tar Heel Starting Backfield, Minus One

Above is the backfield tabbed by Coach Jim Tatum as his number one unit earlier this season. One change since that date has found sophomore Curt Hathaway taking over the quarterback duties from injured Dave Reed. The four are, left to right halfback Ed Sutton, fullback Giles Gaca, left halfback Larry McMullen and Reed.

AMONG THE PICTURESQUE PINES

Kenan Memorial Stadium: Natural

In a natural valley about two thousand feet from the center of the campus of the University and just above the spot long known as the Meeting of the Waters, there is a natural amphitheatre, easily approached by paths that follow the lay of the land.

The brook that flows through this valley has cut a ravine so that the floor of the stream is level and smooth and the banks rise with equal steepness on either side.

Here is the site of Kenan Memorial Stadium. In the completeness and harmony of its appointments, the convenience of its seating, and the beauty of its design and location, Kenan Memorial Stadium is unique among the stadia of America.

The stadium, truly one of Chapel Hill's beauty spots, was a gift of William Rand Kenan Jr., a distinguished and loyal son of the University of the Class of 1894, and constructed as a memorial to his mother, Mary (Hargrave), and his father, William Rand Kenan.

The original cost was $275,000 but the property is valued at many times that figure now, of course. After the stadium proper was built, a field house was added at one end of the field, where both the visiting and home teams dress for games.

Construction of the stadium was begun in November, 1926, and completed in August, 1927. The first football game played there was between Carolina and Davidson on Nov. 12. However, the formal opening and dedication did not take place until the game with Virginia on Thanksgiving Day. The Tar Heels won 14-13.

The stadium, as originally built seated 24,000. For many years however, an ingenious arrangement of portable grandstands, used for all the games, has increased the capacity to 43,917 seats. On occasions even this capacity has been increased, and games with Virginia, Duke, Notre Dame and Texas have accommodated as many as 46,000.

On one side of the stadium is a guest box, used by Trustees of the University and other special guests. The press box, of similar outward design, is located on the other side, directly opposite. Gift from Mr. Kenan enabled a complete rebuilding of these structures in 1950. The new press box is of unique design, different from the sprawling press boxes and highly functional for reporters, radio men and photographers and has been highly praised for its beauty and utility.

The stadium is used primarily for football games but on occasions other functions are held there, including the annual Commencement exercises of the University, conducted in the twi-light.

JIM TATUM
. . . Sunny Jim comes home

UNC Welcomes Back Jim Tatum As Coach

The face in the above photo is fast becoming a familiar one around the Carolina campus. Sunny Jim Tatum is back at Chapel Hill after a fourteen year absence. And his coming has touched off celebration among Carolina football followers everywhere. For during the fourteen years since he was last at Carolina, the genial big man has made a name for himself as one of the nation's really great football coaches.

James Moore Tatum, 1935 graduate of Carolina, where he was a star tackle and catcher, scaled the heights in his profession during his nine years at the University of Maryland in 1947-55.

Shortly before the opening of the 1955 season, the NCAA announced that Tatum had the best 10-year record of any of the nation's active football coaches. During that period his teams achieved the phenomenal collection of 70 victories, 19 defeats and six ties including last season, when Jim turned out an undefeated team for the third time at Maryland, and his one earlier year as head coach at Carolina in 1942, his record shows 80 victories, 19 defeats and six ties. No current coach can match it.

Tatum had three undefeated, untied teams at Maryland, five bowl teams and one natioal champion. He elevated that school from a football shambles into a national power which annually ranked high in the polls. In 1953 he was honored as "Coach of the Year."

A colorful, spectacular and articulate fellow, he is a prodigious worker and superb organizer. He keeps long hours on his job. For recreation, he likes golf best. At the game, characteristically, he sometimes lacks finesse but is powerful and potent.

The 42 year old native of McColl, S. C. has posted a winning percentage of .812 over his 11 years of coaching.

While at Maryland Tatum, in collaboration with able assistant Warren Giese, now head coach at South Carolina, wrote a scholarly book called "Coaching Football and the Split-T". It has gone into many printings and is widely used as a textbook.

Tatum is married to the former Edna Sumrell and they have three children: daughters Becky (10) and Reid (2), and son Jimmy (9).

New Tatum Regime Will Try To Better Poor '55 Mark Against Rugged Competition

Sophomore Curt Hathaway Replaces Reed At Quarterback; Sutton Shines At Halfback

By LARRY CHEEK

This is the year of the "new look" in Carolina football.

Wholesale changes have been made all the way down the line in an effort to rescue the Tar Heels from the gridiron doldrum in which they have wallowed for the past six years. A brand new coaching staff headed by Jim Tatum has been brought in to replace the George Barclay regime. New trainers have been added. Even the uniforms have been altered.

And yet there remain two significant items that have changed very little. The schedule is a back breaking one just like last season, and the player personnel is essentially the same as last year's when the Tar Heels posted a dismal 3-7 record.

OPTIMISTIC OUTLOOK

Still there exists a decided air of optimism in the UNC camp. Coach Tatum has termed his halfback crop among the finest in the land, and golden boy Ed Sutton is rated a prime All-America candidate. There is an abundance of experience at the fullback slot with three lettermen returning headed by spring sensation Giles Gaca. But at the quarterback post, there is a real stickler of a problem.

On the first day of practice, starting quarterback Dave Reed, called "one of the finest quarterbacks I've seen" by Tatum, turned up with a knee injury that put him on the sidelines for the entire season. This leaves the Tar Heels with only one experienced caller, little Buddy Sasser, the Conway, S. C., flash who was moved to halfback during spring drills. When Reed was injured, Sasser was shifted back to his old position.

Front running candidate for the key quarterback assignment is a six foot sophomore from Norfolk, Va., named Curtis Hathaway. Hathaway was number one field general for the frosh squad last year and is considered a top prospect by the UNC brain trust. Ron Marquette, a rangy junior who missed most of last season due to a leg injury, and Doug Farmer, senior veteran who was a frosh sensation, are two other boys battling for the starting nod.

VETERANS TO START

The halfback spots on opening day will be manned by a pair of battle tested veterans, if all goes according to plan. Sutton has the right half position sewed up, while Larry McMullen, a 195 pound senior with speed to burn, seems set to go at the left half slot.

Backing up the two starters will be a host of shifty ball carriers. Emil DeCantis, a soph who doubles as a sprinter on the track team, is running behind Sutton; while Daley Goff and Dick Darling, a pair of juniors, are fighting for the second string assignment behind McMullen. Juniors Jim Varnum, Charley Reed and Francis Berry, and soph Ed Lipski are other halfback candidates.

Gaca, a 200 lb. plunger, is running with the first string unit at fullback. Although the Pennsylvania junior has the inside track, he is being seriously challenged by three other junior line busters. Vally Vale, the team's top punter, is currently running number two; John Haywood is number three and hard running Joe Temple is number four. Don Lear, last year's top fullback, has been shifted to guard to bolster the Tar Heel line.

LINE IS PROBLEM

The biggest headache facing Tatum is a lack of manpower in the forward wall. The genial mentor has repeatedly warned Tar Heel followers that the line would not be strong enough to carry the Blue and White through the murderous schedule that lies ahead. Brightest spot in the forward wall is right tackle where giant 230 lb. Stewart Pell provides a solid anchor for the rest of the line.

Pell, a transfer student with service experiences, was ineligible last season, but should be ready to terrorize the opposition this year. Phil Blazer, a junior from Whitaker, Pa., who sat out last season with an injury, will be Pell's running mate at left tackle, although he is being hard pressed by senior letterman John Jones and John Bilich. Soph Fred Swearingen is running fourth in the battle for the left tackle assignment, with Chapel Hillian Tom Maultsby bringing up the rear.

Don Redding, a rough tough soph, and Stan Leftwich, 215 lb junior, are scheduled to back up Pell at right tackle with Leo Russavage, victim of a leg injury all last season, in the fourth position. Russavage, a scholastic junior in his first year of varsity competition, is the biggest man on the squad, weighing in at 234 lbs. and standing six feet four inches tall.

GUARD SPOTS SET

Dick Smith, a 195 lb. Pennsylvania junior, was shifted from tackle to guard by Tatum, and is currently on the second team behind Setzer. Other men who will be counted on for duty at guard include junior Glenn Daughtry and sophs Don Kemper, Ray Kryzak, and Ned Fenton. Kemper, starting fullback on last year's freshman team who has received praise from Tatum, is the number three choice at right guard, while Kryzak is rated immediately behind him.

The center spot will be capably manned by George Stavnitski, letterman from Fairfield, Conn., in his third year of varsity play. Sophs Ronnie Koes and Bill Hardison give the Tar Heels a three man punch at center that can be matched by few schools in the country. Other center candidates are Donnie Kelley and Don Smith, a junior and sophomore respectively.

PAYNE MAY STAR

Lanky Buddy Payne, who may develop into one of the best ends ever to perform at Carolina, is slated to hold down the starting position on the right flank; while senior Larry Muschamp, only punter on the first team, currently rates the nod over the field at the left end spot.

Payne, a demon on defense and a starter last year in his sophomore season, may be slowed down by a knee operation he underwent last spring. If he turns up unfit for duty, junior Paul Pulley, one of the squad's top pass receivers, will take over.

Charley Robinson and Vince Olen, both juniors, are pushing Muschamp for the left end berth, with Robinson, especially, being tabbed for future stardom. Other flankmen who may figure in Tatum's plans are sophs Bernie Donatelli, Clyde Turlington, Charles Shelton and Takey Crist; junior Sonny Forbes; and senior Bill Ellington, the oldest man on the squad at 27.

RUGGED SCHEDULE

One look at the 10 game schedule is enough to dampen the hopes of the most ardent enthuiast. The Tar Heels once again must face some of the nation's strongest teams, beginning with Oklahoma in the second game and ending with arch-rival Duke in the last. In between, they must contend with such outfits as Notre Dame, Maryland, Tennessee and Georgia, not to mention Big Four rivals State and Wake Forest.

No miracles are expected in facing this back breaking schedule, but Carolina's football lovers expect to have a little fun this year.

The complete schedule:

Sept. 22—N. C. State at Chapel Hill.
Sept. 29—Oklahoma at Norman, Okla.
Oct. 6—South Carolina at Columbia, S. C.
Oct. 13—Georgia at Chapel Hill.
Oct. 20—Maryland at Chapel Hill.
Oct. 27—Wake Forest at Chapel Hill.
Nov. 3—Tennessee at Knoxville, Tenn.
Nov. 10—Virginia at Charlottesville, Va.
Nov. 17—Notre Dame at South Bend, Ind.
Nov. 24—Duke at Chapel Hill.

UNC Athletic Home Located In Gymnasium

Woollen Gymnasium, located on the southeastern end of the campus on Raleigh Rd., houses all the athletic, physical education, and intramural offices.

The model structure contains a main auditorium which covers more than an acre. This indoor arena can seat 6,000 at basketball games and can accommodate an indoor track which is longer than Madison Square Garden's.

When the seating arrangements are taken out, the floor accomodates four basketball courts. Basketball, badminton, volleyball and other sports take place here a part of the physical education program.

On the main floor, Jim Tatum and his football staff occupy the left end of the building while athletic director, Basketball Offices, and Ticket Offices occupy the right end of the building.

Coaches of intercollegiate and physical education sports have offices upstairs, along with the intramural office and three large classrooms.

Locker rooms, dressing facilities and showers, and other sports rooms occupy the basement.

Footballers Have Rigid Time Table

It's been "early to bed and early to rise" for Carolina football players during pre-season practice, which began on Sept. 1.

New head coach Jim Tatum gets his stalwarts out of their sacks shortly after 6 a.m. every morning. Immediately upon rising, they are fed tomato or orange juice according to their preference or allergies. At 6:45, the athletes report to the field, with practice ending at 8:30.

After a rugged workout, the players sit down to a hearty breakfast at 9 o'clock.

After breakfast, until 11 a.m., they attend to personal affairs such as writing to their living dolls, playing checkers, etc.

Lectures occupy the period from 11 to 12 each day and dinner follows at 12:30 p.m.

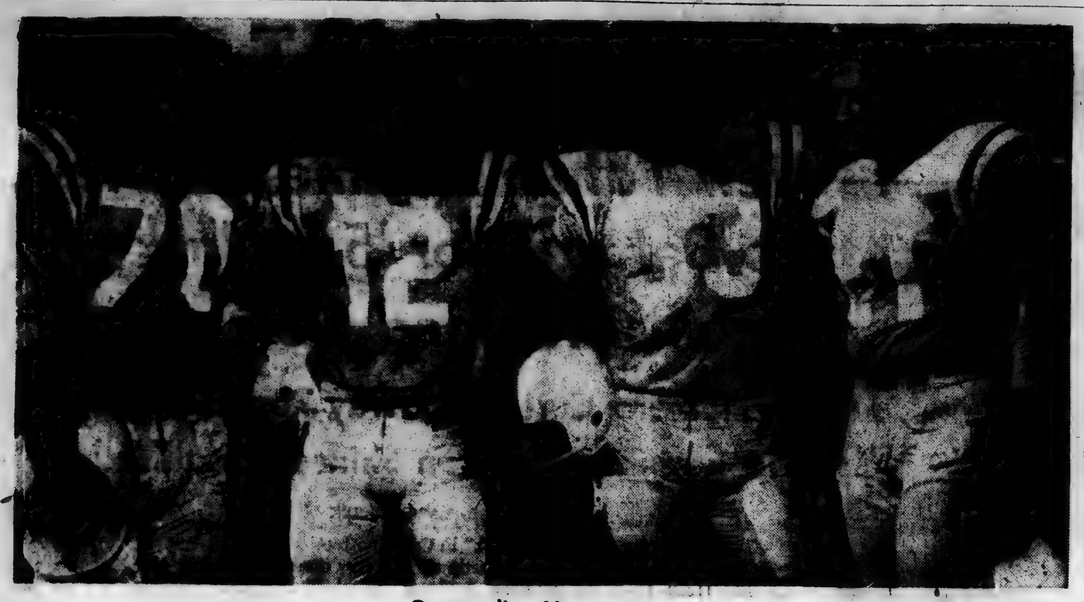
Dinner is followed by a rest period with naps recommended, until 3:45 p.m., when they report for afternoon practice. Supper is served at 6:30 p.m.

After a strenous day such as that, the tired young men usually welcome a 10 o'clock curfew for sleep.

The Tar Heel head coach thinks he probably was the first head coach to install the early morning before-breakfast practices, now used by a number of coaches.

He hit upon the idea his first year as a head coach, back in the war year of 1942 when he first coached the Tar Heels. The heavy morning dew caused the balls to be wet and slippery, but this paid off that very year. The Tar Heels played their first game, against favored Wake Forest, in the rain, and ended a two year losing streak with the Deacons.

After the war, against the advice of assistant coaches, Tatum had the pre-breakfast practices during his one year at Oklahoma. Bud Wilkinson went back to mid-morning drills, when he took over, but since then has gone back to the Tatum program.



Coaching Staff Set

Head Coach Jim Tatum has lined up a freshman coaching staff of five for this fall.

Fred Tullai, full-time staff member, and head freshman coach, will have four student assistants, Tatum announced.

Bob (Goo-Goo) Gantt of Albemarle, star North Carolina back in the class of 1952, heads this group. He will be in the physical education graduate school.

Others are Ham Wade of Chapel Hill, law student, who played his football as a fullback at Davidson; Hubert (Jim) McGee Jr., of Greenville, alumaus of N. C. State and East Carolina College, graduate student in Physical education; and John Murphy, former head coach of Bridgeport, W. Va High School.

Outstanding Newcomers

Olympic Bound

Fate and the Olympic trials brought together a pair of former UNC swimming co-captains and could put them together on the plane for Australia and the Olympic Games.

Stan Tinkham of Washington, D. C., and Donnie Evans of Charlotte, 1952-53 UNC co-captains, may go to Melbourne, but in different capacities.

Tinkham is definitely going, as coach of the United States women's team. Evans will go as a freestyler should one of the four regulars miss the trip. He finished fifth by a split decision in the recent Detroit trials and was named first alternate in that event.

TEN LETTERMEN RETURN

Potent Soccer Squad Sets Sights On Conference Title

Coach Marvin Allen and his North Carolina soccer squad begin practice Monday with one though uppermost in their minds. That is to beat Maryland and knock the Terps out of the conference championship for the first time since the Atlantic Coach Conference was formed four years ago.

The Tar Heel booters almos made it last year, finishing sec ond to the Terps in the final stand ings. The present squad figures, on paper at least, to be even strong er than last year's edition. Coach Allen has ten lettermen returning plus a host of talented sophomores from last fall's unbeaten frosh squad, rated by observers as one of the finest in Tar Heel history.

Topping the list of returnees is captain Grover Brown, who is se to go at one halfback slot. Another letterman halfback return ing is Bill Blair, a mainstay on last year's squad.

At forward, Coach Allen can call on a trio of lettermen for dependable service. They are Frank Butler, Charles Covell and Pat McCormick, one of the top scorers from last season's team.

Fullbacks on hand include Mike Galifianakis, John Harris and Ted Jones. John Foster, a junior who also shines on the tennis courts will hold down the left wing position, while baseballer Chuck Hartman will handle the goalie duties.

Seven booters up from the frosh squad wil greatly strengthen the varsity. The sophs who should sparkle are Coleman Barks, Ricky Grausman, Pete Killinger, Jimmy Purks and Tom Rand, forwards; and Bob Borden and Dave Corkey fullbacks. Ted Yohanna, a native of Baghdad, Iraq, is a transfer student from Campbell College who should see much action.

Tar Heel hopes for a successful season were dealt a jolt earlier this summer when co-captain elect Pete Cothran graduated in summer school and decided not to return for his final year of eligibility. Cothran was the sparkplug of the Tar Heel attack all last season.

There are two newcomers to this year's eight game schedule. Lynchburg College will be here for the season's opener of Oct. 8, and the Davidson Wildcats will pay Chapel Hill a visit Oct. 19.

Although Duke is reported to b stronger this year, the main wo ry in the Tar Heel camp is Maryland. The Terps look better than ever, and will be hard to dislodge from the top of the heap. "Our game with Maryland on the last day of the season is the key to to the entire year," said Coach Allen. "This is the one we're pointing for, and if things go right, I believe we can do it," he concluded.

Coach Allen also issued a call to all interested freshmen to come on down and begin working out with the varsity Monday, although freshman practice doesn't officially begin until the later part of the month.

The varsity schedule:

Oct. 8 — Lynchbury College at Chapel Hill.

Oct. 16—Washington & Lee at Lexington, Va.

Oct. 19—Davidson at Chapel Hill.

Oct. 24—N. C. State at Chapel Hill.

Nov. 1—Roanoke College at Salem, Va.

Nov. 8—Virginia at Chapel Hill.

Nov 13—Duke at Durham.

Nov. 17—Maryland at College Park, Md.

UNC Brain Trust

Jim Tatum Gathers Six-Man Coaching Staff To Help Tutor UNC Gridders

Part of the celebrated "new look" in Carolina football is an energetic and capable six-man assistant coaching staff that head Coach Jim Tatum has gathered around him.

The six assistants — Emmett Cheek, Eddie Teague, Ed Kensler, Pat Preston, Jim Hickey and Fred Tullai—are all hand picked men of proven ability. Here, by way of introduction to the UNC students, is a rundown on each one of these men who contribute so much to the making of a Carolina football team.

For Emmett Cheek, it was homecoming when he followed Coach Jim Tatum to Chapel Hill and Carolina. Chapel Hill is his home and Carolina his alma mater. Cheek was a star guard here under Carl Snavely in the years of the Justice era.

While working on his Master's here in 1949 and '50, Cheek served as line coach and head baseball coach at Guilford. After completing work on his Master's, he joined Tatum at Maryland and remained with him for five seasons.

At Maryland Cheek and Eddie Teague were the Terps' chief scouts. The two wrote and published a successful book on scouting. He will work on the field here at Carolina in addition to his scouting duties.

OUTSTANDING RECORD

Eddie Teague is another coach with a sparkling record as a player. Teague began his career as a brilliant schoolboy performer in his native Washington, D. C. He was a three sport man at N. C. State in 1942, and in 1943, he shifted to Carolina as a serviceman in the V-12 program and made the All-Conference team and All-America honorable mention under Tom Young.

Teague was both head coach and athletic director at Guilford during the post war years after his graduation from Carolina in 1943. He joined Tatum's staff at Maryland in 1952.

Pat Preston, a Wake Forest grad, has the most illustrious career of anyone on the coaching staff. A native of Thomasville, Preston gained All-America honors in his college days while performing for both Wake Forest and Duke.

He was an outstanding guard for the Chicago Bears pro football team in 1946, and was termed by Coach George Halas as "one of the hardest hitting linemen I've ever seen."

Preston joined the Wake Forest coaching staff in 1951, serving as line coach, end coach, talent recruiter and scout. In an athletic upheaval at Baptist Hollow, he was named athletic director in 1954 and was serving in that capacity when brought to Carolina by Tatum.

Another man with long experience in the coaching and administrative field is Jim Hickey. Before joining the staff here at Carolina, Hickey had a five-year tenure at Hampden-Sydney College. He was five years head coach there and four years athletic director. He was named "Coach of the Year" in Virginia for the second consecutive year in 1955 when his team had an 8-1 record.

A native of Springdale, Pa. Hickey attended William and Mary where he played in the all-important tailback slot. From William and Mary, he moved to John Marshall high school at Richmond, Va., where five years of successful coaching stamped him as one of the nation's outstanding young coaches. He went to Hampden-Sydney from John Marshall.

The youngest man on the Tar Heel coaching staff is Fred Tullai, a 1955 graduate of Maryland. Tullai played three years of varsity football at Maryland, and starred at both the center and guard slots for the Terps.

In addition to his college experience as a player, Tullai was a standout as a service player while in the Marine Corps. Tullai will handle the freshman head coaching duties here.

These men work for the most part behind the scenes. They work with individual players, drill the squad for long hours on fundamentals, and turn in detailed scouting reports on opposing teams. Together with head coach Tatum, they form a well oiled machine designto bring football victory to the Carolina Tar Heels on Saturday afternoons.

Athletics At UNC Is For Students

By DAVIS MERRITT, JR.
UNC Asst. Sports Publicist

Athletics at Carolina?

It's a tremendous area to cover in one column. Suffice it to say that you are standing at the door that leads to a great experience in sports.

Whether you are "athletus activus" or athletus armchairus," you will find athletics at Carolina big enough for pride, yet small enough to consider everyone.

You have the football team playing before 40,000 and some other sports playing before 40, yet there are no 'minor sports' at Carolina. 'Minor sport' is a label forbidden in the UNC Athletic Department. Sports include not only football, basketball and baseball, but track, tennis, golf, soccer, lacrosse, wrestling, swimming and cross country. And on Big Four Sports Day, there is competition among UNC, N. C. State, Wake Forest and Duke in such intra-mural sports as ping pong, softball, touch football, horseshoes, volleyball, badminton and many others.

So this is the athletic program that lies before you. It includes 40,000 seat Kenan Stadium, 5,500 seat Woollen Gym, huge Emerson (baseball) Stadium, Fetzer (track, soccer) Field, 18 hole Finley Golf Course, spacious Bowman Gray Indoor Pool and six varsity tennis courts.

These are inhabited by the big names, Sutton, Beatty, Rosenbluth, Raugh . . . they have been inhabited by other big names—Justice, Glamack, Simmons, Seixas, Ward, Thomas . . . But they are also inhabited by guys like Jones, O'Donnell, Smith and Jackson, and these are the real stars.

The guy in the Rep tie and three button coat who sits in Kenan on crisp Saturdays; the guy in the Bermudas who watches baseball in the hot spring afternoons; the freshmen, sophomores, juniors and seniors who pull for the Big Blue all year long.

There are cynics who will voice the opposite opinion, but these are the real indispensables of Carolina athletics. Jim Tatum, Frank McGuire, Ralph Casey, all could be replaced (though admittedly at high cost), but the guy in the grandstand and his folks and friends pay the freight and pull the entire train. Without him, the entire program would die from atrophy.

Carolina athletics have had their black days as well as their golden day—football seasons devoid of bright spots, continual basketball losses to rivals, springs full of misery.

But you are entering this door to athletics at a fortunate time. A time when all phases of the program are showing an upward trend.

Look down the line:

Track has its All-American in Jim Beatty, a dogged distance runner, plus a host of other rising stars like Ronnie Austell, Wayne Bishop and Dave Scurlock.

Basketball is the big hope this year, with All-America Lennie Rosenbluth and a team loaded with experienceed veterans and talented sophomores.

Football has Jim Tatum and new life, plus a dazzling array of freshman recruits.

Baseball has a host of lettermen returning with the promise of stronger hitting this spring.

Swimming has All-America Charlie Krepp, the NCAA championships here in March, and an experienced team of returning lettermen.

Wrestling has some experienced men for a change and promises to stage a comeback after several bad years.

Lacrosse gets another chance following re-instatement as a varsity sport.

Tennis has three regulars back plus the South's finest young prospects.

They are all preparing for another golden era.

UNC All-America Candidate

Here's How To Get In

Carolina students are admitted to home football games when they present their athletic pass books and ID cards at the gate on the home side of the field.

For games away from home, if they are with other conference teams, students will be able to get in for half price by presenting their pass books and ID cards to the Woollen Gym office about a week before each away game. Stubs with seating location in the stadium will be given at the ticket office. Pass books and ID cards must also be presented at the away stadium.

If a student desires to get a ticket for any game for his date—and she is not a coed—he must present his pass book at the ticket office here during the week before the game in order to get seats together. Date tickets cost the regular adult price. If a student's date is a coed, they need only present their pass books at the gate at game time.

The dates that the students must appear for date tickets and for away game tickets will be announced by the athletic office from time to time.

Experienced Veterans Will Spearhead Team

By RAY LINKER

What promises to be one of the finest cross-country teams in Carolina history will begin regular practice sessions Monday morning under the experienced eye of Coach Dale Ranson.

Six returning lettermen from last year's state championship squad will form a nucleus for this season's team, while there will be eleven numeral winners from last year's undefeated freshman team moving up to try for spots on the varsity squad.

The list of returnees is headed by renowned Jim Beatty, Charlotte senior who returns next week from an AAU tour of Finland with eight other top American distance runners.

Beatty, an All-American in the two mile, won the conference cross-country championships in both his sophomore and junior years, and looms as a heavy favorite to repeat this year.

FLASHY SOPH

Also expected to burn up the trail for the Tar Heels this season is Wayne Bishop, top man on last year's freshman team. Bishop, who hails from Greenville, was unbeaten last season and won the state frosh championship. Bishop came within a very few seconds of Beatty's record for the freshman course.

Letterman Everett Whatley, junior from Atlanta, and Dave Scurlock, a sophomore from Greensboro, will be gunning for top positions along with Baltimore soph Howard Kahn.

Marion Griffin, Larry Thames and Frank Bernhardt, all seniors from Charlotte, and Ronnie Harwood, senior from Winston-Salem, are the other lettermen who figure prominently in the plans of Coach Ranson.

Bill Luesing of Huntington, W. Va., and Nick Palmer of Valdese, two numeral winners last year for the freshmen, are expected to improve with versity experience.

PROVIDE DEPTH

Ennis Robinson of Wrightsville Beach, Walt Mills of Charlotte, James Menzel of Southern Pines, Don Furtado of Garner, Vic Huggins of Chapel Hill, and Alex Focfin of Asheboro won numerals last year and should provide depth to the varsity squad.

The UNC cross-country course, a distance of 3.7 miles for the varsity, starts on the Fetzer Field track and winds around the practice football field, past Kenan Stadium, behind the nurses dorm, and through the woods and on to the Durham Highway. After a short distance, it leaves the road and goes into the woods and finally winds around the football practice field, ending on the track.

Freshmen run a similar course but cover a distance of only 2.2 miles.

FRESHMAN SCHEDULE

A schedule of eight to ten meets is being lined up for the frosh squad, according to Coach Ranson. Meets are set with Duke, State, and Wake Forest, twice each; the state freshman meet; and possibly East Mecklenburg High School and Myers Park High.

The varsity faces a tough eight meet schedule. The season opens with a dual meet with Virginia here on Oct. 5, and the conference meet at Charlottesville on Nov. 19 closes the campaign.

The complete schedule:

Oct. 5—Virginia at Chapel Hill.
Oct. 12 — Clemson, State and South Carolina at Columbia, S. C.
Oct. 20 — Maryland and Wake Forest at Chapel Hill.
Nov. 3 — Tennessee at Knoxville, Tenn.
Nov. 6—Duke at Durham.
Nov. 12—State Championships at Raleigh.
Nov. 19 — ACC Meet at Charlottesville.

Monogram Club Aids Athletics

All winners of Carolina athletic letters are eligible for membership in the Monogram Club.

One of the main purposes of the club is to act as a service organization.

The club holds open houses after some of the home football games for students and alumni. A dance after an important game is usually held during the football season.

During the spring, the club's efforts are directed toward having a successful Blue-White football game, which is the intra-squad game between evenly divided teams. This game officially ends the team's spring practice.

The club provides programs and concessions at this game and help in other ways.

According to the constitution of the club, the purposes and objectives are to aid athletics of the University, to seek to improve our intercollegiate relationships through the sports program, and to serve the University in any capacity in which the club is needed.

Football 'Days' Set

Three special "days" will brighten pre-game and halftime festivities at the Carolina home football games this fall.

The battle with Georgia, Oct. 13, will mark the traditional Homecoming game, with all the trimmings and the old grads returning. Oct. 20, with Maryland's strong Terps in town, will be Dad's Day, and the Oct. 27 date with Wake Forest marks Band Day, when several thousand high school musicians will gather on Kenan's turf for a gigantic and colorful halftime show.

Fifty Eight Freshmen Grid Candidates Begin Practice

Fifty-eight freshman football candidates reported to practice at North Carolina last week, with Coach Fred Tullai and his staff sending them through their first workout Thursday.

The group, one of the largest ever to be invited for early practice, included fullback Cornell Johnson of High Point, who chose Carolina over N. C. State and South Carolina after a publicized newspaper controversy.

Twenty-five native Tar Heels, including three from New Bern, were in the group.

The players, with weights in parenthesis:

Ends: John Francis Stunda (205), Monessen, Pa.; Robert Fairchild Darling (185), Elizabeth City, N.C.; Edward Frank Furjanic (218), Bressler, Pa.; Charles Thomas Cotton (205), Providence, R.I.; Clayton Bernard Smith, Jr., (190), Elizabethtown, N.C.; Francis Joseph Dobrowlski (195), Natrona, Pa.; Ronald George Markel (195), Alquippa, Pa.; Harold Douglas Clark (200), Hazelwood, N.C.; Colin Fraser Smith (180), Claymont, Del.; Alva Donald Stallings (230), Rocky Mount, N.C.; James Joseph Jenrett (226), Portsmouth, Va.; Ralph Michael Pittman (198), Atlanta, Ga.

NCAA Swimming Meet Set Here Next March

Bowman Gray Indoor Pool next spring will be the site of Carolina's third NCAA championships in three years.

The executive committee of the NCAA announced recently that North Carolina has been awarded the 1956-57 swimming championships set for March 28-30. It will be the second time that spacious Bowman Gray Pool has been host to the nation's top collegiate swimmers. The first NCAA swim meet here was in 1949.

A national tourney will be nothing new for UNC's athletic program. The Tar Heels put on the 1955 NCAA tennis championships and the 1956 gymnastics event.

GM Is Center Of UNC Extracurriculars

By CLARKE JONES

The student union building—better known as Graham Memorial—is the center of student extracurricular life. Let's take a look at the different rooms in the building and briefly note what they are used for.

The place to start is on the main floor. The main attraction here is the spacious lounge where students come to read, talk or maybe just relax, listening to music piped through from the information office's hi-fi unit.

Sometimes you will see two students engaged in a game of chess. On Sunday nights, the Duke Chapel services are broadcast here.

At the north end of the building is a combination coffee room-kitchen. Here you can buy for a dime, a cup of coffee and pastries from a machine.

Adjoining the coffee room-kitchen is a television room, equipped to seat about 25 TV viewers.

You walk through the coffee room-kitchen and go all the way down to the end of the hall. Here is the information office, where the person in charge will check out to you ping-pong equipment, maybe play you a record—GM recently acquired 100 new hi-fidelity records—or simply provide you with information.

Just around the corner from the information office is the office of the director—Miss Linda Mann, a 1956 UNC graduate.

The two stairways leading to the second floor each have mezzanine landings about midway. On the south end is the assistant director's (Dan Turner) office and mimeograph and ambenograph machines. The north end is the office of the Carolina Quarterly, student literary magazine.

SECOND FLOOR

At the top of the stairs is the Student Activities Fund office. Headed by Harry Kear, the office takes care of the accounting for all the campus activities.

Across the hall from the fund office are the offices of The Daily Tar Heel, campus newspaper.

Down the hall past the newspaper offices and the fund office are the Roland Parker Lounges 1, 2 and 3. Large meetings are held in these rooms, which hold 150-200 persons.

Carolina's two political organizations, the Student Party and the University Party, stage their meetings here.

Directly opposite the RP Lounges are the student government offices where the student body president—this year Bob Young, senior from Asheville—and other student body officers work.

Next to the president's office is the Woodhouse Conference Room. Meetings and conferences of different sorts are held here. The room gets its name from Edward James Woodhouse, a political science professor here from 1926-54.

Adjoining this room is the Council Room, where violators of the campus and honor codes are tried by the men's and women's councils. The Women's Residence Council also holds meetings here.

Directly opposite the Council Room is the joint office of the Publications Board and the Carolina Forum.

At the end of the hall on the left is the Graham Memorial Activities Board office. GMAB annually sponsors such activities as band concerts, bridge and dance instructions, free movies and Petite Musicales.

The Grail Room, the last room on this floor, is across from the GMAB office. The order of the Holy Grail meets in this room, considered by many the nicest room upstairs. Other small conferences are also held here.

BASEMENT

The basement is the last floor in the "tour". The APO Room is the first stop. APO, Carolina's service fraternity, holds meetings here. Other small groups meet here also.

Just off the APO Room is the ping-pong room. The room has two brand new tables inside and two old tables in the alleyway just outside the room.

About midway down the hall are several vending machines, where you can buy a snack lunch between games of pool in the pool room, right across the hall. The room, open to coeds as well as Carolina gentlemen, is the most-used room in the building.

Next to the pool room is the Rendezvous Room, used for quiet recreation purposes. It is complete with a jukebox, piano and has 20 tables which will seat up to 40 couples. The room is also often used for small Graham Memorial-sponsored parties.

The Yackety Yack, the student annual, has its office just beyond the vending machines.

Around the corner on the right is the darkroom, recently renovated, with new equipment installed. Lockers are available for rent. Graham Memorial furnishes everything but chemicals, which you must obtain yourself.

The main obligation on those who use the room is to clean up the place before leaving.

The barbershop, located at the end of the hall, serves the students with 90 cent haircuts, the cheapest in town. The barbers—there are three— can afford the lower rate due to having no overhead.

Graham Memorial gives them the space with the understanding that the price will not exceed 90 cents.

Constant Use Is Made Of University Library

The University's Louis Wilson Library is the one building that's in use constantly from morning until night.

Even the toughest football game down in Kenan Pines won't keep some students from the library. It will be used many times during the coming months for reference work, reading assignments and a place for quiet textbook study.

And don't forget the library's social side: For years now, it has been the perfect place for Carolina Gentlemen and their dates to study together.

The library contains almost 800,000 volumes, most of which are in the Main Library building, named for Louis R. Wilson, longtime professor of library science here.

Special collections of importance include; The Southern Historical Collection of more than two and a half manuscripts, the North Carolina Collection of items relating to the state, the Hanes Collection recording the development of the book;

The Whitaker Collections of Johnson, Dickens and Cruikshank, the Jenkins Collection of public documents, the Nolen Collection of city and regional planning, the Archibald Henderson Collection of Materials Relating to George Bernard Shaw;

The August Thomas Collection of dramatic manuscripts, together with unusual collections of American drama, Spanish drama, Shakespeare, Raleigh, Wolfe, folklore, Latin, American studies, Southern literature, romance languages, World Wars I and II, maps, prints, graphic arts, and books by and about the Negro.

Other places of interest are: the Rare Book Room, which houses many literary treasures from long times past; Current Affairs and Public Documents Reading Room, a bureau of information on current information and thoughts; the Sir Walter Raleigh Rooms furnished as in 1600; the Early Carolina Rooms equipped as in 1740; the Print and Map Rooms; the Assembly Room and the Bull's Head Bookshop, where students, faculty and townspeople browse, borrow and buy the latest books. Individual libraries are also assigned to different departments of instruction.

Freshmen will have to spend a lot of time in the General College library, where they will do reading assignments in first-year subjects. Exhibits are also displayed in the halls of the library.

The largest room in the library is the Reference Room. It is on the second floor in the front of the building and is a place where students often seek and find quiet surroundings to pour out their meditations on their studies.

The different librarians and staff members are always willing to help students in any way possible. They are there to serve you and they do just that.

Entire Y Program Here Operated By Students

The students operate and run the entire program of the YMCA and the YWCA and have three adult leaders to guide them.

Offices are located in the Y Building near South Building. Mr. Claude Shotts is the YMCA General Secretary, John Riebel is the Associate Secretary and Anne Queen is YWCA Director. Mrs. Nora Hurd is the Y receptionist.

The two student organizations—the YW for women and YM for men — have separate identities, but the programs of the two are often planned together. The full time staff works together for both groups.

Organization of the two groups is divided into committees and many of the committees have joint chairmen, a member from the YM and one from the YW.

A few changes in the building and staff are now taking place to enable the staff members of the YW-YM to work more closely together and more efficiently.

Postions newly created, which will be filled soon, are an in-training graduate assistantship and a staff office managerial post.

Miss Queen has been in her position since June 1. She has previously been with the YWCA at the University of Georgia and with the American Friends Service (Quaker) in Greensboro.

Mr. Riebel has been associate secretary for about five years. He had previously been with the organization in California.

Mr. Shotts, a long-time worker and counselor in the Y, came to Carolina from Northwestern. He did his undergraduate work at the University of Alabama.

Gerry Mayo, junior from Falkland, is president of the YMCA, and Martha Richardson, senior from Midlothian, Va. is president of the YWCA.

Six National Sororities Have Chapters Here On Campus

Six national sororities have chapters on this campus—Delta Delta Delta, Chi Omega, Pi Beta Phi, Alpha Delta Pi, Kappa Delta and Alpha Gamma Delta.

All six of these sororities have their own houses in which many of the members live and most of the members eat their meals. Many other activities are also carried on there, such as coffee breaks.

Sorority rush week, which begins soon after school begins, is controlled by the Panhellenic Council. It is made up of representatives from the six sororities, a representative from the Stray Greeks and an advisor from the Dean of Women's office. It coordinates sorority life and plans special projects.

Many coeds remain independent, but coeds interested in joining a sorority can usually find a group with which to affiliate. Sorority houses are centers from which girls participate in campus activities.

As a member of a sorority each girl experiences a close fellowship among her group and at the same time realizes the importance of social and intellectual responsibility. Pan-hel awards a scholarship cup each year as an additional incentive to hard work.

Further information concerning sororities can be found in the Panhellenic Rushing Manual.

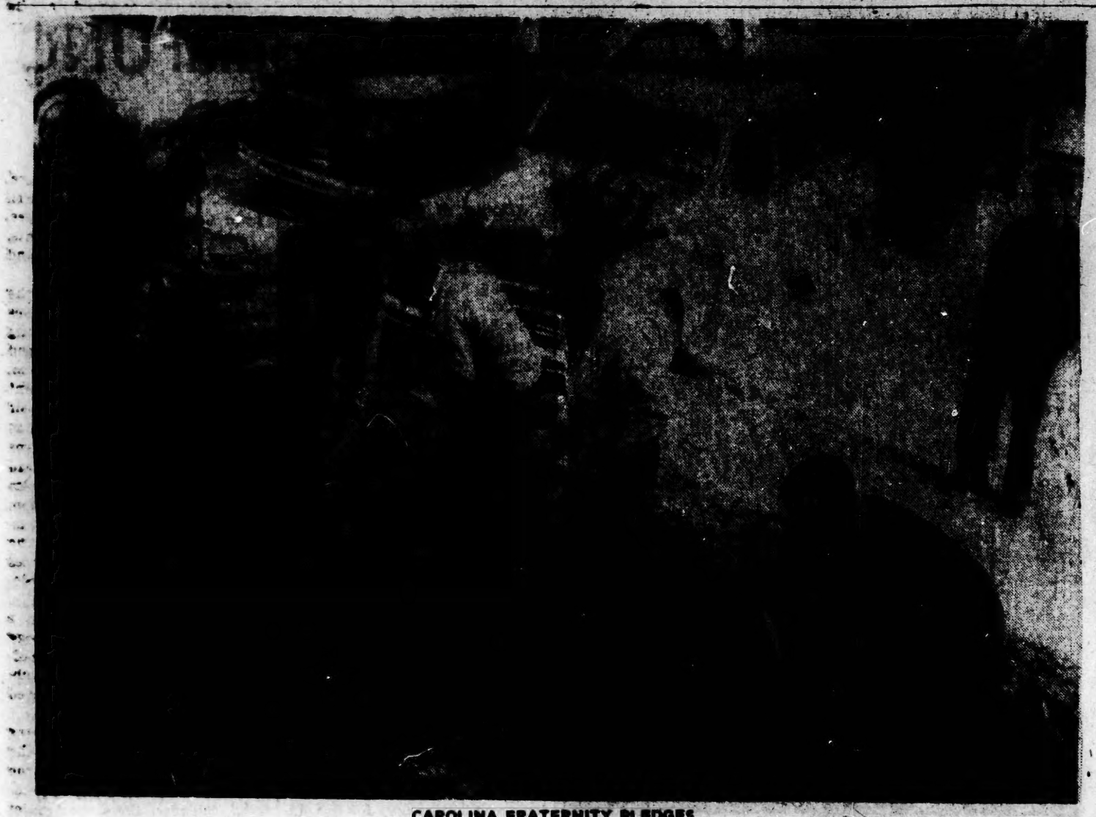
237 Students Expected To Enroll In Pharmacy



Dr. E. A. Brecht, dean of the School of Pharmacy, has estimated that a total of 237 students would be enrolled in pharmacy when school opens.

Estimated registration by classes follows: freshmen, 60; sophomores, 65; juniors, 55; seniors, 48 and nine graduate students. The September enrollment last year was 232.

Les Petites Musicales Presented Each Sunday

Les Petite Musicales are musical programs presented each Sunday evening in the Main Lounge of Graham Memorial, the student union building. They are presented by the Graham Memorial Activities Board.

The programs usually include different kinds of classical and semi-classical music and are performed by students and townspeople, either in groups or individually. Classical music-lovers usually find these programs worthwhile and entertaining.

CAROLINA FRATERNITY PLEDGES

. . . go all out in working in the annual Greek Week work day

Carolina Has 24 Social Fraternities

One thing on the mind of many a young man who is going to college is fraternities. Carolina has 24 social fraternities.

Fraternities have long been an integral part of college life. It used to be that a boy wanted to be in a fraternity more than anything else while at college. At one time, it was almost necessary to be in one to enjoy college life to the fullest extent.

That situation no longer exists. Social fraternities here play an important part, but they are not necessary to a well-rounded college life.

The 24 social fraternities here are: Alpha Tau Omega, Beta Theta Pi, Chi Phi, Chi Psi, Delta Kappa Epsilon, Delta Psi, Kappa Alpha, Kappa Sigma, Lambda Chi Alpha Phi Delta Theta, Phi Gamma Delta, Phi Kappa Sigma, Pi Kappa Alpha, Pi Kappa Phi, Pi Lambda Phi, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Sigma Chi, Sigma Nu, Sigma Phi Epsilon, Tau Epsilon, Phi, Theta Chi, Zeta Beta Tau and Zeta Psi.

Students interested in joining a fraternity will be given a fraternity interest card during registration on which he will list those fraternities in which he is interested.

DECISION

The decision to join a fraternity is an important one. There is much to gain from fraternity life in the way of lasting friendships. A fraternity is more than a party group. The boys in the house will be living companions for four years.

Certain rules and regulations governing conduct of the fraternities are made and enforced by the Interfraternity Council. It is made up of the president of each fraternity and a representative from each house. Within the IFC is a court that enforces these rules.

The rules concern social activities, coed visiting, fraternity drinking and other conduct.

Fraternity rush comes earlier this year than in previous years. If a student pledges a fraternity, he is eligible to be initiated at the end of the first semester if he has a "C" average.

Students who do not wish to join during formal rush and need more time to make up their minds can wait and go through informal rush, which is held at various times during the school year.

SP And UP Furnish UNC Political Activity

Students are free to join either of the two political parties on campus or to remain independent.

However, students don't have to join either party. The president of the student body last year was an independent. Bob Young, the present president, is a member of the Student Party. Student Party members also occupy the offices of vice-president and secretary. The treasurer is a member of the University Party.

The Student Legislature is pretty well evenly divided among members of both parties.

The Student Party tends to be liberal; the University Party tends to be conservative. The Student Party usually introduces more bills in legislature and is a little freer in appropriating student government monies.

Most of the active members of student government belong to either of the two parties. A student can become a member of the Student Party by attending two meetings and paying a small party fee. Members of the University Party either represent different organizations on campus or become members by turning in a petition signed by 25 students.

At election time posters go up on all conceivable and inconceivable places, from sidewalks around campus to walls and doors in dormitory bathrooms.

Much of the campaigning time by candidates is spent telling students how much more qualified they are for office than the fellow running against them. One thing is certain: A student can't believe everything he hears, because often he will hear contradicting views and opinions, not facts.

The politicians — who will usually say they are not politicians— do seem to make an honest attempt to carry out their promises, but they are often blocked by other members of the legislature, including members of their own party.

It is seldom that any proposal can carry without support from some of the members of both parties, since the legislature is so evenly divided.

Many bills are introduced into the Student Legislature, and some bills pass and are enacted and stay on the books for a long time. Others are wiped out by those in power who follow them and some are killed before they have half a chance to become law.

Voting for the candidates is done by districts. Ballot boxes are placed in convenient places around campus.

YDC And YRC Operate Here At Carolina

Both national political parties are well represented on campus by the Young Democrats Club and the Young Republicans Club. Their activities are expected to go along at a high rate of speed this year because this is an election year.

Both clubs meet regularly, sponsor rallies, bring noted men here to speak and have their fun by sponsoring parties at various times in the year.

Students are usually solicited to join either of the two by club members during registration. Both clubs have small dues.

It is anticipated by YDC members to get Governor Frank Clement of Tennessee, keynote speaker at the Democratic Convention, to come here to speak this year.

Students who are politically minded and wish to get in on the thick of politics can join the one of the two clubs that coincide with their beliefs and political affiliations. This election year is a good year to get started in.

GM Supplies Place For Foto Fixing

In the basement of Graham Memorial, there is a source of potential enjoyment for frustrated "fotobugs."

Though "basement" often connotes dust and corrosion, the rooms composing the photo lab have been completely renovated and include all equipment necessary for processing photographs.

The GM photo lab is composed of three rooms. The first includes machinery for printing and developing, the second is used for film loading, while the third has equipment for washing and drying. An Omega B2 enlarger is one of the valuable machines placed at the students' disposal.

A charge for the use of this equipment is refunded at the termination of residence. The equipment and lab is available for use any time Graham Memorial is open. Additional information concerning use of the equipment and lab can be obtained at the information office of Graham Memorial.

Hazing Not Custom At Carolina

By FRANK CROWTHER

If you are coming to Carolina expecting to be pushed, pulled, shoved, sworn at, or hazed, you have been reading the wrong propaganda sheet. Freshman hazing at UNC is a thing of the past.

There are colleges and universities in the country and in this state which still adhere to the practice of "putting the Freshmen in their place" when they reach their respective campuses. If you look closely in the vicinity of the Duke Chapel you can see an example of this continued practice.

We treat our Freshmen with respect, consideration, and conficonfidence. It is our objective not to "put you in your place" but to instill in you the confidence and respect we think all Carolina Gentlemen should command. Being in your first year, moving into a new environment and faring for yourself, making many of your own decisions, and budgeting your time and money will be enough to keep you fully occupied for some time to come. We upperclassmen don't feel that we or the University should add any more hazards; contrarily, we think that it is our duty as Carolina Gentlemen to help you orient yourself in our—and now your — world of books, buildings, squirrels and Silent Sam.

We will give some words of caution.

Don't put up an Iron Curtain of defense between yourself and the people around you. If something troubles you, go see your advisor or counselor or even a good friend; you will be surprised how accepting and helpful they can be when you most need it. Too many students come to college with a mentally formed shroud under which they function.

Go out and familiarize yourself with the campus. No matter how many maps or charts you look at, it all appears different when first visited.

Study in the library until you think you are accustomed to dormitory life and have learned to budget your time appropriately.

And don't . . . don't ramble on as we are when preparing your first theme for English 1 or 2.

You will be surprised and warmed, we hope, with the friendly atmosphere at Carolina. You will find it hard to walk across the campus without smiling and saying, "Hello," to those whom you pass. Reticence is a sickness on this campus.

3 Major Publications Put Out By Students

Three major publications are published here by Carolina students — The Daily Tar Heel, Yackety Yack and Carolina Quarterly, all of which are connected with the Publications Board.

The Daily Tar Heel, student newspaper, is published every day except Monday, and is delivered to all students. It is run entirely by students. No control is exercised over it or its editorial policy by the faculty or administration. It has absolutely no tie-in with the Carolina School of Journalsim, except for a plan whereby journalism students gain practical newswriting experience by working periodically on the staff.

Fred Powledge, senior from Raleigh, is editor of The Daily Tar Heel. Students are welcome to work on the staff of the four-page paper. Occasionally, it publishes six, eight and 10 pages, depending on volume of advertising.

Offices of the Daily Tar Heel are on the south end of the second floor of Graham Memorial. It has the wire services of Associated Press, national advertising services and several national news features.

The paper became a controversial campus issue last year when Co-Editors Louis Kraar and Ed Yoder were forced to run in a recall election after a petition was circulated and signed by students dissatisfied with the paper's editorial policy.

Circulation of the petition began shortly after the editors criticized the hiring of head football Coach Jim Tatum. The editors said he would bring "professionalism" in football to the University.

YACKETY YACK

The Yackety Yack is Carolina's annual. It also is student published. The Yack staff last year put out an annual with a red, white and gold cover.

In the Yack are recorded those elements of Carolina that will in future years bring back the memories of college life. Students are welcome to work on the staff. Offices are in Graham Memorial's basement. Tommy Johnson of Norfolk, Va., is editor of the college yearbook.

The Yacks come out early in May. Every student gets one. Additional copies can be purchased. Anticipation and enthusiasm build up around the time when they come out, because each student is anxious to see how his "mug shot" — class portrait — turned out.

CAROLINA QUARTERLY

Creative talents of Carolina students are put to good use in the Carolina Quarterly, which is the literary magazine published three times a year by UNC students. Editor for this year is Miss Marcelline Krafchick of Philadelphia, Pa. Its offices are also in Graham Memorial. Students with creative writing ability are welcome to contribute to it. Other posts that do not require creative ability are also open on the Quarterly.

UNC's humor magazine is dead. Tarnation, long known over the nation for its good college humor, quit publication last year because of financial difficulties.

It received no appropriations from student funds, as do the other three publications, and thus it could not hold up under the financial strain. It will be greatly missed by humor-loving collegians.

Various other publications are the books, magazines and phamphlets published for orientation purposes, such as the Carolina Handbook, the Women's Handbook, the Interfraternity Handbook and the Student Directory.

IDC Controls Activities Of Men's Dorms

The controlling body of the men's dormitories is the Interdormitory Council. Sonny Hallford, senior of Rocky Mount, is president this year.

The IDC is made up of the president of each men's dorm and a representative elected by each dorm. It chooses its own officers each spring to serve for one year. The officers have the power to authorize and carry out dorm elections each year.

Powers of the council itself are to make rules affecting conduct of men in dorms, represent dorm men in dealings with the University, promote social activities in the dorms for the residents and provide for continuation and operation of the council and the IFC court during summer school.

The Men's Dormitory Executive Committee is composed of the president, vice-president, secretary-treasurer, and IDC representative. The executive committee has the power to make such special rules concerning conduct in the respective men's dormitories that shall not conflict with the rulings of the Student Legislature and IDC. It also has the power to plan and propose all activities of the respective dorms.

SILENT SAM, CONFEDERATE MEMORIAL,
. . . stands tall and proud in GM's front yard

'Old Sam' Is Permanent Part Of Tradition

One guy students at Carolina hear a lot about and see a lot of is Silent Sam. He is a statue of a Confederate soldier and stands tall and proud in Graham Memorial's front yard.

He was erected in memory of "the sons of the University who entered the war of 1861-65 in answer to the call of their country and whose lives taught the lesson of their great commander that duty is the sublimest word in the English language."

Erected under the auspices of the North Carolina Division of the United Daughters of the Confederacy and aided by alumni of the University, Silent Sam has become a permanent part of Carolina tradition.

It is told down here that everytime a virgin walks by him, he fires his rifle. That may be so, but most students have never heard his gun go off.

Pranksters have been known to hide behind the statue and throw firecrackers out when girls walk by. One girl once would not walk by it after her boy friend had told her the legend.

At present, "Old Sam" is adorned in spots with red paint either from the brushes of N. C. State College enthusiasts or publicity men of Sound & Fury, a musical show presented by students.

Students Will Hear Lot About UNC's Bill Friday While Here

Bill Friday is one man you will hear plenty about while you are at Carolina. He is Acting President of the Consolidated University, which consists of the Woman's College at Greensboro, State College at Raleigh and Carolina.

Last March 1 he succeeded J. Harris Purks, who had been acting president since the departure of former President Gordon Gray. Various newspapers have lately urged that he be named president.

Friday is a young man of 36 years and is well liked by his associates. He served as assistant to the president and later as secretary of the Consolidated University. Prior to that, he served for three years as assistant dean of students here at Carolina.

Reared in Dallas, N. C., he attended Wake Forest College in 1937-38 and was graduated from N. C. State College in Raleigh in 1941 with a B.S. degree. He entered the Law School here in 1946 and received his L.L.B. in June of 1948. He passed the North Carolina Bar in August of that same year.

At State College, he was president of the 1941 senior class, president of the North Carolina Federation of Student Governments and a member of the Golden Chain. He served as president of the Law School Assn. while at Carolina and was a member of the Golden Fleece, highest-ranking honor organization.

Most Popular UNC Activity Is Dating

By LARRY CHEEK

(Dating at Carolina in the eyes of a Carolina Gentleman)

Perhaps the most popular extra-curricular activity here at Carolina is dating. And the most persistent question heard on campus is "Where can I get a date?"

For upperclassmen, this is no problem. They've been here long enough to learn the ropes and cultivate contacts. But for incoming freshmen, especially this year, it's a different story.

In the past, Carolina freshmen have chosen Woman's College in Greensboro as their happy weekend hunting ground. But this year, the ruling that freshmen may not have cars in Chapel Hill has complicated matters considerably.

No longer is it possible for the enterprising first year man to hop in his convertible and take off for WC, or any other of the numerous girls' schools that surround Chapel Hill. Instead, he must turn to local girls, a skimpy field at best.

UNC coeds will give him little encouragement. Most of the thousand-plus girls here are juniors and seniors with eyes only for the older college men. There are a few lasses in the School of Nursing, however, who are freshmen themselves, and can sometimes be persuaded to look with favor upon their male classmates.

Or the lonely yearling student may decide to study industriously during the week and import his old hometown sweetheart from high school days for that special weekend. This is rather hard on the youth who yearns for frequent female companionship, however.

And then there are the local high school and working girls. These girls have always proved to be pleasant and willing company for the college freshman who is a long way from home. Warning: look out for irate high school romeos.

Of course, the best solution to the problem is to talk an older buddy out of his jalopy for an evening and pay a visit to Greensboro and WC. Carolina students have been integrated into the interior decorating in most dorms there, and the welcoming mat is always out (up until midnight on weekends, that is).

Even if you don't have a date when you get there, don't despair. Just walk in any of the freshman dorms, look appropriately lonely, and get the receptionist to help you out. You'll be surprised at the results. No money back if this does not work, though.

You might even want to challenge the State students by invading some of the Raleigh institutions attended by eligible young ladies. Meredith, Peace and St. Mary's all are possibilities, although the difficulties encountered here are stiffer than at WC.

The alternatives are many, and the results can be rewarding. Take your pick: Greener pastures over the hill, good old home cooking, or just sitting and waiting for the one and only.

By PEG HUMPHREY

(Dating at Carolina as seen by a Caroline Coed)

"How to get a date?" is often a question puzzling Carolina freshmen.

The men find themselves facing an age barrier when it comes to dating the junior and senior coeds which, however, is often penetrable depending on the maturity of the individual.

Open houses in the dormitories take place during the first week of school. This is an excellent opportunity for the freshman to begin his dating campaign, for at this time many of the coeds haven't had a chance to meet young men on "the hill."

If this fails, there is always the classroom romance. Suggesting a coffee break in Y-Court after class is often a successful approach.

The library has a notorious reputation of being a date bureau as well as a place for concentrated study. The reserve reading room is the most famous spot for arranging coffee break dates for the Pine Room.

If you are in the depths of despondency over the looks of your social calendar, there are always the nearby women's colleges, such as WC, Meredith and St. Mary's. The dormitories there usually invite whole dorms from Carolina over during the first weeks of school.

However, don't despair if your first attempts fail and decide that dating girls from other colleges is the only solution, for there is a surprisingly number of Carolina coeds who remain with a good book on Saturday night simply because their classmates assume they are dating.

Those who join fraternities will have an opportunity to meet coeds in the various sororities as parties between the Greek groups are frequently planned.

Many campus romances begin in the extracurricular groups. This is where you meet others with common interests, and age differences mean less.

Stray Greeks Is Sorority Organization

The Stray Greeks is an organization composed of sorority girls whose chapters are represented on this campus.

Its aim is to provide a social outlet for its members and to preserve the bonds of unity and sisterhood in sorority life.

The group was founded in 1944 under the leadership of Twigg Branch. It has gained more and more recognition on campus since then, and its membership now totals almost 30.

Last year they handled the Panhellenic Post Office during sorority rush week and each member served as a Panhel adviser in her own dorm. They also took part in the women's athletic program, service projects and social activities.

Official Governing Body Is Student Legislature

The official governing body of the student body here at Carolina is the Student Legislature.

This 50-member body is authorized under the Student Constitution to make certain rules and regulations to govern UNC students. It has the power to levy all student fees except athletic fees appropriate funds for student publications, make laws concerning elections and to levy laws necessary for carrying out the constitution.

One of its most important powers is the determining of offenses against the student body, categorizing each offense, and fixing maximum and minimum penalties and punishments for each category. Another important function—and one that requires a lot of work—is setting up the annual student budget of approximately $100,000.

The student Legislature also approves or rejects appointments of the student body president, and has the power of impeachment of any elected official.

The powers of the body are somewhat limited. Of course, it does not control class attendance regulations and other important matters which are left up to the faculty and administration. But the UNC constitution is considered all over the nation to be very liberal.

Legislators meet every Thursday night to hash out the various issues that come before them. Some of them take their work serious and live, eat and sleep legislature. It's important to them; they know it and they work hard at it.

Others get elected just to know they've got another honor and just let it go by.

Party lines—there are two political parties here at UNC—are usually split down the middle, and members vote just that way. But on mediocre, usual bills, nothing is said and they usually pass them unanimously.

Words are spouted by the dozens in long orations in attempts to get across certain points. The Student Legislature provides good speaking training, and it has through the years produced many good and efficient speakers.

Quotations of famous statesmen flow freely in attempts to influence voting. Oftimes, accusations are made of "crooked politics," but if they be there, they are never exposed.
